"Some of the men muttered. I instantly perceived that they looked upon this as a conspiracy between me and the mate to allay their fears, and clearly seeing that it must be as the mate said, and heartily despising myself for the alarm I had felt throughout the day, I immediately formed a resolution. 'Your name's Andover?' said I to the man. 'Yes, sir,' he answered. 'You confess it was you who made old Jack talk on the grating and down here?' I do, sir,' he answered, with a writhe, for the shoulder of mutton clung to him as a vise. "Prove it to the men,' said I, and I'll forgive you. You can let go of him, Mr. Moore.' The man coughed; a moment after we all heard old Jack cursing us all in the forepeak. The deception was exquisite; in sober truth, my admiration of the skill of the fellow was altogether to great to suffer me to punish him, even had I not promised him forgiveness. A few further examples of his genius sufficed to reassure the sailors, and I went aft, leaving them to deal with him as they choose. However, he managed to make his peace by entertaining them with his art as a ventriloquist. Indeed, after the first spasm of temper they were too well pleased to believe that old Jack was really dead and gone, and too much astonished by Andover's cleverness to feel much resentment. I often had this man in the cabin afterward to amuse me. He had the face of a born comedian, and I strongly advised him to start as ventriloquist ashore, where, I don't doubt, under proper training, he might have proved a fortune for himself or for an employer. But, unhappily, he got into some scrape at our first port of call, and I had to leave him behind me; and when, long afterward, I inquired after him, I gathered that he had taken to drink and died in a hospital. Yet I recall him with gratitude, for he quite cured one of my superstitions,"

Country Wit.

Buffalo Express:

"Country boys are not such squash-heads as they sometimes look," said the sociable drummer at the Broezel House. "One day last week I was out riding with a fellow who seemed to think it his mission to say or do something smart every minute. Presently we overtook a barefoot urchin driving a cow home from pasture, and my companion reined up the horse and spoke to him, saying: 'Say, my little man, what time will it be at 6 o'clock this after-noon?" Without a moment's hesitation the lad answered: ''Twill be bedtime for hens and fools. You're not a hen, but 'twill be your bedtime all the same.'"

A Huron, Dakota, saloonkeeper who defied Judge Spencer's injunction to sell no more liquor was fined $250 by the court. He must pay the costs or go to jail for 125 days.

Old Tricks of Memory.

From Chambers' Journal.

Not many things are more surprising than the lapses of memory one sometimes meets with in persons whose powers of mind, both natural and acquired, are considered to be much above the average. It would be folly to expect grapes from gooseberry bushes or figs from fir trees; and it would be preposterous to look for anything but unwisdom from the wise; and above all we do anticipate expertness from the really clever. And yet, what breakdowns do happen now and again in the Senate, on the platform, in the pulpit, and even on the stage; and not seldon the more skillful the person the more curious the catastrophe.

In a recently published letter of Thackery's we have a description of the sudden forgetfulness he was subjected to at the literary-fund dinner. He was one of the speakers, and and he describes the affair as an "awful smash." Of the thread of his discourse he seems to have said, not in words, but in the spirit of an old dramatist,

'Tis lost;
Like what we think can never shun remembrance,
Yet of a sudden is gone beyond the clouds.

But the experience of the author of "Vanity Fair" was far from being singular to himself. Others have got their pearls of thought and illustration into the wrong place, nay, some have been so unfortunate as to lose both pearls and their setting. It seems to have been a trying time for Thackery, and he sat down afterward and described to a friend what a fool he made of himself, but his mother, who had contrived to be within hearing distance, came to the opposite conclusion.

The senate is not free from cases of sudden forgetfulness, though in days when it was considered out of place to use manuscript the lapses took place much more often. Nowadays a case seldom happens unless the notes have been disarranged or mislaid, or when the "paper gives out." But the thing does occur, and to front bench men and back bench men alike. Not long since an ex-cabinet minister collapsed completely from failure of memory, and he was shortly afterward translated, perhaps by way of consolation, to the house of peers. Only the other day, too, a member with a grievance made "an awful smash," to the delight of the house, through not being able to get at his notes, but he has had no consolation and little peace since.

On the stage the promptor is the safety from forgetfulness, but in the concert theater lapses take place. Even a great living tenor has been known to retire in the middle of a song he had been singing every week for almost a lifetime, because all memory of the words he wanted was gone. Such a case of sudden forgetfulness took place in one of the London theaters early in the present century During the performance, which seemed to have been a mixed character, the gods in the galleries called for their favorite song, "The Sprig of Shillelagh," though it was not announced in the bills; and Mr. John Henry Johnstone, a well-known Irish actor and vocalist, came forward with alacrity and good humor to comply with the wishes of the gods. Accordingly the music played, but the singer stood silent and apparently confused. The symphony was repeated, but the same silence and confusion on the part of the vocalist took place in rather an increased degree. The symphony was preformed a third time, but all to no purpose. At length Mr. Johnstone came forward to the front of the stage and thus addressed the audience: "Ladies and gentlemen, I assure you that I have sung this song so often that I forget the first line." A roar of laughter greeted these words, and hundreds of good humored voices began to prompt the singer, who immediately gave the favorite song in good style, and gained increased applause.

Sudden forgetfulness is not an unusual thing in the pulpit. Aubrey, the antiquary, says that when he was a freshman at college he heard Dr. Sanderson, bishop of Lincoln, well known for his work, "Nine Cases of Conscience," break down in the middle of the Lord's Prayer. Even the great French preacher Massillion, once stopped in the middle of his sermon from a defect of memory, and Massilion himself recorded that the same thing happened through excess of apprehension to two other preachers whom he went to hear in different parts of the same day. Another French preacher stopped in the middle of a sermon and was unable to proceed. The pause, however, was got over ingenuously. "Friends," he said, "I had forgot to say that a person much afflicted is recommended to your immediate prayers." He meant himself. He fell on his knees, and before he arose he had recovered the thread of his discourse, which he concluded without his want of memory being perceived.

The late Rev. Henry Ware, of Boston, was once in a similar predicament. In the middle of a sermon his memory failed him, and he stopped abruptly. The pause seemed long to the preacher before he regained his thought, and he imagined the sermon to be a failure in consequence, but as he walked quietly up the aisle a different impression was given him. "How did you like the sermon?" asked one hearer of another. "Like it? It is the best sermon Mr. Ware ever preached. That pause was sublime."

A good illustration of this sudden forgetfulness comes from the same district of Boston. A worthy minister there is not only absent-minded and has a short memory, but he breaks down as continually as he breaks down suddenly. To counteract this it is a habit with him when he forgets anything to rise again and make a few supplementary remarks, which he always begins with the phrase, "By the way." One Sunday he got half way through a prayer from memory when he hesitated, forgot what he was about, and sat down abruptly without pronouncing the closing word. In a moment or two he rose, and pointing his finger at the amazed congregation, he exclaimed: "Oh, by the way, Amen!"

It is said of Father Taylor, a preacher to sailors, that once, when he got confused, he cried out: "Boys, I've lost my nominative case, but never mind—we're on the way to glory!"

We can understand a lapse of memory taking place when the mind is overburdened and usually demands are being made upon it, but for a failure to occur when there is stress put upon the mental powers is singular. Here is a case in point: We are told on good authority that a prominent Harvard professor went in the old Cambridge post-office and presented himself at the place where the delivery of letters are made. He stood there silent, but apparently very confused about something. The clerk in charge inquired what he desired. "My letters, please." "Name sir?" asked the clerk, After stammering and stuttering the learned man said: "I have quite forgotten my name." The official knew the professor, and with a smile handed him his letters.

"You will forget your own name next," is a phrase often thrown at the stupid, and perhaps there would be some excuse for them even if they did.

There is some consolation, however, in cases of sudden forgetfulness; the pity is that it does not come soon enough to benefit fully, and at times it is denied altogether to the actor. As for the orator, he knows afterward that none but himself is aware of the valuable forgotten things and the difference between the projected ideal and the actual performance. It would have been a great saving of nerve force and a pleasurable emotion to have thought of these two items before he had wished himself 1,000 miles away and before the room had swum around and before he burst into perspiration at every pore.

Why They Were not Wanted.

A down-east church of the first water sent a committee to examine a very eloquent and pious divine—that is, to look him over as to his fitness to receive a call to its pulpit. The committee went as ordered, attended divine service, heard a grand sermon, and then telegraphed laconically: "Won't do; has red hair." A young minister of rare eloquence lost a city pulpit lately because his clothes were ready made—"store clothes," you know! Another in the same city failed to pass because he thought a few heathen would reach eternal glory. Hair! store clothes! and theology! but where was the religion?—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A TALE OF THE TELEGRAPH.

It was a lovely day in May; the sun was shining brightly, and the air was laden with that balmy fragrance that lends the special charm to spring days. I was standing upon the roof of one of the leading hotels in the city.

I had been examining the telephone wires on the roof, on which we had lately placed a new patent arrangement for the purpose of overcoming induction from the neighboring telegraph wires.

I stood holding on with one hand to a standard for telephone wires for several minutes, lost in thought.

I had stood thus for perhaps five minutes, when I was brought back to the realization of my sense by a sound which, coming upon me so suddenly, seemed to freeze the blood in my veins, send a chill down my back, and a nervous tremor through my entire system; it was the unmistakeable cry of a maniac.

Turning quickly towards the direction from which the sound came, I saw the author of it with his head just above the opening of the trap-door, through which I had gained access to the roof, and the door of which I had left swung back upon its hinges.

I recognized at once that the man was mad. His wild expression showed it quite plainly.

For an instant I stood motionless, not knowing what to do, when again that laugh rang out upon the air; and I noticed that he was ascending to the roof. Quick as lightning my mind took in the situation, and I rushed desperately towards the man intending to strike him with all my force, and knock him backward down the flight of stairs to the floor below. He saw my intention, and tried to gain the roof before I could reach him; but the distance between us was only a few feet, and he had not risen above the roof higher than his waist when I forced him back.

I stood upon the door a short time, expecting every minute that he would renew the attack, when suddenly I heard the report of a pistol from below, and was conscious of a whizzing noise in the air.

Looking down, I noticed a small hole in the trap-door, and that the bullet had passed uncomfortably near my leg in its upward flight.

I did not relish the idea of being shot at in this manner and stepped immediately off the door.

I had scarcely done so when there was another report, and another hole in the door, directly upon the spot where I had been standing.

What was to be done?

All at once I noticed that the ends of the staple used for fastening the door on the inside projected through the thin boards for some distance.

Quickly passing a rope I had around the knob and under the sharp ends of the staple, I took two turns round them, which was all there was room for, and drawing the rope tightly, fastened the ends as securely as possible.

This whole performance lasted but a few seconds, but the pistol shots continued in rapid succession, and I judged that by this time he had emptied the seven chambers of his revolver.

The firing had ceased, and I noticed the door moving slightly, as though force was being brought to bear upon it from below.

I took hold of the door with my hands, and held it down as hard as I could. The madman seemed to be pushing against it with a tremendous force. What was to be done?

The rope was a weak thing at the best, and I felt that it could not long hold out against the efforts of a strong man.

All at once the thought of calling help by telegraph came into my mind. I had heard of cases of telegrams being sent without instruments from the scene of railway accidents and I determined to try for myself if the madman could only be kept within bouds long enough to allow me an opportunity.

I was an expert telegraphist, having spent a number of years in that business before entering the telephonic field. Although I was a an old telegraphist I had never attempted the feat of telegraphing without an instrument.

But the situation called for a desperate act, and after looking at the fastenings on the door to see that they were secure as possible, I went quickly to the edge of the building, where a number of wires were strung on brackets. These wires I knew to lead to the post-office.

I had a small pair of pliers in my pocket, and seizing a wire I cut into it with the pliers, and then bent the wire in order to break it.

The pliers were small, and it required a strong effort to snap the wire, but I accomplished the feat in a few seconds. Now came the difficult part. I was trembling with nervous excitement. Putting the ends to my tongue, I felt the circuit close through it and all was still. No one was using the wire.

I now took the wires in each hand, and, as well as the wires would allow, I called B several times. This was done by holding the ends of the wire together to form the dash, then separating them and striking quickly three times to form the Morse letter B. Placing the ends to my tongue, the circuit closed, but I felt no signals. I again repeated the call, and placing the ends again in position, distinctly felt the shocks, which said plainly, "I. I. B."

Taking hold of the wires again, I sent the following message slowly, and not without blunders: "Send help to roof of —— Hotel. Madman trying to get on roof. Am in great danger. Work quick!"

Telegraphist are generally quick of perception, and the operator grasped the situation at once.

Placing the wires again to my tongue, I felt him answer slowly, and several times over: "O.K.," "O.K."

I wrote back "O.K.," that he might know I understood. And now my message was sent, I hastily dropped the wires and ran to the trap-door.

I was none to soon. The slender rope was giving way under the powerful strain, and I threw myself upon the door just in time to prevent it snapping.

I could hear the man below breathing heavily, as though he were putting forth great exertion.

He soon renewed his pushing.

I could see the rope was giving way under the strain; some of the strands were broken, and the door creaked and groaned.

I bore down with all my might, and succeeded in keeping the door down. He paused a moment, and then pressed upward again.

For several minutes I succeeded in keeping the door in its place, but finally, after a long and hard push, the rope broke, and the door flew up a short distance, but I managed to slam it down again.

I could not hope to hold it, however, and I felt it gradually rise, and I was pushed up bodily, while the madman got his head and shoulders above the aperture.

His face was flushed, and he looked wilder than ever.

With an exultant cry he cleared the stairs and sprang upon me.

I was indeed in a desperate position, for I felt I was no match for my antagonist.

Would help never come?

I warded him off as best I could, but he clutched me with a grip like iron. I struggled fiercely, but I fear this story would never have been written had not help arrived at this moment.

I heard shouts from below, and the next instant several men came quickly up the stairway and gained the roof. Taking in the the situation they seized my assailant, who, though making a desperate resistance, was overcome and held down by superior numbers.

I almost fell into the arms of one of my deliverers, and for a short time seemed to have entirely lost my strength, while great, cold beads of perspiration appeared on my face.

I was besieged with questions for several minutes, but as soon as I could make myself heard I told them briefly all that had happened.

In a short time I felt as vigorous as ever, with the exception that I could not taste anything, the electric shock having for a time interfered with that sense. After several days, however, it began to come gradually back, and in a few weeks I was as well as ever and none the worse for having called the lightning to aid in saving my life.

What He Meant.

Donn Piatt is noted for the ellegibility of his hand writing, and when he sent a note to a friend the other day the friend was shocked to read a postscript which read: "I am in a blamed hornet's nest." After some further study it was discovered that what Piatt had really written was: "I am in a blessed haven of rest." He meant the Providence Hospital. —Journalist.

The Hardiness of American Half-Breeds.

The experience of the teachers of the Lincoln Institution confirms the views here expressed, that the mixed Indian is more exempt from pulmonary disease than the pure Indian; and, further, that if the former are attacked by disease they offer greater constitutional resistance to it than the latter. This view is also confirmed by the large experience of Capt. R. H. Pratt, superintendent of the Carlisle Indian School, who says in his last report: "Our experience is that the mixed bloods resist disease and death from pulmonary troubles better than the full bloods, and our best health conditions are found among those we send out into families, due, I think, very largely to the regular occupation and varied diet." Similiar views have been expressed by others who have resided among the mixed or half breed races in the northwestern part of Canada. These people are said to be strong and hearty, long-lived as they remain in their native climate. They regard themselves as the equal of the whites, and lose in a patronizing way on the Indian. Their families are usually very large, and the female sex is said to be very handsome. Quite recently I had occasion to investigate the question whether pulmonary consumption tends to exterminate the American Indian, and then I found that nearly all those Indian agencies which show the lowest consumption rate are precisely those which contain the largest number of mixed bloods. Of course, it is just possible that the presence and the absence of pulmonary consumption in certain tribes is purely a coincidence; yet I think from what has been said concerning the improved physical condition of the mixed Indian, it is quite evident that the greater immunity of these tribes from consumption is due to the fact that they comprise a large element which has a superior power of warding off disease.—Popular Science Monthly.

The Problem of Electrical Executions.

Electrical World.

As the time approaches for the going into effect of the law passed in this state for the electrical execution of criminals, the advisability of this mode of execution is again being discussed, and experiments on living subjects have been undertaken to test the new method of punishment. That electricity, when properly applied for the purpose, will cause death has been established beyond doubt, but it has been recently pointed out again that there is some probability of the victim being only temporarily deprived of the signs of life, and thus meeting a more terrible fate later on. It is, therefore, suggested that, to prevent any possible burial alive, a postmortem examination be made. This somewhat novel question introduces another factor of uncertainty, for a case might thus arrive in which death might be due to the postmortem instead of the electric shock, supposing the latter to have only stunned the victim for a greater or less time. Regarding also the question of the spilling of blood at electrical executions, a recent experiment at Mr. Edison's laboratory, where a dog was killed by electricity, shows that under certain circumstances, too high electro motive force for example, blood may be drawn from the victim by the bursting of a blood vessel. While we believe that executions by electricity can be made as sure and as painless as by any other method, it is to be regretted, in some respects, that it has been chosen to replace the office of the hangman, if it is to be attended by grim and ghastly incidents or accessories. That may meet the views of those who wish to make executions horrible, but we sincerly trust that electricity is to be free from such recommendations.

Children's Lunches.

From Good House-keeping.

A child at play from morning until night, in the open air, will make way with an incredible amount of food, and be healthier for so doing; but let it rely upon the regular hours for taking it. It will then enjoy the blessing of coming to the table hungry, for that certainly is a blessing, as those deprived of an appetite can heartily testify. Nor is it any sign of distress that they are clamorous for their meal to be served, their keen appetites only assuring you there is not much probability of complaints being made of the dishes set before them, provided there is always enough. A prominent physician and surgeon once said of his three children who were then well grown youths, and the picture of health: "We never allowed our children to lunch between meals, and they were all good eaters; we never allowed tea and coffee, and they were all good sleepers." All those same children have since graduated from colleges and are holding high positions to-day in the professional world, robust and of excellent habits, though inheriting a frail constitution from a mother who died young. The annoyances and discomforts arising from this habit of lunching must be innumerable; the interruptions of your time for reading, sewing, or socials calls, by a hungry child, demanding attentions, that will not be set aside; the untidiness that must follow the preparations of even plain bread butter, for one, two, or three children; the extra step required from either servant or parent, these alone make a strong plea against such a habit; but when we consider the violation of the whole dietary system, and all the evils that ofstands waiting to give them a grip their punishment for their indulgence we cannot help crying out against the evil and urge a better understanding of all laws of digestion, and what is quite as important, of indigestion.

THE TIGER'S EYE.

By the author "As in a Looking-Glass."

Colonel Vandeleur was a British officer who, on many occasions, had done a good deal more than smell powder. As a mere boy, fresh from school, he went out straight to the Crimea and got his first promotion for heading a little party of volunteers who captured a rifle-pit and from it turned the enemy's line by taking them in flank. At the time of our story he was still in the prime of life, capable of any amount of hardship and fatigue, a keen sportsman, and, among men at any rate, a universal favorite. Nor were his good looks spoiled in any way by his glass eye. Some sand thrown up by a Russian shell, which had burst in the trenches, had struck him in the face and his right eye had to be sacrificed. In its place he carried an eye of glass, which was perfectly well matched and almost defied detection, his own features being, as a rule, if not exactly stolid, certainly very far from vivacious.

He had made but one mistake in life. At the age of 45 he had married a girl of 18, and he was now the veriest slave of her caprices. The match had been a matter of regret to all his friends, many of whom had found that the young wife's intolerable self-assertion and petulance made it almost impossible for them any longer to see their old comrade, except on rare occasions at the club. Now it so happened that the colonel and his wife were staying at the Bedford hotel at Brighton, and that Sir Greville Sykes was also fixed in quarters at the Old ship. Vandeleur and Sykes had known each other for some years, and so it was only natural that the Vandeleurs coming across Sykes on the beach should ask him to dinner, and afterward see a good deal of him, and that they should make up between them a little party of three.

A stroke of luck had befallen Vandeleur. An old uncle had died suddenly, leaving him all his money. Ninety-five thousand pounds is a comfortable sum. The sooner you get it out of the hands of the lawyers and into your own the better. So Vandeleur was always hurrying up to London, and, as he expressed it, pegging away at the musty old dullards of the courts. One day he had a downright explosion with the second partner of the eminent firm of Tail, Tail, Remainder & Tail, and had even gone to the length of threatenings to transfer his business to the younger and quicker hands of Messrs. Shortcroft & Raid. This so terrified the men of tape that he not only promised to wind the whole business up in a fortnight, but actually suggested a check for a couple of thousand pounds for any little immediate needs, and, what is more, drew the document and signed it.

"This is jolly," said Vandeleur to himself, "It is now only 12, and I can easily be back for dinner."

So first he drove to the bank and cashed the check, then he paid the bulk of the money into his own bank, and then he had some sherry and a caviare sandwich at the club. Next he strolled up Piccadilly and made some purchases—some gloves, a bracelet, and a sunshade—for his wife, together with a most charming silver chatelaine. And for himself, half a dozen boxes of cigars and a walking stick to which he took a fancy. Then he returned to his club to lunch. Being much incumbered with the dust of travel he set to work about his ablutions in earnest, and before commencing them removed his glass eye. It somehow slipped through his fingers, fell with a crash on the stone floor, and splintered into a thousand fragments.

Now, it is not so easy, as Vandeleur knew, to get a glass eye at a minute's notice. You must devote a morning to the carrying out of such a matter and have your own eye very carefully matched. It is as troublesome an undertaking as a visit to your dentist. So he resolved to make a second visit to London next week and bring up his wife with carte blanche to ransack the dry goods stores on her own account. Meanwhile he hurried round to the eminent taxidermist who had alwdys set up his big game for him and explained his position.

"I don't want to go down to Brighton with a green patch, you know," he observed. "What can you do for me?"

"We don't keep human eyes, sir. You should go to an optician's or a surgical instrument maker's."

"So I will when I am next in town, or will come up on purpose to do it. But I've only twenty minutes to catch my train, so you must fix me up somehow."

The shopman hesitated, but at last produced a box with trays full of eyes of every kind. One was selected which fitted fairly well.

"It will do" said the colonel, as he looked at himself in the glass. "At all events it is better than nothing. What beast was it meant for?"

"A tiger, sir."

The colonel laughed as he took his change. "Begad, I ought to have known it," said he, "without being told! If anyone knows a tiger's eye, it's your humble servant. I've shot them, all by the score, the brutes."

The shopman thought his customer was bouncing, and was just about the giggle, when he suddenly looked at the colonel, seemed to catch an awkward expression in his features, and recovered himself abruptly.

Away rattled Vandeleur in a quick hansom to the station. "Drive sharp!" he said. When deposited at the depot he tendered the Jehue his legal fare. The fellow looked at him in disgust. "Why, what's this?" he was beginning, when he suddenly seemed to think better of it. "Beg your pardon sir. I was a-thinking it was five miles." And he clambored into his seat and went away immediately. "I'd as soon drive the devil himself," he said, when he joined his friends upon the rank. "It was awful. No beak in London's in it with this cove. 'Six month's' I 'eard 'im say. Leastways I 'eard 'im look it. That's to say I see 'im look it."

Innocent of all this, the colonel purchased an assortment of papers and seated himself in a carriage. It was a very odd thing he thought. Actually a lady who was in the same compartment whispered something to her husband in a state of great excitement. The guard was summoned, and they transferred themselves to another carriage. "A curious business," said the colonel. "They can't take me for a vampire." Then the train started and he settled down to his papers.

From the station he drove to the Bedford, telling the porter to bring up his packages. His wife was seated in the window, busied with "Ouida's" latest effort of imagination. She jumped up and came to meet him.

"I was wondering when you would return," she said. "I thought perhaps you might stay and dine at your club, and come down by the last train, or perhaps to-morrow morning."

"Why should you think that?" he asked, not at all unnaturally. It was annoying, when he had come down with a lot of presents for her, that she should not be more cordial in her welcome.

She looked at her husband, for a moment, made a step toward him, and turned round, threw herself upon the sofa, and burst into tears.

"O, don't kill me! Don't kill me! I've been dreadfully wicked, horribly wicked, but don't kill me!"

Colonel Vandeleur went back to town that night by the late express, and took up his quarters at a hotel much frequented by him in his bachelor days. Next day he received a short letter from his wife, which was at once incoherent and yet explicit. Also, was truthful, which her letters as a rule were not.

He meditated a good deal and went round to his lawyers. Then he went to the club, hunted out an old friend, and took him to dinner. They dined tete-a-tete in a private room, and sat talking until very small hours in the morning. The consultation over at last, the colonel wrote a letter, and a confidential clerk from the office of his solicitors took it down next morning to Brighton to make sure of personal delivery.

"At my time of life I was averse to a scandal, nor have I any wish to marry again. I have no secret and no attachment or even an ordinary entanglement that I have hidden from you. Your position will not be affected. Your settlements will remain as they are. But I impose one condition on you. You will have to live at Margate, whether you like the place or not, and I forbid you to leave it, even for a day, except by the written order of my doctor, who will at any time come down from London to see you.

"I may as well tell you that your movements will be duly and regularly reported to me. A day will be enough for you to make your arrangements. On any business matter however small, you may write to my solicitors.

"There is thus nothing that need trouble you. For myself, I am leaving England, and have no fixed plans. If you write to me I shall refer the letter to my solicitors, so that you may spare yourself all attempts to shake an irrevocable determination. Were you not a protestant, I should advise you to go into a convent. As it is, I have done the next best thing for you. CHARLES VANDELEUR."

Mrs. Vandeleur is much respected at Margate, where the curates and the old maids compare her troubles and sorrows to those of poor dear Lady Byron. She is very charitable and immensely energetic, and on minor points of parish administration the rector refers to her.

Colonel Vandeleur himself is yacting and shooting, not extravagantly at all, but in true sportsman-like fashion. His hair is grizzled, but he is still erect as a dwarf, and as his friends profanely put it, with covert allusion to the principal misfortunes of his life, "his eye is not dim nor his natural force abated."

It Dines off Wool and Fur.

"Well," said the careless young person resignedly as she looked at her sealskin jacket and her otter-trimmed suit, "I suppose the moths will play the mischief with all my winter things before next season."

"What makes you think that?" demanded the good housekeeper.

"They always do," replied the careless young person in tones that indicated that she felt a certain sad pride in being singled out by fate as a victim.

"That is nonsense, perfect nonsense," said the good housekeeper in most unsympathetic tones. "If you lived in a properly regulated house you wouldn't know what a moth looks like. I never have them in my house. How do I keep them out? By simply not giving them anything to live in or on. I don't make nests of woolen rags around on purpose for their accommodation. I don't have anything woolen around in summer except things in daily use. I take up the carpets of the rooms not in use or sometimes I put down matting all over the house and put away the carpets, or if they are down I keep some good moth powder and put it around in the less frequented corners.

"How do I keep them out of the carpets after they are taken up?

"I don't know how I'd get them in unless I took particular pains to. There is no sense in the world in any one having anything moth-eaten. There is forty ways of preventing it, each easier than the last. To begin with, you can have a cedar chest or a cedar-lined closet if you live in your own house. It costs something in the beginning, but nothing so oppressive as people generally imagine, and there it is for the accommodation of your children's children."

"I'm afraid they'll never arrive to get the good of my cedar chest," interrupted the young person pertly.

"If you haven't a chest," went on the good housekeeper, ignoring this side issue, "you can put them in an ordinary trunk and put in 10 cent's worth of camphor and defy all the moths in Christendom."

"I don't like my things smelling of camphor," objected the young person.

"I like my things smelling of camphor better than having no things to smell of anything," was the satirical response, "but you don't need to have camphor. If you'll just do up your furs and winter woolens in cotton cloth, wrap them up in one big sheet, you'll be perfectly safe, or you would be if you had some one with a grain of common sense to do up the bundle for you. It won't do to roll a sheet around the middle and leave it open at both ends. The sheet must thoroughly enwrap your things, with no loose corners or cracks. Moths won't go through cotton, and if they have no other way to get at your sealskin they'll go with out it."

"I haven't any sheet," objected the young person, mischievously. She wanted to exhaust the resources as well as the patience of the good housekeeper, but that lady was equal to the occasion.

"Well," said she, "paper will do just as well. If you'll save the big sheets of wrapping paper that your new spring things are now coming home in you can do up all your winter ones in a way that will baffle the most enterprising moth that ever wiggled."

"But I think they have already gotten in the jacket."

"They haven't gone far if they have; all you need to do is to shake and beat it out well and then sprinkle it well with powder before you put it away. The moth powders are generally good things."

"But they are poisonous, aren't they?"

"As harmless as arrowroot. They don't poison the moths, they suffocate them."

And the young person saw no way out of being obliged to take care of her things for once.

A New Story About Washington.

From the Independent.

There is an unpublished story of Washington told me by a descendant of the ancestor who is in the story, which represents the great general in the pleasant family life we have all liked to contemplate, and not as the grand man and the hero at the head of his army. It was when Washington, after the revolutionary war, was traveling through Connecticut and visited Hartford, staying at the Bull's Tavern there. A boy came into the kitchen of the tavern and said: "I want to see Gen. Washington."

The functionary on duty did not propose to let any mere boy see Gen. Washington merely for the asking, and said as much.

"But I have a note for him," remonstrated the boy.

"From whom?"

"My father, Chief Justice Ellsworth."

"Oh—well," and the functionary relented. Gen. Washington read the note and said to the boy: "Your father invites me to dinner, I will do more than that, I will go and breakfast with him."

And he did the next morning. And after breakfast he took the twin sons of the justice, each on a knee and sang them the "Derby Ram," an old English ballad, beginning: "It was on a market day," and setting forth that the Ram of Derby was so big that the birds built nests in the wool on his back and the butcher who undertook to kill him was drowned in the blood.

Republicans who are crazy on high tariff need to be careful that they do not get as far off in that direction as the free trader is in the opposite. Remember always that there is a golden mean in which true safety lies.

St. Paul Globe: Gen. Harrison has been quite ill. What will Candidate Harrison's condition be in November?

Oh, that's easy! He will be President Elect of the United States, Mr. Globe. Give us a harder one.

The attitude of the republican party on the Mills bill shows that the party appreciates the necessity of a revision of the tariff and that the interests of the country will be safe in their hands while so doing. On all articles like sugar the tariff should be revised by a great reduction and the republican action on that point shows that the party appreciates this fact and is prepared to meet it. Without doubt the Mills bill will pass the House and when it reaches the Senate it will be met by a bill which will embody the republican idea, and which will, we think satisfy fully the reasonable demands of the people.

While in the city this week Mr. Comstock's attention was called to an article in the Times which said that Mr. Comstock opposed the Donnelly bill in the Senate. Mr. C. referred to the article and said that it could not be possible that he bitterly fought the bill in the Senate as alleged, as the bill never reached the Senate, being killed in the House by the farmers from the southern part of the State for the reason that the bill only provided for the reduction of wheat rates but provided no check upon railroad companies that would prevent them making up more on incoming freight than they would lose on the item of wheat alone. As the southern members were interested in other grains and stock as much as in wheat, more, they killed the bill themselves. We mention this circumstance to show to what extent the democrats will carry efforts to defeat an honest, upright and capable man simply because he is a republican. They know that there is no truth in such statements but they do not hesitate to utter them in the hope that some one might become prejudiced and vote against Mr. C. They prefer to sacrifice the best interests of the county to ambition and do not hesitate to employ the most unblushing falsehoods to accomplish their ends.

Is it not possible that the idea of protection may be carried to such an excess that the protection to certain classes of tax payers is all protected away? Take the case of sugar for an instance. The consumer is obliged to pay an excessive tax on ten times the amount produced, in order that the home producer, who makes possibly one-tenth the amount required, may be enabled to compete with the foreign producer. The consumer could better afford to contribute to a sum sufficient to give the home manufacturer a bonus greater than he now realizes, and then make big money by it. The protectionist who claims that the tariff on sugar is not too high but should be kept where it is, or raised, is just as wild in his way as is the man who insists that absolute free trade is the proper thing. A close examination of the whole list and a clear understanding of the subject will reveal other discrepancies that call for a wise revision through a material reduction. The republican party is strong in the doctrine of protection, but the essential idea—protection to all classes equally must not be confounded, mixed up or lost sight of. Protection for the manufacturer as against the interests of the farmer, the laborer, or any other class, is not the republican idea and is not what is meant in the republican platform. It is, however, just what is meant in the action of a democratic Congress that refuses to concur in the reduction on sugar proposed by the republicans. That action of the democrats says to the farmer and the laborer: "You must pay an excessive rate upon all the sugar you consume in order that a handful of Louisiana sugar planters and manufacturers may enjoy ample protection in their business." That is the democratic definition of the tariff and the only reason they have to offer is that that style of government saves a few votes for the democratic party, but the republican principle demands equal and just protection to all American industries alike, and gives the manufacturer no advantage over the farmer. That is the true idea, and wherever descrepencies may have crept in that tend to defeat that idea, the republican principle is in favor of revision to adjust the equal balance. That every republican is in sympathy with the principles of his party, we cannot claim, and right here is where the confusion of ideas occurs. Those rabid protectionists who cannot see protection in anything save the present high tariff are not in sympathy with the principles of their party nor are they in full accord with the essential idea of protection in its true significance. To some the name of "protection" has become an ugly word, being too intimately associated with the phrase "high tariff," and even when used in its proper sense, it becomes to them a bugbear, simply owing to their confusion of terms. No sound republican will say that the interests of every country must be looked after, carefully guarded and protected before the interests of America and American citizens, but rather must our own interests be first subserved with equal justice and fairness to all concerned.

The republican party is the only one of the partys now before the people for their suffrages that has ever done anything to prove worthy of confidence and trust. The democrats, while making all manner of solemn pledges to the people, openly permitted the frauds that were committed in the South, to place them in power, and never made any effort to punish those who committed the frauds. They said, if they could only run the government awhile they would at once reduce the tariff and relieve the people from the great burden of taxation. They have been in power four years, and what have they done in that direction? Incubated one bill that discriminates against the North in favor of the South, and when the republicans offered to cut down the tariff on sugar over one half, they promptly and to a man rejected the proposal. They never did promise to do anything for the soldier, and that is the only thing we ever knew them to religiously live up to, for they have fought him at every point during the whole mis-administration. They have made great professions of interest for the poor man, and have persistly deprived millions in Dakota and other territories of the right to vote. Taxation without representation is against the fundamental principles of our government, and yet this is just what the democratic party is forcing upon the citizens of the territories of the great Northwest to-day. The republican party is not so prolific of promises, but to that party the slave of the South owes his freedom, the settler on the prairies of the great Northwest his home, and the prohibitionist everything that was ever done to aid his cause. The republican party will be returned to power this fall, and then the poor Dakota settler will obtain his rights, because the republican party is the only defender of the rights of the poor man; the tariff will be revised and properly arranged, because it is for the interests of the people that this should be done. These things will not be done until the republican party again assumes control of the government, because the democrats dare not admit the territories for fear they will lose their grip, and they will not revise the tariff properly because it is for the interests of the people that this should be done. They will not do these things now because they dare not and after election they will not have a chance, because they will be consigned to the shades of "innocuous desuetude," from which they will rise no more forever.

Grand Forks Plaindealer.

Mr. F. B. Faucher, Vice-President of the Scandinavian Elevator Co., and a prominent member of the Territorial Farmers' Alliance was in the city yesterday and made the Plaindealer a pleasant visit.

Speaking about the failure of C. C. Wolcott, the general manager of the Scandinavian Elevator Co., he says: "It does not effect the solvency of our company in the least. The failure of a stockholder in a corporation does not affect the standing of the association. I think that Mr. Wolcott is all right and that be will pay one hundred cents on a dollar. The millers, however, in cabling the report of his failure in Europe, either intentionally or unintentionally garbled it in a manner that would indicate that this failure involved the failure of the elevator company, which will perhaps prevent the sale of the stock of the elevator company to the English millers, particularly in view of the fact, owing to the assignment and the death of his daughter, Mr. Wolcott has been called home.

We will go along doing business, however, only on a smaller scale, and we hope next year to be able to interest the English millers.

I have just received a copy of the Millers' Gazette and Com. Trade Journal of London, England, containing an article which will indicate the standing the standing of the elevator company on the other side of the water previous to the late report of Mr. Wolcott's failure."

A meeting of the London Flour Millers' Association took place on Wednesday last to consider the subject of the direct supply of pure hard wheat from the Northwest, in connection with the new Farmers' Association, called the Scandinavian Elevator Co., whose head office is in Minneapolis, and which was recently incorporated with a capital of two million dollars. There were presesent Mr. F. Lightfoot, in the chair, Mr. Seth Taylor, Mr. E. Mead, Mr. F. Davis, and Mr. Perry, Isleworth. Mr. Gautier de Ste Croix, and Mr. C. C. Wolcott, Secretary, also attended on behalf of the company and the former gentleman having fully explained the subject, he was asked to draw up a short report, embodying his main features, to be afterwards submitted to the London millers which has since been done, and approved, of, we believe.

A few words of explanation of this project will not be out of place here. The Scandinavian Elevator Co., capital two million dollars, in shares of ten dollars each, was incorporated on the 19th of April, 1888, when the amended articles were adopted. The president is Mr. H. L. Loucks, president of the Dakota Farmers, Alliance; the secretary Mr. C. C. Wolcott, the owner of an independent line of thirty-two country elevators, which has been successively worked, and which will be taken up by the new company as a going concern; the treasurer, Mr. David B. Dotty; vice president, Mr. F. B. Fancher, vice president of the Dakota Farmers' Alliance; Mr. Eric Olson, secretary of the Minnesota Farmers' Alliance, being a director. These five gentlemen constitute the American Board. The object of the company is to build country elevators only over a wide extent of Dakota and Minnesota.

Mr. Loucks, in his capacity of president of the Dakota Farmers' Alliance, brings with him the sympathy and support of over 25,000 individual members of that alliance, so that the company is secure in the ample support of farmers: and to read the numerous newspaper articles in America on the subject, public and general support is evidently also forthcoming. The articles of incorporation provide that only half the stock shall be held in America, the other half being held in England, where it is proposed to elect five directors, so that each country shall be equally represented: the idea being that the American board shall consist principally of millers. The latter have also the right to name a representative who will attend the board meeting in America, and have full power of control and inspection of the company's business, with the right of referring any decision of the American board to the English board for their veto or approval. For this post the company has secured the services of the manager of one of the wealthiest banking houses in the west. It is proposed also to hold the annual meetings alternately in London and Minneapolis. One of the principal objects of the company, as before mentioned, is to obtain a direct supply of pure wheat from farmers in the Northwest, the handling in transit being done by the company, and the profits thereon, of course benefiting the shareholds. Minneapolis millers at present control about 70 per cent. of existing elevator property, and consequently control the main supply of the best wheat. The Scandinavian Elevator Company proposes to class the different wheats, and sell the same on sample on their exact merits. They will purchase direct from farmers in Dakota, whose support they are promised, and after carefully passing the wheat through their own channels, will undertake to deliver the same in an unsophisticated condition in English millers' hands. At present, the Minneapolis millers accumulate stock at Minneapolis and Duluth during the autumn. By this means, winter shipments being practically impossible, they tend to depress values, by the large stock on hand for their own benefit. This monopoly, the new company proposes to break, and to secure for British millers a regular supply throughout the year, of this very desirable wheat, by means of their own elevator advantages, Buffalo being the proposed main center for winter supply where stocks will be held, being received via Duluth and from thence by water to Buffalo. The wheat thus carried enjoys a considerable advantage, in point of cost of transport, over that sent via Minneapolis. Thus, instead of being cut off from this wheat during the winter—as British millers have always been, whilst the Minneapolis millers have the market entirely under their own control, making their own terms practically—they (the British millers) would by means of this new company's elevators, have the full advantage of their more favorable position. Dakota produced last year 52,400,000 bushels, or nearly one-third of the spring wheat crop of America, having more than doubled its yield within the last three years: there is also an almost unlimited extent of the best land yet to come under wheat growth. Minnesota produces an average crop of 35 million bushels, so that the two states combined—and to which the company will principally confine its operations—produce 80 to 90 million bushels of the best wheat in the world, to which it is proposed that British millers shall have free access, on the most advantageous terms possible.

This, then, is a brief outline of the project; it is, as will be seen, a big affair, and can hardly fail to be successful if it be properly supported. What is now needed is to secure the necessary financial support to take up one half the stock of the company, and elect a representative board of five English directors, who will have just as much control over the operations of the company as the American board.

The Prohibition party.

That the prohibitionist is sincere in his belief, and that he is in earnest in efforts to accomplish the sole object of his party—the utter prohibition of the sale of intoxicants there can be no doubt and that his object is a worthy one is as true, but the methods he takes to accomplish his end is the standing wonder of the age. He knows that every vote he casts draws from the strength of the only party that ever took any action in the direction of the accomplishment of his wishes, that every vote that he casts goes to help that party that ever has and ever will fight him—Nay, that his very vote but insures his own defeat and yet he casts his vote where it will do the most good for the very interest to which he is so bitterly opposed, and the liquor interest chuckles in its sleeve and thrives upon the prohibition vote. That is the exact status of the case this fall and will be to the end. Without the aid of the prohibitionists the democratic party would be without the shadow of a hope of success this fall but to-day they openly make their boasts that the prohibition vote will ensure a democratic victory. Prohibitionists consider the liquor traffic a deadly sin every one who deals in it, or who contributes to make it successful, a sinner, and yet every vote ever cast by a prohibitionist is a help to the liquor interest and is hailed with delight by that interest. How a sincere christian man can reconcile his profession with his vote we fail to see, when he knows that his vote helps to perpetuate that curse from which he prays the Lord to deliver the people. In short he will work hard against the evils of the liquor traffic, in season and out of season, working and praying earnestly for a whole year and then, on election day march deliberately up to the ballot box and deposit a vote to perpetuate the liquor power, thus, in one moment undoing the good work he has done in a year. His own conscience tells him that he is committing a sin every time he votes to aid that crime that he considers the enemy of souls, but he satisfies his conscience with the delusion that sometime in the future good may result from it. Thus he deliberately commits a sin—that he feels and knows to be a sin, in the vain hope that some day good may come from it, for if it is a sin to sell liquor it is as much a sin to aid the traffic in any way, shape or manner. We believe the majority of the prohibition party to be sincere in their inmost hearts and this is why it puzzles us to see them voting squarely against what they profess, for it amounts to that and simply that.

REMOVED.

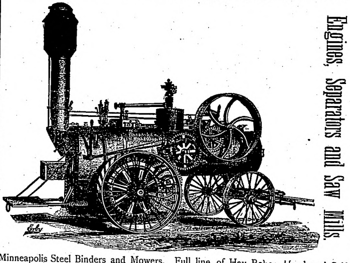
HUGGARD, LARSEN & CO.

have removed their stock to their new building, opposite the New York store on, cor. Broadway and Robert. You can't miss it,

SIGN OF THE JACKSON WAGON.

☞ JUST RECEIVED—A fresh car of Buggies, Carriages and Road Carts. ☜

General Agents for
RUSSELL & CO'S WORLD KNOWN
Engines, Separators and Saw Mills.



Minneapolis Steel Binders and Mowers. Full line of Hay Rakes, Hand and Self Dumps. J. Thompson & Son's Cross Plows and Breakers, New Model Walking Gangs and Breakers, Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machines, Pumps, Full line of Extras. TWINE. Come and see us!

Best residence lots in the city and on your own terms; mind, ON YOUR OWN TERMS.

STEENERSON & McMANUS.

Verndale Journal: The democrat who is willing to run for congress against Hon. S. G. Comstock must be anxious for a good licking and he will not be disappointed.

On all loans we make, interest payable at our office in Crookston.

STEENERSON & McMANUS.

Condition of the Scandia American Bank, Crookston, Minn., at the close of business, June 30th, 1888:

RESOURCES.
Loans and Discounts,	$74,636 44
Overdrafts	85 40
Furniture and Fixtures,	1,766 86
Current Expenses,	2,895 43
Cash on hand & in Banks,	26,370 67
Checks on other Banks,	100 55
Cash short,	3 01
	$105,808 36
LIABILITIES.
Capital Stock paid in,	$50,000 00
Undivided profits,	5,658 27
Individual deposits subject to check,	36,247 64
Demand and Time Certificates of Deposit.	13,786 45
Cashier Check outstanding,	116 00
	$105,808 36

STATE OF MINNESOTA, } ss.
County of Polk, }

I, A. G. Gallasch, Cashier of the above named Bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

A. G. GALLASCH, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 18th day of July, 1888.

O. O. CHRISTIANSON,
Notary Public,
Polk County, Minn.

Correct. Attest:
{Seal.} O. H Lucken,
G. W. Barber,
Lewis Ellington, } Directors.

DENTISTRY!

J. H. THOMAS, D. D. S.,

ROBERT STREET. - CROOKSTON, MINN

Artificial Teeth from one to an entire set inserted. Gold, Silver or Artificial Filling used a desired. Regulating Children's Teeth a specialty. ALL WORK WARRANTED

DR. M. WATTS.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.

Office over Merchants' Bank,

☞ Professional calls by day or night promptly attended to.

Stewart & Laurence,

WHOLESALE AND RETTIL

HEAVY AND SHELF

HARDWARE,

BAKER STEEL BARBED WIRE.

JEWETT'S STOVES AND RANGES,

Plymouth Binding Twine

D. H. BATES,

—DEALER IN—

Lumber, Building Paper,

PAINTS, OILS,

DOORS, WINDOWS, AND MOULDINGS

ALSO

FARM MACHINERY

☞ AGENT FOR THE CELEBRATED

MILWAUKEE HARVESTER,

(FORMERLY THE DENNETT,)

AND THE CELEBRATED

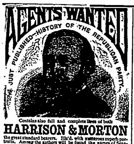
WINONA PLOWS

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

☞ You will find it to your advantage to call when need of anything in my line.

D. H. BATES,

CARMAN. - - - MINN



AGENTS WANTED
JUST PUBLISHED—HISTORY OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

Contains also full and complete lives of both

HARRISON & MORTON

the great standard bearers. Ills'd. with numerous superb portraits. Among the authors will be found the names of Senators Frye, Chandler, Hawley, Ingalls, John D. Long, popular ex-gov. of Mass., McKinley of Ohio, writes on the Tariff, Henry Cabot Lodge, and a number of others of a like prominence. The only authentic Campaign Book, indorsed by the Nat. Rep. Com. Don't be induced to get any other. Distance no hinderance as we pay all freight charges. Send 50 cents in 1c. stamps for outfit and be the first in the field, or write for full particulars and Special Terms sent free to all.

WINTER & CO., Pubs., Springfield, Mass.

A. C. WILKINSON,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

(Successor to R. A. Wilkinson,)

Room 5, Furnet Block } Crookston, Minn.

Crookston Nurseries

Established in 1879

Tree Claim Stock

A SPECIALTY.

I will furnish my customers and others, trees and seeds for Tree Claims at reduced figures in the spring of 1887. Also all the hardier varieties of small fruits, such as Currants, Gooseberries, and Raspberries. Also good thrifty Transcendent and Hislop Crab-Apple trees, Cottonwood and Box Elder trees. Box Elder and Ash seed, and Willow cuttings. Also garden seeds. The firm of Haseltine Bros. was dissolved in June, 1883. E. W Haseltine has no interest or share in the old Crookston Nurseries, nor is he successor to the old firm of Haleltine Bros. as ha, been advertised. I continue business on the old grounds in Crookston. Don't fail to send for catalogue of prices

FRANK T. HASELTINE, Prop.
Crookston, Minn

THE OFFICE OF

COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS

WIL BE OPEN

EVERY SATURDAY.

RESIDENCE—With D. N. Taylor, Esq., Broadway.

2-tf] E. F. ELLIOT, Supt

Further Use for Him.

Minneapolis Evening Journal: Mr. Nelson, of Minnesota, is not a man to be accused of not having the courage of his convictions. He is a tariff reform Republican and came very near succeeding in his efforts to have the Republicans in the House offer a substitute tariff bill for the Mills bill. His plucky fight for his convictions along that line is recent and fresh in the public mind. Yesterday he ventured to oppose the senate steamship subsidy amendment to the post-office appropriation bill and did it in such vigorous and manly style as to challenge the respect of both sides of the House.

Mr. Nelson insists on retiring from politics, but he is not the kind of a man to retire. His party and his state have further use for him and had better not release their claims upon his services just yet.

Why Don't He?

Minneapolis Evening Journal: Mr. Scheffer was asked yesterday whether he would support the nominee of the Republican convention for Governor, or whether he would run as an independent or seek a nomination from the Democrats. By the time his questioner had got the whole thing out Mr. Scheffer was mad. He declined to answer and charged that the inquiry was instigated by Mr. Merriam.

It was enough to make a man indignant under ordinary circumstances, but if Mr Scheffer wants the Republican nomination and could say that he would support the nominee of the convention, the circumstances are such that it would probably have been to his advantage if he had swallowed his indignation said frankly what he proposes to do. If he is a candidate for the Republican nomination and proposes to support the nominee he could very well have afforded to say so to Mr. Merriam or anybody else. Why didn't he do it?

The following letter to the Argyle Banner, from a prohibitionist of Marshall County, is worthy of perusal and consideration by all who are inclined to be caught by the cold water theory:

To the President and Gentlemen of the Prohibition Club, of Argyle, Minn.

GENTS: You will kindly strike my name from the intended roll of membership of your club. Not being able to be present with you, you doubtless may desire my reasons, a few of which I herewith append:

1st, Contrary to my first impressions, I find that the prohibition organization is a separate and distinct political party and as such has and will ever act. My impression and first conclusion reached from the remarks of Mrs. Bailey, were to the effect that the signers of the constitution did not pledge their support to the cause in a political sense, but only to support the question of an amendment to our constitution when submitted to the people. But on becoming more acquainted with its objects and designs, I find it a separate and distinct political organization.

2d. While I am strongly in favor of temperance reform, I cannot, nevertheless, cast my vote with a hopeless minority and thereby place the issues of the state and nation in the hands of a party who have from their origin been the strong advocate of free and untrammeled whisky principles and privileges. The prohibition party secured the defeat of the republican party in the memorable contest of 1884. And when has the country been benefitted in consequence? The republican party is the only party that has taken one step either in their platforms or by their political efforts that has led to the subversion of the liquor traffic. The platform as adopted by the Indianapolis convention, is one which is well calculated in many respects to catch unthinking voters. Their declaration on the tariff issue as first adopted, was an uncompromising free trade plank. As amended, declares both in favor of free trade and prohibition. There is nowhere a respectful mention of the defenders of our country; no reference to their great valor and services; no condemnation of the election frauds which have tainted the political surroundings of the great city where their deliberations were held, to say nothing of other places where election frauds have come to notice; no sympathy for the abused blacks of the South, who were deprived of a fair election and an honest count; no word of comment in regard to the present administration. On this platform the prohibition party goes before the people. I might go further, by simply stating that the only organ in the state supporting your ticket, that I have seen, is the most rabid rebel sheet that I have ever read in the North. Am sorry to say it, but nevertheless it is true; read one copy of the Northwestern Prohibitionist and satisfy yourselves. I cannot vote for any man who ever tried to destroy the best government on the globe. Brooks, your candidate for vice president, once did. I. A. RIGHT.

"Peterson's Magazine" for August begins "A London Success," by the author of "A Transplanted Rose." To judge from the opening chapters, this serial will prove fully equal to that novel, which made such a decided hit several years ago. Indeed, among all the stories and poems, there is not one but deserves special mention. Miss Elizabeth Robinson Scovil's article on "The Care of Children in Infectious Disease" is in her best style; and, as a writer on such subject, she has few equals, either in this country or England. As usual, in the matter of illustrations, "Peterson" is unsurpassed. Every woman will want this number, if only to secure the beautiful steel-engraving, "Good Bye, Papa." The large colored fashion-plate, which is a specialty of "Peterson," gives numerous designs for summer costumes. The number is rich in patterns for ladies' and children's dresses, fancy articles, and other sorts of needle work—in fact, everything the heart of woman can desire. The present number is as good as it can be, from the first page to the last. "Peterson's popularity seems steadily to increase year by year, no matter how hard times may be. Terms: Two Dollars a year. Address Peterson's Magazine, 306 Chestnut Street, Phila., Pa.

Polk County Journal.

W. G. COOKE, Publisher.

CROOKSTON, MINN., JULY 19.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

City Council Proceedings.

Proceedings of a regular meeting of the City Council of the city of Crookston held July 10th, 1888.

Meeting called to order.

Members present: ald. Watts, Childs, Nolan, Jerome. Fournet, Steenerson, Buhn, Lally, Jennings and Marlette.

President Watts in the chair. The report of the fire committee was presented and on motion was accepted.

Moved by ald. Childs, seconded by ald. Lally, that the report of the fire committee be laid on the table. The Ayes and Nays being called: Ayes, ald. Lally, Childs, Fournet, Jerome and Watts. Nays, ald. Nolan, Marlette, Buhn, Steenerson and Jennings.

Moved by ald. Steenerson, seconded by ald. Jennings, that the report of the fire committee be adopted. Yeas, ald. Nolan, Buhn, Jennings, Marlette and Steenerson; Nays, ald. Lally, Childs, Fournet Jerome and Watts. The motion was declared lost.

Moved by ald. Childs, seconded by ald. Lally, that a committee of three be appointed in regard to draining in the 5th ward. Carried. The president appointed the following committee: ald. Childs, Marlette and Jennings.

Moved by ald. Steenerson, seconded by ald. Nolan, that the same committee be appointed with regard to securing safety gates at the R. R. crossing. Carried.

The report of the city engineer with regard to gravel for stock yards was presented.

R. P. Herrick tendered his resignation as a member of board of sinking fund commission and on motion it was accepted.

A petetion was presented from A. D. Stephens and others requesting that a 5 inch water main be laid in Davis' addition. The petition was referred to the following committee: ald. Steenerson, Lally and Buhn, to report at next regular meeting of the city council.

The petition of Thomas Hunt and others praying for a sidewalk in the 2nd ward, was referred to the aldermen of the 2nd ward.

The petition of Charles Ziebeck for rebate of taxes, was referred to the alderman of the 3rd ward.

The qaurterly Justice report of T. C. Shapleigh was presented and accepted.

The quarterly Justice report of C. S. Spendly was presented and accepted.

A communication was presented from the street commissioner. Moved by ald. Jennings, seconded by ald. Childs, that the recommendations of the street commissioners be referred to the aldermen of each ward and to report on same at the next regular meeting. Carried.

Ald. Childs offered the following resolution, which was seconded by ald. Fournet:

Resolved, That a hose tower and stable of sufficient size to acommodate the requirements of the fire department, be built in the rear of the City Hall and that the work be placed in the hands of a building committee of which the chief of the fire department shall be chairman, the other two to be appointed by the president of the council, which committee shall have power to cause the said structure to be erected in a plain and substantial manner and subject to the approval of the mayor and city comptroller.

Moved on amendment, by ald. Steenerson, seconded by ald. Buhn, that the resolution be referred to the fire committee, said committee to report at next regular meeting of the city council. Yeas, ald. Jerome, Steenerson, Buhn, Jennings, Watts and Childs; Nays, ald. Lally, Nolan, Marlette and Fournet. Resolution, as amended, carried.

The City Council of the city of Crookston do ordain, That Charles E. Sawyer is appointed sinking fund commissioner of the city of Crookston in place of R. P. Herrick who has resigned, and that the name of Charles E. Sawyer be substituted for that of R. P. Herrick wherever the latter occurs in the ordinances of the city of Crookston relative to the sinking fund commissioners. Dated, July 10, 1888. Unanimously carried.

Moved by ald. Childs, seconded by ald. Steenerson, that the tenders for building sidewalks for the ensuing year, be referred to ald. Nolan, Lally and the street commissioner, said committee to report at the next regular meeting. Carried.

Ald. Childs offered the following resolution, which was seconded by ald. Lally:

Resolved, That the sum of $200.00 be and the same is hereby withdrawn from the general fund and placed in the hands of the city treasurer as a contingency fund from which the said treasurer shall pay the laborers on street work on the presentation of orders, time checks or pay rolls issued by the street commisioner, said bills to be held as vouchers against said fund until finally allowed by proper authority. Carried.

The finance committee reported favorably on the following bills:

Henry Shepard, constable	$ 2 10
J A Campbell, witness fees	1 12
I Fortier, rent of office	5 00
H E Cooke, printing	4 50
" " "	19 10
M Van Dyke & Co., merchandise	8 25
J E O'Brien & Co., merchandise	21 00
Red River Lumber Co., lumber	287 50
E W Wile, paid express for fire department	4 10
G H Holt, constable fees	2 15
Crookston Fire Department, attending two fires	110 00
E B Preston & Co., merchandise	8 85
Bostonn Woven Hose Co., merchaudise for fire department	55 00
Hartshorn & Hurlbut, merchandise	10 55
F L Durand, merchandise	4 65
E O Flanders, special police	6 00
O L Hamery, services as city engineer	59 00
Red River Lumber Co. lumber	105 74
H F Lensgrof assisting city engineer	18 00
W H Welch, special police	4 00
James Quinn, " "	4 00
C S Spendley, justice fees	2 25
" " " "	1 90
" " " "	4 55
T C Shapleigh, " "	7 60
H E Cooke, printing	18 80

The bill of Osias Vieu, for attending chemical engine in the 5th ward was referred to the aldermen of said ward.

The bill of Dr. Van Dyke for $57.00 for services as health officer on motion was allowed.

Moved by ald. Marlette seconded by ald. Fournet that the report of the finance committee be adopted and the bills ordered paid.

On motion council adjourned.

JOHN PATTISON, Clerk.

A Light Hay Crop.

Hoard's Dairyman.

Despite all the rain which has fallen, it is quite evident that the hay crop from cultivated grasses, will be very light in the Northwest. The severe drouth of 1886 and '87 destroyed nearly all new seeding and greatly injured the old grass roots. As a consequence, tame meadows and pastures are making a thin, spindling growth. Dairymen should take full warning by this, and provide themselves with plenty of corn fodder or millet. The dairy farmers of Wisconsin are thoroughly aroused on the subject, thanks to the education of the Farm Institutes. Over 2,000 silos will be built in Wisconsin, and reports from seed dealers indicate that fully 150 per cent more fodder corn was planted this year than last. This will give an estimated increase of about 150,000 acres, or a production of fodder to the value fully of 375,000 tons of timothy hay. The farmers of Wisconsin and those living in the dairy districts of Illinois, Iowa and Minnesota are becoming thoroughly awakened to the value and power of this as a cheap and certain provision for profit in the keeping of their live stock.

There is another direction in which they need to be aroused and rallied, and that is is in the matter of growing an albuminoid crop to take the place of grain. Owing to the rapidly increasing demand, from all parts of the Union, the price of bran has greatly increased. It is becoming too costly. We cannot afford to do without a protein food in dairying. The corn plant is a carbonaceous food and does not furnish sufficient support for the nervous and muscular system of the cow; hence there is no escape from the necessity of providing a protein food. Clover, peas, beans and all leguminous plants are rich in protein. We must look into this question and see if in all these there is not some substitute for bran that we can grow more cheaply. To this end the Dairyman has strongly advised that more attention be paid to the growing of peas. Our lack of success, heretofore, has been mainly because we did not know that peas must be planted deep in order to withstand the scorching effect of summer heat. Some object to the cost of seed and forget that a good crop always reduces the cost of seed. We cannot longer afford to haggle on these trifling considerations. The price of bran is bound to keep up. Brains and the experience of brains tells us that we must feed a well balanced dairy ration in order to get profitable dairy results. If we have business sense, it will not require six or eight years of costly waiting and watching to show us how to take advantage of a few simple facts.

The Dairyman always tries to give sound practical advice and keep ahead of the situation. Therefore it says: Don't feed any less protein; that you must have in some form or other. But set your wits at work and see if you cannot produce it cheaper than you can buy it. A good dairy farmer works every turn as shrewdly as a woolen manufacturer. We must consider ourselves as manufacturers, not mere grubbers in the soil, and that will show us many a profitable shift we can make and leave us with more of our own money in our pocket at the end of the year.

Grain to Cows at Pasture.

Hoard's Dairyman: If a cow is at all fit for the dairy, she will bear good feeding with grain any time after her calf is a week old, and she shows no symptoms of fever or caked bag. Grain is especially needful after she is turned out to pasture. The succulent grass stimulates a large flow of milk, but there is little substance in it. The cow must furnish the fat from herself to make the milk rich enough. A really good cow will not fatten, no matter how highly she is fed during the first flow of milk, but it may make her yield so largely as to require that her milk be drawn three times in twenty-four hours This is often done with high fed cows, though it is extremely exhaustive to milk if a cow is poorly fed.

Farm loans completed and money paid over the day application is made.

STEENERSON & McMANUS.

For Sale.

A full blood Jersey bull calf. Will sell cheap for cash or trade for a colt, heifer calves, a few pigs or anything but dogs or cats. I have no use for the animal and he is too valuable to veal. Address, M. E. BARTLETT, Fairfax.

We refer to farmers to whom we have made loans as to our promptness in dealing with them. Our old customers always recommend their neighbors to us.

STEENERSON & McMANUS.

For Cash or Trade.

A thoroughbred Holstein-Friesian bull, for cash, on time or trade for cows. For particulars address THE JOURNAL office.

California Wines and Brandies.

Max Ericsson is constantly receiving California Wines and Brandies, the choicest of liquors of all kinds at wholesale and retail, which he can supply at the shortest notice. No use to send below for such things, as Max can supply them as cheaply and of as good quality as you can get anywhere. Go and see what Max can do for you.

STRAYED.

From Philips' herd, on July 4th, one small light-red cow, three years old, tips of horns cut off. A suitable reward will be paid for her return to the herd or to MRS. S. N. GRIFFITH, Crookston, Minn.

Strayed.

Came to my place on or about June 20th, one red cow, owner is requested to call, prove property, pay charges and take her away.

[12-14] WM. CUNNINGHAM.

We find it our duty to let the public know that we are agents for the best sewing machine, Domestic. We also have in stock two lighted windows and a general stock of sash and doors.

[52-tf] EIKEN BRO'S.

Money to Loan.

We have the cash always on hand to loan on good farm security. No second mortgage. No delay. No commission.

STEENERSON & McMANUS.

W. A. ROBERTSON,
D. D. S.
Graduate of Dental Department of the University of Maryland.
OPERATIVE AND MECHANICAL
DENTIST.
OFFICE, IN McKINNON BLOCK.

R. H. HOLDREGE,
Contractor, House & Sign
PAINTER.
Paper Hanging, Graining, Kalsomining, Gilding on Glass a Specialty.
Robert Street, bet. Broadway and Ash
CROOKSTON, - - - MINN

Lots in exchange for farming lands.
STEENERSON & McMANUS

THE SECOND HAND STORE,
(Yvernault's Old Place,)
Main Street, - - Crookston, Minn,
KEEPS A FINE, LARGE STOCK OF
NEW FURNITURE,
At Prices Unrivalled in this market. Also a Large Stock of
SECOND HAND FURNITURE,
Little worn. Parties desiring to dispose of Old Furniture can exchange it with me for New Furniture at a Bargain, or I will Pay Cash for it. Call and see my stock and get prices
PETER GOTHIA.

THE PERKINS WIND MILL.

BUY THE BEST AND SAVE MONEY

It has been in constant use for 19 years, with a record equaled by none. We give each purchaser a

WARRANTY

as follows: We warrant the Perkins Wind Mill, sold this day, to out-last and do better work than any other make, and not blow down, unless the Tower goes with it, and against any wind that does not disable buildings in the vicinity.

We manufacture both Pumping and Geared Mills and carry a full line of Wind Mill Supplies.

AGENTS WANTED.

Send for Catalogue, Circulars and Prices.
Address PERKINS WIND MILL & AX CO.
Mishawaka, Ind.

THE OLD RELIABLE
CROOKSTON
LOAN AGENCY
STILL ON DECK.
MONEY
On Real Estae.
MONEY
On Approved Chattels.
Always on hand at the Lowest Rates.
Consult your best interests by giving me a call when you Want Money.
A. D. STEPHENS,
Second Street, Crookston, Minn.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk,—ss. In Probate Court. Special term, July 9th, 1888.

In the matter of the estate of Germund T. Eiken deceased.

Whereas, an instrument in writing, purporting to be the last will and testament of Germund T. Eiken deceased, late of said county, has been delivered to this court.

And whereas, Andrew Eiken, O. O. Christianson and Thomas H. Bjoin have filed their petition, representing among other things that said Germund T. Eiken died in said county, on the 14th day of May 1888 testate, and that said petitioners are the sole executors named in said last will and testament, and praying that the said instrument may be admitted to probate, and that letters testamentary be to them issued thereon.

It is ordered, that the proofs of said instrument, and the said petition, be heard before this court, at the probate office in said county, on the 7th day of August A. D. 1888, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, when all concerned may appear and contest the probate of said instrument.

And it is further ordered, that public notice of the time and place of said hearing be given to all persons interested, by publication of these orders for three weeks successively previous to said day of hearing, in THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said county.

Dated at Crookston the 9th day of July A. D. 1888.

By the court,
C. O. CHRISTIANSON,
Judge of Probate.

[12-14]

U. S. LAND OFFICE, Crookston, Minn., June 21, 1888.

Complaint having been entered at this office by Charles S. Attix against the heirs of John O. Fay, deceased, for abandoning his homestead entry No 7,197, dated May 8th, 1883, upon the n½ sw¼ and w½ nw¼ Sec. 22, Township 149 north, Range 43 west, in Polk County, Minn., with a view to the cancellation of said entry; the said parties are hereby summoned to appear at this office on the 4th day of September, 1888, at 10 o'clock a. m., to respond and furnish testimony concerning said alleged abandonment.

[10-15] H. H. DICKMANN, Register.

S. L. COLLINS
PROPRIETOR OF
MAIN STREET
Livery, Feed and Sale Stables
CORNER MAIN AND FOURTH STS, WEST SIDE,
Crookston, - - - - Minnesota.
Horses bought and sold on commission.
Everything neat and nobby.
Feeding a specialty.
FINE HEARSE
in connection which I will attend to in person.

1878. 1888.
Fontaine & Anglim,
Have the largest and most complete stock of goods in the city, consisting, in part, of
CARPETS AND HOUSE FURNISHING GOODS, DRY GOODS, NOTIONS BOOTS AND SHOES, GENTS', YOUTH'S AND CHILDREN'S CLOTHING
STAPLE AND FANCY GROCERIES.
Pries very Low. Farmers' Produce Taken in Exchange.

THE CROOKSTON
AUCTION AND COMMISSION
STORE.
SECOND HAND GOODS of all kinds Bought and Sold. Also Sold on Commission. We are prepared to sell Stock and Machinery at our Yards in Crookston, or to attend Sales anywhere in Polk County at Reasonable Rates. Orders solicited. It will be to your interest to see our stock of
SECOND-HAND AND NEW GOODS
And get prices before purchasing elsewhere.
BERTHIAUM AND MICHAUD, Proprietors,
BROADWAY, - - CROOKSTON, MINN.,
Between Robert and Fletcher Streets.

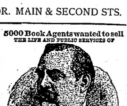
THE BEE HIVE!
Established in 1879.
HACK & GALLASCH
Invite Your Attention to Their New
SPRING AND SUMMER STOCK
OF EVERYTHING IN THE LINE OF
DRY GOODS, NOTIONS, BOOTS AND SHOES.
HATS AND CAPS.
IN OUR GROCERY AND PROVISION DEPARTMENT
Will be found a Full and Complete Stock of Fresh and Reliable Goods which we can sell at the very Lowest Living rates. We point with pride to our CHINA DEPARTMENT and challenge any competitor to beat it. Goods delivered free to any part of the city. When in need of anything in our line, call and see
HACK & GALLASCH. COR. MAIN & SECOND STS.

First National Bank
OF CROOKSTON
PAID IN CAPITAL, - $100,000
SURPLUS, - - $11,000
Money to loan on long or short time on approved security
Interest on time deposits. Faithful attention to Collections and prompt remittance.
GEO. Q. ERSKINE, President.
WM. ANGLIM, Vice President.
CHAS. E. SAWYER, Cashier
DIRECTORS:
Wm. Anglim, K. D. Chase, F. D. Childs.
Geo. Q. Erskine, S. F. Markham, H. M. Pierce
E. M. Walsh. John Moore. W. H. Crosby.
Chas. E. Sawyer.

CHRISTIANSON BROTHERS,
(Correspondents Fargo Loan Agency.)
REAL ESTATE,
Farm Mortgage Loans and Insurance.
Special Bargains in Choice Farm Lands, improved and unimproved. Low prices and easy terms.
OFFICE ON ROBERT STREET,
CROOKSTON, - - - MINN.

THE PIONEER
SAMPLE ROOM,
AUGUST WENTZEL, Prop.
THE CHOICEST OF
WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS
Constantly on hand. Convenient to depot and all business places in the city.
GIVE ME A CALL.

5000 Book Agents wanted to sell
THE LIFE AND PUBLIC SERVICES OF



Grover Cleveland
Full and complete from his boyhood to his nomination in St. Louis, with personal reminiscences, incidents and anecdotes. Profusely illustrated with steel portraits and wood engravings. The book also contains a superb Portrait and a full and complete LIFE OF MRS. CLEVELAND, together with a complete biography of ALLEN G. THURMAN. This is the only authentic Life. Don't be induced to get any other. There will probably be unauthorized Lives, but this is the right one. Distance no hindrance, as we pay all transportation charges. Send 50 cents in 1c. stamps and be the first in the field, and thus reap the golden harvest. Write for full particulars and Special Terms sent free to all. Address, WINTER & CO., Publ's, Springfield, Mass.

NEW MEAT
MARKET
At Steenerson Bros. Old Stand, on Main Street,
SANDS BROTHERS, Prop's.
Having purchased this stand we have put in a large and complete stock of Fresh and Salt Meats of all kinds, secured the services of a thoroughly competent butcher, and are now ready to supply the Choicest Roasts and Steaks of Beef, Pork, Mutton, and everything in our line. We invite your patronage. Orders delivered when desired.
SANDS BRO'S, MAIN STREET.

MONTANA SHORT LINE.
When traveling every one should consider well the questions of economy, comfort, safety and speed, these questions being of the same importance in a journey of an hour as in one of several days' ride. An examination of the map will convince anyone that this is the most direct route to and from all the principal points in Central and Northern Minnesota, ST. PAUL MINNEAPOLIS MANITOBA RAILWAY, Dakota and Montana. Our epuipment and time are excellent. Our rates are the lowest, but this fact is something which speaks for itself. Definite figures and maps can be obtained by applying to any Agent of the Company, or the General Passenger Agent.
The following are a few of the Principal Points reached via this Line:
ST. CLOUD, SAUK CENTRE, FERGUS FALLS, CROOKSTON, ST. VINCENT, HUTCHINSON, PAYNESVILLE, MORRIS, APPLETON AND BRECKENRIDGE, MINN.; WATERTOWN, ABERDEEN, ELLENDALE, WAHPETON, FARGO, GRAND FORKS, GRAFTON, DEVILS LAKE, BOTTINEAU AND BUFORD, DAKOTA; GLASGOW, DAWES (FT. BELKNAP), ASSINNIBOINE, FT. BENTON, GREAT FALLS, HELENA AND BUTTE, MONTANA; WINNIPEG, MANITOBA, AND ALL PACIFIC COAST POINTS.
Parties seeking farms or business locations will find unusual opportunities for both on this line in Northern Dakota and Montana; also in Minnesota where the Company has for sale at low prices and on favorable terms 2,000,000 acres of excellent farming, grazing and timber lands. For maps and other information address,
J. BOOKWALTER, Land Commissioner.
C. H. WARREN, Gen'l Pass. Ag't.
ST. PAUL, MINN.
A. MANVEL, Gen'l Manager.
W. S. ALEXANDER, Gen'l Traffic Manager

FROM ST. PAUL No. 3 daily	Miles.	STATIONS.	TO ST. PAUL, No 4 dl'y
8:03 p. m.	00	Lv...St. Paul...Ar	7:00 a. m.
9:10 p. m.	11	...Minneapolis...	6:25 "
10:15 a. m.	296	......Crookston.....	5:35 p. m.

No. 3. Through sleeper to Fergus Falls, Crookston and Winnipeg.
No. 4. Through sleeper from Winnipeg, Crookston and Fergus Falls.
CROOKSTON AND MINOT—Trains leave Crookston daily, Sundays excepted at 10:20 a. m. and arrive at Crookston from Minot at 5:15 p. m., Sundays excepted.
ST. HILAIRE BRANCH—Trains leave Crookston Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 10:45 a. m. arriving in St. Hilaire at 12:45 p. m. Leave St. Hilaire same days at 2:00 p. m. arriving in Crookston at 4:00 p. m.
C. H. MIX, Agent
A. MANVEL, Gen'l Manager.
C. H. WARREN, Gen'l Pass. Agent.
W. S. ALEXANDER, Traffic Manager.

Northern Pacific
RAILROAD.
The New Route Between
Grand Forks,
AND
St. Paul,
Minneapolis,
Duluth,
And all points East. The direct line to
Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, British Columbia, Puget Sound and Alaska.
EXPRESS TRAINS DAILY,
To which are attached Pullman Palace Sleepers and Elegant Dining Cars. On overland trains, Emigrant Sleepers Free. The only line
YELLOWSTONE PARK.
TIME SCHEDULE.

Depart West Bound.		Arrive East Bound.
4:00 p. m.	St. Paul	7:00 a. m.
4:30 "	Minneapolis	6:35 "
3:45 "	Duluth	7:45 "
8:40 "	Brainerd	1:15 a. m.
1:00 a. m.	Winnipeg Junction	5:50 p. m.
2:33 "	Twin Valley	7:25 "
3:27 "	Fertile	6:33 "
4:00 "	Tilden	6:05 "
4:35 "	Red Lake Falls, Depart	5:30 "
	Arrive	5:10 "
5:25 "	South Euclid	4:20 "
5:26 "	Bullington	4:30 "
5:44 "	Keystone	4:05 "
6:25 " Ar.	Grand Forks De.	3:35 "
6:45 " De.	Ar.	3:10 "
7:12 "	Kelly's	3:05 "
7:27 "	Mekinock	2:50 "
7:42 "	Beans	2:37 "
7:31 "	Gilby	2:28 "
8:02 "	Johnstown	2:17 "
8:15 "	Forest River	2:05 "
8:25 "	Grafton	1:28 "
7:33 "	Drayton	12:50 "
10:45 "	Arrive...Pembina...Depart	11:35 a. m

Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars between Grand Forks and St. Paul. Dining Cars on west bound trains Coupon Tickets on sale to all points South, East and West. For full information as to time, rates, address
W. E. JERMAINE, Ticket Agent. Grand Forks.
CHAS. S. FEE, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

CLEVELAND HOUSE,
R. BURKHARDT, Prop.
Handy to Depot.
Handy to Post Office.
Handy to Land Office.
Handy to Stables.
Handy to Court House.
The most convenient Hotel to any business house and to deal with of any Hotel in the city. Give me a call.
Terms $1. Yours truly,
RUDY BURKHARDT.

A. P. HOLAND,
(Successor to S. S. Johnson,)
PHOTOGRAPHER
COPYING and ENLARGING
in all sizes and first-class work guaranteed.
PICTURE FRAMES
made to order, on short notice.
Any work in my line neatly and promptly executed at lowest living rates.
GIVE ME A CALL.
Studio opposite Post Office,
Robert Street, - - Crookston, Minn

Woman's Temperance Column.

[This column is at the disposal of the temperance ladies of Crookston, who will edit it each week.]

The Light of Science.

Further Interesting Experiments with Alcohol—Its Effects on the Blood as seen Through a Microscope—Distilling the Blood of a Drunken Man—What the Spectroscope Revealed.

SECOND PAPER.

EDITOR THE VOICE.—If we draw a small amount of blood from the veins of an ordinary healthy person, we will find it composed of red globules floating in a crystalline humor, not much unlike water in general appearance. All blood, however, does not present the same physical appearance, even when viewed with the naked eye. Now, if we take one of these little after isolating it from the rest, it will be found only slightly colored. Milk globules present the same general appearance, save their transparancy. Each individual globule in the blood contains what chemists call six atoms, or smaller globules, possessing the same general characteristics as the large or common globule, and just in proportion as the original globules is stretched out or otherwise distorted, each small one assumes the same form, and when subjected to violent motion, they will disintegrate or fly to pieces.

Those who have, by means of a powerful microscope, seen the blood circulate in living organism, have noticed how all these large globules adapt themselves to circumstances, elongating, passing by and even into each other when passing through the small capillary veins, assuming each its own proper size, shape and position when through the tight place. But of all strange phenomena ever beheld by human eye, the behavior of these blood globules in their journey through, when unduly excited, as in affections of the heart or local inflamation, is the strangest. Then they jostle against each other, break up into smaller globules, assuming various shapes, and sizes, and when through there seems to be no order nor accord. This phenomenon may be fully illustrated by means of the microscope, properly focussed and fixed so as to see the circulation on the inside of a person's lip, for, the membrane being very thin at this point, there is no trouble to get a beautiful view. While viewing in normal condition, note the beauty, order and harmony which prevail. Note how perfectly form and size of these little globules are restored as they emerge from the capillaries. While the objective is still in position, place a single drop of a solution containing one per cent. of alcohol beneath the tongue, and almost instantaneously, greater chaos than will now be seen beneath the microscope was never seen by mortal.

If these two scenes (and anyone with a microscope may operate on another's lip without injury or wearisomeness) could be fully illustrated from life, magnified and shown by means of the oxy-hydro light, it would indeed be a tearful sight to behold.

The question that naturally arises in this connection is, what is the reason of all this, how account for this change? Subjecting blood to a qualitative analysis, we have

Fibrine.	Albumen,
Sodic Chloride.	Potassium Chloride.
Soda Phosphate-	Magnesia.
Lime.

It will be seen by this that the composition of blood is essentially the same as flesh, its specific gravity being about 1055. Besides this, an analysis of the liquor sanguinis blood shows about 5 per cent. of solid matters of which more will be said further on.

First the alcohol, the chemical formula of which is written C2H6O showing the relative proportions of carbon2, hydrogen6, and one a tom of oxygen; hence it must be a very effective alkali. Now the only difference of any moment between arterial and venous blood is that venous blood contains more oxygen and less carbonic acid than does arterial blood. This change arises from the corpuscles of the blood absorbing oxygen from the lung's labor, hence the corpuscles are changed in form and their reflecting surface altered. The argument that liquor containing a small quantity of alcohol is healthy and wholesome is based on this theory of its power of oxygenizing the blood. But it must be borne in mind that alcohol, while containing oxygen, contains an hundred per cent. more carbon, and the very instant it is brought in contact with the juices of the stomach, its combination is broken up, chemical reactions ensue, one of the primary results of which is the evolution of carbonic acid gas C2 O4. This gas at once acting upon the blood renders the corpuscles thinner and more placid, and they soon become entangled. Blood clots ensue. The fibrine of the blood has mingled with the newly formed chemical compound and has ceased to exist, but we have crassamentum of course, proportionate to the amount of carbonic acid gas absorbed by the blood without being tedious. I will try to explain fully, drawing liberally from authorities, in addition to my own investigations, the nature of certain chemical reactions when extraneous matters are brought in contact with blood I find that any alkali tends to redden and intensify the color, while an acid tends to prevent coagulation at first, but soon blackens and coagulates it after the color changes. A solution containing four per cent. of alcohol (about the the average of ordinary beer) I found to heighten the color of my own blood and impede its coagulation. The serum, however, did not appear to be affected. On dumb brutes I found that the arterial blood coagulated sooner than the venous and the latter seemed uniform, but the former seemed to be darker and more coagulated in the bottom of burette. This, I found, was caused by membraneous substances from the fiber, which always result when the blood is agitated, as it was while being caught from the animal experimented upon.

Knowing, as do all others who have noticed, that alcohol increases the temperature of the blood, I found that a very small increase of heat increased the volume of blood, besides exciting all organic motors, thus increasing the current. The results of a quantity or repeated doses of alcohol are apparent in a rushing and roaring torrent, which soon affects other moving nerves and nerve centers, causing semi-unconsciousness, the nature and result of which will be explained further on.

One cubic inch of blood is expanded by distillation to thirty-three cubic inches of vapor, while a cubic inch of fat distilled produces but eighteen cubic inches. So it is plain to be seen, if the temperature of the body be increased but a single degree C. (a teaspoonful of alcohol C. P. in a half-pint of water will increase the temperature much more than this), how the blood will expand, and how crowded the ducts and glands to allow its passage either on its life-giving journey or back to be revivified by the oxygen of the lungs. One very singular fact was noticeable with some blood from a poor fellow who, while drunk, was stabbed by another in a saloon. I distilled the blood and received the vapor in a glass receiver where it condensed into cloud and dew, very volatile, strongly smelling of alcohol and boiling urine. Reduced again to vapor and placed before the spectroscope, the alcohol and sodic chloride lines appeared instantaneously on the spectra, thus presenting an unanswerable proof that the minutest quality of alcohol taken into the stomach will contaminate the blood, for the greater part must have been rendered volatile and burned in my test, only that which was carried over being saved.

New Albany, Ind. J. F. ELSOM.

We are established in Crookston TO STAY. We do not do business here this year to go away the next. In loaning money, as in other business, we have a character for fair dealing to sustain Call on us before going elsewhere. Remember all interest on our loans is payable at our office.
STEENERSON & McMANUS.

The Polk County Journal.

H. E. COOKE, Editor and Proprietor. DEVOTED TO THE WELFARE OF POLK COUNTY. TERMS---$1.50 Per Annum

VOL. XII. CROOKSTON, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, JULY 26, 1888. NO. 14

Polk County Journal.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

One Dollar and Fifty Cents, if paid in advance, to any address inside of Polk County. If outside of Polk County 15 cents must be added for postage. If not paid in advance $2 per annum to any address.

ADVERTISING RATES.

SPACE.	1 w.	2 w.	3 w.	1 m.	3 m	6 m.	1 year
½ inch	$.50	$1 00	$1 25	$1 50	$3 00	4 50	$ 6 00
1 inch	75	1 25	1 75	2 00	4 50	6 00	10 00
2 inches	1 50	2 25	3 00	3 50	6 50	9 50	15 00
3 inches	1 75	2 75	3 75	4 50	9 50	13 50	20 00
4 inches	2 50	3 50	4 50	5 50	10 00	18 00	25 00
5 inches	3 00	4 00	5 00	6 00	12 50	20 00	30 00
¼ column	3 50	4 50	5 50	6 50	15 00	25 00	35 00
½ column	6 00	7 50	10 00	12 00	25 00	35 00	50 00
1 column	9 50	12 00	15 00	18 00	25 00	60 00	100 00

Entered at the Post Office in Crookston as Second Class matter.

MILLER, FOOTE & SWEATT,
ATTY'S-AT-LAW,
McKinnon Block, - - - Crookston, Minn.

THE PIONEER
HARNESS SHOP,
M. RAUENBUEHLER, Proprietor.
A full supply of everything kept by the trade.
Cor of Broadway and Third Sts,
CROOKSTON, - - - MINN

D. H. FISK,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND LOAN AGENT.
Collections a Specialty.
FERTILE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA.

P. C. SCHMIDT,
ATTORNEY AT LAW. | MONEY TO LOAN
Crookston - Minn

H. STENEERSON,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
Crookston, Minn.

FRANK IVES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
AND
Solicitor of Patents and Pensions.
CROOKSTON, MINN.

Having special arrangements with one of the most reputable and responsible firms of Patent Lawyers in Washington, I can offer better inducements to inventors than can be secured elsewhere, and absolute certainty against "leakage" of valuable facts pertaining to business entrusted to my care.

A. H. DUNLOP, M. D.,
Graduate McGill University, Montreal.
LICENSED COLLEGE PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON QUEBEC.
Office on Second Street, Crookston.

M. M. VAN DYKE,
Physician and Surgeon,
Office corner of Main and Second Streets,
CROOKSTON, - - MINNESOTA

A. A. JUST, M. D.,
Homoeopathic Physician and Surgeon.
Office on Broadway, east side, opposite Wm. Anglim's residence.

A. C. WILKINSON,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
(Successor to R. A. Wilkinson.)
Room 5, Furnet Block | Crookston, Minn.

M. LeGUEE,
Veterinary Surgeon.
Residence and office on Jerome's Addition.
CROOKSTON. - - - MINN.

G. G. HENAULT
Practical Dentist,
SECOND STREET,
CROOKSTON, - - MINN

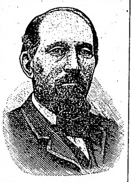
OFFICE IN DOBSON'S BLOCK,
Over Mrs. Bangs' Fashionable Millinery Store.
All work in my line skilfully and promptly performed. Give me a call.
G. G. HENAULT.

MINNESOTA HOUSE,
(FORMERLY BOX HOUSE.)
ONE-HALF BLOCK FROM DEPOT.
WM. HEIDRICH, - - Proprietor.
Having rented this Popular House and thoroughly re-fitted and re-furnished it throughout, I am now prepared to meet the wants of all who want good and cheap accommodations.
Farmers custom specially invited,
Terms $1.00 per Day.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For President,
BENJ. HARRISON
Of Indiana.
For Vice President,
LEVI P. MORTON,
Of New York.
For Member of Congress, 5th District,
SOLOMON G. COMSTOCK,
Of Clay and Polk Counties.

HON. S. G. COMSTOCK



Meets the Citizens of Polk County in Mass Convention,

Monday Evening, July 16th.

IS IN FAVOR

OF OPENING THE Red Lake Indian Reservation
AND SECURING
CHEAP LUMBER
For the Dwellers on the Wind Swept Prairies of the Northwest.

IS NOT IN FAVOR OF EXCESSIVELY HIGH TARIFF,
But Believes in a Reasonable Reduction,

Is Heartily and Emphatically a Polk County Man!

BROAD ENOUGH TO REPRESENT THE WHOLE DISTRICT!

Full Report of his Speech as prepared for THE JOURNAL.

The principal speaker of the evening, Hon. S. G. Comstock, when introduced by chairman McGrew, was greeted by a burst of applause, which continued for about five minutes, when quiet being restored Mr. Comstock spoke as follows:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: I am very proud and very happy to be with you to-night; I am proud because of your number, because of your intelligence, because of the interest you seem to take in the contest that is before us; I am not willing to believe that you came here to hear me make speeches, because I am not a speaker, but because of your deep interest in Republican success. (Applause.)

We boast to-day of our land as the first and best land under the sun, and the reason we can do this is because it is governed by the people and is therefore from and of the people; our government is what we make it, if we are willing to govern, it is our own fault if we do not do it right, if our government is not what it ought to be it is your fault and mine as citizens, and not altogether the fault of our public servants. (Applause.)

I do not appear here to-night in the capacity of orator, but as neighbor and friend, I hope; I was very glad to notice that my friend Cooke, in his paper has put my name, not as S. G. Comstock of Moorhead, or Clay County, but as S. G. Comstock of Polk and Clay Counties, (Cheer,) and I thank him for this kindness; I feel that I belong to Polk County as much as to any other. (Applause;) I have been nominated by the Republicans as their candidate in this district, and it will be said that I am therefore a common politician only, but I trust not too common, for if I am elected to Congress I shall be there not only in your interest but in the interest of the whole of our common country, (applause;) it is beneath the dignity of a representative of the people to represent localities only; you people before me are only members of the American people, we have a duty to our whole country, and not only to the Fifth District. It is true that a representative of Congress has a large constituency which he should properly represent before the country we all revere so much and hope so much from.

The nominations for President and Vice President have been made for the Republican ticket; Cleveland and Thurman head the Democratic ticket, but we have nominated for the head of our ticket Benjamin Harrison and Levi P. Morton. (Renewed cheers and applause.) Two great, noble, illustrous men, no man can say anything against either of them. Harrison is a man whose fame goes over the whole continent, a great statesman who served his country in its assemblys, a leader, who served his party when he was called upon, a brave soldier who served his country during the last great contest. (Long applause.)

There is another thing which is more important and that is the principles they represent; I do not want to speak harshly of my Democratic brethren; the Democratic party is a great party of the people and has held a proud place in the history of the country and often done its duty grandly, but of late we do not think it has served its duty as it should. We know that it did not hold aloft the American banner during the rebellion, we know that the Republican party did; the Democratic party finally came into power, and I say through false pretences; what was its pretences? Do you remember what the cry was four years ago? We were told that the Republican party had been unfaithful to its trust, and that, if we were made to turn over the books of the treasury, that we would see something that would prove such unfaithfulness, we did turn them over four years ago, and can anybody say that there was any truth in their statement. The Democrats themselves have not said a word to substantiate their claims, and by their silence their charge is stamped with untruthfulness. The affairs of the country during the twenty-five years that the Republican party has been in power have been honestly administered, there are less mistakes than in any of the business or private enterprises of the country. What was the next charge the Democratic party made four years ago? I think it was in the speech of Mr. Hendricks, at Indianapolis, in which he said that the Republican party had $450,000,000 hoarded up which they had locked up in the treasury, and, further, the cry was, that if the Democrats were put in power, they would turn all that money over to the people and thereby promote the general welfare of the country. What is the result? A statement was made showing the results; It was a statement of the treasury showing what amount was in the treasury; remember that four years ago the charge was that the Republican party had hoarded up $450,000,000 of the peoples' money, and the statement of the treasury for this year, under four years of Democratic administration shows that there is now $630,000,000, almost $200,000,000 more than Mr. Hendricks and his party said that we had hoarded up! What does that demonstrate? It demonstrates the insincerity of the statements of Mr. Hendricks and his party, because if the Republican party did wrong in hoarding that much in the treasury, then the Democrats are doing doubly wrong now. But ladies and gentlemen, we do not believe that the administration is doing wrong in this, except in one thing, the law says that a part of that money shall be used in purchasing government bonds that are drawing interest, but hardly any have been purchased, and there is now $60,000,000 drawing no interest, which should be used for such bonds; if the Republicon party was dishonest in keeping the money, the Democratic party is doubly dishonest now. They charged us with hoarding it up and still they are leaving the money in the hands of their friends the National banks; they were not honest four years ago.

The next charge was that the Republican party was only a great machine, which depended upon the fact that we violated the civil service law for its support and success. When Mr. Cleveland wrote his letter of acceptance he gave the people to understand that it was dangerous to the country for a President to take a second term, because he would be tempted to use the federal patronage to promote such ambition, he was renominated some time ago at the convention in St. Louis and it is well understood that he was re-nominated by, and with the federal patronage showing again that Cleveland and his party were insincere, because he was elected upon a platform made at the time of his nomination, therefore I say that the Democratic party has shown, since it came in power, that it will not go back on its former old record; it has not been straight and honest as between man and man. I will not say anything against Grover Cleveland, because I think he is a very respectable President, but I do say that he has been elected on an insincere platform, and that he has been elected under false pretences, and I think it is now a good time to take him at his word and not give him a second term; after removing fifty thousand federal officers, violating the civil service law more clearly than has been done during any other administration in the history of the government; he was elected under false pretences, I think, and it seems to me that the people ought to regale him now to obscurity, for this is our government, yours and mine, and we have a right that the man who seeks the office shall deal as honestly with the people as in any business transaction, otherwise he is insincere and unworthy of the trust; the Democratic party has not remedied the evils which they charge existed.

I will not take up much of your time for there are other speakers that you wish to hear, but I am a candidate and you have a right to know something of my stand in relation to matters of general interest to the Fifth District and the country at large. But first, I wish to say something about the Republican convention in St. Cloud; I was before that convention, together with four other gentlemen, which were good, able, and eminent gentlemen, among them was Judge Stearns, who is very well known in Crookston; a delegation was elected in this county which supported me from beginning to end among my truest support. It is generally believed that there is a lot of trading in politics, and at conventions, but I will say this of your delegates, and I want them all to hear it; they came to me in the convention and said that so far as my public record was concerned they thought I was all right, but they wanted me to pledge myself to one thing. Now, naturally, one would have thought that what they wanted were the offices, but the only thing they asked for was that if I was elected I would remember Polk County, not Crookston alone, not Fisher, not Red Lake Falls, not East Grand Forks, but POLK COUNTY. (Cheers and long applause.) That delegation was an honor to Polk County. (Applause.) They sought no personal ends and had no personal desires, they did not ask for the distribution of offices; but they only wanted me to promise to look to the interest of you people of Polk County. I was glad to make that promise, especially in regard to pine interest; they asked me to pledge myself on that, and I did pledge myself to try and do everything to open the reservation that is (interupted by applause) in my power.

I am here to-night as a friend and neighbor, and shall be here again, and I shall ask and inquire for your best interests and shall see to them that they are promoted, for I hold myself under obligation to Polk County in this, that had it not been for your delegation I would not have been nominated, (applause,) and no power is strong enough to prevent me from carrying out these promises. (Long applause.)

I want to read something to you; it is something that is published by a good and worthy gentleman, but he has said something about my candidacy which I don't think he will say again when he is informed of the facts for the reason that he is a gentleman; I do not care for myself, but I represent the Republican party which I care more for then my life (applause,) this is what my friend McKenzie says in the Crookston Times:

"How industriously Mr. Comstock's organs are laboring to convince the people that he is not in sympathy with the Manitoba railway. Perhaps some of those organs will be able to explain Mr. Comstock's action on the Donnelly bill for the reduction of wheat rates which came up in the senate last session. Mr. Comstock was the hardest worker against the bill and it was through his instrumentality that it was killed. Did Mr. Comstock do this through his love for the farmers, too?"

I think there are some people here in this hall who were down in St. Paul during the session of the legislature; I think Senator Steenerson is in the room, and can bear me out in the facts; there is something true and something untrue in that statement, these are the facts: Mr. Donnelly did introduce such a bill but not in the Senate; I was not the hardest worker against the bill, and the bill was not killed through my instrumentality for this reason that the bill never reached the Senate! (Laughter and applause.) That is more Democratic insincerity, I think. (Laughter and applause.) That party has always been insincere in its principles, and in this instance it is still more serious, because of its being in regard to a measure in the interest of the farmers. The bill was killed by the farmers themselves for this reason; the bill related to wheat alone, and many farmers from the south end of the State said that "we raise more than wheat, we raise hogs and corn and oats and so-forth, and it should not relate to wheat alone." So I hope my friend McKenzie will do me justice in his very able paper the next time he talks of me. Here is another piece:

"THE JOURNAL is turning itself inside out in its endeavor to make people believe that Mr. Comstock would, if elected to congress, work for the opening of the Red Lake Reservation. If the reservation were opened the lumber carrying trade of the Manitoba railway would be ruined and Bro. Cooke can wager his last dollar that Mr. Comstock will never do anything to injure that corporation."

THE JOURNAL is right; I will do all I can to open the reservation. (Long applause.) I do not know that the company will be ruined but I do know that I shall try all I can to open the Indian Reservation. (Applause) There are several other samples; they are all unfair to me.

But there are other questions that are of more interest to you, questions of deep interest; I believe this gentleman said that I am a rabid protectionist. I do not know his grounds for saying that; I have taken the stand pursued by Mr. Nelson and he is not a very rabid protectionist, (laughter;) he lays down the rule that whatever protection we ought to have should be the difference in the cost of production in this country and abroad. What sincerity is there in the Democrats' claim that they are in favor of low tariff? Why, not so very many years ago they ran Horace Greely, the father of protection for the presidency. That is the wonderful sincerity of this Democratic party, that, when the Republican party wanted to reduce the tariff by an amendment which would relieve the people of $29,000,000, did they accept the amendment? Did they show any desire to relieve the people of these twenty-nine million dollars? No! they voted solidly to a man against that amendment. Is not that another insincerity? We have a right to be treated fairly, candidly and honestly. What is the attitude of the democratic members of congress from this state? The very moment they learned through the State Auditor that Minnesota was interested in the raising of flax, they were the first to strike that from the free list and place a tariff on it! Were they honest, or were they influenced by their districts? Mr. Wilson and Mr. McDonald were simply looking for votes.

I will make a prediction. If the people want an honest, thorough, fair revision of the tariff and a reasonable reduction of the surplus, and to bring down the receipts of the government to its necessary expenditures, they will never get it until the republican party comes into power, (applause) because the republican party is always sincere, because they have done what they promised; they have reduced taxation. You all remember when we had two cents stamp tax on every bank check, when we had to take out drayman's license and lawyer's license, and everything was licensed. Who reduced that taxation? It was all done by the republican party. The only tariff revision that we shall ever have, we shall receive from the hands of the republican party. (Applause).

There are several gentlemen present who wish to address you this evening and I shall not take up your time any longer. I thank you for your kind attention. I believe with you, and I think I can see it in your faces, that republican success is sure. (A voice: "You bet!" Laughter). I met a gentleman a short time ago who was from the Pacific coast, and he told me he never saw such an enthusiasm out there before in regard to republican success; it was immense, and he said that the Pacific coast would be solid for us. (Great applause and cheers). He attended the state and municipal elections in Oregon and the Republican party swept the country, he told me, and I will predict the same, that it will all result in a glorious Republican victory in November next. (Enthusiastic cheers and prolonged applause.)

St. Cloud Journal-Press: Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, the eloquent temperance advocate, says of the alleged "free whisky plank" in the republican platform: "You ultra prohibitionists who incline toward the third party are the ones least satisfied with it, when the fact is the third party takes the same position. You republicans will find there is strength in it as a protection measure, while we radical prohibitionists like it because it dissolves the partnership between the government and the whisky interests." Mrs. Foster has taken the stump in Iowa for the Republican party.

THE OFFICE OF
COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS
WIL BE OPEN
EVERY SATURDAY.
RESIDENCE—With D. N. Taylor, Esq., Broadway.
2-tf E. P. ELLIOT, Supt.

The Minnesota Loan and Trust Co.
HAVE ESTABLISHED AN AGENCY AT CROOKSTON.
MONEY LOANED ON IMPROVED FARMS,
IN ANY PART OF THE RED RIVER VALLEY.
NO DELAY! NO BONUS!
Money Supplied the Moment Notes are Signed. Letters of inquiry promptly answered.
STEENERSON & McMANUS, Agents,
Two doors South of U. S. Land Office. CROOKSTON, MINN

HARMLESS SPUR WIRE
FENCING.
Cannot injure or tear stock. Comparatively cheapest fencing made. Is endorsed by every one who uses it, Strongest, most visible and only safe fence.
SEND FOR CIRCULARS AND PRICES.
IN USE IN MANY OF THE STATES AND TERRITORIES.
Manufactured by the
LARM MANUFACTURING CO.,
Cor. Clinton and Van Buren Sts., Chicago, Ill.
For Sale by G. M. Barber, Second Street.

C. H. SAAKE,
Practical Watchmaker and Jeweler.
I HAVE NOW IN MY Store the Largest, Best and Cheapest stock of JEWELRY,
CLOCKS,
SILVERWARE
ever offered at retail. There is positively no store in Crookston that can compare with my magnificent line of Goods.
NO BANKRUPT STOCK,
No goods tarnished by snare or deceit, but Honest Goods bought direct from the best manufacturers, with clean, solid cash. Do not forget name and place!
C. H. SAAKE, Main Street, Opposite Merchants' Nat'l Bank.

JUST RECEIVED, ONE CARLOAD
Wagons and Buggies
FROM RACINE WAGON AND BUGGY COMPANY.
We venture to say without fear of contradiction that this is the finest car of goods, in the Buggy line, ever brought into Crookston.
NO SNIDE OR BANKRUPT STOCK,
The real Simon Pure Racine Manufacture.
WE can please the most fastidious in style and finish, and we guarantee every Buggy sold. We ask our customers, and the public generally, to give us a call, if they want a first-class Buggy or Wagon at bottom prices. Our Platform, Spring and Delivery Wagons are Real Beauties.
A FULL STOCK OF
Farm Machinery and Implements
CONSTANTLY ON HAND.
McKINNON BRO'S,
McKinnon' Block, - - - - - - - - - - Main Street.

Polk County Journal.

W. G. COOKE, Publisher.

CROOKSTON, MINN., JULY 26.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

'Round Home.

Did you hear Congressman Horr speak? If not you missed a rare treat.

At the annual school meeting, Dist. 74 voted to ceil and paint their house.

Mrs. I. U Jennings will sell Millinery at less than cost for the next twenty days. [13-tf]

Mrs. G. D. Francis went to Devils Lake, last Thursday, for a few days' visit with friends.

Mr. Congdon, of Brainerd, was up looking after his land interests east of the city during the latter part of last week.

Will Johnson, in the employ of John Chilbeck, south of the city, has been suffering for a few days, from a severe case of ivy poison.

The Rev. I. C. Fortin will start a class in French shortly. Those who desire joining this class should communicate with Mr. Fortin at once.

Next Sunday evening the Rev. I. C. Fortin will trace the history and growth of Dissent and show from a christian standpoint the great evil of denominationalism.

We have only one note and mortgage we make a loan the day applied for, charge no bonus, and make interest payable at our office in Crookston.
STEENERSON & McMANUS.

Among the teachers who closed their schools, for the summer vacation, last Friday, were Misses Maggie, Minnie and Martha Crookshanks and Miss Mary Wanger.

Mr. R. Kunz has gone to St. Hilaire to take charge of the new flouring mill of Hoff & Darling that is to be ready for business in time for the new crop. Mr. K. is a first-class miller in every particular.

Observe the new ad of M. R. Brown and if you want a lot to build on or if you want to put your money out at 50 per cent interest call and see him. He means business and will sell you a choice lot at some price or other if you want one.

We satisfy all our customers, we ask no bonus, and we pay over money on loans the moment notes are signed.
STEENERSON & McMANUS.

About noon, Monday, a horse belonging to Nap. Rapin, tied in front of LeDuc's butcher shop, took it into his head to roll, and roll he did until horse, buggy and harness were so thoroughly mixed that a man was required to hold the horse down while others disentangled him. No serious damage, but the the crowd was on hand.

New York Times, September 22: "Lost in London" pleased a great crowd at the Windsor Theatre on Monday evening, who enjoyed the melodramatic story and acting of Newton Beers' company who played with much force and energy. The scenery was good and new, and the antics of the comedy characters enjoyable.

Two young citizens of Crookston, became very much in earnest while engaged in a political discussion, and the larger in order to hold the attention of his auditor, took him by the throat and choked him—real hard too—but all the same, he did not squeeze the politics out him nor change his views. He thinks the opposite party too grasping to be tolerated.

Mike Leguee performed a delicate and difficult surgical operation upon a horse belonging to Wm Welsh, the drayman, one day last week, successfully removing from the bladder of the animal two large stones, one of which weighed 3½ ounces and the other 3 ounces. The horse, at last accounts was doing well and fast recovering from the effects of the operation. Mr. Leguee is a skillful veterinary and is doing a big business.

We refer to farmers to whom we have made loans as to our promptness in dealing with them. Our old customers always recommend their neighbor to us.
STEENERSON & McMANUS.

Never in its history has the capacity of the opera house so thoroughly tried as on Monday night. The house is said to comfortably seat 800 people and it was crowded full with the aisles packed full of people anxious to listen to the speech of the Hon. R. G. Horr. It is estimated that over 1200 people listened to the speech and as many more went away, unable to get in. Who says the people of the Northwest are not interested in politics?

The Crookston team did itself honor at the tournament, dividing first money with Fargo's best team. It is thought, by our boys, that Thompson of the Crookston team, made the cleanest record of all present. They report a first-rate good time. At the shoot on the home field, Monday p. m., Skinner, of St. Paul, was present, and made the very fair record of 83 out of a possible 100, and was hard-pressed by Cowing who scored about 80.

Theo. Greenhalgh is one of the progressive farmers of the county one who has the enterprise to raise only the best stock. He has a pair of well matched yearling high-grade Norman colts a mare and a horse colt. The latter he led over to town on Monday and had weighed. He had estimated him at 1,000 lbs and not one who had guessed on his weight put him over that but the surprise of all who saw him weighed the youngster kicked the beam at 1140 pounds. It is no fool of a colt that a man will stand by and see $200 cash shook under his nose for but Theo. says the animal is well worth $250 and it will require that figure to cause the colt to change owners. Every farmer could have that kind of a colt if he would take the pains necessary to procure them, and it costs no more to raise one than it does a runt that nobody wants.

Call at Mrs. E. E. Bangs' Millinery Parlors for Mrs. Ozias' Celebrated Orange Cream for the toilet.

Wheat appears stronger in the markets though the quoted price here roosts serenely at 66c.

Conductor Sands thinks the extra train on Saturday brought about 450 people to the grand rally.

We loan money to pay up railroad lands.
STEENERSON & McMANUS.

Mr. I. U. Jennings has purchased Carey's elevator and business, and will be on deck to buy wheat next fall.

Dr. Demers represented Kittson County at the republican mass meeting on Saturday evening.

Among the Grand Forkers present at the exercises on Saturday evening were Geo. B. Winship, W. H. Topping, Bert and C. A. Wells.

Notice the new ad of the Carlton College at Northfield, elsewhere in these columns. This college is one of the oldest and best in the State.

Among the Warren boys down to hear Mr. Horr we saw Guy Aubol and Atty Grindland—by the way they both wore a simon pure republican hat!

The Beers company, that occupies the opera house next Monday evening is one of the best on the road. Secure your seats early. Tickets now ready.

It is said that 450 people from the Forks and intervening villages came in on the excursion train last Saturday evening. It was a jolly and enthusiastic crowd anyhow.

The Grand Forks Herald speaks in very high terms of the reception the excursionists received last Saturday evening, and compliments the management very highly.

The Grand Forkers all seemed to enjoy their visit very much and our people certainly did. How much more pleasant is such a state of things than the wrangling and jealousies indulged in between some cities.

See the new ad. of M. R. Brown in this issue and go and see him about that property on Jerome's Addition. This is positively the best chance to obtain choice lots at inside figures, that was ever offered in this city.

Advices from J. A. Bemis, at Mt. Clemons, Mich., are to the effect that he is enjoying life hugely and gaining every day. He expects to attain avoirdupois enough to entitle him to a position in the council shortly.

At the school meeting on Saturday evening the following were elected to the school board: John Cromb, Halvor Steenerson and John R. McKinnon. The board is now composed of N. P. Stone, E. Le Page, Wm. Anglum and the three elected as above.

The Grand Forks Plaindealer is making a great parade over a big hotel project said to be deleloping over the ruby. By the way, Mr. Plaindealer, hadn't you better let up a little? Might give away somebody's plan and "kill the project," don-cher-no!

An enthusiastic Grand Forker, as the train was about to leave on Saturday night, (or early Sunday morning) remarked, as he gazed about on the crowd gathered to see our guests off: "Well I'll be darned if Crookston aint the most congenal town I've struck thi' smany a year. It's a pity they will drink! 'Tis, (hic) b' gosh!"

It is worth driving five miles, to see Mrs. Bruce's flower garden. We cannot but wonder why the ladies throughout the country don't beautify their homes in the same way. It would in many cases be a real blessing. She has nothing else to do, did you say? She superintends her housekeeping, has a lot of poultry and several varieties of berries (another much needed blessing in Polk County) to watch over, makes more good butter from three or four cows than most people from ten, and beside she finds time to READ. Take a lesson from "Grandma Bruce" and make a bright spot on the broad prairie that shall verily be an oasis where all who come may be refreshed. As in giving, we receive again, the culture of these will not be without its effects upon us, and will prove but a step toward the heights which the people of Polk County should reach, can reach if they will, and the JOURNAL THINKS THEY WILL.

On Saturday evening of last week the Hon. R. G. Horr, of Michigan, gave an address to the citizens of Polk County on the political issues of the day from the republican stand point. He reviewed the history of the two political parties for the past 25 years and gave a brief synopsis of their aims and methods of the present. Reviewed the tariff and its effects upon the business of the nation, roasted the dems in a very sarcastic manner and gave the prohibs a sample of his powers in that line; and somehow or other some dems there were who did not enjoy it ever so much. The Harrison and Morton club, from Grand Forks turned out in full force headed by the Grand Forks cornet band. The train, that should have reached here at 8 or 8:30 did not arrive until 9:30 and by the time the parade was ended and the speech commenced it was 10 o'clock, but Mr. Horr kept the audience interested until a quarter to 12 and even then they did not want him to stop. The opera house was densely packed and as many more were unable to gain admission, many remaining near the windows to hear what they could. Among the mottoes in the parade we noticed the following: "Protection to every branch of American industry;" "No Pension Veto in Ours;" Cleveland's civil service reform a Show;" 600,000 citizens disfranchised;" One term Only for Cleveland;" "Simple Justice for Dakota;" The cadet band furnished excellent music and drew forth well merited expressions of praise from the assembled thousands while the drum-major put on such style as only Major Brown knows how to assume while he constantly sawed the air in time with: Hurrah for the Mary, hurrah for the lamb, hurrah for the teacher that didn't give &c., &c., &c., or words to that effect, and we'll rally round the flag boys and so on. Seldom in her history has Crookston had such an awakening and it goes without saying that our people enjoyed it to the fullest extent. The excursionists did not get started back until about 1 o'clock when they left for home apparently well pleased with their trip and reception.

Lou Bergner is on from Ohio, the guest of his cousin, Mrs. S. M. McKee.

John Alderman is negotiating for the purchase of the Eiken Bros, hardware stock.

Andrew Timley is putting a new glass front in the Norsk hotel building and will soon be fixed up in good shape.

Mr. Epton is having the building on Robert St., formerly occupied as a China laundry, fixed up for a butcher shop.

Attend the lawn sociable given under the auspices of the Presbyterian society at the home of Mr. W. S. Taylor, this evening.

Mine host LeDue is putting up a large addition to the Montreal house, which will add much to the capacity of that popular hostelry.

We can loan money on better terms than anyone else in the valley. Money paid over the moment securities are executed. STEENERSON & McMANUS.

The "Lost in London" company appears on Monday evening. Secure seats early. Now ready at the store of the Berthiaume Jewelry Co.

S. W. Teal, of Euclid, has been in the city during the week as witness in the big Corrigan suit, involving the title to the Payne-Corrigan farm near Euclid.

The County Board resume the equalization work again after having completed some county work. The session will last the week out no doubt.

Mrs. I. U. Jennings received a letter from her sister, Mrs. W. H. Jennings, saying that on the 21st inst. a daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Churchill. Mother and daughter doing well.

Best residence lots in the city and on your own terms; mind, ON YOUR OWN TERMS.
STEENERSON & McMANUS.

Judge Mills informs THE JOURNAL that the suit now being tried will terminate the extra term of court. There are other cases to try, but the Judge does not intend to keep the farmers away from their labors on the farm to try cases all summer.

When completed, the Commercial house will have twenty additional bedrooms and from present appearances, will not have one too many. Billy Davis says he don't know where all the people come from or go to, but the fact is, the house is filled to its utmost capacity all the time.

We have waited patiently, since the nomination of the cold water ticket for somebody to suggest a pun on the cold water nominees—FISH and BROOKS. If somebody don't tumble pretty soon we shall have to see what we can do For the present we will only say that it seems very appropriate.

On all loans we make, interest payable at our office in Crookston.
STEENERSON & McMANUS.

New York Telegram, September 21: Newton Beers' "Lost in London" was produced at the Windsor Theatre last evening as a superb lyric spectacular drama, every effort being put forth by the management, in the way of elaborate stage setting. The company was strong and the entertainment all that was of it.

Mr. Horr gave the prohibs a bit of sound advice that they might well adopt to their own advantage as well as that of the country. Will they do it? Dare they assume the responsibility of the further perpetuation of the liquor power? Or will they still persist in doing evil in the vain hope that good may some day come of it?

Invitations are out for the marriage of R. F. Leick to Miss Clara Larock, which event will take place at the Congregational church on Wednesday Aug. 1st, at 7:30. The happy couple will begin housekeeping in the neat little cottage at the corner of Fourth and Elm Sts. THE JOURNAL flings the slipper for luck wishing them a long, prosperous and happy life.

We are established in Crookston TO STAY. We do not do business here this year to go away the next. In loaning money, as in other business, we have a character for fair dealing to sustain Call on us before going elsewhere. Remember all interest on our loans is payable at our office.
STEENERSON & McMANUS.

The Republican committee will meet this evening at the Commercial hotel, to fix the date of holding the county convention. The date should be fixed at some time before harvest, so that farmers may be enabled to attend, and it probably will be fixed some time between the 13th and the 16th of August. The committee aims to choose the most convenient time possible and will try to arrange it to cover all the conventions to be held.

Jas. Norvotiny, one of the enterprising Bohemian farmers of the county, was in the city this week and in conversation with THE JOURNAL man remarked that, in his opinion, the farmers of the county should form a trust, in order to protect their own interests against the combinations that are made everywhere against him. Mr. N. says as the farmers are the producers, he can see no earthly reason why they could not, by agreeing among themselves, regulate the production of wheat to equal the demand and thus control the market. There is no question but that this might be done if farmers were all thoroughly in earnest in their business and would work in harmony, but there is a difficulty that will always be in the way until every farmer sees the importance of the idea, and is willing to agree upon and stick to it. One objection to the idea that is oftenest urged is the fact that farmers in this country are obliged to raise every bushel of wheat possible in order to be able to pay up as much as possible on that mortgage and to provide for the needs of the family, but the fact that should every farmer in the land raise but half the area that he usually does, what he did raise would be worth double what it is now, seems to escape the attention of most. There is no doubt that a general understanding among farmers would be beneficial in many ways and might do a great deal in the matter under discussion.

Proceedings of the Special Term of Court Commencing July 16th 1888.

In the case of the Victoria Cordage Works vs. Thompson & Johnson verdict for plaintiff was rendered in the sum of $567.88.

In the case of Krueger vs. A. S. Hanson plaintiff receives judgment for face of note and int. at 10 per cent.

In Scribner vs. H. M. Pierce answer is withdrawn and judgment ordered for plaintiff in amount claimed.

Rachel M. Davis vs. John Nicholson receives judgment for possession of property without damages.

In Johnson vs. Dastal et. al. verdict for plaintiff for $167.93 is given.

Jas. O'Neil vs. Sheriff Paulsrud. Action to recover value of cattle sold at sheriff's sale, plaintiff claiming to be the owner of cattle sold to pay the debt of another man. Judgment for plaintiff in the sum of $413.

Thore Johnson vs. Nels O. Paulsrud and others. Settled.

Terry Sheley and Frances Deming vs. Frank E. Hunt. Dismissed without costs.

James Corrigan vs. Gage E. Tarbel. This trial involves title to the Payne-Corrigan farm near Euclid commenced on the 19th and bids fair to last this week out.

Mr. C. B. Kittredge, one of Glyndon's soundest prohibitionists, in reply to an inquiry by an honest, consistent prohibitionist as to how he should vote next fall, gives the following sound reasons for the faith that is within him which should furnish food for thought for every honest prohib who reads it. It is so full of meat and so sound to the core that we give it without further comment:

GLYNDON, July 12, 1888.

MY DEAR FRIEND: I am glad to reply to your note of June 23d. I feel that there is so much responsibility resting upon each one of us who have a desire to do right, who wish well for our fellow man and love our country and our God, that we must study well the influence we have and the work we do in order to accomplish all we ought.

In regard to parties: The character of a party must compare with the character of the active men who compose it. The republicans of your own town are likely to represent those of most other towns in the country. When we endeavor to kill a party we must remember that we are trying to destroy the hopes and desires of our neighbors, and it is well to see before action that one is right. There is no difference on the temperance question between the prohibition (so called) and republican parties except that of methods. The republican party by its present platform, by its traditions and past work, is in sympathy with the home and desires the good of this nation and the welfare of all the people. I know the leaders of the third party deny this in part, but these leaders own that they must compromise with some men and measures not agreeable to all, in order to increase the number of their votes. You will admit that the success of the democratic party in all local points at the North is the success of the anti-probibition or anti-temperance cause. This being the case, even though the democratic party at the south were prohibition (of which I have my doubts,) the success of that party at the polls, would draw to it the support of all forms of the liquor interest, which with the power it now has, and would hold by virtue of a successful election, would make it a very much harder party to defeat at a future election than if defeated this fall. There are some who claim that a victory for the republican party would be a victory also for whisky; but you know that in all those states where prohibition influence now predominates this influence has been gained by temperance and prohibition men working in or with the republican party, and you also know that in these states if the prohibitionists should encourage the third party vote, a great loss to its present influence and success would result to the temperance movement in those states. As it requires the vote of the legislatures in two-thirds of the states before any change can be made in the constitution of the United States relating to prohibition, and also as it is necessary that there should be prohibition senators and representatives to make such a change, it is not wise for us to lose a single state that we can now claim, for the success of prohibition in one state is an encouragement to the temperance men in the neighboring state. If we make an effort to send prohibition men to minor offices, we can do it. If in the south the democratic party is strong prohibition, let them nominate a temperance man, and if there is such a thing as men of the two parties working together as one party they will surely lay aside for the time their party differences. This can be done in local and state elections when impossible to do so in a national election.

The same rule will work in the republican states, and it has been proved to work there. In the last few years the vote of the third party has caused the loss of temperance and prohibition legislation. The election of whisky republican and democratic legislators was caused by a few prohibitionists voting by themselves instead of being present at their party caucus to nominate or vote for a good man who would have been nominated and elected. There may be election districts where the liquor influence is so strong that a prohibition republican has no influence in nomination and election, but outside the cities these are few and far between. "A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump." We should not leave the good we might do, but work so hard for the good cause that the old leaven will be thrown out. The present way with the third party leaders is to take away the leaven of prohibition and then because the party representatives do not all vote for temperance measures they must kill the party, "first the best one then the other," if they can. This means a wait of "four, perhaps eight" years. I cannot wait so long. No good man can afford to "hide his light under a bushel" for so long a time.

In such a country as we have the voters are changing, new men are coming forward, new citizens from foreign countries are gathering, new measures interest and influence the people. Four and eight years from now—what? Some question of foreign or domestic importance may overshadow that of temperance as a national question—and then another wait. Do not wait, but organize the temperance forces that every vote will count. If we cannot get all we hoped for get all we can. If a law now in force is not all we wish, let us get all the good we can out of it and work for more. It is a false hope we have, if we neglect enforcing present laws with the expectation that they will become so obnoxious that they will get better. Save all the good we have and make it the foundation for obtaining more.

And have we no good in the republican party? The third party men own to that and say kill the republican party that we may obtain the spoil of voters, while the third party democrats say, "I am for prohibition, for my influence and money as a third party man counts three for my democratic principles. I can induce two republicans to vote with me, and then the democratic party will stay in power."

You say let the dead past bury its dead. But suppose the past forgot or neglected to bury its dead, what then? I went to the war for a purpose; it was to do my part towards keeping the nation one united people. The war was a success, and to-day the people of the south, as well as those of the north, rejoice in the fact. Witness the recent reunions and words spoken at Gettysburg for evidence; and do you not consider it a moral issue to be settled at this present time whether a man has a right to cast his ballot and only one, and have that one counted, in every state, north and south, east and west? This is a question important. It affects us here while we vote on the prohibition and other questions; it concerns the people of the south as questions of reduction, equality and privilege, right to hold office come before them. Certain states of the south have 37 representatives in congress. The total votes (official) of those states cast at the last election should not entitle them to one half that number of representatives. What caused the small number of voters? Certain votes were not counted, other voters did not dare to cast the ballot, and the Louisiana senator wants to know "what business has the country with the way Louisiana does her voting?" The people have an interest. We want uniform representation, and the republican party is for it, while the third party platform ignores the question, and by endeavoring to destroy that party votes against equal representation.

You are helping to sustain schools among the negro population of the south. Many southern citizens rejoice in those schools. We all know they are good. Some southern voters do what they can to make it unpleasant for the teachers and scholars of these schools. Is it not a moral question whether we work for the equality of all in this nation? You know the democratic party as represented in congress would if they could admit Utah as a state. Are you willing to put your vote in favor of giving the Mormon influence such a lift? Why does the democratic platform charge the republican party with keeping the territories from becoming states? They pretend they desire their admission, but when the vote is taken that great territory of Dakota must be one state, and Utah must come too. The interests of the democratic party must be sustained even if it takes two republican voters to equal one democratic.

The declaration of the republican platform in favor of the temperance cause (it makes no difference as to the time or way it came—it is there) is enough to make every lover of his home and his country work with all his heart to put the best men in the offices to be filled this fall. You or I cannot afford to vote against Gen. Harrison and for Gen. Fiske, and thus lose the good work of both.

There are some propositions in the republican platform that do not suit me with my present study of the questions, but it would not be right to jeopardize important questions of present moment for a statement of others that we cannot or may not decide now; for instance, the reduction of postage. I do not agree with the proposition to remove taxes from tobacco, or the hint that it might be desirable to drop all internal revenue taxes. This (the claim that it is a crime to use, sell or collect revenue on tobacco and liquor) being a foundation principle of the third party movement, should be satisfactory to all those who consider it a crime to raise revenue on tobacco and whisky, and they should see to it that they do not vote against their own convictions.

There are other reasons why I vote with the republican party, which would come under the statement "Act with the living present"—but as your letter concerns mainly the temperance or prohibitian question, I omit mentioning them now. I see but one way to do at this election, and that is to see to it that the republican party in our own town puts its best man to the front and then elect him. Nominate the best men for our legislature, men we can trust to do the best possible—men whose hands we do not have to tie up by third party ropes, but who are prohibitionists and temperance men from principle—and then elect them. I am for prohibition of the sale or giving away of drink that will intoxicate, and cannot vote the third party ticket because my vote would be lost for the "living present," and I can vote the republican ticket because my vote will there count as a vote for the home, the right of citizenship, the equality of all, and the standing of my country among the nations of the world, and because by voting in this way I am "acting in the "living present."

C. B. KITTREDGE.

100 100

CHOICE RESIDENCE LOTS

IN JEROME'S ADDITION!

Nearer the Business Center than any other Lots now for sale over there.

Above High Water Mark. Good Cellars and Good Wells

Easily Obtained. If you want a Building Lot, or if you desire a chance for investment where you can double your money inside of a year. It will pay you to look into this chance to

BUY AT YOUR OWN FIGURES, PRACTICALLY!

M. R. BROWN.

IT PAYS

TO TRADE WITH

BARNES & SLOCUM,

CASH DEALERS IN

Groceries and Crockery.

Get their prices and you will say so.

McKinnon Block, Robert St., Crookston.

A Snap.

M. R. Brown offers 100 lots, near the business portion of the city at figures that will give the purchaser a chance make a good thing. Look into this and be convinced.

For Sale.

A pure blood Polled Aberdeen Angus bull. Will sell cheap for cash or trade for colt. For terms see
THEODORE GREENHALGH.

Hayland.

For the privilege of cutting grass on railroad lands, call on [12-15] F. O. SUSTAD, Crookston.

LOTS.

Lots in exchange for farming lands.
STEENERSON & McMANUS

For Cash or Trade.

A thoroughbred Holstein-Friesian bull, for cash, on time or trade for cows. For particulars address THE JOURNAL office.

CARLETON COLLEGE,

NORTHFIELD, MINN.

Fall Term Opens September 5, 1888,

THE COURSES ARE

CLASSICAL, LITERARY, SCIENTIFIC, ENGLISH-ACADEMY AND MUSICAL.

Besides Preparatory and Post-Graduates studies.

Instruction given in Drawing and Painting.

Special facilities for study in Pure Mathematics and Astronomy.

Extensive Chemical and Biological Laboratories.

Open to students of either sex.

Expenses very low.

For Catalogues and Circulars address,

[14-16] JAS. W. STRONG, President.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston, Minn., July 24th, 1888.

Complaint having been entered at this office by Hans Christopherson against Louis St. John for abandoning his Homestead Entry No. 11,712, dated April 1st, 1885, upon the e½ sw¼ and lots 3 and 4, S. 18, T. 153 n. R. 46 w. in Polk County, Minn., with a view to the cancellation of said entry, the said parties are hereby summoned to appear at this office on the 14th day of Sept. 1888, at 10 o'clock a. m., to respond and furnish testimony concerning said alleged abandonment.

[14-19] L. K. AAKER, Receiver.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston, Minn., July 11th, 1888.

Complaint having been entered at this office by Peter O. Berggren against John Scarborough for failure to comply with law as to timber culture entry No. 1259, dated June 17th, 1879, upon the southwest quarter S. 26, T. 154 n. R. 42 w., in Polk County, Minn., with a view to the cancellation of said entry, contestant alleging that the said John Scarborough did not break or plow nor caused to be broken or plowed any part of said land the first year after the date of said entry, that there has been no improvements of any kind made on said land since the date of said entry, the said parties are are hereby summoned to appear at this office on the 11th day of Sept. 1888, at 9 o'clock a. m., to respond and furnish testimony concerning said alleged failure.

[14-19] H. H. DICKMANN, Register.

Those Prohib. Hats.

The republican league at Warren is nothing if not intensely loyal and to prove that fact they thought it quite the thing to wear the Harrison and Morton hat. So they got Winchester to order a lot and upon arrival every man donned a hat and marched around as proud as lords. But their triumph was short-lived as it somehow leaked out that a mistake had been made by which prohibition hats had been sent instead of the ones ordered. To say that the boys at once proceeded to "shoot the hats" but little conveys the alacrity and unanimity of the way those hats went back to the store and some even hint that the adjectives employed to express their opinsons were noted more for their emphatic and sulphurous nature than elegance of diction and it is said to be a dangerous experiment to attempt to joke the boys about it. For once the cause of prohibition appeared to be in a very healthy and thriving condition in Warren. We trust the boys will not make a similar mistake with their ballots next fall, the result might be more serious.

Democrats Aroused.

Grand Forks Herald.

The great republican demonstration at Crookston has aroused the democrats of that town and they have decided to have a jollification. To-day a prominent democrat received a letter from the Crookston Bandana Club inviting the democratic club of this city to meet with them on the 7th of August and attempt to outshine the ratification of Saturday night. The invitation was signed by F. B. Nash, the "life-long" democrat of Crookston. This afternoon diligent search was made for the democratic club, and tomorrow morning, Justice DeVoy will issue a warrant and every corner of the city will be searched.

Angus Items.

Crops looking better than ever before but are rather backward.

The young ladies of Angus gave another entertainment last Friday evening, but on account of the storm, it was not as successful as all the others have been.

Rev. S. H. Barteau made a prohibition speech before quite an audience in the school house last Saturday evening. This is the second of the kind at this place this summer, and still there are a few unconverted republicans who will vote the republican ticket next November.

School closed last Friday after a term of three months.

F. R. Stevens and John Tiedeman must be going to do some threshing this fall, as they have bought a Buffalo Pitts rig, sixteen horse power engine, and sixty inch separator with a forty-inch cylinder, the machine being built after the California style. They have always taken the cake with their little rig; what will they do with this?

The Times has been publishing some statements regarding a person living near this place, which if not entirely false, are very much exaggerated, and the person concerned says that they are entirely false. He says that he did lay around the round house for a while as he was waiting for a chance to get on the road; but that the funny things the Times told about never occurred.

Another young (very young) lady in Angus, so Mr. G. Evans says.

Beltrami Telautographs.

BELTRAMI, July 26, 1888.

At the annual school meeting of Dist. 53 I. W. Webb was elected director and D. T. Herriot treasurer, the other member being D. McMillan. It was voted to have eight months school the ensuing year, and twenty dollars were appropriated toward a library.

The officers in Dist. 101 are, J. G. Johnson, O. N. Olsund and Chas. Dahlstrum. It was voted to hold the least school possible in order to draw the apportionment.

Many of our people attended the religious services held in the school house every evening the past week. Rev. Warren and Davis who conducted the services, are earnest, faithful laborers in the Master's vineyard.

Union Sunday School services are held in the Beltrami school house at 10 o'clock a. m. Come and bring all your friends and help on the good work.

Byron Herriot and Edward Ohl who have been visiting their mother, Mrs. D. T. Herriot, have returned to their homes, the former to Chicago, the latter to Sharon, Pa.

H. B. Budd, David Fulton and C. E. Ford Jr. represented the Beltrami Harrison and Morton club at the county seat last week.

Did any one who crossed the Red River Sunday, change their name before they returned?

Large quantities of fish are being caught in the Sand Hill River.

S. Hayes, Mrs. James Hayes and Aunt passed through here on their way to Crookston, Saturday.

Nearly all of our farmers are putting up their hay.

A firm, selling lumber and farm machinery, would make money here.

EDNA.

The summery frontispiece of the American Agriculturist for August, is a pretty fishing scene; a woodland nook, quiet and cool, where the lights and shadows of the trees play over the still surface of the stream and lilly-pads float on the water. A young fisherman sits among the grasses on the bank with fishing line cast out and one finger uplifted in suspense at the instant of "A Sure Catch." The girl behind him looks over his head with breathless interest, and even the dog guarding the lunch basket, is spellbound with the importance of the crisis. The picture is the introduction to a number of bright ideas, and practical interest.

TONSORIAL PARLORS,

PROF. THOMPSON Prop.,

Robert Street, - - - Crookston, Minn

HOT AND COLD BATHS.

Changes of Half a Century.

After an interval of more than fifty years I am taking a second look at some parts of Europe. This will give my readers of the Atlantic, as well as the writer, a vacation to which we both seem entitled. It is a Rip Van Winkle experiment which I am promising myself. The changes wrought by half a century in the countries I visited amount almost to a transformation. I left the England of William the Fourth, of the Duke of Wellington, of Sir Robert Peel; the France of Louis Philippe, of Marshal Soult, of Thiers, of Guizot. I went from Manchester to Liverpool by the new railroad, the only one I saw in Europe. I looked upon England from the box of a stage coach, upon France from the coupe of a dilligence, upon Italy from the chariot of a vetturino. The broken windows of Apsley House were still boarded up when I was in London. The asphalt pavement was not laid in Paris. The Obelisk of Luxor was lying in its great boat in the Seine, as I remember it. I did not see it erected; it must have been a sensation to have looked on, the engineer standing underneath, so as to be crushed by it, if it disgraced him by alling into the process. As for the ynastics which have overlaid each ther like Dr. Schliemann's Trojan ities, there is no need of moralizing ver a history which, instead of Finis, constantly ending with "What ext?"

With regard to the changes in the general conditions of society and the advance in human knowledge, think for one moment what fifty years have done. I have often imagined myself escorting some wise man of the past to our Saturday Club, where we often have distinguished strangers as our guests. Suppose there sat by me—I will not say Sir Isaac Newton, for he has been too long away from us, but that other great man, whom Professor Tyndall names as next too him in intellectual stature, as he passes along the line of master minds of his country from the days of Newton to our own—Dr. Thomas Young, who died in 1820. Would he or I be the listner, if we were side by side? However humble I might feel in such a presence, I should be so glad in the grandeur of the new discoveries, inventions, ideas, I had to impart to him, that I should seem to myself like the ambassador of an emperor. I should tell of the ocean steamers, the railroads that spread themselves like cobwebs over the civilized and half-civilized portions of the earth, the telegraph and the telephone, the potograph and the spectroscope. I should hand him a paper with the morning news from London to read by the electric light. I should startle him with a friction match, I should amaze him with the incredible truths about anæsthesia, I should astonish him with the later conclusions of geology, I should elecurify him by the fully developed doctrine of the correlation of forces. I should delight him with the cell doctrine, I should confound him with the revolutionary apocalypse of Darwinism. All this change in the aspects, position, beliefs, of humanity since the time of Dr. Young's death, the date of my own graduation from college!

I ought to consider myself highly favored to have lived through such a half century. But it seems to me that in walking the streets of London and Paris I shall revert to my student days, and appear to myself like a relic of a former generation. Those who have been born into the inheritance of the new civilization feel very differently about it from those who have lived their way into it. To the young and those approaching middle age, all these annovations in life and thought are as natural, as much a matter of course, as the air they breathe; they form a part of the frame work of their intelligence, of the skeleton about which their mental is organized. To men and women of more than three-score they are external accretions, like the shell of a mollusk, the jointed plates of an articulate.—Atlantic Monthly.

Diet and Dyspepsia.

Most authorities are of opinion that cheese is indigestible, yet even on this point doctors cannot agree. A distinguished French chemist has suggested that to render cheese digestible a quarter of an ounce of potass should be added to every pound of cheese; while a German chemist has experimented upon several kinds of food, such as cheese, meat, milk and eggs, and he boldly declares that cheese is no more indigestible than meat and many other articles of diet. Suppers are usually condemned. Some doctors assert that suppers are not only unnecessary, but positively harmful; that sound sleep cannot be obtained after them, and that three meals a day are sufficient. On the other hand, others are of opinion that a light supper is necessary to procure sound sleep. After a meal, they say, blood is drawn toward the stomach to supply the juices needed in digestion. Hence the brain receives less blood than during fasting, becomes pale, and the powers become dormant. Sleep, therefore, ensues. A doctor says that recently he was called 2 A. M. to a lady who assured him that she was dying. The body was warm, he says, the heart doing honest work. To her indignation, he ordered buttered bread to be eaten at once. Obeying, the "dying" woman was soon surprised by a return to life and a desire to sleep. Milk is generally considered a peculiarly nutritive fluid—indeed, a perfect food—and, therefore, suitable for persons of all ages when it agrees with their stomachs; yet no less an authority than Sir Henry Thompson states that "for us who have long attained our full growth and can thrive on solid food, it is altogether superfluous, and mostly mischievous as a drink." He also says that the primary object of drinking is to satisfy thirst, and that water is more powerful to this end when employed free from admixture with any solid material. Chocolate, thick cocoa, or even milk, are, therefore, not so efficacious in allaying thirst as water. "So plentiful is nutriment," he adds, "that the very last place where we should seek that quality is the drink which accompanies the ordinary meal." In this respect, at any rate, Sir Henry Thompson is at one with the vegetarian.—All the Year Round.

PETER FANE.

BY ARTHUR DUDLEY VINTON.

The road from Keene village to Bethnal Corners ran zigzagging down the side of a hill, and then, having traversed a stretch of level ground, crossed Stony Brook by a covered wooden bridge, whose time-stained walls were yet adorned with fragments of gaudy-colored circus posters. The road was in none too good repair, especially on the hillside where rains had washed bare many stones and left ruts and hollows, and the bridge was dilapidated and shook ominously under each passing vehicle or pedestrian. But there were few travelers over either road or bridge and the town was poor, so the selectmen left it both for time and the elements to prey upon unchecked.

At the side of this road, just before it came to the bridge, stood the grist mill and cottage of Peter Fane, joined one to the other by an enclosed shed and unpainted and unadorned except by clambering vines and the weather-stains of past years.

It was the evening of the day before Thanksgiving. In the year 18—. Peter Fane, the miller, stood in the doorway of the cottage smoking his big-bowled pipe and looking out over the dusty road as it wound down the hill. He was an old man, of some 70 years, but he looked fresh and hearty, as if likely to weath many another winter storm and to bask under many another summer sun. His long white hair and white beard harmonized with the flour-dusted jean overalls which he wore, and his black eyes scanned the scene about him with a wistful, eager expression, as if hoping to see some anxiously-expected traveler. But there was no moving thing nor sign of life within Peter Fane's sight, save only a belated crow swiftly swinging his way to his home among the leafless trees upon the hill.

The sun was setting behind a bank of cloud which the wind was swiftly driving up from the northwest, and as its beams were withdrawn the air grew gray and became colder. It was very still; the only signs were the murmur of the brook near by flowing over the stones and pebbles of its bed, or the "caw, caw" of the distant crows. So still was it, indeed, that the silence seemed to force itself upon Peter Fane's unwilling attention, and the expression of expectation on his face faded and was replaced by a look of grave disappointment.

Seventy years had Peter Fane—as boy and man—lived by that old mill. He was but 20 when his father, dying, left him to run the old mill, and for 50 years years he had remained at his post stationary, amid all the changes and events about him. And how many changes there had been; how many friends had come or gone, died or moved away during the lapse of those many years! Business had been brisk and he had worked hard and laid aside for a rainy day; business had been dull, and he had smoked his pipe and waited for better times.

There was no lack of life about the old mill in those early years, for the road was then a highway over which stages and numerous teams passed each day. There was then almost invariably a group around the mill door, while within the air was always misty with flying flour dust, and the machinery kept up an almost continuous clatter. Now months sometimes passed before the mill was set in motion, and the grass around the door was seldom pressed by other feet than Peter Fane's, and the passers-by were few and far between.

The contrast between the old times and the new forced itself upon Peter Fane's mind as he stood at his cottage door in the gloaming of that Thanksgiving eve, and, with a sigh of regret for those vanished years, he knocked the ashes from his pipe, and turning back into the cottage, busied himself in preparing his evening meal—for Peter Fane lived all alone, unless a faithful dog can be called a companion.

All the day Peter Fane had been oppressed with that peculiar intuition which every one feels somtimes during his life, that some one, he knew not whom, was about to arrive. This feeling had haunted Peter Fane; it had brought him more than once to the door, and now, as he sat by the fireside, with his dog curled up at his feet, it continued to haunt him. Yet his reason told him that his expectation was only idle folly, for who was there in the wide world who would care to seek the old miller out, now that wife, children and friends were dead?

He sat by the fire, smoking and thinking, until bedtime came, and then he carefully laid his pipe upon the shelf, and going once more to the door opened it and looked out. The clouds covered the whole of the sky and the snowflakes were falling thick and fast and all the earth was hid beneath their fleecy crystals. Though the moon and the stars were hidden, there was yet a dim light in the air that indistinctly and vaguely disclosed the dark outlines of the mill near by, and the bridge farther off, and the bare branches of the trees overhead; but of human life there was no sign. Peter Fane looked carefully about him, then shut and fastened the door, piled the ashes over the glowing brands upon the hearth that there might be live coals to light his fire the next morning, and went to bed.

He slept, then suddenly awoke, for something had aroused him from slumber. He raised himself up and listened, not sure whether the sound he seemed to hear was real or only some echo of memory in his brain. Perhaps it was the clock striking 12, for now as he sat up in bed he heard the vibration of the gong ringing yet, faint and distinct, but still perceptible through the silence. Surely it must have been the striking of the clock that roused him, and yet it had seemed like a sound more strange and unfamiliar. But while he listened the sound was repeated—it was a tapping on the door—and hastily rising from bed, Peter Fane drew on his clothes and went to the door and opened it.

There was no fear in his mind that the nocturnal visitor might be bent on some evil errand, nor any thought that the occurrence was unusual; it seemed to him a perfectly rational event, just as one dreaming passes through curious scenes without wondering at their oddity.

Peter Fane, therefore, opened the door without the least sentiment of fear or surprise and saw, in the snow by the door-step, a man upon horseback.

"Good day to you, miller," said the stranger. "Can you grind me this sack of corn?" and as he spoke he pointed to a bag that was slung across the horse's crupper.

"Tis an odd time to set the mill agoing," answered Peter Fane. "Could you not have come earlier? I have been expecting you all the day."

"I have had a long road to travel," the stranger replied, "for there are a few mills nowadays where a simple man like me can have his grain ground, and this sack must be turned into meal before the morrow's dawn."

"Well, then," said Peter Fane, "put up your horse in the shed by the mill, and come in and warm yourself. All these long years no man could ever say that I refused to grind his grist, nor shall they say it now." And while the stranger drove his horse into the shed as he was bidden, Peter Fane rekindled his fire and lighted his lamp, and, as the light illuminated the room, he glanced at the clock and saw that its hands pointed to five minutes after midnight.

"It is a snowy night," said the stranger, as he entered, and, standing by the fire, shook upon the hearth the snow from his garments. "It is a snowy night when the wind is cold, and one when such a fire as this is very welcome."

Peter Fane scanned his visitor closely.

"Have I not seen you before?" he said, pressing his hand to his brow as if in thought. "There is something in your face which seems strangely familiar, and yet I cannot recall the time nor place where we have met before."

"We meet so many men in the world," answered the stranger, with an odd smile upon his countenance, as he warmed himself by the fire. "We meet so many men in the world that their faces linger without cause in our memories. If you yourself cannot recall the time that we have met before I cannot aid you to do so."

"Well," answered the miller, as he rose and took the lamp in his hand, "if grist is to be ground there is no time like the present to grind it in."

"Lead the way and I will follow," replied the stranger; and Peter Fane proceeded to the mill, while the stranger walked behind.

"Bring in your grist," said Peter Fane, as he swung open the wide front door of the mill with many a creak and groan of its rusty hinges.

"May I not also lead in my horse?" asked the stranger. "It is a cold night outside, and your shed has many a crack and crevice that lets in the cold north wind. The brute is a faithful brute and has borne me well, and the shelter of the mill is better than the shelter of the shed."

"Aye, lead him in," answered the miller. "Never truer word was spoken than that the merciful man is merciful to his beast. 'Tis a fine animal," he continued, as the horse was led forward, "and I'll warrant, one that no ordinary amount of labor will tire. But I marvel much that so fine a beast should be of such a color."

"It is not the least of his merits," replied the stranger. "There is not one dark hair upon him. From ear-tip to hoof his coat is as white as the driven snow."

"He will not mind the clatter of the mill, will he?" asked Peter Fane.

"Not he," replied the stranger, lifting down the bag of grain. "Now, miller, show me the hopper where I may empty the grist."

As with a rumble and a jar and many a hoarse moan, the old mill-wheel started on its revolution and the frame of the building shook, creaked and groaned in all its joints, as if in protest at this unseemly disturbance of its rest.

It was a quaint scene. The lamp illuminated only a narrow circle immediately surrounding it and threw the shadows of the joists and beams athwart the darkness beyond in bars of deeper blackness, and cast a disk of light on the roof overhead which seemed like a sun looking down through a thick mist of clouds. Full in the circle of light was the figure of the aged miller; and further off, where the light was dim (where indistinctly seen), was the stranger, still closely muffled in his cloak, and the vague figure of a horse, and in the background was the darkness quilted with the weird shadows of the revolving machinery, while glints of fire glittered from the eyes of startled rats, as they peered cautiously out of their holes at the intruders.

Suddenly, it seemed to Peter Fane, as if there came from the old house sounds of merry laughter; and somehow, though he was in the mill, he knew that his cottage was filled with jolly revelers.

"You seem to have a gay company yonder," said the stranger, nodding his head in the direction whence came the merry sounds.

"So it seems," replied the miller, "and yet I know not who they are, nor what these sounds mean, nor can I leave my grist to go and see."

But even as he spoke the door between the cottage and the mill flew open, and a crowd of figures trooped in. Old Peter Fane placed his hand upon his head in wondering thought.

"Can I be asleep?" he said. "Am I dreaming that here to-night have come the friends of my past years, years, boys whom I played with in childhood, girls whom I loved, wife and children, parents and brothers and sisters, those whom I thought were dead,—have you in truth come to me again, or are you but the fancies of my dreams?"

And he stood erect and gazed at them as if waiting for an answer.

* * * * * * * * *

Late in the afternoon on the following day a party of the country folk, returning homeward, passed the old mill. There was no sign of human life about the premises, no smoke from the chimney, no footsteps in the snow, and yet through the silence of the gathering twilight came the clatter of the mill and the sad howling of a dog.

"Old Peter Fane is at work in the mill," these country folk said as they stopped. "Whose grist can he begrinding that he works on Thanksgiving Day?"

Prompted by curiosity, they plunged through the drifts and knocked at the cottage door. There was no answer. They knocked again; still no reply. They tried the door, but it was fastened.

"The clatter of the machinery prevents his hearing," said one; "let us try at the door of the mill itself.

Once, twice, thrice they knocked; still there was no response—only the loud whining of the dog inside as he scratched against the boards of the door.

"Strange!" remarked a farmer. "Has Peter Fane grown suddenly deaf that he cannot hear us? Or has he gone away and left the old mill to run itself?"

Their curiosity was piqued and they pulled at the boards of the door until the rusty latch gave way and the door swung open.

As they stood in the doorway the flood of gray twilight poured into the old mill, and through the clouds of dust which the opening of the door had raised they saw Peter Fane, leaning against a post, with averted face as if watching the revolving mill-stones.

"Hey! Peter Fane!" they shouted, "are you deaf that you did not heed all the racket that we made?"

But Peter Fane never stirred nor answered their inquiry. A feeling of awe began slowly to creep over them as they advanced, and one, bolder than the rest, streatched out his hand to put it on the elder man's shoulder and attract his attention. But suddenly he paused, and the outstreached arm dropped to his side, for he saw that in truth that Peter Fane would hear no more earthly voices—for Peter Fane was dead.

There was no corn in the hopper, no meal in the bin; but yet the mill clacked on, grinding the air and Peter Fane,s cold and rigid body stood as if watching it.

Who was the stranger? Who were the guests that had visited the old man the night before? Peter Fane never awoke to tell.

Rescued From the Rocks.

Washington Cor. New York World.

A magnificent story of daring and skill has come to the Washington office of the life-saving service. The story is in meagre scraps of the dryest kind, but in these routine statements there is a basis for a thrilling story. It is a tale of shipwreck and saving of life under peculiarly difficult circumstances, one of the greatest feats ever performed by any life-saving crew in the service of the government. Several days ago two propellers were wrecked off the port of Marquette, in Lake Superior. In a savage storm they were driven on the rocks, over which the breakers pounded furiously. There were no passengers on board, but they were manned by crews of twelve men each. They were making their last trips for the season. The vessels were wrecked early in the day. There is no life-saving station at Marquette, the nearest being at Portage City, 110 miles away.

The storm was one of the bleakest and coldest, equaling in lowness of temperature some of the most bitter in midwinter. The water of this lake is extremely cold, even in midsummer. The people of Marquette turned out in great excitement when they saw these vessels driven upon the rocks within three miles of the town. The propellers did not break up at once after they had become lodged, but from the fury of the waves and the storm it was evident that they could last but a short time. The citizens made frantic endeavors to go to the rescue of the two crews, who appealed to them through signals of distress. But there was no boat at Marquette which could live in the waves then beating on the shore.

After a number of efforts to communicate with the wrecked vessels the people despaired of reaching them and stood watching, expecting every moment that they would give way. The president of the Marquette, Ontonagon and Portage City railroad, which runs between Marquette and Portage City, came to the rescue at the last moment, dashed to the telegraph office and notified Portage City to clear the track of all trains. Then he called for the superintendent of the life-saving station at that point. He said to him.

I place at your disposal a locomotive and a car for your life-boat. The track is clear ahead of you. Come on as soon as you can get your men and boat ready. Twenty-four lives are hanging upon the promptness of your action.

The superintendent was as energetic and plucky a man as is known to the service. The pair of horses belonging to the station were quickly harnessed to the wagon, and the life-boat placed thereon. The crew then entered the boat, and it was desperately driven to the railroad station. In the briefest possible time a box-car was run down to the station and the life-boat and the crew were placed upon it. The engineer, who had received another dispatch from the president of the road by this time to hurry to the full top of his speed, pulled the throttle of the engine wide open and the special train dashed away on its errand of mercy at a frightful speed. There is no record in the office of the time made by this fast-flying train beyond the fact that it was the swiftest ever made by a life-saving crew from any station to a distant point. It is also the longest distance ever traveled by such a crew for such a purpose.

The story ends abruptly in a brief chapter which tells that the crew arrived at Marquette before the wrecked vessels had given way and that the captain and his crew saved every one of the twenty-four men who had given up absolutely all hope, and would have been drowned within the next hour if it had not been for the action of the railroad president and the skill and courage of the crew.

Lincoln as a "Military Hero."

[Nicolay and Hay in the December Century.]

He never took his campaigning seriously. The politicians' habit of glorifying the petty incidents of a candidate's life always seemed absurd to him and in his speech, made in 1848 ridiculing the effort on the part of Gen. Cass' friends to draw some political advantage from that gentleman's respectable but obscure services on the frontier in the war with Great Britain, he stopped the future eulogist from painting his own military achivements in two lively colors; "Did you know, Mr. Speaker," he said, "I am a military hero? In the days of the Black Hawk war I fought, bled and came away. I was not at Stillman's defeat, but I was as near it as Gen. Cass was to Hull's surrender; and, like him, I saw the place very soon afterwards. It is quite certain I did not break my sword, for I had none to break, but I bent my musket pretty badly on one occasion If Gen. Cass went in advance of me picking whortleberries, I guess I surpassed him in charges on the wild onions. If he saw any live fighting Indians it was more than I did, but I had a good many bloody struggles with the mosquitoes; and although I never fainted from loss of blood, I can truly say I was often very hungry. Mr. Speaker, if ever I should conclude to doff whatever our Democratic friends may suppose there is of black-cockade Federalism about me, and thereupon they shall take me up as their candidate for the presidency, I protest that they shall not make fun of me, as they have of Gen. Cass, by attempting to write me into a military hero."

SAVED ON THE BRINK.

I was seated in my office one afternoon in October, 1884, when an acquaintance, a merchant of this city, called. I had then acquired a fair experience in my calling, but my income from that source had been quite limited; hence my extreme gratification when my visitor announced that the purpose of his visit was "business."

The gentleman said that a friend of his, Mr. B——, a merchant doing an extensive business on Lake street, had requested him to suggest the name of a reliable man to undertake a private investigation; that he had promised to comply with the request, and therefore came to me. I asked him if he knew anything about the character and details of the case. He replied that he did not. At my instance the gentleman wrote a letter of introduction to Mr. B——, which he handed me, and after receiving my promise to deliver it without delay he departed.

I lost no time in communicating with Mr. B——. I sent my messenger the letter of introduction inclosed in a note of my own, requesting an interview, and in reply was invited to call at his residence that evening at 8 o'clock.

I was promptly on hand at the designated time, and was ushered into a comfortably and well appointed little library room.

Mr. B—— received me cordially, but his face wore an expression of much concern.

"For what specific purpose is my service required?" I asked, making a dive at the business in hand.

"I wish you to investigate a little matter for me," he said, "and will give you the cause and details in a few words." After a moment's hesitation, which seemed devoted to deep thought, he said: "I presume you are aware of the character of our business; we require a large clerical force in our counting room; we reward our efficiency and zeal with merited promotion, and many of our clerks have acquired their present advanced positions through this system. Among others in our counting room is one who has secured his desk by gradual promotion, a young man who seems possessed of the required qualifications and who has always, so far as I can judge, properly performed his whole duty. I speak of our cashier. He is young, intelligent, with a kindly disposition, prompt at his post, and indefatigable in his work. Because of these qualities and the fact that he has exercised economy I have felt myself gradually drawn toward him. I have taken deeper interest in him than in many others in our employ and was much gratified to find that he had to his credit a neat little sum, saved out of his salary. Recently, however, I have noticed that he wears a haggard expression, and the discovery has disturbed me. When first I observed this change it was but slightly depicted on his countenance, but it has grown more pronounced from day to day until now he seems little more than a shadow of his former self, and though prompt at his post and in his work, the old smile seldom lights up his genial face. I have taken occasion to look into his personal account in the ledger and find that from time to time he has drawn upon it until now very little remains of the $1,900 to his credit a month ago."

"What is your idea of the cause of this condition of things?" I asked.

"I have no fixed idea," Mr. B—— replied, and then added: "What puzzles and pains me is the fact that, though he has authority to pay out money standing to the credit of any employe's account and had a right to draw his money, he had several times invested in shares of building and loan associations, but never without first consulting me as to the advisability of doing so. Of course, I have been more than pleased with this mark o confidence, and was so favorably impressed with his worth that I had already determined that he would be the next to be admitted to a junior copartnership interest in our establishment. My recent discoveries and the cashier's reticence have made me uneasy. I am determined, if possible, to learn the cause of this change, and therefore I have sent for you to look into the case for me. I desire you to ascertain what influence has caused the change in his appearance, and what he has done with his money. The only condition that I interpose is that you must make no move that will disturb him until you shall have reported to me. You may adopt your own time and method to reach the end in view, and you may call upon me for such assistance as you may require in the case."

"Do you suspect financial trouble in any form?"

"I have no data upon which to ground a suspicion; his trial balance sheet made three days ago proves the books and accounts in good shape, and the cash balance on hand at that time was correct."

"Does he complain of illness or overwork?"

"He does not; in fact, when I questioned him concerning the cause of his appearance, his answers seemed rather evasive."

After a few moments' further conversation I bade my client good night and departed. The next day I entered the counting room of Mr. B—— and asked the clerk at one of the windows to give me silver coin for a $20 note. Pointing to another window he said: "The cashier will give it to you." I was about to have a view of the cashier. This was the purpose I desired to compass. I had not up to that time had a glimpse of that gentleman's face.

Approaching the aperture designated I asked: "Are you the cashier?" Receiving an affirmative response I requested change for my paper currency, which request was silently granted.

The few seconds required by the cashier in which to gather up the coin and pass it through the window sufficed me to "take in" that gentleman's face that I might know it whenever I should see it again.

I spent several days in quiet investigation and then sought a private interview with the accused. After a few commonplace remarks I took up the matter in hand.

"I am a messenger appointed to watch you and gain information concerning your habits," said I, looking steadily in his eyes.

The young man assumed a calmness, but could not conceal his alarm and deep concern. I had fully determined that the cashier was not a rogue at heart. I believed that he was not confirmed in any vicious practice, and if his conduct during our interview warranted it I intended to be his friend. I have always felt that it was our duty, if possible, to prevent crime. We effect a vast deal more good in this world by preventing our fellow man from being a criminal than by permitting the commission of crime in order to "detect" the criminal and punish him. How many lives and happy homes might be saved if this were more frequently practiced!

After a moment's pause my companion asked: "Who sent you to watch me?"

"One deeply interested in your welfare. Can you not guess who?" I replied.

"A lady?" he asked, much agitated.

"No," I answered, and taking the cue, I added: "Miss——, of —— avenue, so far as I know, is not aware of my employment, and I presume she does not even suspect that there is cause for it; indeed, I would deeply regret it if she did."

He turned his face full upon me and there was a startled and puzzled expression resting upon it. "What do you know about that lady, and why did you mention her when I asked it your principal was a lady?" he asked, hastily.

"I know that you visited her at her home this evening, and have reason to know your feelings toward the lady," was my response.

I had been right in my conjectures, and now knew that I had sent a shaft to a tender spot and felt assured that this hit would prove a valuable, though silent, adjunct to the successful execution of my hastily formed plan.

With a deep sigh of relief he said: "I am glad of it;" and then, after a pause, asked again, "Who sent you?"

"Who else can be so deeply interested in you?" said I. "I will tell you who authorized me to follow your movements while away from the office, but I will precede the information by the statement that my employer is prompted by the deepest concern in your behalf. Mr. B—— is the individual," I said, but the young man's alarmed countenance urged me to add. "Yet he does not suspect what I have discovered; he is especially alarmed about the great change noted in your appearance, and commissioned me to adopt my own method and time in making the investigation. To execute this commission I determined to keep you under my surveillance, though I scarcely expected developments so soon."

"I presume you will report your discovery to Mr. B.—— at once?" he interrogated, with apparent alarm.

"Not necessarily," I replied, briefly.

"Can my exposure be prevented?" he quickly asked.

"That depends," I answered. The cashier impulsively thrust his hand into the breast pocket of his coat and drew forth a roll of bills. Turning to me, with extending arm, the money in his hand, he said, excitedly: "You are welcome to this, but, for God's sake, don't expose me; it will ruin me forever!"

Restraining my indignation as much as possible, I said: "Your proposition is unworthy of you as it would be unworthy in me to accept it." My words s tunned him, and an expression of dejection and lost hope overcast his countenance. Seeing the effect my speech had, I added, earnestly: "I will be your friend and save you if you will comply fully with my demands."

A gleam of hope instantly shone on his countenance and he added, rather demurely: What do you demand?"

Looking him earnestly in the eyes I answered, "That you tell me truthfully how you came to visit a faro bank; how long the visits had been indulged in; how often and with what result."

To sum up this statement briefly, but which he gave in detail, he said he went with a friend one night out of curiosity; that the game was fascinating; that he commenced by buying $5 worth of checks; he won $10; visited the place again a few nights after, and tried his luck, but this time lost $25. He repeated his visit two nights following with a like result, then the fascination and a determination to recover his small loss impelled him to go again, each time meeting with a loss and each succeeding loss being greater than the last, until he visited the place almost nightly, and finally realized that he had drawn out near, ly all of his cash balance in the office besides having hypothecated some shares of stock owned by him. The loss caused him much regret, but he had spent many sleepless night because of remorse when it fully dawned upon him that he was living a lie and that the confidence reposed in him by Mr. B—— and Miss—— would be instantly withdrawn and summary dismissal from both follow, meaning, of course, disgrace. He had used his own money; he had not gone far enough in his recklessness to filch.

"Are you satisfied now to cut short this recklessness?" I asked.

"Yes," he answered, determinedly.

"Pledge me your word that you will never again enter a gambling house or gamble, and I will agree to make a report that will not expose your recklessness. I feel assured that otherwise you are reliable. I believe there is ample chance for you if you will be wise as well as correct in your character; but I will warn you that you will yet be watched, and if you prove unfaithful to your pledge I will see to it that you do not escape the logical consequences."

He extended his hand, which I grasped, and his moistened eyes, full of gratitude, told me that he was in earnest when he said: "I pledge my word to never again enter a gambling house or gamble. I thank you for your more than friendship. Your generosity will make me a better and stronger man." We parted on State and Madison streets, the cashier going home and I to my lodgings. I put a shadow after him. His conduct proved exemplary. I so reported from time to time during the month following to my client that I believed the young man made a temporary loan to a friend who was in trouble; that he had rescued his friend, and that his friend had paid him back the loan. To confirm my report the cashier had deposited the money in the office and credited his account with the amount, the haggard expression had vanished, and the old genial smile was again enthroned in its place. My report was accepted; I was thanked for my services, and well paid for the effort.

On the 1st of January following the cashier was admitted to a junior copartnership interest in Mr. B——'s extensive business, and in October of the same year he led Miss —— to the alter, and a happier couple never assumed the responsibilities of wedlock than did this one.

I meet the cashier occasionally. We greet each other cordially, but never allude to his narrow escape from disgrace.—Blackstone in Chicago Times.

A Kangaroo Round up.

A reporter met a gentleman who has been largely indentified with pastorial interests both in Australia and New Zealand, and from him some interesting facts were ascertained in connection with the efforts of antipodean agriculturists to combat the plague of the long eared pests.

"The idea," said the gentleman, "is not entirely new to Australians. They have for years employed a somewhat similar method of riding pastoral lands of the destructive kangaroo. The usual way was to build a capacious stock yard, with very high fences, for your able bodied is no slouch at playing leap frog. The location generally chosen was on the fork of a river, for kangaroos are not extra partial to water. Invitations to the round up would then be sent to neighboring farmers, and on a specified morning the farmers would all put in an appearance, mounted, an accompanied by whatever kangaroo hounds they chanced to possess. Dogs and owners would then get away back and scatter out in skirmishing order until a large section of country was covered, and then circumnavigation was in order, the object point, of course being the lofty stock yard.

"Pretty soon you would hear the baying of scores of hounds, and then the long jumping marsupials would be seen leaping like gigantic frogs, while the skirmishers would advance and close in steadily and systematically, controlling the hounds the while, so as to gradually direct the hopping kangoroos to the desired point. When the mob, which on occasions numbered many hundreds, were finally housed in the place of slaughter, some one was sent to close the draw gate on them, and the fun commenced.

The dogs were restrained and family relics in the shape of blunderbusses and ancient flint locks were brought into requisition until the last grass and crop despoiler had bitten the dust."

"Kangaroos make it rough for the hounds on some occasions, do they not?" asked the reporter.

"You bet they do. An old man kangaroo is just as tough a bit of mechanism as ever a dog tackled. When fairly cornered he will place his back against a tree or rock and invite the best dog in the pack to come on. Old dogs are wary of them, and use their best endeavors to get an ear or neck hold from behind, but a young hound will frequently rush into the bayed marsupial's arms, so to speak, and if he gets away alive he is lucky. The kangaroo will balance himself firmly on his tail, which is both powerful and springy, and will clasp the dog around the body with his hind legs, while he will utilize the sharp claws of his fore paws to tear the brute's stomach into ribbons and haul his entrails out.

A Rebel Gold Dollar.

From the Duluth Tribune'

Jerry Johnson, a negro boy, was standing on a trash pile, running his toes turough the debris. He noticed something bright in the pile, and when he picked it up, found it to be a very small yellow coin. At first he thought it was copper but as he fingered it his native sense told him it was too heavy for copper, so he at once conjectured that it was made of gold. He had some business with Mr. Walker, and while in his office showed him the piece of money. He asked the lawyer how much he would give him for it. Walker's attorney thought it was a gold dollar, and, as he was particularly anxious to get such a coin to wear on his watch chain, he offered the boy one dollar for it, which he gleefully accepted. Mr. Walker gave the coin a careful examination, and became convinced that he paid too much for it. He was in Colonel Redwine's office, and took the coin out and exhibited it to the great financier. "What will you give me for it?" he asked. I'll give $1," was the reply. "And I'll give you $1.25," interrupted a man who had come in to renew a note. "Done," exclaimed Mr. Walker. here's your money," was the quick answer. The buyer left the office with his coin, and the lawyer thought he had made a good bargain. Hurrying off to a man that buys coins, the purchaser exhibited the piece. The dealer scrutinized it closely and said: "What will you take for it?" "What will you give?" After a little consideration the dealer said: "Will you take $25 for it? "No but I'll take $30 for it." "It's a go; here's your money," and the happy man walked out of the office. The coin which figured in these transactions is a Confederate gold dollar. A gentleman said to a reporter. "The worst sold man of the four was he who sold the coin for $30. If it be true that it is as represented a genuine Confederate dollar, it is worth $650. I am told that there are only six of these coins in existence."

Polk County Journal.
W. G. COOKE, Publisher.
CROOKSTON, - MINNESOTA.

A census taken in China a few years ago showed but four centenarians out of a population of 369,000,000.

Burlington, N. J., is a champion town for widows. There is one block that gives shelter to 31 of these attractive but dangerous creatures.

Farmers down in Jersey are about instituting "bug days," wherein a concerted effort will be made to exterminate the insects that just now are playing havoc with fruit and vegetables.

John Toole, of New Haven, who for 13 years has been mourned as one of the unidentified victims of the Ashtabula Railroad horror, walked in upon his friends the other day alive, hearty and prosperous—out in California.

James Morton, whose name came before the public in connection with the failure of the City of Glasgow bank, died recently and the insurance companies are all in mourning as the policies on his life amounted to $575,000.

A curious coincidence in the matter of names is reported from Washington. A man named Messenger has just been appointed a gunner in the navy, while a man named Gunner has just been made a messenger in the naval department.

An organization called the "Bureau of Justice," has been established in Chicago. Its object is to obtain justice in the courts for poor people who have just cause for complaint and are unable from lack of means or ignorance of the law to secure representation through the usual channels.

In Paducah, Ky., Mr. Joseph Hebute, a rich German, upon going into a drug store for something to heal a hurt got in the Franco Prussian campaign, found in the man who applied it not only a fellow German but the same surgeon who had attended him when first hurt in the fatherland.

An inquiring person has made the discovery that the reason why so many ministers are able to go abroad during the summer is because in June there are more marriages than in any other part of the year, and the fees obtained from them enable the ministers to take their long vacations.

It is unquestionable that the straw or felt hats worn by American men during the summer is an insufficient protection against extreme heat. Sunstroke is almost unknown among the natives of Eastern countries. The coiled turban upon the head and the general use umbrellas are protection which people who live in American cities do not realize.

They manage presidential elections down in Ecuador somewhat differently from what they do here. Senor Antonio Flores, who is now in New York, has had the novel experience of being nominated and elected president of that republic while he was over a thousand miles from the scene of action. He is somewhat proud of the election, and considering the fact that he has not been in Ecuador for four years he ought to be.

An old trick was successfully tried in Liverpool, Eng., by a boy who had been given a sentence of one week for theft. He was placed in a cell occupied by several youths whose terms expired that evening, and with one of whom he exchanged names and thus secured his release. Shortly afterwards the other boy disclosed his identity and was discharged. The police immediately instituted a search, and the young schemer was reapprehended the folfowing day.

Near the city farm in Lewston, Me., is a curious pet and a strange adoption. A philosopher finds in it proof of the brotherhood of all creatures that live. A few weeks a go the family dog brought in a baby mink, its eyes hardly open—a helpless creature so unoffensive that the dog would not harm it. At that time the family cat was in the joys of recent maternity, and her family was still in darkness. The little girl of the house bethought herself to put the mink in with the kittens, and after a few objections the cat accepted the addition to her family and has since carefully tended, nursed, and reared it. The kittens and the mink are all wide awake now, and it is hard to tell which is the happiest. The odd-looking little animal plays as gleefully as the rest, rolling over the floor, capering, gamboling, jumping, and in all respects enjoying life. It is not evident, either, that the cat had any less regard for it than for any of the kittens.

CONDENSED NEWS.

The Casualty Record.

William McConkey walked off the veranda of the Republic hotel in his sleep at Marquette, Mich., and died early next morning. His brothers are at Engle river, Wis., and his father at Roscommon, Mich.

While playing ball at Verdi, Minn., George Stevens was fatally injured. In attempting to slide in to first base his head struck the baseman on the leg so violently as to dislocate the spine. He is completely paralyzed. Pete Kelly, the baseman, was also badly hurt.

At the coroner's inquest held over the body of Andrew Corcoran killed, at Heron Lake, Minn., by a freight train, the jury brought in a verdict charging the trainmen with negligence in not notifying the deceased of their intention to switch the car on which he was working and in running the train while switching at an unusual high rate of speed.

A very calamitous drowning occurred at Des Moines, Iowa. Gracie Enfield, Myrtie Chandler and Carrie Bartlett, daughters of Dr. Charles Enfield, W. D. Chandler and Prof. M. Bartlett, respectively, were drowned while bathing in Coon river. The bodies have all been recovered. The first were about 13, the Bartlett girl 11. Prof. Bartlett, the conductor of the Musical Normal now in session, resides in Des Moines.

A car on a Burlington & Missouri train was wrecked near Crete, Nebraska, and four or five persons injured. The colored porter of the Pullman car was the person most seriously injured, and it is thought that he cannot live. There were many narrow escapes. A wrecking train which started from Lincoln to the scene of the disaster struck an open switch just out of the city and was derailed, causing considerable delay in reaching the wreck.

Julius Bauer's music house in Chicago was destroyed by fire. The building was owned by John De Koven. His loss is put at $125,000, partly covered by $100,000 insurance. Bauer's stock was valued at about $50,000. The standard Musical company, dealers in instruments and sheet music, had $25,000 worth of goods in the building. These and $5,000 worth of automatic contrivances owned by Pferdner, Praf & Co. were burned. Over $400,000 worth of property was destroyed. The workman believe some one of their number was burned to death. The janitor of the building, James Mahoney, is missing.

An accident occurred on the Duluth and Iron Range road at Wissakode, forty-one miles north of Two Harbors. Two loaded ore trains were going to Two Harbors, and it seems that one had stopped between two switches, while the second had instructions to run regardless of still another train which had been abandoned, and, it is said, was not notified that the first train was standing there. The result was that the locomotive of No. 30 crashed into the caboose of the forward train. There were several passengers, and a young lady named Raymer was seriously injured, and a baby of the same name was so badly hurt that it may not recover.

The Criminal Calendar.

Antoine Lorenzo, convicted of murder in the first degree at Ashland, Wis., for killing Peter Strott of Hurley, was sentenced by Judge Parish for life in Waupun. The case will be taken to the supreme court.

Judge Collins of St. Cloud, Minn., returned from a trip to Wisconsin and found that his house had been entered during his absence and jewelry, etc., stolen, valued at about $200. The house was entirely unoccupied during his absence and the thieves had gone all through it.

The notorious desperado Wash Middleton has been killed at Jaspar, Ark., by an officer while resisting arrest. Middleton had been a mortal terror to southwestern Missouri and northwestern Arkansas for several years. He was a border scout during the war and is said to have killed 40 men during his career.

After all Potts the North Carolina murderer cheats the gallows. He was to be hanged for the murder of Paul Lincke, but made a second and successful attempt to kill himself. About 8 o'clock in the evening he eluded his keepers for a few moments and took a dose of chloral and morphine, dying a few hours later.

A terrible shooting affray occurred at Seney, Mich. Thomas Hayes, proprietor of a hotel and highly respected, got into a quarrel with one McClearly and a companion. The two men were doing him up when they were reinforced by George Everett. At this Hayes pulled his revolver and shot Everett three times in the breast and McClearly once through the shoulder. Everett will die and McClearly is dangerously hurt. Hayes has not been arrested. He claims self-defense.

Louis Smith, a prominent young farmer near Columbus, Nebraska, was sued for $15,000 damages for seduction, the complainant being Emma Hosner. There is a mystery connected with this affair. Some months ago Smith and Miss Hosner and her younger brother went to the Louis river, near the Hosner residence, and the young boy disappeared and has never been heard of since. The couple charged with illicit love have never given a satisfactory account of the boy's disappearance.

Nicholas Seil of Everest, Ernest Kellerman and Lewis Heim of Casselton and John O'Neil of Buffalo, the saloonkeepers arrested for contempt of court in violating Judge McConnell's injunction order, were arraigned for trial in the district court at Fargo, D. T. and fined each $200 and costs. Many ladies, members of the W. C. T. U., were present during the trial, and when the judge declared that the local option law was a good law; that he would vote for it if he were here, and that, as far as his power extended, it should be enforced, he was loudly applauded.

As Miss D. Z. Young, of Faribault, was passing along the street, she was confronted by a man who stabbed her in the left side, driving a stiletto or other sharp instrument through her clothing and into her side. Her screams frightened her assailant, and he ran in another direction. The wound was but slight. Miss Young is one of the most prominent business women of the city, having been in business for upwards of ten years. What object any one could have in attempting such a crime is not known. Miss Young will probably be confined to her room for some time.

Powell Clyde, a fourteen-year-old boy of Lake View, near Chicago has read too much of flash literature, and as a consequence gave himself the name of "Cloudy Clyde, de King." Two men found an excavation under a lumber yard office, in which were two boys tied fast to a post and one of them gagged. The other was yelling lustily. The older boy said that this was "Cloudy Clyde's" gang's stronghold. It was well supplied with plunder, the result of numerous burglaries. The boys had been kept there for a week, "Cloudy" supplying them with food. The latter has disappeared. The boys names were Deichman. They had been disciplined for attempted mutiny.

The coroner's inquest over the remains of Christian J. Bladt, who was killed in Millersville, Minn., by Henry Schecher, developed the following facts: Bladt had filed on a small piece of land. Henry Schecher also claimed the land. On the morning of the murder Schecher was mowing with a machine on the side of the field next to his cabin. Bladt began mowing on his side. Henry Schecher, accompanied by his brothers Jacob and John, at once drove around to the other side of the field so that the teams came face to face. Thomas Kolt, who was working in a neighboring field, says he heard shots but could not tell who fired them. Henry Schecher was the one, however. He fired four shots. The first one was a mortal one, in the abdomen. Two more entered his face. The fourth one was fired from the rear, entering his back. John is in jail at Alexandria.

Foreign News.

The social success in London of the duchess of Marlborough, formerly Mrs. Hammersley of New York, admits of no doubt now. She is all but the idol of the hour in British society. The legal opinions expressed by lawyers in England with regard to the legality of the marriage is absolute in confirming it, and there is nothing on that score to prevent the lady's entire acceptance by the old families of the kingdom.

An American, who gave the name of Miller, and claiming to be the son of a United States judge, and part-owner of the steam yacht Electra, went up to Halifax. The yacht, he said, was on the way from San Francisco, and would touch there. Miller bought wines, a piano, etc.—all for the yacht, with bogus checks. Two days later he decamped, leaving the town poorer by $3,000 and minus two young girls, who were deserted at St. John. The Electra belongs to Commodore Gerry, of the New York Yacht club.

Personal Notes.

Louis Fischer of Hastings, Minn., was adjudged insane by the probate court and will be taken to the Rochester asylum. His age is thirty-five. The supposition is that his insanity is due to a partial sunstroke.

Henry W. Dixon, eldest son of ex-Chief Justice Dixon, of the Wisconsin supreme court, dropped dead at Madison, while engaged in social conversation with friends in a restaurant, from heart disease. Mr. Dixon was a lawyer until recently, when he went into the employ of Callahan & Co., of Chicago, publishers.

In regard to the reported ill health of Gen. Harrison, the republican nominee, his physician said: There has been at no time any occasion to regard Gen. Harrison as a sick man. He had an attack of acute indigestion, but not of a severe character. It was sufficiently troublesome, however, to give him some pain and discomfort. There was at no time any febrile disturbance or even an intimation of inflamatory trouble.

General News Items.

Judge Couch of Iowa, has filed an opinion in certain saloon cases to the effect and if there is any malt in the beverage, sold, and it would produce intoxication if taken in any quantity, that it comes under the ban of the law. This decision knocks the last prop from under the saloon.

At Coney Island, 10 miles up the river from Cincinnati, Samuel Young made an ascent of 1,000 feet in a hot air balloon and let go to make a descent in his parachute. The parachute did not open for 900 feet and he went down into the river and sank 24 feet to the bottom. When he came up he was rescued by boatmen unhurt.

The First Minnesota congressional district Prohibition convention met at Dodge Centre. The credentials committee reported delegates present from six counties, with 72 delegates Steele 11, Dodge 20, Mower 10, Winona 2, Olmstead 9, Freeborn 18, Houston 1, Fillmore 1. Mr. Kneeland of Dodge Center presented the name of Robert Taylor of Kasson, Dodge county, as nominee for congress. An informal ballot resulted in ninety votes—all for Taylor—whose nomination was made unanimous. Taylor accepted in a brief speech, and after the adoption of a platform the convention adjourned.

An attache of the British foreign office said that the government had positive information that the white pasha reported in the province of Bahr El Ghazel, marching on Khartoum is undoubtedly the explorer Henry M. Stanley. The foreign office, he states, has had knowledge all along of some such intention as this on Stanley's part, and that the real object of the expedition at the last moment was not the relief of Emin Bey, who needed no immediate aid, but the rescue of Lupton Bey, Slatin Bey, Neufeld, a German, and several other Europeans, whose terrible sufferings at Khartoum were made known to the government at that time.

There is great excitement over the reports from Skeena river, British Columbia. It was reported there that Mr. Clifford, in charge of the Hudson Bay company at Hazelton, and one of the special constables sent from Victoria had been murdered by Indians. The Indians are thoroughly excited and threaten to exterminate all whites in that part of the country. The only way troops can go up is in canoes, and it is estimated that this will occupy three weeks, as it is a distance of ninety miles up the river to the scene of the trouble, and a great many portages, which make packing slow. The Indians who are causing the trouble are the worst on the coast, are large powerful fellows and nearly all well armed. Great uneasiness is felt as to what may befall the balance of the whites in the disaffected district.

CHICAGO ANARCHISM.

The Police Discover a Plan to Blow Up the Houses of Judges Gary, Grinnell and Others With Dynamite—Some of the Conspirators Arrested.

By bold, timely action, Inspector Bonfield of Chicago probably saved the lives of himself and Judges Gary and Grinnell. In a small frame house in the vicinity of Ashland avenue and Thirty-third street were found twelve dynamite bombs, a revolver and knife, and as the owner of the articles stepped to the sidewalk he was arrested by Bonfield in person and taken to the police station. Two other arrests were made later. When questioned as to what the prisoner's intended to do, Inspector Bonfield said: There was a conspiracy of long standing, and it was about to be put into execution. They intended to use the dynamite on Judge Gary, Judge Grinnell and myself.

The chief prisoner is an old time anarchist and was prominent in the schemes of Haymarket times. Before making the first arrest, Bonfield had the house surrounded by officers. Just as daylight was breaking, the inspector was joined in the vicinity by a stranger and a few moments later a man emerged from the house. The stranger nudged Bonfield and an order was given to the men who closed on the man. He made a desperate fight but was quickly overpowered and placed in charge of two of the officers. Bonfield and the other officers then rushed into the house. They were met on the stairs by a woman, the wife of the man who had been captured, but she was brushed aside and the police, guided by the stranger, entered a hall bed room where hidden in a corner the inspector found a dozen dynamite cartridges wrapped in brown paper. Concealed in the bed were a large revolver and a dagger. Some bundles of letters and other papers were also found. Then the prisoner was taken to the station. The officers next went to a house some distance away where arrests were made and all three captives taken to the central station. Inspector Bonfield is reported to have said privately that the plot was a well arranged one. About twenty determined murderers were in the conspiracy, and they were, at a certain hour after midnight to beat the homes of Grinnell, Gary, Bonfield, Frank Walker, Gen. Stiles and others prominent in the execution. Dynamite was to be placed beneath the houses of these and the powerful explosive was to be touched off simultaneously. The board of trade was to be blown to the sky at the same time and a wholesome reign of terror inaugurated.

The names of the men arrested are John Kronek, Frank Chapek and Frank Chebowa, all Bohemians. The first named is a cabinetmaker by trade, Chebowa is a tailor, and is the informer who told the story of the plot to a Bohemian, who in turn detailed it to Inspector Bonfield about ten days ago. It seems that since the execution of the anarchists a movement was started among their followers in Chicago to do business at the old stand. The group had no regular stand of meeting but casually met as friends, and over a glass of beer concocted the bloody schemes. It was agreed that Grinnell's house should go up first and Judge Gary's next, and that was the time set for carrying out the plot. Inspector Bonfield was the third man doomed to die, but just how had not been fully decided upon. It is stated in this connection that Kronek and Chapek were intimate friends of Louis Lingg, the bombmaker, and both were arrested after the Haymarket riot.

The N. P. Going Over the Line.

The Manitoba government is still dickering with the Northern Pacific people, and so far the contract has not been signed. The contract provides that the Northern Pacific is to purchase the Red River valley road, which the government agrees to complete into Winnipeg, the figure being about $1,600,000. The Northern Pacific agrees to build to the Portage this fall, and to push the Brandon connection as far as possible before the frost sets in. They further agree to complete the Brandon connection early next summer, and also to construct a system of branch lines in all important directions when the trade would warrant the work being done. The Northern Pacific agrees to construct a number of elevators at important points and to spend large sums of money in this and other ways. It is stated that the government has no intention of maintaining the Red River road as an independent roadway, but will make a complete transfer to the Northern Pacific, requiring only from the company a guarantee of a certain maximum rate on wheat and certain other lines from the province to Duluth, where advantage can be taken of keen competition in lake freights. This point is lialbe to provoke some indignation at Winnipeg as it is understood to have been the policy of the government to maintain the Red River Valley as an independent line. The statement made in the New York dispatch that harmonious relations had been made between the Northern Pacific and Canadian Pacific for maintaining rates, and the purchase of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road by the Canadian Pacific leads people to believe that Manitoba will not be much better off with the two roads than with the Canadian Pacific road alone.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

The Garden City Mining company has just been organized at Duluth, with a capital stock of $250,000. The company owns 160 acres of land five miles east of Ely, and has purchased machinery and will go to work at once.

At Shieldsville, Thomas McDonald, while handling a bull, was attacked by the animal and had a large piece of flesh torn from his left leg and several ribs broken. He will recover.

E. N. McCullough, a young man employed by C. B. Hollenbeck, fell twenty-five feet, striking on a barn floor, breaking his collar bone and is injured internally. His death is expected. His parents live at Montgomery Minn.

William Deich, a young man living in the town of Maine, twenty miles from Fergus Falls, committed suicide by shooting himself through the heart with a shotgun. Despondency over his love affairs is supposed to be the cause of the deed.

The Standard Oil company purchased at Crookston a tract of land upon which will be erected large brick storehouses, offices, tanks, etc. Crookston will be the Northwestern distributing point for oil. Work is to be commenced at once.

The prospectors for natural gas at Minneopa Falls, near Mankato, have struck water instead of gas at a depth of 508 feet. It flows a five-inch stream and rises fifteen feet above the surface of the ground. The water is of good quality. This will probably receive attention as a source of supply for the city.

One day a man came to the home of George Derby, two and a half miles south of Mankato, and was put to work. He told Mr. Derby's people they could call him "Tom." The next day Tom left the house, taking his employer's pocketbook, containing $40.

Rev. John Crapsey, who in the 60s used to minister spiritually to the scattered settlements in the southwestern part of the state is still living at Lake Talcott, Murray county, at a very advanced age. He has published a pamphlet giveng an account of his ministrations.

At the Prohibition convention held at Dauson D. G. Miller, and F. S. Vaughan were chosen delegates to the district convention, and Dr. Nelson and A. M. Park delegates to the state convention. Hugh Harrison, was indorsed for Governor.

Erick Hanson, forty-five years of age, was drowned in the Red river, ten miles south of Moorhead. He was in a boat with a boy, playing, when the boat capsized. The body was recovered.

The total real estate valuation of Goodhue county as returned to the county auditor by the assessor is $6,085,742; total personal property valuation, $2,137,896, making the total valuation of the county $8,223,638, out of which Red Wing has $1,234,846.

H. E. Osgood, a traveling man from St. Paul, Minn., representing the Jewell Nursery Company, was thrown from a wagon at Columbia, Nebraska, while driving a team of bronchos. He suffered a compound fracture of the right leg. He was taken to St. Mary's hospital where the limb was amputated.

Farmer May of Homer came to Winona in hot haste to get a coffin for his daughter, who had died suddenly. As it was late at night, he decided to wait until morning, but before daylight a messenger from his farm reached him with the news that the young lady was only in a swoom and had recovered. The coffin was not bought.

H. Palmer, a mechanic, aged about 45 years, fell into the city well at Mankato, and narrowly escaped death. A force of men were at work in the well, and met with trouble with the machinery, and in trying to aid them Mr. Palmer slipped and fell down the well, a distance of 25 feet. He received cuts about the head and body and a very severe gash around the ankle that will probably cripple him for life.

William Eibel, better known as "Scrap Iron Bill," while delivering a temperance lecture at the M. E. church in Glenwood suddenly clapped his hands to his head and fell headlong over the pulpit railing into the aisle. He was carried outside, and remained unconscious several hours, but is recovering.

The parties in Martin county who filed on contested railroad land some time ago feel quite jubilant over the recent rulings of the secretary of the interior, and there is no doubt that a portion of the lands, if not all, will in time be held by the settlers.

Winona has another strike on hand. The coopers at the barrel factory of Doud, Son & Co., were notified that their pay would be reduced from six cents to five for making a barrel, but the reduction will reduce their wages 30 to 40 cents a day, and as they only make $1.25 to $1.75 now, they cannot make a living, and will not work for the reduced scale.

Tramp burglars forced the iron shutters of the postoffice building at Glynden. One was shot in the shoulder by a clerk named Spike but escaped in the darkness.

Charles McDonald of Independence, Wis., while in Winona fell in with three hard characters who got him drunk and robbed him of his money, about $28. No trace of the robbers can be found.

Republican Comment.

A Magnificent Array.

When Blaine, Sherman, Depew, Edmunds, Hawley, McKinley and Phelps take the field for Harrison and Morton, as they will in the latter part of the campaign, the country will see an array of ability on the stump such as has never been surpassed in any canvass in the nation's history.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Thurman's Unlucky Number.

Allen G. Thurman, thirteen letters in his name.

Born Nov. 13, A. D. 1813.

Nominated........................June 7
Election day........................Nov. 6

Total........................13

THE RED BANDANA.
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13.

Offensive Sectionalism.

The original Mills bill put marble in blocks on the free list. When that part of the bill came up for consideration, however, a few days ago, a Tennessee member of the house said that free marble would destroy an important industry in his state. As it would be wicked to injure an industry of a democratic state, the democratic party struck out that provision and the duty on this product will remain unchanged. This sectionalism is one of the most iniquitous features of the Mills Bill, but it is only one of them.

The Same Old Fraud.

The democrats in the canvas of 1844 claimed that Polk, their candidate for president, was a better tariff man than Clay, the whig nominee. Hundreds of thousands of people were deluded by this false pretense, and thus Polk was elected. The house of representatives which was chosen with Polk passed a "free trade tariff" bill, which repealed the protective tariff of 1842. Of course Polk signed it. This was the tariff of 1846. Democratic duplicity on the tariff question, it will be noticed, was practiced a generation or two ago as shamelessly as it is now. Some of the democrats in the present canvass undoubtedly will claim that Cleveland is a better tariff man than Harrison.

Absent from Gettysburg in 1863 and 1888.

President Cleveland didn't go to Gettysburg. Too busy. He didn't go in 1863, having exhausted his energies in finding a substitute. His absence on this anniversary doesn't matter. Remarks by him on that historic field would necessarily force comparison with the immortal speech of Abraham Lincoln, which would be bad for our present executive. And besides the "straws" taken on trains carrying veterans to Gettysburg show that this is not a Cleveland gathering. Here are a few sample straws: 495 Harrison, 40 Cleveland; 105 Harrison, 7 Cleveland, 390 Harrison, 33 Cleveland; 471 Harrison, 31 Cleveland. Veteran reunions are not in Mr. Cleveland's line. He much prefers to run his stub pen thro' a pension bill.—Utica Herald.

One Lie Squelched.

Among the campaign lies started by Democratic papers in Indiana is a story that Gen. Harrison once declared that "a dollar a day is enough for any workingman." Other variations of the story are that he said "ten cents a day was enough," and that "a dollar a day and two meals were enough." The Indianapolis Journal has offered a reward of $1,000 to any person who will furnish evidence that Gen. Harrison ever said anything of the kind. Nobody has applied for the reward.

The Democratic Woodchuck Hunt.

The explanation the boy gave for digging so zealously at a woodchuck hole, that the minister was coming to dinner and the family was out of meat, has been used to give point to a good many arguments. It was never used with more effect, however, than it can be to illustrate the embarassing situation the Democratic organs have been in since the Republican presidential nomination was made. The need of campaign "meat" was apparent as soon as the telegraph announced the composition of the ticket, and a hot hunt was at once begun in every Democratic newspaper office for any sign of woodchuck.

The record of General Harrison on the Chinese question appeared to offer the best prospect of finding woodchuck, and, accordingly, the famished Democrats went for that woodchuck hole with a zeal that put to shame the boy whose household was out of meat. Spades, shovels, picks and muck rakes were hastily seized and a concerted attack begun. For a time the fresh earth flew merrily and the workers were encouraged by what they thought was a whisk of the woodchuck's tail or a gleam of a pair of ferret-like eyes. But no woodchuck could be found and they were growing weary when they heard a merry laugh from over the Rocky mountains, and a voice say: "Ho woodchuck in that hole, boys. We're entirely satisfied with Harrison's record. No use digging any longer."

So the excavation around the Chinese apperture was hastily abandoned and the whole woodchucks hunting crowd rushed pell-mell for another whole which a zealous Democrat with a muck rake had uncovered. This time the woodchuck was going to be the record Harrison made during the labor strikes of 1886. It was decided to proceed more deliberately, as the tracks around the hole looked fresh, and success with proper caution appeared certain.

After learnedly discussing just how woodchucks dug their holes and in what direction this one had probably burrowed, they stationed a frisky editor at the mouth with a bag and began to dig. But only three shovelsful of ground had been throw up when they heard a loud "haloo," and, looking up, there stood "Joe" McDonald with both elbows resting on the top rail of the fence and a hand on each side of his mouth. "There isn't any woodchuck in that hole," he shouted, "and if there was it would be just as much a Democratic woodchuck as a Republican woodchuck. For I stood by Ben Harrison in the labor troubles of 1886 and approve everything he did."

With a weary and disgusted air the Democratic hunters turned away from their latest search, and as there were no more woodchuck holes in sight, they sat down under a tree to rest. They are sitting there still, contemplating ruefully their blistered hands, and wiping the perspiration from their brows with English made bandanas. They are aware that election is coming just as certainly as the minister was coming to the boy's house, but what the Democratic family is going to do for meat they don't know. There is only one piece of advice that can be given them, and that is this: When you dig for woodchuck, don't dig at last year's woodchuck holes.—Philadelphia Press.

Mr. Cleveland's Supporters Abroad and at Home.

Whatever may be the result of the Presidential election, Mr. Cleveland has already carried English sentiment in his favor by his Message. The English newspapers are practically unanimous in his support. They understand what his policy is, and means, and would result in. The London Times not only praises him as a Free Trader, but commends him to Englishmen, by explaining one of his attempts to fool his own countrymen by his assertion, in his Tammany Hall letter, that "those who taught him with being a Free Trader are deceiving the country," as to which the Times remarks, with deadly truthfulness, that "it is certain that the arguments which President Cleveland urges are those which Cobden used to employ forty-five years ago and which any English Free Trader would employ now. Such propositions as that taxation ought to be strictly limited by the needs of the country: that it is unjust to tax the whole community for the benefit of special classes; that import duties stifles production and limit the area of a country's markets, are purely free trade arguments. As such we are very glad to see President Cleveland using them, though we are sorry for the popular infatuation which makes it dangerous to give them their right name."

And the London News, while justly praising the "dignity shown by Gen. Harrison in his letter of acceptance, adds that: "President Cleveland's speech is more to the point. He discusses the principles at issue in the struggle and shows that he is the free trade candidate in everything but name. The reservation is an important one for American party purposes. The President feels compelled to characterize the attempt to brand him as a free trader as deception, but for all that the electoral conflict now in progress is a conflict between free trade and protection and nothing less. This is a very good conflict as things go, and like warfare between good and evil, it threatens to be perpetual. Mr. Cleveland may find a more formidable antagonist in Gen. Harrison than we have been led to expect."

These are two very important contributions to the campaign between American ideas and economic system and British Free Trade. It seems silly for the London newspapers to furnish such valuable contributions to the Republican campaign, but their unconscious indifference to the result of their confessions and opinions on Americans is "so English, you know." It is idiotic but natural. It illustrates the insular character of the English mind, its utter lack of tact and sagacity in dealing with foreign questions, which has so often ruined the most sagacious diplomacy of exceptionally astute English statesman.

And this reminds us of a valuable contribution to the Republican campaign made by one of our local democratic newspapers which furnishes the most startling, yet natural, proof of the inevitable tendencies of the Democratic party, as at present run by, and in the interest of the "Solid South," in republishing this clause from the Confederate Constitution, viz.

The Congress shall have power—

To lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises for revenue necessary to pay the debts, provide for common defence, and carry on the government of the Confederate States; but no bounties shall be granted from the Treasury; nor shall any duties or taxes on importations from foreign relations be laid to promote or foster any branch of industry; and all duties, imposts and excises shall be uniform throughout the Confederate States.

On which this comment is made by the journal that revives this memorial of "The Lost Cause:"

This is free trade pure and simple; and many of the gentlemen who framed and supported the Confederate Constitution having become influential in the House of Representatives, they have naturally endeavored in the Mills Tariff bill to apply, as far as they found practicable under the different circumstances in which they are now placed, the same idea which animated them in drawing up the constitutional clause which we have just quoted.

And another local democratic contemporary criticises the publication of this proof of the fact, as regards the Free Trade clause of the Confederate Constitution, that "the Confederacy is in the saddle," and then kindly copies the editorial in which this prophetic clause is quoted.

How can intelligent, patriotic Americans, who were loyal during the war and are Americans always and to the core, sustain the candidate who is the favorite of English newspapers and publications because of his English Free Trade policy, and the platform that embodies the tendency to achieve by the ballot the Free Trade that the South failed to get by the help of bullets?—N. Y Mail & Express.

Chicago Founded by a Negro.

Chicago Times.

The name of the real founder of Chicago, which has been left unsung by the proud Caucasian and permitted to drift into olivion, is hereby rescued. It was Jean Baptiste au Sable, and its owner was a San Domingo negro with complexion as black as the character of the fiend who would attempt to bribe an alderman with a block of imaginary stock in a mythical railroad. The name gave rise to a suspicion of French blood in Jean's veins, but there was nothing in any feature to show it and no doubt he was an African of the purest type. He had in his mind the founding of a great empire in the wilderness, and believed that a comingling of negro and Indian would produce the typical race of the world—large in brain and invincible in war. He had doubtless heard legends of that most famous of his race, Hannibal, who, descending the Nile, crossed into Europe, and after overthrowing the Roman legions advanced upon the "Mistress of the World" with a myriad of men. In order to do this, too, it was necessary to march his hosts across the Alps, and this was accomplished in a manner so superb that the later effort of Napoleon was but a feeble imitation.

It is certain, however that Au Sable had dreams of power and empire. He thought first to ingratiate himself with the neighboring tribes of Indians, eventually consolidate them and become chief of a great nation. As a preliminary step and to provide for a future capital he prospected throughout the vast wilderness and with prophetic vision chose this as the locality. Nothing could change this determination, and despite the wiles and blandishments of real estate dealers in Marquette and Fort Clark (now Peoria) he took possession in 1799 of a strip of ground lying north of the river and extending from what is now Clark street to the lake. Thereon he built a hut and proceeded to negotiate. Like many a white man before and since Jean seems to have had a great head for schemes but a poor one for diplomacy, and after two or three years of incessant toil and increasing intrigue his visions of power faded away. Lo was suspicious and would have none of it, and this distrust of his motives seems to have broken the adventurer's spirit, as he soon abandoned his claim, and being desirous of ending his life as soon and easily as possible, located on the Illinois river near Peoria, where he soon died of breackback ague. Thus ended the dreamed-of empire, and perhaps obviated the necessity of a civil rights law enabling white people to enter negro hotels and theaters in Chicago.

Munchausen Outdone.

Paris Letter to London Telegraph.

In the forest of Esterel a man and woman were at work, recently, and far off a babe—an infant 6 months old—was lying in its cradle, which had been moved to the front of their cottage in order that the little cherub might inhale the fresh air under the watchful gaze of its fond parents. Suddenly a noise was heard, and an enormous eagle, swoopingd own from the cerulean sky, seized the babe with beak and claws and began to soar once more toward the sun, when the distracted father, rushing madly into his hut, took up a gun. Witout a moment's hesitation the man pointed his weapon at the cruel bird and fired. The eagle dropped earthward as dead as a door nail, and its slayer now achieved another feat which would have won him any amount of applause at Lord's. He held out his hands and caught the child as it fell, the little one escaping without so much as a scratch, and returning from its journey into mid-air as "bright as a button." So Tell of immortal renown has a rival. The only drawback is that a sceptic has hinted that if it were carefully examined the majestic bird might prove, after all, to be only a canard

RAILROAD DYNAMITERS.

Arrest of a Number of Burlington Employees Charged with Conspiracy.

For several days the Chicago papers have been filled with long reports of an alleged dynamite conspiracy against the Burlington railroad; a number of arrests were made, and numerous examinations have taken place. An outline of the case against the members of the Brotherhood of Engineers and Firemen, accused of complicity in the plot against the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy road, was formally presented in court. The statement was made by United States District Attorney Ewing, upon the arraignment of six of the accused—Chief Bauereisen and his comrades, Goding, Wilson, Bowles, Broderick and Smith. The presentment caused a great sensation. The statement of the district attorney was apparently based largely upon a confession of one of the six, Alex Smith. The latter sat apart from the other defendants, and doggedly declined to be represented by the Brotherhood attorneys.

Subsequently Bowles made a confession but the text of his squeal was not made public. A preliminary examination followed. The United States officials, it is said, have decided to bring a charge of conspiracy, a crime which can be punished by two years' imprisonment in the penitentiary or a fine of $10,000, or both. Two women were brought into the court room, and given seats behind the desk. One of them was said to be the woman to whom Bowles, though a married man, made love while on his dynamite expedition in Indiana, and whose presence in court brought about by the prosecution had more than anything else induced Bowles to confess in order to head off a suit for divorce. Alex Smith, the Aurora brotherhood fireman who turned informer, was the first witness called. He was interrupted at the very outset by Lawyer David for the defense, moving that all evidence concerning Informer Bowles be stricken out on the ground that he was not now under investigation. David also asked to have the testimony of Informer Kelley and witness Lloyd nullified because they mentioned none of the defendants but Bowles, and the evidence was therefore incompetent. District Attorney Ewing contended that it would be shown that the dynamite was purchased and delivered by some, at least of the defendants. The court let it stand, and then Smith was taken off the box, and J. J. Kelley, Chairman Hoge's clerk, recalled to a limit that his name was Charles Cordell in a flirtation he had with two ladies in Chicago in 1881.

Smith was arrested after having been subjected to a cross examination of great length by defendant's counsel. They failed of their purpose to get him to contradict himself, but did establish the fact that he knew nothing about the dynamite found on the train when Broderick, Bowles and Wilson were arrested.

A conference was held at the office of the Burlington road, at which the road was represented by President Perkins, Vice President Densley, General Manager Stone, Wirt Dexter and J. W. Bly. The other side was represented by Chief Arthur, of the Locomotive Engineers; Chief Sargent, of the Locomotive Firemen, and Alexander Sullivan, their attorney. The arrival of Arthur and Sargent in Chicago has been kept a secret until the conference was over. Chairmen Hoge and Murphy were also present. The officials of the two Brotherhoods assured the railroad men that they had no sympathy with dynamiters. At the conference, the strike and, the situation as it affected the public and the parties to this struggle was discussed. All agreed that it would be well if the strike could be ended. President Perkins was seen after the conference and said nothing was definitely settled. Touching the meeting, President Hoge said:

Propositions were submitted by both sides to the controversy, looking toward a settlement of the strike. What these propositions were I am not at liberty to state. They have not taken tangible form and will not until another conference is held which will be in a few days.

Mr. Hoge then showed a telegram which was sent from Davenport to W. F. Gould and which read as follows:

"Owing to certain events the men at this point decide that we had better adopt extreme measure."

"This is only one out of many telegrams of a similar nature," said the chairman, "which have reached here. This one is addressed to Chairman Gould, of the Rock Island grievance committee, and shows which way the wind is blowing. He also said that a general meeting of chairmen of grievance committees of nearly every line running out of Chicago would be held, at which action will be taken to resent the wholesale arrests and persecutions which have occurred in Chicago during the past ten days.

"What does the writer of the dispatch mean when he speaks of extreme measures?" was then asked.

"That remains to be seen. It may mean a strike on the road represented or it may mean a boycott on the "Q," which would eventually terminate in a strike. The meeting will decide that question."

"Do you think there will be a strike?"

"Well, the men on the Grand Trunk, Rock Island and Northwestern, among others, are very sore of these arrests, and will certainly speak in no uncertain tone when the time comes. They do not believe in dynamite; neither do they believe in persecutions."

"Will this meeting have the power to declare a strike without the sanction of Chief Arthur?"

"Yes, sir; and they will do it if necessary. The support of Arthur is only for its moral and financial effect. If any of the systems conclude to strike and Arthur refuses to sanction the move, we receive no support from the brotherhood. But at the same time the Chairman of any system can declare a strike on that system, provided the brotherhood employed there desire it."

In a later interview, Chairman Hoge is said to have stated that satisfactory arrangements had been made by which the "Q" is not to be subjected to any further molestation growing out of the strike, which was to be declared off, and that the road in turn would cease its prosecution of those arrested for complicity in the dynamite conspiracy.

A DETECTIVE IN THE BROTHERHOOD.

Another sensation was sprung upon the defense in the "Q" dynamite case. John Wilson one of the prisoners who was arrested with Broderick and Bowles as an arch conspirator and a brotherhood engineer, cooly left his seat in the group of which Broderick and Bauereisen were members, and walked over to the side of the room where the prosecuting attorney sat and took a chair beside Mr. Dawes, with whom he began to chat in a friendly manner. Then it was developed that Wilson was not an engineer, not a brotherhood man, and not even Wilson. His name is John Mulligan, and he is a Pinkerton detective, and not only is this the case, but it appears he has had the confidence of all the prisoners and their attorneys.

The expose was brought about by the lawyers too closely pressing the cross-examination of Supt. McGinn, of the Pinkerton agency, who was on the witness stand. The superintendent had the alternative of an awkward refusal to answer pertinent questions concerning Wilson, or cause the latter to show up in true colors. McGinn chose the latter. Wilson or Mulligan obeyed a signal, and quickly sprang across the room to the side of the prosecution.

When the commotion susided, Supt. McGinn related the circumstances of Broderick, one of the inspectors, throwing a mysterious letter out of the car window at the time of his arrest, and the subsequent recovery of the letter. The motive of Broderick in ridding himself of the missive, and the extreme secretiveness of the officials in guarding its contents is not apparent.

Bowles, the engineer informer, was the next witness of importance. He began by telling of a secret meeting of the Brotherhood in Aurora. Witness said:

Chief Bauereisen made a statement that we should do something; that the company was getting ahead of us. He said that it would not do for him to do anything in regard to the use of dynamite, but it could be used with good effect. After the meeting was over some conversation passed between him and myself, and I made the statement to him that I knew how to use it; that I had seen it used in the gravel pit. He wanted to know if I could get any of it, and I told him I thought I could. He told me to go and get it. He gave me $7.50 to get it.

Bowles was also allowed to explain the contents of a letter received by him from Bauereisen at Noblesville, enclosing money and the instruction to "take plenty of goods to Cresto." By goods he said dynamite was meant.

Under cross-examination Bowles admitted that he had told both attorneys for the defense, while in the county jail, that he was an innocent man; that he did not know anything of the use of dynamite, and that he had lied repeatedly to them and to others as to his innocence and about other matters.

"But," he added naively, "I was not on oath then."

• • • • • • • • • • • •

YOU SUFFER

from Biliousness, Constipation, Piles, Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Colds, Liver Trouble, Jaundice, Dizziness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, etc.—You need Suffer no longer—

Warner's SAFE Pills will cure you. They have cured tens of thousands. They possess these points of superiority: sugar coated; purely vegetable, contain no calomel, mercury or mineral of any kind; do not gripe; never sicken; easy to take; mild in operation; and for these reasons are especially the favorites of women. Ask for

WARNER'S SAFE PILLS

Within the Century.

It is rather more likely than not that the old men of this period, those who came into the world with the present century, or a few years after, have seen more material progress than those of any preceding century of which the history was written or preserved. The first steam-vessel, christened the Savannah, which crossed the Atlantic Ocean, sailed from the port of Savannah on the 26th of May, 1819 arrived at Liverpool on the following 20th of June, but it was nearly twenty years later, or just fifty years ago on April 23d, that the real steam ferriage of the Atlantic was inaugurated by the arrival at New York of the steamship Sirius and Great Western within a few hours of each other, the first of which sailed from Cork on the 4th and the latter from Bristol on the 8th of April, 1838. The Savannah, twenty years before (part sail and steam) had taken twenty-six days to make the passage. The Great Western was fifteen days between port and port, but now the same voyage is made in less than seven days by some of the new ocean racers. The development of the uses of the power of steam alone is suggestive as anything need be of the material progress of the century, but to it must be added the Jacquand loom, the magnetic telegraph, the cotton gin, the power loom, the screw propeller the iron and screw ship, the vast march of chemistry, and in the healing art, the sewing-machine, the telephone, the ploughing, planting and harvesting machines, the Hoe rotary and other multiple power printing-machines, the photograph, the "dynamo," the electric light, the electric motor and all those thousand and one mechanical inventions and scientific discoveries which are in active operation to-day, and which were not in practical existence in the year 1800—Philadelphia Ledger.

Markets.

CHICAGO—No. 2 spring wheat, 81¼@82⅝c, No. 2 red. 81c; No. 2 corn, 48c; No. 2 oats; 31c; No. 2 rye, 52c; No. 2 barley, 63c; No. 1 flax seed, $1.10; prime timothy seed, $2.40; mess pork, per bbl., $13.60@13.62½; lard per 100 lbs., $8.25@8.30; short rib sides (loose), $7.85; dry-salted shoulders (boxed), $6.65@6.75; short clear sides (boxed), $8.25@8.30; whiskey, distillers' finished goods, $1.20; sugars, cut, loaf, 7⅜@8⅝c; butter, creamery, 15½@19c; dairy, 13@17c; eggs, 13¼@14c.

MINNEAPOLIS—Wheat: No. 1 hard 81¾c; No 1, northern 80c; No. 2, northern, 77½c; corn 40@48c. Oats, 28@32½c. Barley 30@50c. Flax, $1.03. Mixed feed, $16@19 per ton. Hay $8@8.50, eggs, fresh 14 @ 15 c; mutton, dressed 7 @ 8½c. potatoes, old, per bu. 45 @ 55 c. potatoes, new, per bu. 70 @ 80 c; spring chickens per doz. $2.50 @ $3.00; wool, medium, 21 @ 27; coarse unwashed 17 @ 19; butter, creamery, 16 @ 18c; dairy, 12 @ 14c; grease butter 4 @ 5c.

ST. PAUL—Wheat, No. 1 hard, 82½c; No. 1 Northern, 81c; No. 2 Northern, 78c. Corn, Sample, 40c; No. 2, 42c. Oats, No. 2, mixed, 32c No. 1, white, 34c No. 2, white, 33c No. 3, 31½c. Millstuffs, Ground feed, $17.00; corn meal, unbolted, $17.00; bran, bulk, $9.00, Hay, No. 1, $5; No. 1 upland prairie $7.50; timothy, $12; Flax Seed—$1.05; new potatoes, $2.25 per barrel, eggs, 14 @ 15c.

MILWAUKEE—Wheat cash, 78c; 79⅝c; August, 68½c. Corn; No. 3, 47c. Oats; No. 2 white, 35c. Rye; No, 1, 50c. Barley; No. 2, 59c. Provisions strong. Pork $13.62½. Lard $8.40; August, $8.47½. Butter; dairy, 13@ 14c. Eggs; fresh, 14@ 14½c. Cheese; cheddars, 8@11½c.

Premier Greenway and Atty.-Gen. Martin of Manitoba left St. Paul to consult with General Manager Oakes, of the Northern Pacific, regarding the sale of the Red River Valley railway. According to arrangement they meet Oakes in Chicago, but it is likely the party will go to New York to sign the contract if satisfactory arrangements be made regarding the sale. The only way they can be made satisfactory is by Northern Pacific people agreeing to guarantee maximum freight rates on wheat. It is doubtful if the company will concede this point. The Canadian Pacific people are already agitated over the probable purchase, realizing that the Northern Pacific will prove a dangerous competitor. They threaten, if the government sells the Red River Valley, to construct a line between Winnipeg and Duluth, and thus get even with the Northern Pacific. The outlook for a big railroad war is excellent.

A disease closely resembling the blackleg has broken out among the cattle of Washington and Colfax townships, Webster county, Iowa, and has become epidemic. The disease appeared only a couple of days since, and nearly a hundred cattle have died. Twenty-three herds are affected. Only three or four recovered after being attacked. Veterinarians can do nothing. The prospects are that they will see the worst cattle epidemic in progress that ever afflicted this part of Iowa. Stock owners are very much discouraged, Gov. Larrabee has been notified, and a quarantine will probably be ordered.

Wonderful Popularity.

The fact that the sale of D. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets exceeds that of any other pill in the market, be it great or small, is on account of the fact that they are tiny, little sugar-coated granules, and that in most cases one little "Pellet" is sufficient for a dose; that they are purely vegetable and perfectly harmless; and for constipation, biliousness, sick headache, and all disease arising from derangement of the liver, stomach or bowels, they are absolutely a specific. A gentle laxative or active cathartic, according to size of dose.

The prohibition congressional convention of the Second Minnesota district met at Mankato, and after severely denouncing the Republican platform; nominated Dr. D. W. Edwards for Congress.

Use the great specific for "cold in head" and catarrh Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

John Gibbs, who robbed the depot at Madison Lake, Minn., was taken to Mankato and lodged in jail. The money was not recovered. Gibbs is a printer, and was implicated in a theft in Kasota last summer. He will have to appear before the grand jury in December.

THE WEST VIRGINIA HORROR.

The Unprecedented Rainfall and Appalling Loss of Life.

A personal visit to all the flood stricken sections of West Virginia by a reporter showed if possible, a worse state of affairs than those that were reported. Indeed language cannot do justice to the ruin and desolation east of the city of Wheeling from Elm Grove almost to West Alexandria. The line of the Pittsburg division of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad will have to be partially rebuilt from Elm Grove to the Pennsylvania state line. Six costly bridges were washed away, the track lifted from the road bed and twisted into almost all conceivable shapes for miles at a stretch. Of course interest centers in the wreck of the Baltimore & Ohio bridge over Wheeling creek, and the fatalities which attended that disaster. Several of those on the bridge were doubtless strangers in the city attracted by curiosity, and their absence is not noticed. So far as can be definitely known there were four men and three boys not since heard from on the bridge when it went down. The revised list of the persons who perished is as follows:

Herman Stenzel, Mrs. Barbara Stenzel, Annie Wingard of Miltonsburg, Ohio; Alice Wingard, an inmate of the Stenzel household, employed as a domestic; Mrs. Thomas Hawley and her four children, one boy and three girls; John Hohman, Mrs. Jane Flay and her two daughters, Alice and Belle; William Gaston of Point Mills.

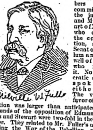
There was also a report that the family of a man named Johnson, near Clinton, had lost their lives, but this could not be authenticated. Mr. Wingard, the father of the two girls, has arrived in the city. He had no knowledge of the drowning of his two daughters until after his arrival.

Later and authentic details from Triadelphia show the destruction there was more appalling than anywhere else. Fifteen families are homeless and saved nothing but what they had on. Half this village of 600 inhabitants were swept away, but all but those before named escaped to the hills. The storm extended about 16 miles east of West Alexander, Pa., and the scene all along the way is one of desolation and inconceivable horror. Where the Triadelphia school house, a large building of six rooms stood, the creek is now a raging flood and not a vestige of even the foundation remains. The whole south half of the town has disappeared as clear as if it never existed.

It cannot be stated at this hour how many lives have been lost. The loss in Wheeling is known to be ten, with a number reported missing. Caldwell's Run, which passes through the city, was the scene of the greatest havoc. Three houses were swept away and all the inmates were drowned. Great damage is reported at Elm Grove and Triadelphia, the drowned at these points were, Mrs. Jane Fay and two daughters, William Gaston and wife, Caull Bell and two young men named Bowman. Mrs. Johnson, a widow aged 60 years, residing at Clinton, died from fright. About fifteen bodies have been found so far. The greatest loss of life was along Wheeling creek and Triadelphia. A search resulted in the discovery of a number of bodies near the latter place. Most of them were found among the drift which collected at Elm Grove. The body of William Gaston, aged sixty years, a prominent and wealthy citizen was found near Elm Grove. His wife's remains were found two miles below Elm Grove hanging on a barbed wire fence. Charles Caulbell, aged fifty years, was found among driftwood. Mrs. Jane Fay and her two daughters, Alice and Mary, were discovered a short distance below Triadelphia, and the bodies of two brothers named Gorman were found in a meadow, where they had been buried by the furious waters. Among the number drowned was the sheriff of Marshall county. Two cemeteries were washed and the coffins with bodies floated down the river.

Fuller's Nomination Confirmed.

Melville W. Fuller was confirmed for chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, by a vote of 41 ayes to 21 noes after an executive session three hours in length. This time was occupied by five senators who were the only ones who spoke on the nomination. They were Edmunds and Evarts, members of the committee on the judiciary, and Mr. Stewart of Nevada, who opposed the confirmation, and by Senators Cullum and Farwell of Illinois, who favored it. No Democratic senator spoke on either side. The vote in favor of confirmation was larger than anticipated. The grounds of the opposition of Edmunds, Evarts and Stewart were two-fold in their character. They related to Mr. Fuller's attitude during the War of the Rebellion, and the views which he must hold as to the constitutional amendments and legislation which grew out of the war, and also to his abilities as a lawyer. It was maintained by these three gentlemen that Mr. Fuller ought not to be confirmed; that in their judgment he did not possess the legal ability which should characterize a justice, and that his record in the war was such that he ought not to be confirmed by a Republican senate.



The Emperor and Czar.

The German Emperor William, accompanied by Prince Henry, Count Herbert Bismarck and a small suite, sailed from Peterhof for St. Petersburg on board the Alexandria. During the voyage from Cronstadt to Peterhof, Emperor William and the czar had a long talk together. No toasts were offered at the station nor given in honor of Emperor William at Peterhof, Emperor William afterward went on a drive, in company with the czarina and the Duke and Duchess Vladimir. On arriving at Kraznoe-Selo the emperor, on horseback, and the czarina and children in an open carriage drawn by six white horses inspected the camp. Then, seated before the imperial tent, the party listened to the playing of the German anthem, and a selection of Russian music. Evening prayer, tattoo and a discharge of rockets closed the day's proceedings. Emperor William and Prince Henry next day laid wreathes on the tomb of the late czar in the church of Peter and Paul in St. Petersburg. Wreaths were also placed on the late czarina by Emperor William and Prince Henry. The wreaths were inscribed with the names of "William" and "Henry." The foreign embassies and all of the private houses along the route to St. Petersburg were profusely decorated, and the balconies were crowded with people. The Germany colony turned out in great force to see the new emperor.

Curious and Mysterious Case.

An international episode of importance took place in Duluth Minn., being the culmination of the chase of a man wanted by the Russian government for a year and a half.

A year and a half ago the chief governor of the district of Kostrona and two subordinates in an important Russian town were foully murdered by, as strong circumstantial evidence showed, several officials of the same district. Both the murderers and the murdered men were in high position under the Czar, and one, at least, was held in great favor by the government. Neviska, who landed in Duluth a few days ago from the East, by boat, en route for Pembina, Dak., was a minor accessory and was wanted by the government for this and because he was the only man whose testimony would absolutely show the guilt of the three accused officials. He has been followed by the government emmissary for some months. Intercepted letters from his wife of Kastrona had given a clue, his wife and five children being imprisoned until such time as he should arrive and testify in behalf of the government. Neviska was approached by a heavy bearded stranger, who at once recognized him, accosted him in Russia and detained him in the name of the Czar. Neviska, realizing that he would fare better after reaching home if he made no trouble, and understanding the fact that he was wanted chiefly as a witness, did not demand extradition, and the couple left for the East on the Omaha train. At New York they will take a steamship and return to Russia. Neviska is a man of about medium size, well dressed, and apparently of more than ordinary intelligence.

A Juvenile Band of Thieves.

At Cincinnati, three boys not over 12 years old, were arrested near the exposition buildings, where they had been observed attempting to pick the pockets of strangers. They made a confession, and by their statements showed that they were members of a regularly organized band of young thieves. The gang was composed of Bundy Waynewright, the leader; Linsey Murphy, Walter Harris, Willie Madders and the prisoners. Their ages range from 11 to 18 years. Dixon one of the prisoners, stated that the gang had been picking pockets and topping tills all over the city. Several days ago they made a round and tapped the till of the drug store at the corner of Clark and Baymiller streets. From there they went to Freeman, near Oehler street, where they tapped the till of a grocer. From this point they went to the saloon at the corner of Richmond and Baymiller streets; and relieved the till of its contents. From here they worked northward, the next place being the saloon at Freeman avenue and Liberty street. Here they succeeded in getting several dollars in change. The gang, according to the prisoner's statements, even went so far as to organize a raid on the Second National Bank, at Ninth and Main streets. It was arranged that three of the gang should visit the place about closing time, and, while the two of them started a sham fight the third was to clamber over the iron railing or get through a door and grab a bundle of money. The boys visited the place twice but each time a blue coat happened to be in the neighborhood. After this attempt Waynewright, Murphy, Madders and Harris went to Nashville, Tenn., where they are at present. The case is one of the most peculiar ever brought to the attention of the police, and the breaking up of the gang will put an end to the petty stealing that has been going on for some time.

Perished in the Flood.

Rains and high waters prevailing in Virginia. A number of people were standing on one of the bridges of the Baltimore & Ohio spanning Wheeling creek at Wheeling, watching the swift flow of the waters bearing wrecked shanties and debris when the bridge suddenly gave way, precipitating all who were standing on it with the flood. The number of people who were on the bridge is not known, the estimates vary from twenty to thirty. Eight persons were rescued at a distance of a mile from the point where the bridge was located, and it is feared that from ten to twenty persons have perished. The city is intensely agitated over the disaster, and persons whose whereabouts cannot be ascertained are supposed to be among the number. At Caldwell's run, in the lower end of the city, four dwellings were swept away by the flood and eleven persons drowned. A young man named Homan, the wife and four children of Thomas Howley, three members of the family of John Steusil, a dairyman and two visitors at his house are among those believed to be drowned and it is feared more are to be included in the number. A substantial bridge on the suburban Elm Grove motor line, at Leatherwood, was washed away. Loss to the city will reach $50,000 and the damage to crops in the country is inestimable. The ruin wrought by the cloud burst out of town is awful and can only be ascertained definitely when means of communication are reported. A man named Keltz was washed away by Bogg's run, and he and his horse were drowned. Four lives are lost at Ringrove, five miles east of Wheeling.

A Dynamiter's Confession.

Frank Chleboun, the man who, with John Hronek and Frank Chepak, intended to murder Judge Garry, Judge Grinnell and Inspector Bonfield, of Chicago, has made a full and complete confession. The preceding day he had intimated that he was ready to tell all he knew and Inspector Bonfield went to hear his story. Through the interpreters, Chleboun went into the whole story from his first meeting with Hronek and Chepak. His confession was that Hronek had unfolded his plan for revenge and had told of a bomb which he (Hronek) had invented. It was small, no larger than a base ball, and was to be loaded with dynamite and bits of glass. It was denied by Chleboun that the plot was to murder the judges and inspector. That is, he heard of no such definite scheme.

About July 1 he was visited by Hronek, who brought him two bombs of the broken glass variety, and two sticks of dynamite from which he was to make bombs of gas pipe after the usual pattern. He had the stuff in his house for about a week and then grew so afraid that it would be discovered that he made away with it by throwing it in a privy vault. By his confession, it is understood, Chelboun has virtually secured immunity from prosecution. The two other men are still at large but they may be arrested at any time.

A Ghastly Story.

A horrible murder has occurred at Rawdon, a village some distance from Montreal. Early one morning, a Mrs. Gagnon was suddenly awakened by the noise of two vehicles that had suddenly come to a standstill opposite her residence. She inquired what was the matter and was cooly informed that they were bringing back the remains of an old man named Laverdure, whose brother lived in the house opposite. The vehicles drove away at an extraordinary speed and when the door was immediately opened, to her horror, Laverdure's inanimate body, that had been placed in a standing position alongside the door, suddenly fell with a crash to the floor. Laverdure's son, who lives close by, and a justice of the peace were both summoned. The latter sent for Dr. DeSahambault, who declared that life had been extinct for two hours. Who committed the deed is not known, although suspicion points to an Irishman, who boasted that same night at Joliette that he had just killed a French-Canadian. The Irishman cannot now be found. Inquest is being held.

Much Hard Money.

The director of the mint reports that for the year 1887 the product of gold amounted to $83,000,000, and of silver to $53,357,000. Coinage of the mints during the calendar year, $60,379,151. Bars of gold and silver manufactured, $65,338,595. Total metalic stock in the United States on the 1st of June, 1888: Gold coin, $592,129,702; gold bullion in the mints, $114,710,817. Total gold, $706,840,519. Silver dollars, $297,099,790; subsidiary coins, $76,400,842; silver bullion in the mints $10,154,905.

Total silver, $383,655,003. Total gold and silver, $1,090,496,056. Gold and silver used in the arts, $19,880,000. The coinage of the world during the calandar year 1887 was $124,998,797 gold and $133,502,066 silver. Reported consumption of gold in the industrial arts in the world for 1886 was $46,000,000 gold and $22,000,000 silver. Production of gold and silver in the world in 1886 was $98,764,285 gold and $126,457,500 silver.

Complaint having been made of irregularities and unfair dealings on the part of the trader at Devils Lake Agency, Dakota, Acting Indian Commissioner Upshaw states that his license of trader at that post expires on the 24th proximo and not be renewed. A person acceptable to the Indians and suitable in other respects will be licensed in his stead.

The New York legislature in extra session abolished the use of machinery in penal institutions of the state. Convicts will be employed only at hand labor upon goods required in the prison system.

Dr. Whiting of St. Thomas, Canada recently sentenced to two years imprisonment in Central prison and fifty lashes for criminal assult on his niece eleven years old received the first instalment of twenty-five lashes. He made a sorry exhibition of himself, uttering groans and cries all the time he was being flogged.

Rev. Edward Payson Roe died at his home at Corwan-on-the-Hudson. This country thus loses a popular and prolific novelist, whose writings were always wholesome in tone and interesting to the average reader. Mr. Roe died of neuralgia of the heart. He ate dinner with his family in the evening, and was bright and cheerful. After this he and his family and some visiting friends repaired to the library, where he read aloud some selections from Hawthorne. After reading about an hour he suddenly laid down the book with the remark: "That pain again. I shall have to stop reading." He left the room with a smile on his face. After reaching his bed-room most intense paroxysms of pain occurred at short intervals of an hour, when he died, surrounded by all his family.

Western Union Telegraph company officials say there is no foundation for the report that Jay Gould had purchased "John Mackay's cable" for $11,000,000.

Gen. Sheridan's mental faculties show slight and constant increase in activity. Otherwise his condition is not materially altered in the last three days. At the present hour his respiration is 28 and somewhat regular; pulse 98, perfectly regular and of good tension. His temperature is slightly abnormal.

FIFTIETH CONGRESS.

SENATE.

A number of bills were reported and placed on the calendar, among them being the sundry civil appropriation bill.

The bill to place John C. Fremont on the retired list as major general of the army, was taken up, and, after considerable discussion, passed by a vote of yeas 29; nays 21.

The conference report on the post office appropriation bill was received and on motion of Mr. Plumb the senate receded from its amendment known as the subsidy amendment.

HOUSE.

On motion of Mr. Clardy, of Missouri, the senate bill was passed authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Arkansas river at Cummings Landing, Ark.

The house then went into committee of the whole (Mr. Springer, of Illinois, in the chair) on the tariff bill, the internal revenue feature being pending.

Mr. Nicholls, of North Carolina, offered an amendment repealing all internal taxes. Rejected.

Mr. Sowden again offered his amendment abolishing the tax on fruit spirits.

After a long debate Mr. Sowden's amendment was rejected by a vote of 44 to 79.

At the night session of the house a bill was passed which appropriates $3,000 to erect a range lighthouse at Duluth. The bill authorizing the Winona & Southwestern Railway company to build a bridge across the Mississippi river at Winona, Minn., was reported favorably to the house.

There were two pending amendments, one offered by Mr. Wise, of Virginia, repealing the tax on cigars, cheroots and cigarettes, and one by Mr. Sowden, of Pennsylvania, abolishing the tax on spirits distilled from apples, peaches and other fruits.

Mr. Wise's amendment was defeated—43 to 78—and Mr. Sowden's was withdrawn.

SENATE.

A resolution instructing the committee on interstate commerce to inquire into the propriety of extending the interstate commerce law to telegraph and express companies, and to railroad companies not now subject to it, to sit during the recess of congress, and to appoint a clerk and stenographer, was offered by Mr. Cullom and referred to the committee on contingent expenses.

The senate then proceeded to the consideration of the senate bill for the formation and admission into the union of the state of Washington—to be composed of the present territory of Washington and part of Idaho territory.

Mr. Hoar interrupted the reading of the bill and gave notice, at the request of Mr. Frye, who has the fishery treaty in charge (in the absence of Mr. Sherman) that Mr. Frye would next Friday ask the senate to proceed with the consideration of the treaty, and would urge the senate to continue the discussion until it is ended, and then that the vote be taken without further delay.

HOUSE.

After unsuccessful efforts had been made by Mr. Stahlnecker, of New York, and Mr. Burrows, of Michigan, to secure consideration of bills for the erection of public buildings at Yonkers, N. Y., and Kalamazoo, Mich., the house went into committee of the whole, Mr. Springer, of Illinois, in the chair, on the tariff bill.

On behalf of the ways and means committee, Mr. McMillin of Tennessee, offered an amendment providing that the bond required to be given by cigar manufacturers shall be in such penal sum as the collector of internal revenue may require and not less than $100 with, an addition of $10 for every person proposed to be employed by such manufacturer. Adopted.

On motion of Mr. Tracey, of New York, primuline was stricken from the free list.

The first paragraph, which had been passed over informally—that placing cotton ties, or hoops, on the free list—was then considered.

SENATE

The house bill to accept and ratify an agreement with the Shoshone and Bannock Indians on Ft. Hull reservation, Idaho, was accepted and passed with an amendment.

The following bills were taken from the calendar and passed:

The house bill to provide for an aditional justice of the supreme court of Dakota (with an amendment).

The senate bill to prohibit members of territorial legislatures from holding certain offices.

The senate bill relieving municipalities in the territories in certain cases.

A bill passes the senate canceling contracts between the Western Union Telegraph Company and certain railroads.

HOUSE.

After a little routine business the house went into committee of the whole on the tariff bill, the pending amendment being that offered by Mr. Mills, of Texas, restoring the present rate of duty on tobacco.

Mr. Lafollette, of Wisconsin, thought that the motion made by Mr. Mills was not actuated by any sympathy for the domestic tobacco industry, but to help the democratic party to carry Connecticut.

Mr. Mills amendment was then agreed to without division.

On motion of Mr. Spinola, of New York, the present rate of duty was restored on pipes, pipe bowls and all smokers articles not otherwise provided for. The next few items was passed over quickly, and amendments restoring the present rate of duty on the various articles were voted down without division.

Mr. Springer, addressed the committee in regard to the bill. The debate would be remembered as the most remarkable which had ever occured in parliamentary history. It had awakened a lively interest, not only in our own country, but throughout the civilized world, and henceforth as long as our government should endure, it would be known as the great tariff debate of 1888.

He then proceeded to argue in support of the free wool feature of the bill.

The debate on the tariff bill closed with an animated political discussion, and then the committe rose and amid applause on the democratic side the bill was reported favorably to the house. Its consideration was then postponed until Saturday.

SENATE.

Senator Frye is authority for the statement that there will be at least a dozen more fishery speeches, most of which will be too long to be delivered in one day.

Senator Chandler offered a resolution declaring the recent appointment by the president, without the consent of the senate, of James B. Angell and William L. Putnam as special plenipotentiaries to make and sign the proposed fishery treaty with Great Britain was unwarrated by the constitution.

The following nominations have been confirmed: Hugh W. Weir of Pennsylvania, chief justice of the supreme court of Idaho; Roderick Rose, associate justice of Dakota; C. H. Berry of Minnesota, associate justice of Idaho; J. H. Keatly of Iowa, United States judge of Alaska; Col. Thomas L. Casey, chief of engineers, with rank of brigadier general. Postmaster: F. P. Smith, Faulkton. Dak.; Otto A. Kohler, Hutchinson, Minn.; Charles W. Main, Tracy, Minn.

HOUSE.

The deadlock over the river and harbor bill has finally ended. The conference report was agreed to by the house. The house committee on agriculture has not been able to come to an agreement on the subject of adulteration of lard. There are now two propositions before the committee; one is to recommit the bill to the subcommittee with instructions to take further testimony and to report to the full committee next winter. The other is to refer it back to the subcommittee with instructions to make an immediate recommendation of some kind to the full committee.

Congressman Lind made an argument before the commerce committee in support of the amendments to the interstate commerce bill, as proposed by the Business Men's Association of Minnesota. The object of the amendments is to make the law conform to the Minnesota state law.

The bill which some of the Republican members of the comittee on ways and means and other Republican members of the house early in the session thought it advisable to move as a substitute for the Mills bill will not be moved in the house, for the reason that a bill will be produced by the senate finance committee.

The new Australian act regarding Chinese immigration has received the royal assent. It prohibits the further naturalization of Chinese, and provides that all Chinese leaving the colony, except those who have been naturalized, shall on returning be subject to the act. The poll tax has been fixed at £100, and the penalty for evasion of the tax at £50. No Chinamen shall be allowed to engage in mining without the authority of the minister of mines.

Some miscreant broke a switch-lock at the Cobb switch near Beloit, Wis., and opened the switch, resulting in wrecking a freight train on the Mineral Point division of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway. Three cars were ditched and traffic was interrupted for half a day.

A Madman at Large!

He is a well-known citizen, and his nearest and dearest friends do not suspect his insanity. How do we happen to know about it? Listen; his appetite is gone, he is low-spirited, he don't sleep well, he has night-sweats, he is annoyed by a hacking cough. These symptoms are the forerunners of consumption and death, and yet he neglects them. Is it any wonder that we call him a madman? If you are his friend tell him to get a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery without delay. It will cure him if he takes it in time. It will not miraculously create new lungs when the old ones are nearly gone, but it will restore diseased ones to a healthy condition. Tell him about it, and warn him that in his case delay means death.

In the absence of himself and wife, W. D. Madigan's house at Albert Lea, Minn., was ransacked by burglars and $45 taken. There are suspicions as to who are the guilty parties, but as yet no arrests have been made.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria,

Ed Coombs, a farmer living near Winnebago City, Minn., in a fit of rage terribly beat his wife and compelled her to take poison with him. As yet both are living. It is thought by some that Coombs is insane.

Moxie.

Old men use Moxie the year round to keep their nervous system strong enough to support the functions of their body, and mend up the break down of a long business life. The young city bloods to remove the effects from liquors and a night of dissipation. A tumbler full will break a recent intoxication in an hour, with no ill effects of stimulation.

The Kansas state Prohibition convention nominated Rev. J. D. Botkin for governor.

It is so Everywhere.

E. B. Ball, Druggist at Hiattsville, Kan., has this to write about Allen's Lung Balsam: "It is the best selling throat and lung remedy, and gives general satisfaction. I cheerfully recommend it." Buy the large $1.00 bottle for Lung Diseases.

The pope, in a conversation, stated that he does not intend to leave Rome. He expressed regret that his last note to the Irish clergy in regard to the political situation should have been misinterpreted.

We call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Drake University and Callanan College, now under one management, found in this issue. This is now one of the strongest and justly most popular educational institutions in the country,

The Italian chamber of deputies, by a vote of 269 to 97, adopted the communial reform bill, which gives to 2,000,000 citizens the right to vote in local elections.

FOR IMPURITIES OF THE BLOOD TAKE Allen's Iron Tonic Bitters. All genuine bear the signature of J. P. Allen, Druggist, St. Paul.

A Winnipeg special says Gen. Middleton has telegraphed from Ottawa that he can place 5,000 men on the cars in twenty-four hours en route for Skeena if required. It is hoped here that the force on the way up will be able to quell the hostile reds. The militia have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness. It it generally thought that if the reports of the murder of Clifford and the constable are true, that ere this the Indians have massacred all the white people at the Hudson's bay fort.

True Economy

It is true economy to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla, for "100 Doses One Dollar," is original with and true only of this popular medicine. If you wish to prove this, buy a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and measure its contents. You will find it to hold 100 teaspoonfuls. Now read the directions, and you will find that the average dose for persons of different ages is less than a teaspoonful. This is certainly conclusive and unanswerable evidence of the peculiar strength and economy of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"I took Hood's Sarsaparilla for loss of appetite, dyspepsia, and general languor. It did me a vast amount of good, and I have no hesitancy in recommending it." J. W. WILLEFORD, Quincy, Ill.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

SICK HEADACHE

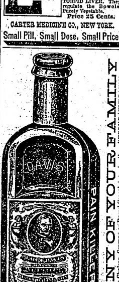
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills. They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side. TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.

Price 25 Cents.

CARTER MEDICINE CO., NEW YORK.

Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price.



IF ANY OF YOUR FAMILY are troubled with Cholera, Cramps or Bowel Complaint, give them PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER.

DO NOT FORGET

Perry Davis' Pain Killer

At this season of the year it is always well to keep it on hand.

Do not trifle with yourselves by testing untried remedies. Be sure you call for, and get the genuine PAIN-KILLER, as many worthless nostrums are attempted to be sold on the great reputation of this valuable medicine.

Directions accompany each bottle.

Price 25 cts., 50 cts. and $1 per bottle.

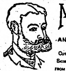
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

While ten men were fishing with a seine in the Platte river near David City, Nebraska, two of them, Charles Buchanan and W. S. Brewer, became entangled in the seine and were drowned.

The North Star Lung and Throat Balsam is a sure cure for Coughs and Colds.

Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in many cases removes the tumors. It is equally efficacious in curing all Skin Diseases. DR. SWAYNE & SON, Proprietors, Philadelphia. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT can be obtained of druggists. Sent by mail for 50 Cents.



MANLY PURITY AND BEAUTY

CUTICURA REMEDIES CURE SKIN AND BLOOD DISEASES FROM PIMPLES TO SCROFULA

NO PEN CAN DO JUSTICE TO THE ESTEEM IN which the CUTICURA REMEDIES are held by the thousands upon thousands whose lives have been made happy by the cure of agonizing, humiliating, itching, scaly, and pimply diseases of the skin, scalp, and blood, with loss of hair.

CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, and CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Beautifier, prepared from it, externally, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood Purifier, internally, are a positive cure for every form of skin and blood disease, from pimples to scrofula.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by the POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CO., Boston, Mass. Send for "How to Cure Skin Diseases."

Pimples, blackheads, chapped and oily skin prevented by CUTICURA SOAP.

Rheumatism, Kidney Pains and Weakness speedily cured by CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER, the only pain-killing plaster.

Tutt's Pills

After eating, persons of a bilious habit will derive great benefit by taking one of these pills. If you have been

DRINKING TOO MUCH,

they will promptly relieve the nausea,

SICK HEADACHE

and nervousness which follows, restore the appetite and remove gloomy feelings. Elegantly sugar coated.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

Office, 44 Murray St., New York.

GOLD is worth $500 per lb. Pettit's Eye Salve is worth $1000, but is sold at 25 cents a box by dealers.

$5 TO $8 A DAY. Samples worth $1.50 FREE. Lines not under the horse's feet. Write BREWSTER SAFETY REINHOLDER CO., Holly, Mich.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION

GLEK—HARMLESS. Positive Cure for falling Manhood. Gives solid health. $1 bottle, by drug's. Glek Co., 33 N. State st, Chicago

Insure your Horses and Cattle

IN THE

Sterling Live Stock Insurance Company

of Minneapolis, Minn. Capital, $100,000. Live stock insured against Death caused by Disease or Accident. Losses paid Promptly. Send for Circular. Agents wanted.

Principal Office, 308 Lumber Exchange, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

ST. PAUL SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.,

ST. PAUL, MINN.

School Furniture and School Supplies. Correspondence solicited from district officers, and those desiring an agency. Ask for Catalogue D.

A Summer Medicine

Summer's heat debilitates both nerves and body, and Headache, Sleeplessness, Nervous Prostration, and an "all-played-out" sensation prove that PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND should be used now. This medicine restores health to Nerves, Kidneys, Liver, and Bowels, and imparts life and energy to the heat prostrated system. Vacations or no vacations, PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND is the medicine for this season. It is a scientific combination of the best tonics, and those who use it begin the hot summer days with clear heads, strong nerves, and general good health. PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND is sold by all druggists, $1 a bottle. Six for $5.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Prop's, Burlington Vt.

And Hot Weather Invigorator

DWIGHT'S SALERATUS

TO MAKE

A DELICIOUS BISCUIT

ASK YOUR GROCER FOR

COW-BRAND SODA OR SALERATUS

AND TAKE NO OTHER.

S. E. OLSON & CO.'S

MAMMOTH WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DRY GOODS HOUSE,

213 AND 215 NICOLLET AVENUE, MINNEAPOLIS.

THE CHIEF BARGAIN HOUSE OF THE NORTHWEST.

Mail Orders receive our best attention. Shopping done through this department as advantageously as in person. Send for samples.

TOWER'S FISH BRAND SLICKER The Best Waterproof Coat.

The FISH BRAND SLICKER is warranted waterproof, and will keep you dry in the hardest storm. The new POMMEL SLICKER is a perfect riding coat, and covers the entire saddle. Beware of imitations. None genuine without the "Fish Brand" trade-mark. Illustrated Catalogue free. A. J. Tower, Boston, Mass.

"JONES HE PAYS THE FREIGHT"

Scales of all Sizes. 5 Ton Wagon Scale with Brass Tare Beam and Beam Box, $60. For free Price List of all kinds, address

JONES OF BINGHAMTON,

BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

The BUYERS' GUIDE is issued March and Sept., each year. It is an encyclopedia of useful information for all who purchase the luxuries or the necessities of life. We can clothe you and furnish you with all the necessary and unnecessary appliances to ride, walk, dance, sleep, eat, fish, hunt, work, go to church, or stay at home, and in various sizes, styles and quantities. Just figure out what is required to do all those things COMFORTABLY, and you can make a fair estimate of the value of the BUYERS' GUIDE, which will be sent upon receipt of 10 cents to pay postage.

MONTGOMERY WARD & CO.

111-114 Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

If you want a full and impartial description of Washington Territory, its climate, Soil, Cities and Resources, Advantages and Disadvantages, with a large map of the Territory. Send twenty five cents to

MONROE & RUMLEY,

17 Union Block, Seattle, W. T.

DR. WINCHELL'S TEETHING SYRUP

Is the best medicine for all diseases incident to children. It regulates the bowels; assists dentition; cures diarrhœa and dysentery in the worst forms; cures canker sore mouth; is a certain preventative of diptheria; quiets and soothes all pain; invigorates the stomach and bowels; corrects all acidity, and gives energy and tone to the entire system; will cure griping in the bowels and wind colic. Do not fatigue yourself or child with sleepless nights, when it is within your reach to cure your child and save your own strength. Prepared only by the Emmert Proprietary Co., Chicago, Ill.

Sold by all Druggists at 25 cts. Per Bottle.

It will be to your advantage when writing advertisers to say you saw their advertisement in this paper.

WESLEY NEILL,

GRAIN AND PRODUCE COMMISSION MERCHANT, and wholesale dealer in Butter, Eggs, Cheese, Dried and Green Fruits, 310 Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis.

To introduce, will send a pair of splendid (22x28 inch) 8-Colored IDEAL CRAYON-LITHO. PORTRAITS Cleveland-Thurman or Harrison-Morton with Im. Oak Frame border for 5oc. Geo. P. Houston, Cincinnati, O. Send 2c. for List of Campaign requisites. Agents Wanted.

PENSIONS Can be Increased

In many cases where deserved. Discharges procured. Bounty collected. Latest law and pamphlet free. PATRICK O'FARRELL, Attorney, Washington.

WEAK MEN and WOMEN can quickly cure themselves of Wasting Vitality, Lost Manhood from youthful errors, &c., quietly at home. 32 page Book on All Private Diseases sent free, (sealed.) Perfectly reliable. 30 years experience. Dr. D. H. LOWE, Winsted, Conn.

PENS USE THE BEST. Stationers keep them. Standard quality, all styles. Sample doz. 10 cents by mail. 26 John St. New York. ESTERBROOK.

ASTHMA CURED

German Asthma Cure never fails to give immediate relief in the worst cases, insures comfortable sleep; effects cures where all others fail. A trial convinces the most skeptical. Price 50c. and $1.00, at Druggists or by mail. Sample FREE for stamp. Dr. R. SCHIFFMAN, St. Paul, Minn.

DRAKE UNIVERSITY AND CALLANAN COLLEGE

Open next Session Sept. 11th. Literary, Normal, Commercial, Musical, Art, Bible, Law and Medical Departments. 80 able Instructors; Facilities Superior; Expenses Low; Surroundings Pleasant. Address G. T. Carpenter, Chancellor, Des Moines, Ia.

THAYER'S Catarrh Cure! A New Departure.

This treatment for Catarrh introduces entirely a new system. The nasal passages are thoroughly cleansed, the living germs destroyed, the mucus membrane restored. If thoroughly used it will cure any case of Nasal, Throat or Bronchial Catarrh. Prepared by the U. S. DISPENSARY CO., Minneapolis, Minn.

BIG G. Cures in 1 TO 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture. Mf'd only by the Evans Chemical Co. Cincinnati, Ohio. Trade Mark.

I prescribe and fully endorse Big G as the only specific for the certain cure of this disease. G. H. INGRAHAM, M. D., Amsterdam, N. Y.

We have sold Big G for many years, and it has given the best of satisfaction. D. R. DYCHE & CO., Chicago, Ill.

$1.00. Sold by Druggists.

MARVELOUS MEMORY DISCOVERY.

Wholly unlike artificial systems. Cure of mind wandering. Any book learned in one reading. Classes of 1087 at Baltimore, 1005 at Detroit, 1500 at Philadelphia, 1113 at Washington, 1216 at Boston, large classes of Columbia law students, at Yale, Wellesley, Oberlin, University of Penn., Michigan University, Chautauqua, &c., &c. Endorsed by Richard Proctor, the Scientist, Hons. W. W. Astor, Judah P. Benjamin, Judge Gibson, Dr. Brown, E. H. Cook, Prin. N. Y. State Normal College, &c. Taught by correspondence. Prospectus post free from Prof. LOISETTE, 237 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

IF SOME TRUE MAIDEN'S LOVE.

All worldly dreams I would resign,
Nor ever long for hidden lore
If some true maiden's love were mine.

If but two eyes of blue divine
Could meet my glance forever more,
All worldly dreams I would resign.

The clouds would show a silver line
And rainbow tints would hue them o'er,
If some true maiden's love were mine.

A jasmine tree should droop and twine
And peep within our cottage door,
And worldy dreams I would resign.

Our gems should be the dewdrop's shine
Our music float from larks that soar,
If some true maiden's love were mine.

Where is she now? She gives no sign,
That loyal heart leal to the core!
All worldly dreams I would resign
If some true maiden's love were mine.
Samuel Minturn Peck.

DISEASE FROM BEASTS.

The fact that many of the diseases which affect animals are capable of being contracted by man is no longer a matter for discussion. We see evidences of its truth on all sides and we make use of the knowledge in order to protect ourselves from other diseases to which mankind is subject. Thus we take the matter engendered by the cowpox and by inoculating ourselves with it protect ourselves from that great scourge of former days—smallpox. It is well known, too, that Pasteur asserts his ability to secure the immunity of the human subject from hydrophobia by inoculating with attenuated hydrophobia virus, but it is by no means yet proved that his efforts have in a single case been successful. The late Mr. Darwin relied upon the fact that animals are subject to many of the diseases which are met with in mankind for one of his chief arguments in favor of the identity of origin of man and those below him in the scale of creation. Thus not only hydrophobia and smallpox, but glanders, cholera and certain skin diseases, can be communicated from animals to man. In addition to these strictly contagious affections, the lower animals are subject to other diseases to which man is liable. Among these are consumption, catarrh, apoplexy, inflamation of the bowels and certain affections of the brain and spinal cord, causing convulsions, tremor and paralysis.

PARASITIC INFECTION.

Among the most important diseases which we contract from the lower animals are those which are due to parasites of various kinds. As these sometimes produce fatal results and as they are all more or less preventable I propose to restrict what I have to say at this time to the consideration of some of those diseases which are due to the presence of various organic beings which man derives from the domestic animals which minister to his wants.

Most farmers are familiar with what is called measled pork, but few persons outside of the medical profession know in what the condition really consists. The general belief is that it is a disase similar to the measles to which the human race is subject. With that disease, however, it has no analogy. A hog that is measly is inhabited, so to speak, by numerous organisms, called in learned phraseology cysticercus, or, in the vernacular, bladder worm, which name is due to the fact that its body consists of a vesicle which is large enough to be visible to the naked eye. This body has a comparatively long neck and a round head to which numerous hooks are attached, by means of which it can adhere to any part of the body in which it may settle. Besides the hog it is frequently met with in sheep. The chief danger to man arising from the existence of this parasite is due to the fact of its predilection for the hog. It is destroyed by a temperature of 170 degrees Fahrenheit and as we do not often eat our mutton without first cooking it (although mutton hams dried and smoked are sometimes taken without being cooked) we are not very liable to get these organisms into our system from this source. Certain classes of our population, however, are in the habit of eating pork which has been subjected to no more thorough cooking than such as has been afforded by the smoke house, and this is never sufficient to kill the cysticercus. As a consequence the animal obtains a lodgement in the human body and if it is content to make its way to the muscles and remain there quietly it does little or no harm. But its habits appear to be migratory, and hence it not frequently makes excursions into the eye or the brain or other important organs, giving rise to serious symptoms and frequently causing death. It appears to have a particular liking for the brain and especially for that most important part of this organ—the gray matter. Epilepsy, acute mania, imbecility and stupor are the consequence of its presence and death usually ends the series of morbid disturbances.

A great difficulty in the way of the successful treatment of diseases caused by cysticercus is due to the fact that we have no means of recognizing their presence in the brain until we come to make a post-mortem examination, the symptoms which they produce not being distinguishable during life from those caused by the morbific factors. It has, however, been removed from the eye by a surgical operation, but we are not warranted in the present state of our knowledge in perforating the skull in a search for these animals. Prevention, however, is very easy. In the first place, the pork intended to be eaten should be carefully examined and, if even if one or two cysticerci should escape observation, proper cooking would inevitably deprive them of vitality. It is by our own neglect, therefore, that they ever obtain lodgment in the human body.

NOT A PLEASANT FELLOW.

Among the earliest known of human parasites the tapeworm occupies a distinguished place. Two of these animals evince their predilection for man as a habitation. Both of these species have heads and long segmented bodies, but they are not equally troublesome, for while one is armed with either two or four suckers and with a crown of small hooks by means of which it fastens itself to its dwelling place and is with difficulty dislodged, the other is unarmed and is therefore more easily gotten rid of. The head of either of these varieties is the part from which the rest of the body is developed, and therefore, if all the segments should be expelled, so long as the head remained new segments and therefore a new body would be produced.

The history of the development of the tapeworm shows that here again were man sufficiently careful its existence within his body would be impossible; for it is generally, if not invariably, though eating flesh infested with the embryos and which is not sufficiently cooked that they make their entrance into his system. From what exact source the animals in question obtain the eggs in which the embryos are contained is not definitely known, but when they do get into their stomachs the egg covering is broken the embryos are set free and, not finding a congenial house, make their way at once to various parts of the body, especially the muscles and flesh. There they remain quiescent, reaching no further stage of development until they are eaten by man. Then they awaken into activity, for they now find for the first time in their existence the food which is necessary to enable them to arrive at maturity.

The armed tapeworm comes to us through the pig, while the unarmed is acquired from eating the raw or imperfectly cooked flesh of the ox. This latter is frequently introduced into the system through the grated or finely cut raw beef which is given to the sick persons. It is said that in Abyssinia every person has his tapeworm, because the people of that country prefer to eat their beef in a raw state.

THE TRICHINA THE WORST.

But of all the parasites to which man is subject the trichina is the worst and the most to be feared, for not only does it cause almost invariably the death of those so unfortunate as to be its subject, but through it the commerce of nations is to a great extent impeded. Here again the flesh of the pig is the medium through which it enters the human system, and as the American hog is either justly or unjustly regarded by European governments as being above all others liable to be infected, they unite to exclude our pork from their territories. How the trichina get into the hog was for a long time a matter of great doubt, but the fact appears to be now pretty well established that the pig gets them from his fondness for the flesh of the rat, in which animal these parasites abound. Where the rats get them is still unknown. Both in the rat and the hog the trichina remain undeveloped. They lie incisted in the flesh with a potential vitality which would never be called into the body of man. There they not only develop, but they at once become migratory and penetrate almost every organ of the body. When it is considered that a single drachm weight may contain 40,000 trichina embryos we may form some idea of the number that might enter the human body from even a single meal of raw or insufficiently cooked pork.

It is thus seen that it was not without reason that Moses and other lawgivers have prohibited pork as an article of food. It is not to be supposed that they knew anything of the cysticercus, the tapeworm or the trichina, but it is quite certain that they had observed cases of disease arise from the eating of pork and they therefore very wisely made the hog what nature had already made it, an unclean animal.

William A. Hammond.

That Swordfish.

Although our early instructors do their best to teach us the difference between "subject" and "object," it seems that one is likely to become confused on that head, even after he is old enough to "speak in meetin'." The following anecdote told by a country "character," furnishes one of many points of interest in "Five Hundred Dollars:"

Uncle Cephas Bascom was a shoemaker, and he never went to sea much, only to anchor his skiff in the narrows abreast of his house, and to catch a mess of scup, or to pole a load of salt hay from Sanquitt Island. But he used to visit his married sister, in Vermont, and up there they knew he came from the seaboard, and they used to call him Captain Bascom. So one time when he was there, they had a Sabbath school concert, and nothing would do but Captain Bascom must talk to the boys, and tell a sea-yarn, and draw a moral.

Now, Uncle Cephas was rather pleased with his name of Captain Bascom, and wanted to justify it. So he tried to prepare something that would sound nautical. It seems he had heard a summer boarder talk in Sabbath school at Northhaven. He told how a poor boy minded his mother, and then got to tend store and then kept store himself, and the speaker added:

"That poor boy now stands before you."

So Uncle Cephas thought him up a similar yarn. He had never spoken in meeting before, and he hemmed and hawed some, but he got on quite well while he was telling about a certain poor boy who, when he grew up, was out at sea in an open boat, and saw a great swordfish making for the boat, and bound to stave right through her and sink her—and how this man took an oar, and gave it a swing and broke the critter's sword square off, and then Uncle Cephas—he was a little flustered by this time,—stopped short, and waved his arms, and said:

"Boys, what do you think? That swordfish now stands before you!"

A POEM OF PASSION.

I love to dream when I take my sleep
Of a maiden I once adored:
How we used to wander beside the deep
Where the mighty billows roared,
And gather shells from the shining sands
The shells that lay thickly there—
And none were white as her lovely hands,
And none so smooth as her hair.

I love to dream of her angel face
And her teeth like a row of pearls,
Her swan-like neck with its queenly grace
Half hidden by golden curls;
And there was one night—it was long ago—
That I asked her to be my bride,
There came to her cheek a crimson glow,
And she shed a tear as she sighed.

And my heart beat fast with a weird delight,
For I knew what the answer'd be,
And I seized her fingers and held them tight
And danced in a lover's glee;
But her voice was low and her eyes were sad
And her beauteous brow was grave,
And she muttered, "You'll make my husband mad
If he hears you go wild and rave."

THE END OF A RIVALRY.

I spent two days of last week at N——, one of those pretty, thriving, picturesque towns which dot the magnificent and bold landscape of western Pennsylvania, and which are miniature cities in the energy, progressiveness, education and models of advanced municipal regulations. It was a revisit to the place, for I had lived there for a year several years ago, attached to the single newspaper of the town, which newspaper has in the meantime advanced from a somewhat uncertain weekly publication to the dignity of a daily, with a certain toning down of the pictorial advertising columns, which resembled nothing so much as a half-sheet circus poster, and a corresponding advance in its news and general reading features. I found that change, the epitaph of all the years everywhere, had been busy with the people here as elsewhere, and one of these changes, completing a romance which was well advanced when I quitted the town in 1873, enables me to tell the story entire.

During my residence there my most intimate friend, and the one whose house I most frequented, was Dr. Thomas Wood, who had moved to N—— from Philadelphia upon the death of his wife ten years before, bringing with him his little daughter May, who, at the time of which I write, had grown up to be the acknowledged beauty of the town. The house they occupied was an old-fashioned mansion in the center of the town, which Dr. Wood had modernized by the addition of a huge bay window that was always filled with geraniums, roses, and myrtles, that, with a couple of small orange trees, were the admiration of the neighborhood. Not that Dr. Wood had any horticultural tastes. On the contrary, he was very severe on the devotion of minds to such trifles as flowers, fancy work, music, and dancing; but then blue-eyed May differed with him, and told him so in the sweetest, sauciest, most lovable manner imaginable.

Upon the opposite side of the street there had just been completed, at the time of which I speak a row of houses of an unusually imposing appearance, which were dignified by the high-sounding name of Maple terrace, that being the kind of tree that was most conspicuous by its absence in the immediate locality. They were all to let, although the last finishing touches had been put on them in the way of paint and paper, and they wanted nothing but human beings to assume a civilized appearance.

Calling one afternoon at the doctor's house, I saw evidences of life in Maple terrace, and upon inquiry of May ascertained that two of the houses had been taken.

"Papa is quite pleased," said she, "because you know, he looks upon those twelve houses as twelve new patients."

"But," said I, "have you not read the advertisement, 'healthy and airy situation, imposing neighborhood, and only one physician?"

"Oh, yes," smiled May; "but sickness, I am sorry to say, is apt to run about at some time or other, even in airy situations."

Two days afterward another bill was taken down, and in my strong interest in the terrace, which I had seen grow up under my eyes, I called to congratulate May.

"Oh, yes," she exclaimed, with unusual eagerness, "and I think by a family that will prove a valuable addition to the neighborhood, for a very handsome and distinguished-looking young gentleman drove up there this morning and spent an hour in looking over the house, and I suppose he has taken it."

It was several days before I saw her again, and then she caught me by the hand drew me rapidly to the window, and with a semi-tragic expression, she pointed to the house over the way. I looked, and, to my astonishment, saw upon the shutters two signs, painted in very large gold letters, Edmund Rand, M. D.

"A rival, indeed," said I, "promising a Montague and Capulet state of things. But perhaps a Romeo and Juliet may be found to terminate it."

"Don't laugh," replied May, gravely; "papa is vexed and indignant. Imagine two physicians in this locality! It's all the fault of that advertisement. Some scheming young man has seen it, and, finding no hope of practice elsewhere, has come here. I suppose he is as poor as a rat."

At this instant three wagons full of new furniture stopped in front of Dr. Rand's door and May absolutely turned pale upon discovering that it was of the most elegant description.

"The wretch has got a young wife, too!" she exclaimed, as a piano and harp came to view; and then she added, rising, "this will never do; they must be put down at once; they are strangers in the neighborhood; we are well known. I have a plan which I think will effectually dispose of the interlopers. I will give an evening reception and ball, and will immediately prepare a list of all the people I wish to invite."

Laughing at the wicked ingenuity of the plan by which the enemy was to be crushed by the mere force of numbers of her allies, I assisted in preparing the list, which already had become a very long one, when Miss Wood said, after a few moments of deep reflection:

"One name more must be added, they must be invited."

"Who, May?" I exclaimed, in a tone of genuine surprise.

"Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Rand," replied May, in a triumphant tone, while I was speechless from astonishment.

The ball took place to the admiration of all N——. It was a splendid affair—in fact it was the greatest of the kind which N—— had ever known. Mr. and Mrs. Rand came, and were received with cold politeness by both father and daughter. The young man was good-looking, intelligent, and possessed of that kind of manner, which betokens familiarity with refined and cultivated society. Miss Rand, his sister, was a charming girl of 20, who seemed rather amused at the manner of Dr. Wood and his daughter, but said nothing.

Young Rand's only revenge for the coldness manifested by May was asking her to dance, which was certainly vexatious, for his tone was so pleasing and his manner so courteous that she could not but feel pleased—when she wanted to be irate, distant, and stately.

They danced together several times and, to the astonishment of many friends of the young lady, and of myself in particular, they went down to supper the best of best friends, laughing and joking like old acquaintances. Next day, however, she resumed her original coldness of manner when the brother and sister called to pay their respects. She was simply polite, and no more, and after two or three words they retired, Miss Rand becoming as stiff and formal as her new acquaintance. From that day May became restless and discontented, seating herself constantly in the bay window and watching the opposite house to see if patients came or if Edmund Rand made any attempt to call about in the neighborhood and introduce himself.

One day Dr. Wood had been called to a distance to see a patient seriously ill, and May sat at the window enjoying her usual occupation, when suddenly she discovered a boy running toward the house. She recognized him as a boy employed by one of the principal families of the town—a family with a host of children, one of whom at least was constantly in bed from fits of indigestion.

The boy rang violently at the bell and hastily inquired, upon the door being opened by the servant, for Dr. Wood.

"He is not at home."

"He will be home directly," said May, advancing quickly.

"Oh, but we can't wait! There's little Peter been and swallowed a marble!" and away he rushed across the street, evidentaly under instructions, to the hated rival's house.

May retreated to the sitting-room and cried with vexation; the enemy had gained an entrance into the camp; for if this family became his patients others would be sure to follow; and she looked out of the window again just in time to see Edmund Rand hurrying down the street.

But more was to come.

May belonged to a Thursday evening whist party, where whist was the exception and dancing the rule. On the Thursday evening following Dr. Rand's first call she attended one, when, horror of horrors! there was that gentleman and his sister; and worse than that when a quadrille was being formed, he, of all others, came to invite her to dance. May was a lady, and as such could not refuse, so she took her place in the set.

Despite herself that evening she was very much pleased with him. He was well informed, had traveled extensively, was full of taste and feeling, and and conversed with animation and originality. He sought every opportunity of addressing himself to her, and found these opportunities without much difficulty. For several Thursdays the same thing occurred, for he was getting very popular and was being invited everywhere.

One morning the father and daughter were alone at breakfast. May began to like her bay window better than ever, and when the young doctor came out she always returned his bow with heightening color that may have been the reflection of the roses that surrounded her. Dr. Wood had been called out at a very early hour, and had returned to breakfast in not the best of humors.

"I suppose I shall die in the poorhouse," said he, as he buttered his toast with alarming irritability. "This Rand is getting all the practice. He got three of my patients yesterday."

"Oh, papa, replied May, gently, "I don't think he has got a dozen altogether."

"A dozen! Well, that is a dozen lost to me, miss. It's proof positive that people think me old—worn out—useless."

"Nonsense, papa," said May; "N—— is increasing in population every day, and for every one he gets you get two."

"Indeed!" replied the doctor, with considerable animation. "It looks to me as if you rather sided with my rival."

The bell rang at this moment and the servant announced Dr. Rand.

Dr. Wood had no time to make any remark ere the young man entered the room, bowing politely to the old gentleman and his daughter, who looked as confused as her father looked surprised. The young doctor looked both handsome and happy—the old doctor thought, triumphant.

"Pardon, sir, for disturbing you at this early hour, but your numerous calls leave me scant opportunity. My errand will doubtless surprise you, but I will be frank and open. I wish to ask your permission, Dr. Wood, to pay my addresses to your daughter."

"To do what, sir?" thundered the old doctor in a towering passion. "Are you not satisfied with trying to take from me my practice, but that you must now rob me of my child? I will never consent to give her to you."

"But, sir," said Edmund Rand, turning to May, "I have your daughter's permission to make this request. I told her of my intentions last night and she authorized me to say that she quite aproves of them."

"May," exclamed her father in a stern voice, "is that true?"

"My dear papa, I am in no hurry to get married and will never marry against your wish, but will never marry any one else than Edmund."

"Ungrateful girl!" muttered Dr. Wood, and the next moment he sank back in his chair with an attack of disease of the heart to which he had long been subject.

"Open the window," said the young man, perparing with promptitude and earnestness to administer the necessary remedies; "be not alarmed—it is not a dangerous attack."

May obeyed her lover promptly and quietly, quite aware of the necessity of self-possession and coolness in a case like the present. In half an hour, Dr. Wood was lying in a large, airy bedroom, and the young man had left, at the request of May, to attend a patient of her father's. It was late at night ere he had finished his double rounds and was able to be at the bedside of the father of May, who, with his sister by her side, sat watching.

"He sleeps soundly," said she, in a low tone, as he entered.

"Yes, and is doing well," replied Edmund. "I'll answer for his being up and stirring to-morrow, if he desires it."

"But will it not be better for him to rest some days?"

"Better, perhaps; but what will his patients do without him?"

"You can attend to them as you have done to-day," said May, pleadingly.

"My dear girl, you who know me can trust me with your father's patients; you know that when he is able to be about I would relinquish them unhesitatingly. But you must be aware that your father entertains a different opinion of me, and for him to discover that I was attending his patients would be to retard his recovery."

"No, sir!" came in a remarkably strong voice from the bed; "I shall not be about for a month, and after making me take to my bed the least you can do is to attend to my patients."

"If you wish it, sir——"

"I insist upon it," said the old doctor; "and to prevent any opposition you can say we are going into partnership."

"But——"

"If you want my daughter," continued the old doctor gruffly, "you must do as I tell you. If you wish to be my son-in-law you must be my partner, work like a horse, slave night and day, while I smoke my pipe, drink my grog, and enjoy myself generally."

"My dear sir," exclaimed the young man, "you overwhelm me."

"Dear papa!" said May.

"Yes, dear papa," muttered old Dr. Wood. "A pretty girl you are; give a party to crush the interloper; cry when he gets his first patient; watch him from the window like a cat watches a mouse, and then—want to marry him."

"But, papa, is not this the surest way to end the opposition?"

"Yes; because we cannot crush him we take him as a partner; never heard of such a thing," grumbled the old gentleman. "It is a nice return for the rearing of children to have them take part with your enemies."

"Nobody made any reply to this and after a few more faint attempts at faultfinding the old doctor fell asleep.

My first call upon my arrival last week at N——was at Dr. Wood's house, and the first thing to attract my attention when I came in sight of it was May in the bay window.

"At your place," I said, as we warmly shook hands.

"I am very seldom here now," she said.

"Why?"

"Because I live over the way," she replied, with a happy smile.

"Over the way?" questioned I, with a strange obtuseness.

"Yes. But, of course you know I am May Rand now, and here are the new flowers in the bay window," she added, pulling out from their retreat behind the flower boxes three young, fresh faces that were staring eagerly down the street at grandpa, who had just loomed in view.

I left N—— the day following, very happy over the delightful denoument of this romance that began by rivalry.
—New York Mail and Express.

Army Panics.

Napier, in his "Peninsular War," devotes but some eight or nine lines to an account of the most remarkable recorded incident of this nature, in which Robert Crauford's celebrated light division—consisting of those three distinguished regiments, the fifty-third, the fifty-second and the ninety-fifth—were seized and put to flight by an attack of fear so sudden and causeless that the historian makes no attempt whatever to ascribe a reason for it. "The light division," he writes, "encamped in a pine wood, where happened one of those extraordinary panics attributed in ancient times to the influence of a god. No enemy was near, no alarm given, when suddenly the troops, as if seized with a frenzy, started from sleep and disappeared in every direction; nor was their any possibility of allaying this strange terror, until some persons called out that the enemy's cavalry were among them, when the soldiers mechanically ran together, and the illusion was dissipated." It seems odd that so diffuse a writer should have seen fit to say so little of so extraordinary an occurrence, more especially when we remember that this same light division was the flower of the British army in the peninsula, and that he writes of it not many pages before "as composed of three regiments singularly fitted for difficult service. Long and carefully disciplind by Sir John Moore, they came to the field with such a knowledge of arms that six years of warfare could not detect a flaw in the system, nor were they overmatched in courage and skill."

A Good Story on Mark Twain.

New York Letter.

I was told recently a rather amusing story at the expense of Mark Twain—and the same story is already a standing joke in society. Not long ago the humorist was traveling in the country, and stopped one evening at a house presided over by an elderly woman. He was shown to a room somewhat bare of ornament and furniture, yet slept peacefully until morning. When morning came and he arose, he became mindful of the fact that although he had provided himself with a tooth brush, he had forgotten his tooth powder. He consoled himself with the thought that there must be tooth powder lying somewhere about. After a brief search, he discovered something in a small box on the mantel, which certainly resembled tooth powder. At any rate, he used it vigorously on his teeth and found it satisfactory. When he got down stairs he apologized to his hostess for using her tooth powder. She appeared surprised. "What tooth powder?" she inquired blandly. "It was on the mantel," Mark replied. "On the mantel?" she repeated. "Yes, in a small box. It was excellent," he declared. "Good gracious!" she ejaculated. "That wasn't tooth powder." "What was it?" asked Mark, now slightly alarmed. "Why, that was auntie," said she. (It seems that "auntie" had been cremated.)

FEEDING THE COW.

Slowly along the shaded lane,
Cropping the grass from side to side,
Here comes the pretty brindle cow
Home, at eventide.

She stops at the garden gate and calls—
"Oh, run, little boy! and bring to me
Some of those apples, round and ripe,
I see lying under the tree."

Little golden head his apron fills
With the ruddy apples, juicy and sweet,
Brindle loves to take with her long, rough tongue
From his dimpled hand and eat.

Tiptoe he stands, with eager face,
Holding his bulging apron tight,
As she gently takes the apple he gives
He laughs with fresh delight.

And now she has eaten the very last,
And "just one more," and "one little one more;"
Then he waits and watches her as she walks
Through the open barnyard door.

It was years ago—yet I often see,
When the summer's day is nearly done,
My baby-boy feeding the pretty cow,
In the light of the setting sun.
—Mrs. Richard Grant White.

FRIEND RUTH'S PREJUDICE.

BY HELEN FOREST GRAVES.

Woman's Journal.

A farm! Seventy acres! All of our own? Is thee sure, Patience, that thee isn't dreaming?"

Little Patience Plumb winked her bright blue eyes again, to make sure that she was certainly and indubitably wide awake.

"No, Aunt Ruth," said she, "I am not dreaming. Read the letter thyself."

And Aunt Ruth, setting her spectacles across her nose, took the folded paper from Patience's hand and slowly spelled out the words which, heard from other lips, had such a fabulous sound.

Yes, it was true. Guarded about with legal phrases, there was the intelligence that she, Ruth Plumb, who wove rag-carpets for a livelihood, and contentedly ate mush and milk when she could not get beef and potatoes, was a landed proprietress now of a farm up in Rhode Island, which had belonged to one Ezra Nutting, a third or fourth cousin whom she had never seen.

Little Patience looked at the elder woman.

"Aunt Ruth," said she, isn't thee going out to see it? And mayn't I go with thee?"

"Thee may go with me, little Pay," said Miss Plumb, smiling; "but as for going out to see it, railway journeys cost money, and when we go we shall stay."

"Will thee live there, Aunt Ruth?" cried Patience, with sparkling eyes.

Miss Plumb looked pathetically around the little chamber, whose one window was bedimmed by a monster back wall.

"I have always longed for a country home, Patience," she said. "Thee has always lived in the city; thee does not know how a person feels who has once stood on the hills and heard the free wind roaring through the pine trees."

So the loom was stopped, and the little cupboard door locked, and the two women went to Nebasset, near which rocky promontory, on the edge of the sound, was situated the Nutting estate. Not much of an estate, after all. A queer little brown house, like a discolored mushroom, a huddle of barns, and a stone cellar hewn into the rocky side of a beetling hill, in which were arranged rows of barrels on a sort of stone shelf.

Miss Plumb peered inquiringly at these barrels as, escorted by David Lorn, a handsome sunburned young giant who occupied the next farm she went over the property for the first time.

"What are these, Friend David?" she asked doubtfully.

"Guess likely they'er cider," said David Lorn. "Old Nutting, he made the best cider for twenty miles around."

"Cider!" repeated Miss Plumb.

"Didn't you know that this was a famous cider farm?" said David. "Didn't you see the orchard of apple trees on the hill?"

"Yes, I saw them," said Miss Plumb, "but I did not realize their meaning. I think, Friend David, thee may pull out the corks—

"Bungs, we call 'em," gently corrected Lorn.

"Bungs, if thee prefers that title, and let the baleful fluid flow away. I am prejudiced with an exceeding prejudice against intoxicating liquors."

"There ain't no harm in cider," protested David Lorn.

"Touch not, taste not, handle not!" said Miss Plumb, firmly. "As to the apple orchard, it is not for me to criticise the kindly fruits of the earth, but I could wish that they had been pasture fields or potato patches, or something less deleterious than they are." She walked quietly on. David Lorn was opening his mouth to remonstrate, when Patience gently beckoned him to desist.

"My Grandfather Plumb died of delirium tremens," she whispered. "Aunt Ruth cannot forget that. Thee will have to let her have her own way."

David Lorn whistled a low whistle. "But anyhow," said he, "there'll be a deal of good vinegar lost it all this runs to waste. I say, Miss Plumb."

"I would prefer thee to call me Friend Ruth," said the old lady mildly.

"It sounds pretty familiar, don't it?" apprehensively observed David. "But if you say so, so it shall be. I say, Friend Ruth, if I'll go bail that this 'ere shan't none of it be used for nothin' but vinegar to be sold by the gallon, would you let me hev it at market price? It's a wicked sin to waste the Lord's good gifts."

"Thee is not so far wrong, Friend David," said Miss Plumb. "Yes I think I may trust thee."

"It'll make a first-chop, vinegar," observed David, scientifically testing it with a straw.

Little Patience was delighted with the poultry yard and cow house. A sturdy, shaggy pony, who shook his head at them over the railing of his stall, was duly admired; and then David lighted a fire in the big, black-throated chimney of the old farmhouse.

"It's cold weather, even if the fust hard frosts haven't come yet," said he. "And the house needs airin' up. An' I guess Miss Plumb—Friend Ruth, I mean—you and Friend Patience here had better come over and sleep at our house to-night, if you don't want to catch cold. To-morrer the house'll be in better livin' order. And my sister Calphurnia'll be proper glad to see you."

It chanced that between repairs, airing and adding to the arrears of furniture, Friend Ruth and her niece remained at the Lorn homestead for a week, during which time Miss Calphurnia, began, under Friend Ruth's directions, to weave a new rag carpet, and mapped out a crazy quilt as designated by little Patience.

David Lorn, who, in his way, was no contemptible carpenter, made a strong kitchen table for the strangers, put a corner cupboard in the living room, and screwed up hooks, shelves, and brackets innumerable, here, there, and everywhere, to suit Patience's fancy in the old house.

"But after all," said the little Quakeress, "it isn't as pleasant at Nutting farm, shut in by all those crooked apple trees, as it is here. I wish we were going to live here."

"I wish so, too, with all my heart!" cried hospitable Calphurnia. "Don't you, David?"

"Don't I, though!" said David.

And Patience, chancing to look suddenly up, caught the sparkle of his frank brown eyes fixed full on her face. She turned pink all over, her own eyes fell, and she did not speak again all the evening. Her silence was not noticed, however Friend Ruth, as it happened, was descanting in her soft, slow way on a new pattern in rag carpet weaving, and Patience took refuge under the gentle murmur of her words.

The two Quakeresses had been nearly a month at the Nutting farm, and the dreary place had gradually begun to assume something of a homelike look, when one evening David Lorn came over across the sere stretches of meadow land.

"Calphurnia's sent you a dried peach pie," said he, carefully setting down something in a napkin. "As for me, I moved them barrels of cider today."

"Did thee?" said Friend Ruth, knitting composedly away at a gray yarn stocking, while Patience made haste to set away the pie.

"But there's one I calculate you wouldn't they sold if you had known what was in it, went on David.

"I sold them all to thee," said Miss Plumb, in her gentle, decided way, "all nine of them, at a dollar and a half a barrel. With me, Friend David, a bargain means a bargain."

"But one of them hadn't no cider in it."

"Then," said Miss Plumb, "we will deduct that from the rest, and thee can give me the change. I think we need not differ as to that."

"There wasn,t no cider in it!" doggedly persisted the young farmer. "But there was something else—there was money!"

"Money!" repeated Miss Ruth, letting the knitting needles drop into her lap.

"Yer," money," nodded David Lorn; "fourteen rolls of gold half-eagles, twenty in a roll, all wrapped up in an old woolen stocking leg and packed in cotton batting, so they shouldn't clink nor rattle, with salt hay wedged in around 'em, and the cask headed up exactly like the eight others. Now I know why old Ezra Nutting used to be so cranky about keeping his cider barrels locked up, and why he went out to look to it himself every night, long after he wasn't fit to cross the threshold. That was his bank; that was where he kept his savings—fourteen hundred dollars."

"Fourteen hundred dollars!" repeated Miss Ruth, her healthy color paling a little. "But, Friend David, I sold the barrels and their contents to thee.

"Hang it all!" shouted David, rising to his feet, "do you suppose I would swindle you and Patience that way? Here is the money," diving into his pockets, and flinging down the packets on the table with a resounding clink. "I am no thief, Miss Ruth! I never coveted my neighbor's goods until now!"

Friend Ruth's eyes, faded, yet still bright, sought his agitated face with gentle questioning.

"Keep the money, Friend David," said she. "Poor though I am, I would forfeit more than that sooner than cause a fellow creature to offend."

"It ain't the money that I covet," said David, in desperation. It's Patience. No, little girl, don't run away!" as Patience's eyes instinctively turned toward the door. "I think you must have suspicioned it long ago. The house is that lonesome since since you went away that I can't stand it no longer. If I can't have you for my wife, Patience, I'll sell the old place and go to sea. There!"

Patience's long-lashed eye drooped.

"It—it would be a pity that you should do that," said she.

And then she hid her face on Aunt Ruth's plump shoulder.

So Patience went to live at the Lorn farm house, and Friend Ruth stayed where she was, and the money was equally divided between aunt and niece. Miss Plumb makes a comfortable livelihood out of the sale of the "Newport pippins," "Gilliflower," and Northern Spy" apples from the old orchards planted by Ezra Nutting.

"But I sell them by the barrel only," said she. "Never for cider making. I have a prejudice against that sort of thing."

November Marriages in Holland.

Pall Mall Gazette.

Of the twelve months in the year November is reckoned in certain villages in Holland to be by far the most important. The four Sundays of this month are known respectively as Review Sunday, Decision Sunday, Purchase Sunday and Possession Sunday—names which sufficiently explain the purposes to which each is put by the young people. On Review Sunday the unmarried girls and young men after the morning service walk up and down staring at one another to their heart's content. Having made up their minds whom to select on the following Sunday, the youths with the politest bows imaginable salute the fair ones, and judge from the way in which their courtesy is responded to whether success or defeat is to be their lot. The third Sunday is devoted to the less romantic task of obtaining the consent of the parents, and arranging in business-like fashion the details of the marriage settlement. The stern hearts of those in authority having been satisfactorily subdued, all the following week the parson is busy at marrying, but not until Possession Sunday comes round are the happy betrothed permitted more than an affectionate gaze, or at most a tender squeeze of the hand.

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

A Republican State Convention for the state of Minnesota will be held on Wednesday, September 5th, 1888, in Market Hall, in the city of St. Paul, at 12 o'clock, noon, for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following positions:

Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.
One Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.
Governor.
Lieutenant Governor.
Secretary of State.
State Treasurer.
Attorney General.

And for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the convention.

All citizens who believe in the principles of the Republican party; who desire its success, and who will support the candidates nominated by the National Republican Convention held in Chicago, June 19th, 1888, are invited to co-operate in the election of delegates.

The counties are entitled to the following number of delegates and an equal number of alternates.

Aitkin	4	Martin	4
Anoka	5	Meeker	6
Becker	3	Mille Lacs	3
Beltrami	2	Morrison	4
Benton	3	Mower	7
Big Stone	4	Murray	4
Blue Earth	9	Nicollet	5
Brown	5	Nobles	4
Carlton	3	Norman	4
Carver	4	Olmsted	7
Cass	3	Otter Tail	11
Chippewa	4	Pine	3
Chisago	6	Pipe Stone	4
Clay	5	Polk	[illegible]
Cook	2	Pope	5
Cottonwood	4	Ramsey	25
Crow Wing	4	Redwood	4
Dakota	6	Renville	6
Dodge	5	Rice	8
Douglas	6	Rock	4
Faribault	6	St. Louis	10
Fillmore	9	Scott	3
Freeborn	7	Sherburne	4
Goodhue	12	Sibley	4
Grant	4	Stearns	6
Hennepin	38	Steele	6
Houston	6	Stevens	4
Hubbard	2	Swift	4
Isanti	5	Todd	5
Itasca	2	Traverse	4
Jackson	5	Wabasha	6
Kandiyohi	7	Wadena	4
Kanabec	8	Waseca	5
Kittson	3	Washington	7
Lac qui Parle	6	Watonwan	4
Lake	3	Wilkin	3
Le Sueur	5	Winona	8
Lincoln	4	Wright	8
Lyon	5	Yellow Medicine	5
McLeod	4
Marshall	4	Total	150

St. Paul, July 20, 1888.

JOHN S. PILLSBURY, Chairman.
JOEL P. HEATWOLE, Secretary.

☞ The Chairman or Secretaries of the different county conventions will please report to the Secretary of the State Central Committee, the names and post office address of the delegates and alternates, and also the county committeemen. If this is done promptly it will be of great service to the party, and insure prompt and active work. The State Committee request this kind favor of each county convention.

Be Not Deceived.

Every man who votes the democratic ticket votes against cheap sugar and cheap lumber—two of the most essential elements in the success of this country.

Every man in this upper country who opposes the election of the Hon. S. G. Comstock is opposed to cheap pine lumber for our poor settlers.

The Times asks Mr. Comstock to tell how he will open the pine lands. Mr. Comstock has pointedly said that he would try to accomplish it in the best manner suitable to the people directly concerned and that their wishes shall be his guide. If the Times can suggest a method we will promise him it shall have all the consideration it deserves. It is a matter that requires the combined wisdom of all who are interested.

The Times, even after the very gentlemanly manner in which Mr. Comstock overlooked the malicious attacks made upon his personal character, can not forbear from attempting to keep up the personal fight, but still insists that he is everything but an honest, capable man—but it can matter very little what a man says who can send such dispatches as the Times man did—the one directly contrary of the other.

The Kittson County Enterprise is the right kind of a democratic sheet. Recognizing the fact that the only chance of obtaining cheap pine lumber this country has is by sending the Hon. S. G. Comstock to congress, the Enterprise sinks party considerations in view of the greater benefits to be derived from cheap lumber for this country, and openly and heartily supports Comstock. This is a view of the case that every democrat, who has the good of this country at heart should take and many of them are taking. The acquisition of cheap pine for the settlers upon our broad prairies is a matter of far more importance than is mere party success and every voter in this country should work for the interest of his country regardless of the party lash.

The Mills bill passed the House by a majority of twelve, Mr. Nelson voting for it. We do not pretend to explain Mr. Nelson's reason for this action—it must have been conclusive to his mind or he would not have done it. We know that he is sincere in his desire for tariff reform; we know also that he has opposed this bill in its inconsistencies which, in his speeches he has exposed and ridiculed without mercy and the only reason we can see why at last he should vote in favor of it is that he considers it a beginning in the right direction. The bill, framed by a southern man is the embodiment of tariff reform from a southern standpoint. While pretending to be a bill calculated to reduce the tariff it demands a stiff tariff on articles of southern production, for the purpose of protecting southern interests but demands that upon all articles of northern production the tariff shall be greatly reduced or knocked off entirely. Now this is eminently unfair and thoroughly selfish and sectional. It shows that the leaders of the democratic party (all southern men) recognize the fact that a little protection, where their own interests are personally concerned is a good thing, and while they are ready and willing to sacrifice all of the great interests of the north to the demand for reduction they are not willing to apply the same rule to themselves. Mr. Nelson's vote for the bill must not be misunderstood to mean that he is in favor of it as a whole. Everybody knows well, who has followed his course on the bill that he is not satisfied with it; but he knows that it can by no means become a law, and that, when it reaches the Senate it will be met with a bill that will represent the true ideas of reduction from a republican standpoint, and the Senate bill or none will eventually pass, and it may be that he voted for it to insure its reaching the Senate. That Mr. Nelson is honest in his convictions none will deny but there will be those who think he makes a grave mistake in this vote.

The Prohib. Nominee.

The prohibs—eight counties represented, met at Fergus Falls and nominated for Congress in the Fifth District, Z. D. Scott, of Duluth. They do not claim that he is a better man to represent the district than the Hon. S. G. Comstock nor, in fact that he has ever had as much legislative experience, but simply and solely to have their own way and to injure the only party that ever helped them one iota they have put a man into the field. It does not appear that they even asked him what he would do on the subject of the pine lands—if he should happen to be elected—thus showing their total indifference to the great and growing needs of this New Northwest. Their only object in selecting a Duluth man seems to be because, since Duluth failed to secure the republican nomination they imagine that any Duluth man, on any ticket would run as well as would Judge Stearns or C. H. Graves, thus showing, that with all their professed innocence of political tricks they are up to snuff. But how does their man stand on the subject of the most vital importance to this country, the pine question? He is known to be a thorough, rock-rooted Duluth man fully imbued with her importance of protecting every interest that helps to build her up. Duluth enjoys a vast revenue from the sale of pine lumber in this vast treeless prairie country and it is not reasonable to suppose that she would relish the idea of losing her grip on it. It is therefore not for her interest that this country should be supplied with cheap pine nearer home so it is very reasonable to to suppose that Mr. Z. D. Scott, should he ever go to Washington, would be overly enthusiastic in our behalf. He would not be very liable to work hard for anything that would be of disadvantage to Duluth in any particular. Even if he should promise to aid us in that particular he would not be able to accomplish as much in two years as Mr. Comstock would in that many months. Temperance is a good thing but the settlers on these bleak prairies can not afford to risk the loss of that pine for a chimerical idea—They can not afford to throw away the only chance of obtaining it they will get for years by voting for any man but the Hon. S. G. Comstock. He is the man who can accomplish something for us and he should have the solid vote of these counties interested in the question, regardless of politics.

Democratic Gains.

A very little consolation seems to go a great way with the average democrat of to-day. The Era, St. Vincent is a fair sample. In its last issue the good Deacon, with a grand flourish of trumpets gets off the following: "Mr. P. C. Schmidt, Chairman of the Polk County Republican Committee has resigned, because he could not endorse Comstock." The good deacon seems rejoiced in his inmost soul fancying he sees a newly fledged democrat, just ready, like an over-ripe apple to drop into the maw of the unterrified; but alas for his bright dream, it lacks the only one thing needed to make it perfect—truth. For be it known that Mr. Schmidt is not now and never has been "chairman of the Republican County Committee," hence his resignation (if he did resign) could have no significance but it is very reasonable to assume that he has not resigned the position. Come to think of it perhaps the good deacon is only guilty of extreme gullibility, after all for if we are not mistaken a similar item was published not long since, with a grand flourish of arms in the democratic organ of this city, evidently carefully worded with the intention to convey the very impression that the good deacon has received; but, like a great many other things in that sheet it is wholly and thoroughly unreliable. In this case, as in many other cases of wonderful conversions to democracy, the wish is father to the thought. The dems get to thinking: "what a wonderfully nice thing it would be if Mr. so and so should flop;" the more they think of it the brighter it seems and the first you know they accept it as a fact and announce it with a flourish of arms. If every case is like Mr. Schmidt's they will not get one vote out of the whole list as Mr. S. has not and will not leave the republican ranks.

Grand Forks News: If the democrats of the Fifth district of Minnesota had a good leader now—a man like Knute Nelson they would beat Comstock the Moorhead monopolist. The farmers of the district deserve to wear the title of fools forever—the craven badge of ignoramuses if they elect Comstock to represent them in congress. Will they do it?

Will they elect Comstock? You bet they will, and they will do it because Mr. Comstock is the best calculated to represent the interests of this district of any man yet mentioned or who could be. They will elect him in spite of the mud batteries the democrats have opened out and every true democrat, who thinks more of the true interests of the Northwest than of his party will vote for him. The democratic press knows this and hence the crack of the party lash. The democratic press cares more for party success than for the interests of the poor, settlers on these prairies, who needs the vast amounts of pine that is annually going to waste on the reservation to furnish cheap lumber for their use in building up their little homes. They know that Mr. Comstock is the more deeply interested in obtaining that pine than any man yet named or who can be, and yet, because he is a republican they try to prejudice the farmer to vote against him by calling him a monopolist, and all that sort of stuff. If there was any truth in what they say they would produce the proof but they simply make the bare assertions and expect the voters are all fools enough to swallow these unsupported assertions without a word of proof to substantiate them. But they reckon without their host in this matter. This pine question is one of the most vital importance to this country, one that the settler demands shall receive attention. Mr. Comstock stands pledged to do all in his power to procure that pine and his word is the word of an honest man, a man who is able to accomplish everything in that line that can be done and the people of this country will require more convincing proof than the unsupported word of a partisan newspaper to cause them to vote against a sure thing. We have challenged the democratic press of the district to bring forth the proofs of their assertions, and while it is none of the Grand Forks News business we will include that able sheet in the challenge, with the request that the News man will either put up or shut up.

GAINED THREE VICTORIES.

Address of Chairman Griffin, of the Anti-Saloon Republican National Committee.

In Which He Summarizes the Temperance Work of the Republican Convention.

Albert Griffin, chairman of the anti-saloon republican national committee, has issued an address to the country in which he summarizes the work of the national republican convention on temperance matters and appeals to the voters to support the ticket nominated by the convention. He gives his reasons for this advice, which from the position which he holds will have weight with those in sympathy with the cause of temperance. Below is Mr. Griffin's address:

Intense partizans and misinformed men are making so many misstatements about the action of the late republican national convention that it seems necessary to state the real facts. The truth is that the anti-saloon cause suffered one defeat and gained three victories.

The defeat was the refusal of the committee on resolutions to put an anti-saloon plank in the platform. This was at first regarded as a Waterloo, and if the contest had ended there an overwhelming disaster at the polls would have been inevitable.

The first victory was the adoption of a plank committing the party against the national whisky ring protection tax, which plank was supported by every temperance man on the committee. Business men know that it is the retail, and not the wholesale, price of an article that affects consumption. Remembering then that the imposition of a tax of $2 a gallon on spirits did not cause the slightest increase in the price of a drink of whisky, that the reduction to 50 cents per gallon was not followed by a fall, nor the subsequent increase to 90 cents by a rise, it is evident that the tax could not have operated as a restricture. Remembering, again, that the taxes paid on liquor amount to about $70,000,000 a year and that all the principal distillers, brewers and wholesale dealers determinedly oppose repealing the tax, it is evident that in some way, it "benefits that trade," for it is inconceivable that the men engaged in such a business would be anxious to pay so much money for nothing. Discussion is making temperance men solid against the national liquor tax, as the liquor men are now in favor of it. A state tax on saloons operates very differently from a national tax on the liquor itself.

The second victory was the nomination of Gen. Horrison because of his record as a total abstainer and an avowed anti-saloonist. When the committee decided not to report an anti-saloon plank a number of us went through the different delegations urging those who realized what a collosal blunder had been committed, to support Gen. Harrison as their second choice, on the ground that it had become a necessity to nominate some one "whose record would be a platform." So large a number agreed to this, that when a concentration was finally attempted, he was found to be the second choice of so many that it became necessary for the managers to support him. Some of them, however, intended to give him but two or three ballots and then go to Mr. Sherman, but he was so much stronger than they had supposed that they could find no excuse for leaving him. If the committee had reported an anti-saloon plank the friends of that cause would not have made the desperate efforts for him that they did, and it is more than possible that some one else would have been nominated.

The third victory was the final adoption by the convention of a temperance plank, introduced by Congressman Boutelle, of Maine. As an attempt is being made to create an impression that it is not part of the platform, and was not intended to mean anything in particular, I quote Mr. Boutelle's opening remarks, as reported by the Chicago Tribune, which is not friendly to the anti-saloon cause:

> MR. PRESIDENT:—On behalf of a large number of the delegates of this convention, by their request and in accordance with their wishes, I desire to move a suspension of the rules and adopt a resolution to be added to the republican platform. The republican party stands before the country for the protection of the ballot, for the protection of American industry, and for the protection of the parity of the home. (Applause.) The altars of republicanism in this country stand by the firesides of the American people. (Applause.) The foundation of this grand organization of ours is the sobriety, the morality, and the virtue of the common people. (Applause.) The republican party sprang into existence as the champion of moral reform in the United States of America. (Applause.) It stands to-day, if it stands for anything, as the standard bearer of every principle that tends to elevate common humanity and eradicate the evils which threaten the body politic.

Several delegates excitedly opposed the suspension of the rules or even the reading of the plank, but the

SENTIMENT OF THE CONVENTION

was so strongly against them that, after considerable confusion, it was read as follows:

> The first concern of all good government is the virtue and sobriety of the people and the parity of the home. (Cries of Good.) The republican party cordially sympathises with all the wise and well directed efforts for the promotion of temperance and morality. (Loud applause, numbers of the delegates rising to their feet, and cries of Good.)

Nearly every state then seconded the motion for a suspension of the rules, and amid great enthusiasm the plank was adopted by a rising vote with only one nay. In short it was evident to every dispassionate person who witnessed the scene that the rupublican party had crossed the Rubicon and burned all bridges behind them.

The foregoing is a candid statement of the facts. At one time it looked as though all was lost, but courage and perseverance finally saved the party and the cause. The liquor interest imperiously demanded that the whole subject should be ignored in the platform, and that "no temperance man should be put on the ticket," even objecting to Senator Allison solely because he came from a prohibition state. The convention answered by nominating the most pronounced temperance candidate in the field, by disapproving of the one national law that gives aid and comfort to the whisky ring, and by almost unanimously putting in the platform a plank unequivocally avowing the sympathy of the republican party of the entire nation with the temperance cause.

When to such action is added the fact that within the last two years the republican legislators of every republican state, excepting California, Nevada, Illinois and Wisconsin, have angered the dram selling fraternity by passing, or attempting to pass, laws against their interests, it is insensate folly to suppose that they will anywhere support the republican party. Some of them may pretend to do so, but their promises will be worthless. Dram sellers are not exceptions to the universal rule that men seldom vote against what they believe to be their own interests.

Under these circumstances is it not the plain duty of every earnest, disinterested friend of temperance to give the republican party a hearty support? It presents them a lifelong enemy of the saloon as a candidate, on a moderate, but unambiguous temperance platform, while the democratic candidate is exactly the reverse, and stands on a platform denouncing sumptuary laws. One of these two platforms and candidates will be approved by the nation next November, and let him squirm and chop logic as he may, the cold, clammy fact remains that the temperance man who refuses to support the republican ticket consents to the democratic saloon rule; and, further, that if he in any way undertakes to still further weaken the Republican party, he becomes while thus engaged, an active saloon defender. He may try to quiet his conscience by dreaming dreams, and conjuring up visions of great things in the future, but, if he is honest, he must admit that he is, for the present time, helping the saloon to retain its grip on the country. Ask the dram sellers of the United States, confidentially, how they desire you to vote and nineteen-twentieths of them will say "for the democratic ticket." Ask further whether they prefer to have you vote for Harrison or Fiske, and they will answer promptly Fiske. They are not thinking about 1892 or 1896, but 1888. They propose to make use of the present and work for the future afterwards. Are you really willing to let them drag scores of thousands of men, women and children to ruin now, in the vague hope that you can drive 20 times your number hereafter into disregarding their own convictions and obeying your commands?

Temperance men of America, I implore you to put aside passion, prejudice and party spirit while considering this matter. And I especially ask those republicans who, before the convention rectified the committee's mistake, decided to join the third party, not to let pride of opinion or temper keep them where their influence in this contest must necessarily strengthen the liquor power and make struggling humanity more helpless. I was also grieved and angry (for I had been deceived in some cases) but the sobs and moans of suffering multitudes ever pleading for our help now, made it impossible to take council of wrath. Revenge may be sweet, but it is sweeter still to lift up the fallen, provided it is done before they have been trampled to death. The old friends you leave behind are as honest and as hard headed as you are. You cannot be driven; neither can they. They have as much human nature as you have and are 20 times as numerous. Is it best to approach them in the spirit of the slave driver, or in the spirit of Christ? Hoping that November next will find us all fighting the common enemy instead of each other, I remain respectfully, ALBERT GRIFFIN,
Chairman Anti-Saloon Republican National Committee.
Northfield, Minn., June 30, 1888.

Northfield News: The Mills bil enacts that the duty on steel rails should be repealed 33 per cent. while on sugar the reduction should be only 20 per cent. Who buys steel rails. The railroad corporations, and rich combinations in general. Who buys sugar? The poor man, the poor woman, every person in the country. And this is not all. We have already a manufacturing capacity more than sufficient to supply all the steel rails that we can use in the United States. We cannot produce more than one-tenth as much sugar as we consume.

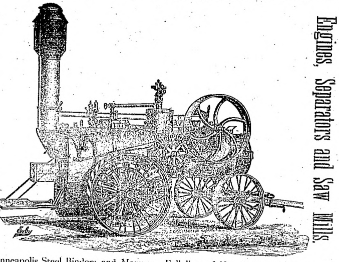
REMOVED.

HUGGARD, LARSEN & CO.

have removed their stock to their new building, opposite the New York store on, cor. Broadway and Robert. You can't miss it,

SIGN OF THE JACKSON WAGON.

☞ JUST RECEIVED—A fresh car of Buggies, Carriages and Road Carts. ☜



General Agents for
RUSSELL & CO'S WORLD KNOWN
Engines, Separators and Saw Mills

Minneapolis Steel Binders and Mowers. Full line of Hay Rakes, Hand and Self Dumps. J. Thompson & Son's Cross Plows and Breakers, NEW MODEL Walking Gangs and Breakers, Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machines' Pumps, Full line of Extras. TWINE. Come and see us!

Stewart & Laurence,

WHOLESALE AND RETTIL

HEAVY AND SHELF

HARDWARE,

BAKER STEEL BARBED WIRE.

JEWETT'S STOVES AND RANGES,

Plymouth Binding Twine

D. H. BATES,

—DEALER IN—

Lumber, Building Paper,

PAINTS, OILS,

DOORS, WINDOWS, AND MOULDINGS

ALSO

FARM MACHINERY

AGENT FOR THE CELEBRATED

MILWAUKEE HARVESTER,

(FORMERLY THE DENNETT,)

AND THE CELEBRATED

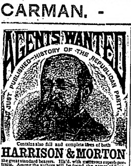
WINONA PLOWS

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

☞ You will find it to your advantage to call when need of anything in my line.

D. H. BATES,

CARMAN. - - - MINN



AGENTS WANTED
JUST PUBLISHED—HISTORY OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

Contains also full and complete lives of both

HARRISON & MORTON

the great standard bearers. Ill's'd. with numerous superb portraits. Among the authors will be found the names of Senators Frye, Chandler, Hawley, Idgalls, John D. Long, popular ex-gov. of Mass., McKinley of Ohio, writes on the Tariff, Henry Cabot Lodge, and a number of others of a like prominence. The only authentic Campaign Book, indorsed by the Nat. Rep. Com. Don't be induced to get any other. Distance no hinderance as we pay all freight charges. Send 50 cents in 1c. stamps for outfit and be the first in the field, or write for full particulars and Special Terms sent free to all. WINTER & CO., Pubs., Springfield, Mass.

JOHN CROMB,

Attorney-at-aw,

SEC OND STREET, CROOKSTON,

THE SECOND HAND STORE,

(Yvernault's Old Place,)

Main Street, - - Crookston, Minn,

KEEPS A FINE, LARGE STOCK OF

NEW FURNITURE,

At Prices Unrivalled in this market. Also a Large Stock of

SECOND HAND FURNITURE,

Little worn. Parties desiring to dispose of Old Furniture can exchange it with me for New Furniture at a Bargain, or I will Pay Cash for it. Call and see my stock and get prices

PETER GOTHIA.

DENTISTRY!

J. H. THOMAS, D. D.S.,

ROBERT STREET, - CROOKSTON, MINN

Artificial Teeth from one to an entire set inserted. Gold, Silver or Artificial Filling used a desired. Regulating Children's Teeth a specialty. ALL WORK WARRANTED

St. Vincent New Era: The Marshall County Leader presents the name of Geo. R. Richards as legislative candidate on the republican ticket, we trust to secure the nomination, for with Mr. McCollom out of the road Kittson county will go almost unanimously democratic next November.

Replying to the above the Kittson County Enterprise says:

The Era man wanders terribly in his speculations as to the legislative ticket. Quite true the Leader has brought out a candidate, but the name of Mr Richards has never been mentioned in the columns of that paper. It shows just how Bro. Deacon jumps at conclusions. The Leader named in a recent issue Mr. Roberts, a well known farmer of that county, but because Mr. R. has been named is no reason whatever that Mr. McCollom is out of the way for that is not so easily done. Mr. McCollom is in the field to stay, and the democratic candidate will wish himself in a far colder clime than this, before November next. There is such a thing as going to extremes and Mr. Deacon certainly does that very thing if he for a moment thinks that W. F. Kelso, the democratic nominee will get the vote of Kittson County. There is no need of going behind the fence in this matter. Mr. Kelso is an aspirant for that position, so we are told by a prominent democrat, to whom Mr. Kelso made known his intentions. Two years ago he had a good vote, the people of the county giving him their undivided support, but if he for a moment thinks he can carry the same support in the campaign of '88 he is greatly mistaken. Ring rule and bossism will not work in Kittson County, and he will find it out at the coming election.

Mr. McCollom is not seeking the office, but the office the man, and he will be supported by every thinking voter in Kittson county. There is not a man here better, or more favorably known, and all are confident that if elected to that office, he will represent the people of the district in a careful and trustworthy manner.

The State Fair.

Prospects Good for the Biggest Show ever in the State.

Preparations for the State Fair, which are going forward rapidly, indicate that the event this year will be the most attractive ever known in the State. Secretary Denny and Superintendent Cross are booming matters, and, while Mr. Denny's office is at the Fair Grounds, he is in St. Paul and Minneapolis nearly every day to meet people who have not time to make the trip to Hamline. President Merriam has not relaxed any of the efforts that were made a year ago, and is very enthusiastic over the prospects of the Fair. Arrangements have been completed for a mammoth sham battle, which will exceed in splendor that of last year, and work is now going on to make this one of the most attractive features ever seen in the Northwest. Commander Rea, of the National G. A. R., will be the general in command of one army, and it is expected that some confederate officer will lead the opposing forces. Negotiations have been opened to secure some of the leading public speakers of the country to address the people during the fair. Secretary Denny is now in correspondence with Prof. Baldwin, with a view to arranging for one of his perilous leaps from his balloon while it is a mile from the ground. Among the attractions are several hurdle races and a grand steeple chase, in which some of the finest riders and horses in the country will participate. The entries for fine horses and cattle are three times as great now as at this time last year and are larger than ever before known at any State Fair.

CROOKSTON

CREAMERY,

WALSH & BJOIN, Prop's.

The Croookston Creamery is now ready for business, and solicits the patronage of every progressive farmer. At the prices that we now pay, you can make more money out of your cream than you can to make it into butter yourself. It only needs a trial to convince you.

We invite the patronage of all who are interested in their own welfare, as well as that of the county to call and see us,

SCANDI AMERICAN

BANK.

Authorized Capital.......... $200,000
Paid in Capital.......... 50,000

COLLECTIONS A SPECIALTY.

OFFICERS:

C. Hendrickson, President.
G. M. Barber, Vice President.
C. O. Christianson, 2d Vice President.
A. G. Gallash, Cashier.
D. Ellington, Asst. Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

O. H. Lucken.......... Crookston
L. K. Aaker.......... "
J. H. Locken.......... "
T. J. Thorsen.......... "
P. E. Sandager.......... Grafton, D. T.
A. E. Johnson.......... St. Paul, Minn.

NEW CIGAR STORE,

SIGN OF THE BIG INJUN.

H. F. BROWN, Proprietor

Second Street,

CROOKSTON, - - - MINN.

Cigars of every known brand, from a cheroot ot a 25 center. Cigarettes, Chewing and Smoking Tobaccos of all kinds, Snuff, Pipes to suit the fancy of all, from a corn-cob pipe to a meerschaum.

Particular attention is invited to our line of Meerschaum Goods. NONE FINER IN THE NORTHWEST.

Drop In and See the New Store!

H. F. BROWN.

DR. M. WATTS.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.

Office over Merchants' Bank,

☞ Professional calls by day or night promptly attended to.

Polk County Journal.

W. G. COOKE, Publisher.

CROOKSTON, MINN., JULY 26.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

A Sample of Democratic Sincerity.

On Monday evening after the ratification meeting, W. E. McKenzie went to the telegraph office and sent the following dispatch to the Pioneer Press:

CROOKSTON REPUBLICANS RATIFY.

CROOKSTON, Special Telegram, July 16.—A republican ratification meeting was held here to-night in the opera house. There were not less than seven hundred people present and the utmost enthusiasm was manifest. Speeches were delivered by Hon, S. G. Comstock, Hon. Halvor Steenerson, A. A. Miller, R. J. Montague and A. R. Holston. The speeches were all good and the applause was loud and frequent. Mr. Comstock, upon being introduced, was received with a burst of applause which lasted fully five minutes. This meeting will be followed by another on Saturday evening next, when Hon. R. G. Horr will deliver an address.

He then wrote and dispatched the the following account to the Globe:

LITTLE ENTHUSIASM FOR COMSTOCK.

Special Cable to the Globe.

CROOKSTON, Minn., July 16.—The Republicans held a ratification meeting here to-night, and there was a tight-rope walker in town. After the performance, the crowd followed the band to the hall, where speeches were delivered by S. G. Comstock, Halver Steenerson and others. The speeches were all very tame and very little enthusiasm was worked up. Mr. Comstock did not make a very favorable impression here.

It will be noticed that the one account is exactly the opposite of the other, hence one of them must be a deliberate lie. Mr. McKenzie may think this is a very cute thing to do but what interests the Times readers is how much confidence can they place in articles they see in a paper edited by a man who can send such dispatches as the above—almost in the same breath? These dispatches are supposed to be truthful reports but how can a man who can write such dispatches be considered a truthful man? How can people believe anything they see in his paper after such an evidence of what he is capable of doing?

Our Standard Bearers.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 16, 1888.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE JOURNAL:

This is not an "off year" in politics, either state or national. Ordinarily there are a great number who take little or no interest in an election, and who may be fitfully characterized as Indifferents. A party man with a grievance is usually an Independent—an indication that not having received what he asks at the hands of his own party he proposes to go over to the enemy. Your Mugwump—Well it strikes me that a good definition of a mugwump—so far as Minnesota is concerned at least—is a republican who voted for Cleveland in 1884 and will vote for Harrison in 1888. The indifferent voter has taken so little interest in politics that often he has not voted at all. But this year the issue between American industries and foreign pauper labor; between high license and free whiskey; between the stay-at-home hangman with his little veto and the soldier-statesman and patriot; between the old flag and the red bandana,—are too sharply and clearly defined to admit of doubt. He is indifferent no longer. But here comes an old man in a "faded coat of blue," He has a military air. He knows little of parties: cares little for politics. He wears two badges—one the familiar badge of the Grand Army of the Republic. As he comes nearer one sees that the other has for its emblem the proudest and handsomest flag in the world—the stars and stripes, with its red, white and blue—and bears the words: "Old Soldiers' Harrison and Morton Club." He has lost his voice, but says in a whispers, "Come down to Windom's Hall, sign the roll, and get your badge!" He voted for Cleveland four years ago. But he has had enough of him. Needless to ask. He never wears false colors. He will vote as he shot. He is a Harrison man. He is a type of the great army of the country's defenders in '61—its preservers in '88. God bless the old soldiers!

Now for something more practical. Minnesota will go for the later Harrison as Maine went "for Governor Kent and Tippecanoe and Tyler too." But there is a legislature and state officers to be chosen. To head the state ticket three good men are candidates—Gov. A. R. McGill, of St. Peter, who asks for another term, Hon. William R. Merriam and Albert Scheffer of St. Paul, with Charlie Gilman and Knute Nelson as dark horses. By the way, this is not a dark horse year. Let there be light. Mr. McGill is no better and no stronger than he was two years ago. He has made a fair executive, but it is charged that the real governor resides not far from the Falls of St. Anthony. Clearly he is not the best nor strongest candidate. Albert Scheffer is a better and stronger one. But the latter's refusal to say whether he will abide by the decision of the state convention, and the rumor that if defeated there, he will be an independent candidate, will militate against his chances of receiving the regular Republican nomination. It is an article of faith older than either of the candidates that he who goes into the convention and submits his claims, is in honor bound to abide by the result, This Mr. Scheffer declines to do. Mr. Merriam being asked, (1) "Will you support the candidate for governor put in nomination by the forthcoming Republican state convention? (2) Do you intend to run as an independent candidate or seek a nomination at the hands of the Democratic party,"—replied: "To the first question I answer 'Yes' and to the latter 'No,' and each I desire to make as emphatic as possible." This will go a great ways in his favor. The suggestion of his name has been well received generally. Possessing the qualities of a natural leader, his rare business and executive ability, his spotless record as a member of the state legislature, in which his ability was fitly recognized by electing him speaker of the house, and last but not least, his brilliant management of the State Agricultural Society, of which he is still president,—all combine to make him to-day the strongest and most available candidate. It is no mean honor to be governor of Minnesota. Mr. Merriam is worthy of the honor. Our national standard-bearers have been well chosen. Now for the state. Fall in all along the line!

WM. L. ABBOTT.

Masonic.

The masonic lodge has instituted a system of five minutes talks among the brothers, on the subject of masonry which proves very interesting. At the request of a number of the brethren, Bro. J. B. Copeland consented to allow us to publish his remarks made at the meeting July 9th which we annex without further comment:

I believe that no person will deny the fact that to be a man in every sense of the word is a height to which all mankind should endeavor to ascend. Pure manhood and pure womanhood is the reward of earnest endeavor, and none attain to it without persistent effort combined with the assistance of their fellow beings. We are so essentially social in our organism that the lives and manners of our associates have a telling effect upon our own and it is this social influence which is instrumental in raising us to that higher standard of manhood or sinking us lower. There can be no such thing as a standstill in moral character. Determined action guarantees progres. Indolence and inactivity guarantees retrogression. This holds true not alone in a social point of view, but in all business transactions of life and also in governmental affairs. That nation which neglects the moral, social and educational standard of its people is constantly harassed with riots and rebellion and the scepter she wields for self-preservation is terrorism. Such is the Russian government to-day. But Russia is feeling the influence of other nations, more godlike in their distribution of justice, and the cry of reform has begun to be heard throughout her droad domains and social, moral and educational liberty must one day be the result, though thousands have and will lose their lives or suffer the torments of a Siberian prison. We need not go abroad to the frozen vales and peaks of Siberia, the jungles of Africa or the interior of Asia to find social chaos. In our own beloved land, where the cry of freedom has been heard for over a hundred years, there are spots black with demoralization. The onward march of civilization westward, carries before it an immoral swarm, and gambling, thieving, adultery and murder raise their hydra heads and stalk abroad at noon day, the fruit of improper social action. I thank God for the good there is in this life. The social sun is shining with great effulgence casting its warm rays everywhere throughout the universe of men, but on its bright and burning surface, may be seen dark spots. It is my duty, and your duty, to assist in removing them. The social pages of the world's history are badly blotted, yet there are pages white as the driven snow, fair and pure as the blossom which looks up to heaven by the side of her thorny companion. Brave men and women are they whose lives are thus recorded. Monuments of wisdom and purity are they. Their endurance is everlasting as the hills, and to them we who have families to rear, and have felt the influence of their pure lives, look with thankful hearts. Our duty as masons, then, is plain. We are bonded together by ties which cannot be broken, to assist one another to rise to this higher state of manhood. It needs not any lengthy catalogue of crimes published for our perusal to teach us our duty as masons. It is as plain as the sun at noonday that the untruth and impurity are anti-masonic. He who comes into this, our masonic home, must come with the recommendation of manhood, walking uprightly before God and before men. It is not always a guarantee of manhood that we walk uprightly before men. Men are weak, shortsighted beings at best, not being able to look into the hearts and minds of men. True masonic manhood is that which shines from every feature and is seen in every action of him who is concious within himself that he is dealing justly by himself with all mankind and with his God. We, as masons, have said that in God we placed our trust, and the best demonstration of that trust is in obeying his commands. To know ourselves is our duty also, for with a thorough knowledge of ourselves, we may shun those sins which most beset us, and which often lead us into disrepute, and bring stigma and reproach upon our noble order.

A SHAM BATTLE.

A Big One to be Given at the State Fair—Commander Rea to Lead One Side—Orators of National Fame to Be Present.

St. Paul Dispatch.

Hon. W. R. Merriam was seen this morning by a Dispatch representative and talked at length about the coming state fair. He says the prospects are bright for the best event of the kind ever held in Minnesota. Arrangements are being completed to have a mammoth sham battle. Commander Rea will general one army, and it is hoped some ex-confederate officer will lead the opposing forces. Negotiations have been opened to secure the presence of several orators of national fame. The horse races will be especially noticeable, and the stock exhibits larger and finer than in previous years. An eighth-mile track is being prepared on which to display carriage horses and fancy turn-outs. Among the many other attractions it is hoped to secure, will be Prof. Baldwin in his feat of jumping 10,000 feet from his balloon. There will be a meeting of the managerial board next Tuesday to discuss further arrangements and boom the fair generally.

A Manufacturer With Sense.

Grand Forks Plaindealer.

Time and time again have the eastern manufacturers been advised by their friends to cease their opposition to tariff reform. It has been made clear to them that the people of the United States are going to reform the tariff whether they, the manufacturers, like it or not. The sooner it is done, the less momentum the movement will have acquired. Every obstacle that the manufacturers place in the way, simply necessitates more power and and momentum to over come it. The greater the momentum that this sentiment obtains, the further it will go after it has overcome all resistance before it stops. It is, therefore, the essence of fool-hardiness on the part of manufacturers to stand in the way of the much needed reform, and it is evident to every one who will forecast the future, that they are doing so at their own peril. It is hard, however, for manufacturers to consent to have "illegitimate fat" squeezed out of their profits.

In North Adams, Mass., however, there is one republican manufacturer who takes a common sense view of the situation. Mr. Foster, the president of the National Republican League, made up of republican clubs which have lately been organized throughout the northern states and territories, sent him last June, a confidential circular letter asking him to contribute some of the "fat" that the tariff laws made for him, to assist in the work of keeping the tariff where it is now. Replying to this demand the manufacturer replied, "It is true that I am a republican, and also engaged in the manufacture of cotton goods in North Adams, Mass., and therefore one of the protected industries of New England.

As a manufacturer I see clearly that a reasonable tariff is necessary to the life of industrial New England, but being a manufacturer (even a republican one) does not prevent my also seeing that our present tariff needs reforming and, moreover, what is more to the point, that reform is bound to come whether we want it or not.

If, during the last four months, the republican leaders in and out of congress had brought to the question a sincere desire to do that which should be best for the country, there could now be no burning tariff issues. And what is this going on in congress while I write? The republican members fighting as if for the very life of the republic, to maintain the tax on lumber—to protect the men who are killing the immature and insufficient forests and tax the people to pay for it. Is there a man of sense in New England who believes that the country as a whole will endorse that sort of "protection" when the time comes for them to pass upon it? I repeat that the tariff reform is bound to come, and if we will not help to fairly settle the question, it will be settled without our help. How, then, shall we successfully meet the storm and save that which is good? Can it be done merely with a yell against "free trade" and bearing a protection idol in one hand and free whiskey in the other, or by simply talking of the protection of the American laborer while we leave the flood gates of Europe open to pour in 'American laborers' upon us, or by blindly following the leadership that is leading us straight into the ditch, through opposing anything and everything not originating with the republican party? Hardly. If we want any part in this matter, we must ourselves become sincere and reasonable tariff reformers.

Glyndon News: We can enter upon the presidential campaign with an honest enthusiasm for the head of the republican ticket, Benjamin Harrison of Indiana; a true westerner; modest for an American politician: capable in statecraft, positive in conviction, safe, conservative, and available because of all of these. He will carry his own alleged doubtful state, while Thurman cannot snatch the next eastern neighbor Ohio, from him. The convention's finished work is a good work. In Levi P. Morton for the vice presidency the News is content to take New York's word for it that the combination is equal to the emergency of disputing Cleveland's prestige and Cleveland's claim of invincibility in the home state of the two men. In so taking New York at her word, we would hold her sacredly responsible—so sacredly as to forbid either thought or utterance of any threat of consequences in case of default, for failure would be impossible with party breaches healed in New York, as the evidences so strongly show them to be. We will not call it an ideal ticket. It is better than that for an "out" party; it is a practical ticket in a good sense. A good hope for November is born of it. Courage?

California Wines and Brandies.

Max Ericsson is constantly receiving California Wines and Brandies, the choicest of liquors of all kinds at wholesale and retail, which he can supply at the shortest notice. No use to send below for such things, as Max can supply them as cheaply and of as good quality as you can get anywhere. Go and see what Max can do for you.

STRAYED.

From Philips' herd, on July 4th, one small light-red cow, three years old, tips of horns cut off. A suitable reward will be paid for her return to the herd or to MRS. S. N. GRIFFITH, Crookston, Minn.

Strayed.

Came to my place on or about June 20th, one red cow, owner is requested to call, prove property, pay charges and take her away.

[12-14] WM. CUNNINGHAM.

We find it our duty to let the public know that we are agents for the best sewing machine, Domestic. We also have in stock two lighted windows and a general stock of sash and doors.

[52-tf] EIKEN BRO'S.

Money to Loan.

We have the cash always on hand to loan on good farm security. No second mortgage. No delay. No commission.

STEENERSON & McMANUS.

W. A. ROBERTSON,

D. D. S.

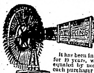
Graduate of Dental Department of the University of Maryland.

OPERATIVE AND MECHANICAL

DENTIST.

OFFICE, IN McKINNON BLOCK.

THE PERKINS WIND MILL.



BUY THE BEST AND SAVE MONEY

It has been in constant use for 19 years, with a record equaled by none. We give each purchaser a

WARRANTY

as follows: We warrant the Perkins Wind Mill, sold this day, to out-last and do better work than any other make, and not blow down, unless the Tower goes with it, and against any wind that does not disable buildings in the vicinity.

We manufacture both Pumping and Geared Mills and carry a full line of Wind Mill Supplies.

AGENTS WANTED.

Send for Catalogue, Circulars and Prices.

Address PERKINS WIND MILL & AX CO. Mishawaka, Ind.

THE OLD RELIABLE

CROOKSTON

LOAN AGENCY

STILL ON DECK.

MONEY

On Real Estae.

MONEY

On Approved Chattels.

Always on hand at the Lowest Rates.

Consult your best interests by giving me a call when you Want Money.

A. D. STEPHENS,

Second Street, Crookston, Minn.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk.—ss. In Probate Court. Special term, July 9th, 1888.

In the matter of the estate of Germund T. Eiken deceased.

Whereas, an instrument in writing, purporting to be the last will and testament of Germund T. Eiken deceased, late of said county, has been delivered to this court.

And whereas, Andrew Eiken, O. O. Christianson and Thomas H. Bjoin have filed their petition, representing among other things that said Germund T. Eiken died in said county, on the 14th day of May 1888 testate, and that said petitioners are the sole executors named in said last will and testament, and praying that the said instrument may be admitted to probate, and that letters testamentary be to them issued thereon.

It is ordered, that the proofs of said instrument, and the said petition, be heard before this court, at the probate office in said county, on the 7th day of August A. D. 1888, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, when all concerned may appear and contest the probate of said instrument.

And it is further ordered, that public notice of the time and place of said hearing be given to all persons interested, by publication of these orders for three weeks successively previous to said day of hearing, in THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said county.

Dated at Crookston, the 9th day of July A. D. 1888.

By the court,
C. O. CHRISTIANSON,
Judge of Probate.

[12-14]

U. S. LAND OFFICE.
Crookston, Minn., June 21, 1888.

Complaint having been entered at this office by Charles S. Attix against the heirs of John O. Fay, deceased, for abandoning his homestead entry No 7,197, dated May 8th, 1882, upon the n½ sw¼ and w½ nw¼ Sec. 22, Township 149 north, Range 48 west, in Polk County, Minn., with a view to the cancellation of said entry; the said parties are hereby summoned to appear at this office on the 4th day of September, 1888, at 10 o'clock a. m., to respond and furnish testimony concerning said alleged abandonment.

[10-15] H. H. DICKMANN, Register.

S. L. COLLINS

PROPRIETOR OF

MAIN STREET

Livery, Feed and Sale Stables

CORNER MAIN AND FOURTH STS, WEST SIDE,

Crookston, - - - - Minnesota.

Horses bought and sold on commission.
Everything neat and nobby.
Feeding a specialty.

FINE HEARSE

in connection which I will attend to in person.

1878. 1888.

Fontaine & Anglim,

Have the largest and most complete stock of goods in the city, consisting, in part, of

CARPETS AND HOUSE FURNISHING GOODS, DRY GOODS, NOTIONS BOOTS AND SHOES, GENTS', YOUTH'S AND CHILDREN'S CLOTHING STAPLE AND FANCY GROCERIES.

Pries very Low. Farmers' Produce Taken in Exchange.

THE CROOKSTON

AUCTION AND COMMISSION

STORE.

SECOND HAND GOODS of all kinds Bought and Sold. Also Sold on Commission. We are prepared to sell Stock and Machinery at our Yards in Crookston, or to attend Sales anywhere in Polk County at Reasonable Rates. Orders solicited. It will be to your interest to see our stock of

SECOND-HAND AND NEW GOODS

And get prices before purchasing elsewhere.

BERTHIAUM AND MICHAUD, Proprietors,

BROADWAY, - - CROOKSTON, MINN.,

Between Robert and Fletcher Streets.

THE BEE HIVE!

Established in 1879.

HACK & GALLASCH

Invite Your Attention to Their New

SPRING AND SUMMER STOCK

OF EVERYTHING IN THE LINE OF

DRY GOODS, NOTIONS, BOOTS AND SHOES,

HATS AND CAPS.

IN OUR GROCERY AND PROVISION DEPARTMENT

Will be found a Full and Complete Stock of Fresh and Reliable Goods which we can sell at the very Lowest Living rates. We point with pride to our CHINA DEPARTMENT and challenge any competitor to beat it. Goods delivered free to any part of the city. When in need of anything in our line, call and see

HACK & GALLASCH. COR. MAIN & SECOND STS.

First National Bank

OF CROOKSTON

PAID IN CAPITAL, - $100,000
SURPLUS, - - - $11,000

Money to loan on long or short time on approved security

Interest on time deposits. Faithful attention to Collections and prompt remittance.

GEO. Q. ERSKINE, President.
WM. ANGLIM, Vice President.
CHAS. E. SAWYER, Cashier

DIRECTORS:

Wm. Anglim, K. D. Chase, F. D. Childs,
Geo. Q. Erskine, S. F. Markham, H. M. Pierce
E. M. Walsh, John Moore, W. H. Crosby,
Chas. E. Sawyer.

CHRISTIANSON BROTHERS,

(Correspondents Fargo Loan Agency.)

REAL ESTATE,

Farm Mortgage Loans and Insurance.

Special Bargains in Choice Farm Lands, improved and unimproved. Low prices and easy terms.

—OFFICE ON ROBERT STREET.—

CROOKSTON, - - - MINN.

THE PIONEER

SAMPLE ROOM,

AUGUST WENTZEL, Prop.

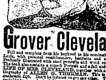
THE CHOICEST OF

WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS

Constantly on hand. Convenient to depot and all business places in the city.

GIVE ME A CALL.

5000 Book Agents wanted to sell THE LIFE AND PUBLIC SERVICES OF



Grover Cleveland

Full and complete from his boyhood to his nomination in St. Louis, with personal reminiscences, incidents and anecdotes. Profusely illustrated with steel portraits and wood engravings. The book also contains a superb Portrait and a full and complete LIFE OF MRS. CLEVELAND, together with a complete biography of ALLEN G. THURMAN. This is the only authentic Life. Don't be induced to get any other. There will probably be unauthorized Lives, but this is the right one. Distance no hinderance, as we pay all transportation charges. Send 50 cents in 1c. stamps and be the first in the field, and thus reap the golden harvest. Write for full particulars and Special Terms sent free to all. Address, WINTER & CO., Pubs, Springfield, Mass.

NEW MEAT

MARKET

At Steenerson Bros. Old Stand, on Main Street,

SANDS BROTHERS, Prop's.

Having purchased this stand we have put in a large and complete stock of Fresh and Salt Meats of all kinds, secured the services of a thoroughly competent butcher, and are now ready to supply the Choicest Roasts and Steaks of Beef, Pork, Mutton, and everything in our line. We invite your patronage. Orders delivered when desired.

SANDS BRO'S, MAIN STREET.

MONTANA SHORT LINE.

When traveling every one should consider well the questions of economy, comfort, safety and speed, these questions being of the same importance in a journey of an hour as in one of several days' ride. An examination of the map will convince anyone that this is the most direct route to and from all the principal points in Central and Northern Minnesota, Dakota and Montana.

ST. PAUL MINNEAPOLIS MANITOBA RAILWAY.

Our epuipment and time are excellent. Our rates are the lowest, but this fact is something which speaks for itself. Definite figures and maps can be obtained by applying to any Agent of the Company, or the General Passenger Agent.

The following are a few of the Principal Points reached via this Line:

ST. CLOUD, SAUK CENTRE, FERGUS FALLS, CROOKSTON, ST. VINCENT, HUTCHINSON, PAYNESVILLE, MORRIS, APPLETON AND BRECKENRIDGE, MINN.; WATERTOWN, ABERDEEN, ELLENDALE, WAHPETON, FARGO, GRAND FORKS, GRAFTON, DEVILS LAKE, BOTTINEAU AND BUFORD, DAKOTA; GLASGOW, DAWES (FT. BELKNAP), ASSINNIBOINE, FT. BENTON, GREAT FALLS, HELENA AND BUTTE, MONTANA; WINNIPEG, MANITOBA, AND ALL PACIFIC COAST POINTS.

Parties seeking farms or business locations will find unusual opportunities for both on this line in Northern Dakota and Montana, also in Minnesota where the Company has for sale at low prices and on favorable terms 2,000,000 acres of excellent farming, grazing and timber lands. For maps and other information address,

J. BOOKWALTER, Land Commissioner.
C. H. WARREN, Gen'l Pass. Ag't.
ST. PAUL, MINN.
A. MANVEL, Gen'l Manager.
W. S. ALEXANDER, Gen'l Traffic Manager

FROM ST. PAUL No. 3 daily	Miles	STATIONS.	TO ST. PAUL No 4 d'l'y
8:05 p. m.	00	Lv...St. Paul...Ar	7:30 a. m.
6:40 p. m.	11	...Minneapolis...	6:25 "
10:35 a. m.	296	......Crookston......	5:35 p. m.

No. 3. Through sleeper to Fergus Falls, Crookston and Winnipeg.
No. 4. Through sleeper from Winnipeg, Crookston and Fergus Falls.

CROOKSTON AND MINOT—Trains leave Crookston daily, Sundays excepted at 10:50 a. m. and arrive at Crookston from Minot at 5:15 p. m., Sundays excepted.

ST. HILAIRE BRANCH—Trains leave Crookston Mondays, Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays at 10:15 a. m. arriving in St. Hilaire at 12:45 p. m. Leave St. Hilaire same days at 2:00 p. m. arriving in Crookston at 4:30 p. m.

A. MANVEL, Gen'l Manager.
C. H. MIX, Agent
C. H. WARREN, Gen'l Pass. Agent.
W. S. ALEXANDER, Traffic Manager.

Northern Pacific

RAILROAD.

The New Route Between

Grand Forks,

AND

St. Paul

Minneapolis,

Duluth,

And all points East. The direct line to

Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, British Columbia, Puget Sound and Alaska.

EXPRESS TRAINS DAILY,

To which are attached Pullman Palace Sleepers and Elegant Dining Cars. On overland trains, Emigrant Sleepers Free. The only line

YELLOWSTONE PARK.

TIME SCHEDULE.

Depart West Bound.		Arrive East Bound.
4:50 p. m.	St. Paul	7:00 a. m.
4:30 "	Minneapolis	6:25 "
3:45 "	Duluth	7:15 "
8:40 "	Brainerd	1:15 a. m.
1:00 a. m.	Winnipeg Junction	8:50 p. m.
2:33 "	Twin Valley	7:25 "
3:27 "	Fertile	6:33 "
4:00 "	Tilden	6:05 "
4:35 "	Red Lake Falls, Depart	5:30 "
	Arrive	5:10 "
5:25 "	South Euclid	4:29 "
5:56 "	Buffington	4:20 "
5:44 "	Keystone	4:05 "
Ar. 6:25 "	Grand Forks, Le.	3:55 "
De. 6:45 "	Ar.	3:20 "
7:12 "	Kelly's	3:05 "
7:27 "	Mekinock	2:50 "
7:42 "	Beatis	2:37 "
7:31 "	Gilby	2:28 "
8:32 "	Johnstown	2:17 "
8:15 "	Forest River	2:05 "
8:25 "	Grafton	1:28 "
7:23 "	Drayton	12:50 "
10:45 "	Arrive...Pembina...Depart	11:35 a. m.

Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars between Grand Forks and St. Paul. Dining Cars on west bound trains. Coupon Tickets on sale to all points South, East and West. For full information as to time, rates, address

W. E. JERMAINE, Ticket Agent, Grand Forks.
CHAS. S. FEE, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

CLEVELAND HOUSE,

R. BURKHARDT, Prop.

Handy to Depot.
Handy to Post Office.
Handy to Land Office.
Handy to Stables.
Handy to Court House.

The most convenient Hotel to any business house and to deal with of any Hotel in the city. Give me a call. Terms $1. Yours truly,

RUDY BURKHARDT.

A. P. HOLAND

(Successor to S. S. Johnson.)

PHOTOGRAPHER

COPYING and ENLARGING

in all sizes and first-class work guaranteed.

PICTURE FRAMES

made to order, on short notice.

Any work in my line neatly and promptly executed at lowest living rates.

GIVE ME A CALL.

Studio opposite Post Office,
Robert Street, - - Crookston, Minn

The Polk County Journal.

H. E. COOKE, Editor and Proprietor.
DEVOTED TO THE WELFARE OF POLK COUNTY.
TERMS---$1.50 Per Annum
VOL. XII. CROOKSTON, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, AUGUST 2, 1888. NO. 15

Polk County Journal.
PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

One Dollar and Fifty Cents, if paid in advance, to any address inside of Polk County. If outside of Polk County 15 cents must be added for postage. If not paid in advance $2 per annum to any address.

ADVERTISING RATES.

SPACE.	1 w.	2 w.	3 w.	1 m.	3 m	6 m.	1 year
¼ inch....	$.50	$1 00	$1 25	$1 50	$3 00	4 50	$ 6 00
1 inch......	75	1 25	1 75	2 00	4 50	6 00	10 00
2 inches....	1 50	2 25	3 00	3 50	6 50	9 50	15 00
3 inches....	1 75	2 75	3 75	4 50	9 50	13 50	20 00
4 inches....	2 50	3 50	4 50	5 50	10 00	18 00	25 00
5 inches....	3 00	4 00	5 00	6 00	12 50	20 00	30 00
¼ column	3 50	4 50	5 50	6 50	15 00	25 00	35 00
½ column	6 00	7 50	10 00	12 00	25 00	35 00	50 00
1 column..	9 50	12 00	15 00	18 00	35 00	60 00	100 00

Entered at the Post Office in Crookston as Second Class matter.

MILLER, FOOTE & SWEATT,
ATTY'S-AT-LAW,
McKinnon Block, - - - Crookston, Minn.

THE PIONEER
HARNESS SHOP,
M. RAUENBUEHLER, Proprietor.
A full supply of everything kept by the trade.
Cor of Broadway and Third Sts,
CROOKSTON, - - - MINN

D. H. FISK,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND LOAN AGENT.
☞ Collections a Specialty. ☜
FERTILE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA.

P. C. SCHMIDT,
ATTORNEY AT LAW. | MONEY TO LOAN
Crookston - Minn

H. STENEERSON,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
Crookston, Minn.

FRANK IVES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
AND
Solicitor of Patents and Pensions,
CROOKSTON, MINN.
Having special arrangements with one fthe most reputable and responsible firms of Patent Lawyers in Washington, I can offer better inducements to inventors than can be secured elsewhere, and absolute certainty against "leakage" of valuable facts pertaining to business entrusted to my care.

A. H. DUNLOP, M. D.,
Graduate McGill University, Montreal.
LICENSED COLLEGE PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON QUEBEC.
Office on Second Street, Crookston.

M. M. VAN DYKE,
Physician and Surgeon,
Office corner of Main and Second Streets,
CROOKSTON, - - - MINNESOTA

A. A. JUST, M. D.,
Homoeopathic Physician and Surgeon,
Office on Broadway, east side, opposite Wm. Anglim's residence.

A. C. WILKINSON,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
(Successor to R. A. Wilkinson,)
Room 5, Furnel Block | Crookston, Minn.

M. LeGUEE,
Veterinary Surgeon.
Residence and office on Jerome's Addition.
CROOKSTON, - - - - MINN.

G. G. HENAULT
Practical Dentist,
SECOND STREET,
CROOKSTON, - - MINN
OFFICE IN DOBSON'S BLOCK,
Over Mrs. Bangs' Fashionable Millinery Store.
☞ All work in my line skilfully and promptly performed. Give me a call.
G. G. HENAULT.

MINNESOTA HOUSE,
(FORMERLY BOX HOUSE.)
ONE-HALF BLOCK FROM DEPOT.
WM. HEIDRICH, - - Proprietor.
Having rented this Popular House and thoroughly re-fitted and re-furnished it throughout, I am now prepared to meet the wants of all who want good and cheap accommodations.
☞ Farmers custom specially invited,
Terms $1.00 per Day.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For President,
BENJ. HARRISON
Of Indiana.

For Vice President,
LEVI P. MORTON,
Of New York.

For Member of Congress, 5th District,
SOLOMON G. COMSTOCK,
Of Clay and Polk Counties.

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

A Republican State Convention for the state of Minnesota will be held on Wednesday, September 5th, 1888, in Market Hall, in the city of St. Paul, at 12 o'clock, noon, for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following positions:

Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.
One Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.
Governor.
Lieutenant Governor.
Secretary of State.
State Treasurer.
Attorney General.

And for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the convention.

All citizens who believe in the principles of the Republican party; who desire its success, and who will support the candidates nominated by the National Republican Convention held in Chicago June 19th, 1888, are invited to co-operate in the election of delegates.

The counties are entitled to the following number of delegates and an equal number of alternates.

Aitkin	4	Martin	4
Anoka	5	Meeker	6
Becker	5	Mille Lacs	3
Beltrami	2	Morrison	4
Benton	3	Mower	7
Big Stone	4	Murray	4
Blue Earth	9	Nicollet	5
Brown	5	Nobles	4
Carlton	3	Norman	4
Carver	4	Olmsted	7
Cass	3	Otter Tail	11
Chippewa	4	Pine	3
Chisago	6	Pipe Stone	4
Clay	5	Polk	9
Cook	2	Pope	3
Cottonwood	4	Ramsey	20
Crow Wing	4	Redwood	4
Dakota	6	Renville	6
Dodge	5	Rice	8
Douglas	6	Rock	4
Faribault	6	St. Louis	10
Fillmore	9	Scott	3
Freeborn	7	Sherburne	4
Goodhue	12	Sibley	4
Grant	4	Stearns	6
Hennepin	38	Steele	6
Houston	6	Stevens	4
Hubbard	2	Swift	4
Isanti	5	Todd	5
Itasca	2	Traverse	4
Jackson	5	Wabasha	6
Kandiyohi	7	Wadena	4
Kanabec	2	Waseca	5
Kittson	3	Washington	7
Lac qui Parle	6	Watonwan	4
Lake	3	Wilkin	2
Le Sueur	7	Winona	8
Lincoln	4	Wright	8
Lyon	5	Yellow Medicine	5
McLeod	4
Marshall	4	Total	150

St. Paul, July 20, 1888.

JOHN S. PILLSBURY, Chairman.
JOEL P. HEATWOLE, Secretary.

☞ The Chairman or Secretaries of the different county conventions will please report to the Secretary of the State Central Committee, the names and post office address of the delegates and alternates, and also the county committeemen. If this is done promptly it will be of great service to the party, and insure prompt and active work. The State Committee request this kind favor of each county convention.

The Two Kinds of Prohibitionists.

Minneapolis Evening Journal.

The third party prohibitionists of Minnesota have held their state convention, adopted their platform and nominated their ticket. We are particular to say third party prohibitionists, because there are two kinds of prohibitionists.

By the methods peculiar to parties that need to hide their weakness in such places,—by admitting delegates from temperance societies and by seating chance attendants from unrepresented counties and by combining all the elements of that kind possible—the convention was made to consist of over 400 people. It was an eminently respectable gathering of good men and women. It was the largest and most enthusiastic third party prohibition convention ever held in the state. It has raised the hopes of that party to a high pitch and led them to make the most extravagant claims as to their strength. They will probably influence some republicans to join them. But we do not believe their hopes will be half realized.

They are early in the field. They have commenced the campaign almost a month before either of the other parties. That is probably a serious mistake. The emotions respond quickly, but they cannot be played upon too long. This emotional, hysterical form of politics, of which we have such a splendid illustration, during the past two days, in St. Paul, is not of the kind that wears. It is too much of a strain on the feelings. There is bound to come a time when the judgment must give the feelings a rest. That time will, in our judgment, come to a great many people in this state before the election in November.

When it comes they will look the facts squarely in the face, and they will be governed by them. They will recall that two years ago the best sentiment of this state demanded that both the old parties take advanced grounds on the temperance question and in favor of strong and effectual measures regulating the liquor traffic. They will remember that the democratic party refused to modify its "time honored" attitude on that question, and, not only denounced all "sumptuary legislation," but put at the head of its ticket the most eminently qualified man in the whole state to represent the saloon interests. They will remember on the other hand that the republican party responded promptly and fully, as it always has, to the well matured sentiments of the people. It not only took square grounds against the saloons and in favor of the most rigid regulation of the liquor traffic practicable, but it fought the campaign squarely on that issue, having for its opponents the combined opposition of the saloon power and the third party prohibitionists. It won, and when the legislature met every promise to the people with respect to the temperance question was fully redeemed. The high license law has been in effect scarcely more than a year in any part of the state, and not more than seven months in other parts, but it has reduced the number of saloons now in existence below the number before the law was passed about 30 per cent., and below the number that would have been in operation by this time, if it had not been for this law, by nearly 50 per cent.

Another fact which will not be overlooked is that this law has been enforced. It is no dead letter on the statute book. There has been no wholesale or even considerable evasion of its provisions. It was founded upon public sentiment and there never was any danger of its failure. The saloon power did not submit to its restrictions without making a great effort to break them, but it soon concluded that the wiser course would be to submit, because it saw plainly that public sentiment was overwhelmingly on the side of the law. The secret of the success of that law was because public sentiment stood right by it. There is no other way, in this country, to account for the enforcement of any law.

Now what would have been the condition of things provided the republicans had been defeated in the last election? If the democrats had won there would have been no high license law, at least. Whether the saloon men would have thought it wise to go to extremes on their side no one can say. But the saloon would have dominated politics; that much is certain. If the third party prohibitionists had won the election then there would have been a prohibitory law with all the accompaniments of no license, free whisky, outraged law, disgraced authority and the long train of disorders that always follow an effort to legislate into existence that which does not exist; to enact that public sentiment shall be so and so when public sentiment is not that way at all.

Another election approaches and the people of Minnesota are again confronted with this saloon question. There can be no doubt that a very large proportion of them would be glad to see the saloon doors closed forever, and live in hope of seeing the time when that is done. They are prohibitionists in every sense of the word, but one. No doubt a majority of these people are in the republican party. They take the history of their party—its long record on the side of the best in every political and moral reform. They recall the fact that every prohibitory statute yet enacted having application to a whole state has been passed by a republican legislature, and that the most, if not all, the legislation of that character in existence was made before the prohibition third party was ever heard of. They will recognize the fact that the republican party not only stands for other important issues in this campaign which they have no right to desert, but that their party is moving forward as rapidly on the line of temperance legislation as the circumstances will justify and is reaching the high ground of prohibitory enactment just as fast as the sentiment of the country demands it and will enforce it. Prohibition that comes in that way will be like the high license law in this state, and will be successful for the same reason—it will rest solidly upon public sentiment. The republican party is pledged by its whole record as well as by its recent history to prohibition of that kind and it will live to make it law when the right time comes and to put it in force long after the irrational, hysterical third party movement shall have been abandoned by its deceived and misguided enthusiasts.

Warren Register: We took a whirl to Crookston, last Thursday, and back home next day. Crookston "was still there." A special term of District Court was in session, with Judge Mills holding down the seat of justice. The case of Corrigan vs Tarbell was on trial. About $35,000 worth of property is the bone of contention. It will be good picking for the lawyers, anyway, no matter which of the parties secures the verdict. The case will go to the supreme court before it is settled, undoubtedly Kittson County Enterprise: Att'y Geo. McManus, of the firm of Steenerson & McManus, was a guest of ye editor on Tuesday. He was accompanied by his brother. Mr. M. was here as attorney in the cases of August Shoegren vs. St. P. M. & M. R. R., and N. P. Peterson vs. St. P. M. & M. R. R. W. H. Alley had been appointed referee in the cases mentioned. The first named suit was brought to reclaim damages for a horse that he had killed while in transit, and secured judgment against the company for $175.00 and costs. Mr. Peterson had two head of cattle killed and secured judgment against said company for $94.79 and costs.

Knute Nelson's Platform.

It Appears to be Embodied in the Cogent Expression "We are Going to Clean out Grover Cleveland"—He Refuses a Prohibition Nomination for Governor.

Washington Special Telegram to Pioneer Press.

There has been a great deal of interest among the Democrats at Washington to know what the attitude of Representative Knute Nelson of Minnesota will be with respect to the campaign this fall since his vote in favor of the Mills tariff bill. Mr. Nelson, as is well known, represents a large and influential class of Republicans, in whose ranks are undoubtedly to be found nearly all of the Norwegians of the State. It is not forgotten by any politicians that the Norwegians constitute a very important political factor in the States of Minnesota and Wisconsin. The hope has been entertained by the Democrats that the electoral vote of the State could be secured by Cleveland and Thurman. Cleveland's western cabinet officers have deceived him in this respect. In the calculations which the western element in Mr. Cleveland's cabinet have made as to the possibility of securing new strength in the Northwest, Minnesota has always been regarded as the most promising field for a new political departure. If those gentlemen have based their hopes upon anything that they have supposed Knute Nelson would do for them, they have builded upon a very broken reed. The following telegraphic correspondence to-day will show that the Democrats and factionists of all parties cannot place any reliance upon their assumption that Knute Nelson is disloyal to the Republican cause. His sturdy answer to all inquiries is: "We propose to clean Grover Cleveland out this fall."

THE PROHIBS' INVITATION.

Mr. Nelson received the following telegrams from St. Paul to-day from Prohibitionists who wish to have him accept the nomination for governor on their ticket:

St. Paul, Minn., July 25—Hon. Knute Nelson, Washington: Can we present your name for governor? Prohibition Convention to-day. Z. D. Scott, C. E. Tharman.

To Hon. Knute Nelson: Strong demand for your nomination on Prohibition ticket for governor. Will you accept? Answer. J. W. Earle.

To both of these telegrams Mr. Nelson says: "I replied in substance as follows: 'Would not accept the nomination on your ticket or any other ticket.'" Speaking of the fact that it had been suggested that because he had voted for the Mills bill he might seek a new party alignment this fall, and that the Democrats and mugwumps are placing great hopes upon the fact that he had not voted with the body of the Republicans upon the bill, Mr. Nelson replied with indignation that his views upon the tariff now are the same as when he first came to congress; that he has not changed in any particular; that he is just as good a Republican as he ever was. He added and said that he was entirely willing to be quoted literally:

"You may say that we are going to clean Grover Cleveland out this fall, and then we are going to clean out the high tariff crank Republicans who want to revise the tariff by repealing the internal revenue taxes upon whisky and tobacco."

There certainly is nothing in what Mr. Nelson says or in what he evidently thinks to give the Democrats the slightest comfort. He dwelt with the greatest emphasis and satisfaction upon the statement, "We are goin to clean out Cleveland this fall."

Warren Register: Last Friday several passengers "got left" at Crookston on the train for St. Vincent and Winnipeg, who had tickets for Helena and other points on the Montana line, and did not discover the mistake till too late to return to Crookston for the Grand Forks train, which they should have taken. One lady, with a little child, who had a ticket through to Helena, was one of the unfortunates thus left on the train, and when she found herself off her route and among strangers, and compelled to return to Crookston and stay over night, without money to pay hotel bills, she burst into a flood of tears that excited the sympathy of all in the car. A few good Samaritans present "took up a collection" for her and the baby's benefit, amounting to several dollars. She came on to Warren, where "mine host" of the Windsor took care of them till train time, then assisted them off on the train "all for sweet charity's sake." They were "passed" by the conductors to and from Warren. Somebody is to blame for these mistakes which frequently happen at Crookston, and we thus call the attention of the St. P. M. & M. "folks" to the matter.

Harrison as a Lawyer.

One of the Greatest Cross-Examiners in the Country.

From the Indianapolis News.

There was a lawyer once who undervalued Harrison, and that was his colleague when he was in the senate, Mr. Voorhees. That gentleman was called upon in one of the many trials of the most celebrated murder case in Indiana—the Young murder, or as it is better known, the "Clem case" Harrison prosecuted and obtained three or four separate convictions, about the first of which was the time when Mr. Voorhees first defended. In stating the case Harrison, with great explicitness and detail, defined the whole theory of the prosecution, whereat Voorhees rejoiced with exceeding great joy. "Harrison is a very able lawyer," said Voorhees to a friend, "but he is overrated. He has laid himself open here; given his case away in the start."

"Don't be too sure," said his friend. "He knows what he is about."

"You will see," said Voorhees.

He did see. Harrison in his closing argument riddled Voorhee's argument with a bird-shot destructiveness that made a perfect sieve of it: in common parlance, "it wouldn't hold water." And he did it by the exposition of notes he took as Voorhees spoke; and then taking these points one after another, he ground them against the theory of the prosecution which he had so frankly stated in advance, as between an upper and a nether mill-stone.

"His power to go through a case beats any man's I ever saw," said one who spoke from the knowledge of years of observation. "He will take the testimony of a case stretching over days, or weeks, and will sift every particle of evidence pertaining to the various heads to which it belongs, according to the points or plans of battle he has laid out. Everything pro and con, by every witness, is thus grouped, and the whole marshaled in order—as one mighty say, by division, brigade, regiment, company and all bearing down on the assault."

But Harrison has more than one plan. He is fertile in expedient to a striking degree, and can change his order of attack in the face of the enemy. A popular lawyer tells a story of him illustrative of this. It was in Harrison's early days here at the bar. He was opposed to a very formidable array of old and eminent lawyers. He was a smooth-faced, yellow-haired young man, and his eminent legal opponents kept him jumping at a lively rate. A keen old Irishman, who was a spectator in the court-room, was a witness of the contest. "I loike that little Horrison," said he. "He has so many ways. When they bate him wan way, he turns around and bates them anoother way; and they can't carhner him at all, at all!"

In the management of witnesses, it is said by those who know, that few lawyers are his equal, and fewer still his superior. "I have not often seen Harrison equalled as a cross-examiner," said a lawyer at the bar recently "and I have never seen but one for instance in which I thought him surpassed, and that was in Judge Fullerton's work during the Beecher-Tilton trial."

Northfield News: The republicans in congress favored taking one-half the tariff off of sugar, but the resolution was defeated by the democrats. Sugar is an article of prime necessity and is one of the articles that should be placed on the free list. This is only one sample of the way the democrats keep their promises for reform. As to talk about tariff reform it is a matter of history that the platforms of both parties have indulged in it. And how have the promises been kept? All tariff reform must originate in the lower house of congress. Since the close of the war the republicans have had the majority in the house for about 11 years, and the democrats for about the same length of time. In that time, the republican congresses have passed eight acts by which the revenues were reduced $352,504,569, while during the nearly eleven years of democratic supremacy congress has reduced the revenue $5,868,935. Now which party meant what it said? The republican party is now, as it always has been, in favor of tariff reform, but it advocates a reform which will benefit the American people.

Warren Sheaf: Ezra F. Elliot, county superintendent of Polk county, was in the city on Monday last; Mr. Elliot is one of the best educators in the northern part of the state and he is working hard to advance the schools of his county. If the people of Polk county are wise in their day and generation, they will re-elect Mr. Elliot without opposition next fall.

The Minnesota Loan and Trust Co.
HAVE ESTABLISHED AN AGENCY AT CROOKSTON.
☞ MONEY LOANED ON IMPROVED FARMS,
IN ANY PART OF THE RED RIVER VALLEY.
NO DELAY! NO BONUS!
Money Supplied the Moment Notes are Signed. Letters of inquiry promptly answered.
STEENERSON & McMANUS, Agents,
Two doors South of U. S. Land Office. CROOKSTON, MINN

HARMLESS SPUR WIRE
FENCING.
Cannot injure or tear stock. Comparatively cheapest fencing made. Is endorsed by every one who uses it, Strongest, most visible and only safe fence.
☞ SEND FOR CIRCULARS AND PRICES. ☜
IN USE IN MANY OF THE STATES AND TERRITORIES.
Manufactured by the
LARM MANUFACTURING CO.,
Cor. Clinton and Van Buren Sts., Chicago, Ill.
For Sale by G. M. Barber, Second Street.

C. H. SAAKE,
Practical Watchmaker and Jeweler.
I HAVE NOW IN MY Store the Largest, Best and Cheapest stock of JEWELRY,
CLOCKS,
SILVERWARE
ever offered at retail. There is positively no store in Crookston that can compare with my magnificent line of Goods.
NO BANKRUPT STOCK,
No goods tarnished by snare or deceit, but Honest Goods bought direct from the best manufacturers, with clean, solid cash. Do not forget name and place!
C. H. SAAKE, Main Street, Opposite Merchants' Nat'l Bank.

JUST RECEIVED, ONE CARLOAD
Wagons and Buggies
FROM RACINE WAGON AND BUGGY COMPANY.
We venture to say without fear of contradiction that this is the finest car of goods, in the Buggy line, ever brought into Crookston.
NO SNIDE OR BANKRUPT STOCK,
The real Simon Pure Racine Manufacture.
WE can please the most fastidious in style and finish, and we guarantee every Buggy sold. We ask our customers, and the public generally, to give us a call, if they want a first-class Buggy or Wagon at bottom prices. Our Platform, Spring and Delivery Wagons are Real Beauties.
A FULL STOCK OF
Farm Machinery and Implements
CONSTANTLY ON HAND.
McKINNON BRO'S,
McKinnon' Block, - - - - - - - - - - - Main Street.

Polk County Journal.

W. G. COOKE, Publisher.

CROOKSTON, MINN., AUGUST 2.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

'Round Home.

Kittle Eiken moved over to the addition on Monday and John Alderman took possession of the apartments over the hardware store.

The prospects are that there will be hundreds of tons of hay put up this year as almost every farmer is busy putting up all he can handle.

J. T. Johnson was down from Tilden last week. Says crops are looking well and people are honest and happy because they are all republicans up there—a democrat is unheard of.

The Ladies of the M. E. Church will give an entertainment in McKinnon Hall, Friday evening, August 3, 1888. The attractions consist in part of a Doll Drill, Readings by Miss Hale, of Rochester, N. Y., and Ice Cream and Cake.

Go and enjoy the entertainment at the Hall to-morrow night. Hear Miss Marie Hale elocute, see the dolls drill and get away with some ice cream and cake. The small boys should remember that in this case the pantry windows roost high and the screen cannot be cut.

Secure your seats for the Gus. Williams comedy company, which will be here on Saturday evening Aug. 4th. The new home comedy-drama, "Keppler's Fortunes," will be presented, introducing new music, new songs and new recitation. Tickets on sale at Berthiaume Jewelry Co's store. Secure your seats early.

Sunday afternoon a four year-old child of Bernt Johnson's living in Sampson's Addition, was attacked by a cow and seriously hurt, a horn being driven clear through the little fellow's cheek. He was also bruised on the body, about the breast. Dr. Hanson was called, who did all in his power to alleviate his sufferings, and last accounts are favorable for his speedy recovery.

O. M. Holmes, the genial editor of the Red Lake Falls Gazette and J. F. Holmes, the real estate hummer were in the city on Thursday and left just in time to get home before the big Friday shower. J. F. says while he is a cold-water man from principle all right enough, he knows when he has enough of a good thing and likes what little he requires on the side in moderate quantities.

Jack McLaren brought from Dakota a fine sample of Indian ingenuity in shape of a finely polished buffalo horn, mounted on a buffalo hoof, also finely polished. It was so constructed as to form a beautiful vase for the centre table. We tried to convince Jack that he should leave it on our table as a sample of Dakota's claims to admission to civilization but some how we couldn't make him see the point.

Minnesota not only raises the best wheat, the largest vegetables, and the most luscious fruit, but she leads the world on babies. If any one doubts this statemement let him visit the Minneapolis Industrial Exposition on Tuesday, Sept. 18th, and gaze upon the one hundred dainty, dimpled darlings that will be present at the "Baby Show" competing for the elegant and costly prizes offered by the merchants of Minneapolis.

That shingle slab edger in the saw mill is tempered for blood. Last Saturday afternoon, Fred Finnegan took the saw as sub. for the regular operative, who was sick. He had worked but thirty minutes, when his hand hit the saw which nearly severed the first two fingers and cut the third slightly. Dr. Van Dyke, who dressed the hand assures Fred that his fingers will be saved, but one will remain stiff at the first joint.

In the Prattsburgh, (Steuben Co., N. Y.,) News we notice the report of the death of E. M. Noble, which event occurred on Friday, July 20th, 1888. On May 17th, 1887, he arrived in this city in quest of health, having for about three years been afflicted with that dread disease, consumption, but all too surely had the grim destroyer marked his victim and there was no help for him. He remained here several weeks making many warm friends who will regret to hear of his untimely death.

The lawn party given by Mesdames Wm. Anglim, I. U. Jennings, T. Thorson and C. E. Dampier, at the residence of the former, on Thursday evening last, in honor of Mrs. Charlie Stanton, of St. Paul, and her sister, Miss Ruggleberger, was a brilliant affair and the event of the season. Some two hundred people were present and enjoyed the festivities of the occasion. The pleasant rooms, decorated with many choice flowers, were thrown open to all who wished to enjoy themselves within at a social game of cards or in pleasant conversation, while the smooth green lawn, interspersed with trees and clumps of shrubbery and illuminated by electric lights and gay Chinese lanterns, presented a lovely scene and afforded a tempting resort for those who wished to stroll about and watch the dancers as they kept time to the music of the dreamy waltz or stately quadrille, which was wafted in sweet strains on the summer air. An elegant collation was served to the many guests, who departed for their homes feeling that they had been royally entertained.

Wheat No. 1 Hard 69 cents.

The Salmagundi Club drive out to S. M. McKee's this evening.

Dave McLeary, Childs & Co's foreman predicts a late harvest this year.

Call at Mrs. E. E. Bangs' Millinery Parlors for Mrs. Ozias' Celebrated Orange Cream for the toilet. [14-tf]

Excellent work is being done on the street from the bridge to the Fifth ward. A much needed improvement.

A very enjoyable party was that on the lawn of W. S. Taylor, last Thursday evening, fun, music and refreshments being in order.

Miss Marie L. Hale, the gifted elocutionist of Rochester, recited in her usual brilliant style—Syracuse, N. Y. Tomorrow night at McKinnon.

The Bruce's are taking "time by the forelock," arranging to run water into the stable next winter, a comfort every farmer having a flowing well should provide for.

On all loans we make, interest payable at our office in Crookston.

STEENERSON & McMANUS.

Miss Maria L. Hale, of Rochester, a reader of intelligence which beams forth in every line of her fresh attraction, free and winning personality is far superior to Mrs. Scot Siddons. We regret that we cannot hear her oftener.—Mt. Morris, N. Y. Tomorrow night at McKinnon Hall.

Mr. T. A. Mandt, one of the thrifty farmers of Lessor, was in the city this week and gave THE JOURNAL a pleasant call. He informed a JOURNAL reporter that crops in that favored portion of Polk were never in better condition than at present, and our reporter says that judging by Mr. Mandt's new buggy, harness and "fixens" that farming must be profitable out there.

Best residence lots in the city and on your own terms; mind, ON YOUR OWN TERMS.

STEENERSON & McMANUS.

Owing to some blunder of the railroads, Mr. Carroll has not yet received his household goods, but on Monday, he moved into his house, determined to have a home if not provided with all house-keeping facilities. Mrs. Carroll says they are "camping out" for the present, so perhaps this local need not carry the impression that they are at home to receive company.

The wagon roads north of town are, and have been for the most part of the time this summer in wretched condition. A great deal of money has been expended on the road from John Wyand's place to the Red Lake Falls road—more than enough to have made an excellent road if the land was sufficiently drained. This is the only thing needed to enable the construction of roads that would be a credit to the country and city, and it cannot be done otherwise.

George Soper, who has been in the employ of E. D. Childs & Co., was taken sick a few days ago with what proved to be a severe case of diphtheria. Under the direction of health officer Van Dyke, he was taken to the home of his brother, on the old G. L. Gray farm south of town, where with careful nursing, he has become convalescent. An interesting feature of the case is that the inflamation was driven from his throat to one of his feet which had recently been kicked by a horse.

We loan money to pay up railroad lands.

STEENERSON & McMANUS.

If there are young men and woman in this state who desire to get married, and who hesitate because they have not yet accumulated funds sufficient to to fee the minister, entertain the wedding guests and have something left to buy an outfit for housekeeping, they should correspond with the general manager of the Minneapolis Industrial Exposition. At this great show, there will be a Wedding Day, when the management will furnish the minister, the music, and more wedding guests than any president of the United States has had. Then come the wedding gifts to delight the bride and encourage the groom. Don't, Miss or Mister, let this opportunity pass, but have your names registered for matrimony on Thursday, Sept. 13.

We are established in Crookston TO STAY. We do not do business here this year to go away the next. In loaning money, as in other business, we have a character for fair dealing to sustain Call on us before going elsewhere. Remember all interest on our loans is payable at our office.

STEENERSON & McMANUS.

Newton Beers' "Lost in London" company played to a large house Monday evening. The company, as a whole is a very good one. Mr. Beers as "Job Armroyd" proves a master of language, his expression and accent portraying the character to the life. Kate Romaine, as "Tiddy Dragglethorp, a Lancashire lass," rather captivated, not only the "Blinker" but the audience. It is a strong character and she does it it justice. Wm. E. Burton comes pretty near being a whole show in himself, in the characters of "Blinker," the "Street Sweep" and "thetheatrical manager." The male quartette was one of the finest that has appeared upon our stage and was heartily encored. The piece was entirely new to this audience and descriptive of miners and mining, a business with which most of us are unacquainted, but from what we have read of such things we should judge that the characters are taken true to life. The scenery the company carries is splendid, and no small aid in the faithful presenting of the play. The tableau—Job's vision," is the finest we ever saw produced in this city.

Another Man Escaped!

Sheriff Paulsrud has moved over to Sampson's Addition from the jail.

County Surveyor Arnold, who was up in the northeast part of Polk Co., last week, reports crops extra fine up there. Says hay is abundant but so far, owing to rain, not much has been secured.

Fred Anderson has just put in a large new coffee pot to accommodate the demand for that excellent beverage. No danger now that Fred will ever be out of coffee whatever the demand.

Miss Katie Ross, a teacher in the Fort Wayne, Ind., High School, is in in the city, visiting her uncle and cousin, Mr. John Ross and Mrs. S. E. Schmidt. She will return to her school Sept. 1st.

We have only one note and mortgage we make a loan the day applied for, charge no bonus, and make interest payable at our office in Crookston.

STEENERSON & McMANUS.

Reports from Rocksbury to THE JOURNAL state that a severe hail storm occurred in that town on Monday July 23d, damaging the crops of Chas. Svenson, Hans Jacobson and Andrew Woasson about 50 per cent.

Mrs. E. E. Bangs and Miss A. Gorman departed last evening for Helena, Spokane Falls and western points on a pleasure tour. They expect to be away several weeks. Their many friends unite in wishing them a pleasant time and a safe return.

Last week news was received of a wreck on the road west of Great Falls by which engineer Fred Almy was hurt. First advices stated that he was very seriously scalded and suffered a broken limb but later accounts are to the effect that he was only scalded and not as badly as was reported. It seems he ran into some cattle on the track and ditched his engine. The fireman was also scalded some. It is said that they are both in a hospital at Fort Assiniboine and doing well.

We satisfy all our customers, we ask no bonus, and we pay over money on loans the moment notes are signed.

STEENERSON & McMANUS.

THE JOURNAL does not pretend to be the best local paper in the Udited States claiming to have every item that happens, like its big-head contemporary, of the Times; if it did we should be very much ashamed to allow the greatest society event of the season,—the lawn party at the residence of one the most prominent business men of the city, to pass entirely unnoticed. We do pretend and try to obtain every item of news extant but we don't brag of being the best paper in the world for that.

The match game between the Red Lake Falls and Crookston nines took place Tuesday on the hill grounds, and proved to be a closely contested one, resulting in a victory for the visiting nine, on a score of 8 to 9. Good playing was done on both sides, and Crookston lost on critical points. Graves and Father Lawler composed the battery for the home nine, Fowler and Meehan for Red Lake Falls. Graves and Berthiaume distinguished themselves by steady work as did several others, Dufliette perhaps doing the most brilliant work for the victors. Chas. Shapleigh did well as umpire, but as is usually the case, was obliged to swallow some hard criticism. They play tomorrow at the Falls.

Mrs. I. U Jennings will sell Millinery at less than cost for the next twenty days. [13-tf]

On Thursday July 19th Mrs. W. D. Hurlbut went to St. Cloud in response to a telegram announcing that her sister, Mrs. George Reynolds, who had been very sick with consumption was very much worse and not likely to live. On Wednesday July 23d Mrs. Reynolds died, and the same evening Judge and Mrs. Reynolds left here for St. Cloud. Mr. Hurlbut and A. C. Cowing, (Mrs. Reynolds' brother) went down on Thursday evening's train. The funeral ceremonies took place at St. Cloud on Friday, attended by hosts of loving friends who testified their respects by bringing large quantities and assisting in the performance of the last sad rites for the departed. The remains were brought to Alexandria, the home of her girlhood, for interment beside her father and mother. Five of her seven brothers now living and her only sister were in attendance. At Alexandria the attendance was large testifying the love and respect in which she had been held and here the floral offerings were also profuse. Most of the relatives from this city returned on Sunday last.

A Card.

I desire to announce to the voters of Polk County that I am candidate for nomination for County Attorney of Polk County, all rumors to the contrary notwithstanding, subject to the approval of the Polk County republican convention.

HALVOR STEENERSON.

Another "General Jail Delivery."

On Tuesday or Wednesday of last week Sheriff Paulsrud and family "broke jail in broad daylight" and escaped to Sampson's Woodland Addition. The Times man can now set his dogs on the sheriff again and this time he will be right—they all "escaped in broad daylight," and got safely away.

New Restaurant.

On Tuesday next, Mrs. P. A. Dufour will open a restaurant in the office building on the corner of Main and Third Sts. Everything will be kept in first-class style and the patronage of the public is respectfully solicited.

A Double Drowning.

On Sunday last at about one p. m., Chris. Lockrem, aged 23 and Torger Lockrem, aged 21, were drowned in the Red Lake River, on the old Honeywell place about 4 miles east of the city. With five other men all employes of E. D. Childs & Co., on Sec. 3, they went to the river for a bathe. It seems that none of them could swim. After they had been in a few minutes Chris. who had waded out into the river a little farther than the rest, was observed to be in trouble, choking and strangling and Torger started to aid him. When within a few feet of Chris., Torger suddenly sank and rose no more, and Chris., who was then nearly strangled to death sprang out of the water nearly half his length and sank to rise no more. So sudden was this terrible tragedy enacted that the other men who were perfectly paralyzed with fear and consternation could think of nothing to do in time to be of any service, so after waiting a short time in the vain hope that the bodies would rise they took the clothing of the unfortunate men to the farm house and came over to the city to inform Mr. Childs and secure help. Mr. Childs at once summoned help and repaired to the scene and spent the balance of the day in further efforts to recover the bodies. One of his men, being an expert swimmer and diver explored the place where the men went down and found that the river bottom had been changed. It had been from four to five feet deep all around there heretofore but he found it deepened to 15 or 20 feet scooped out, no doubt by eddying. This new feature was doubtless what caught Chris. who was supposed to be acquainted with the grounds. The river was thoroughly dragged on Monday for a long distance with no success. About 6 p. m., the body of Torger was discovered caught at the head of an island about one mile below. On Tuesday, Andrew a brother of the boys, arrived from their old home at Denniston, Goodhue Co., intending, if the bodies had been found to take them back with him. He decided Monday to wait a little while in the hope of finding the body of Chris., so as to take them both together. Chris. has been working for Childs & Co., since April 1st and was highly esteemed being a sober, honest and efficient young man. Torger had been recently in the employ of the St. Paul Marble Works as traveling agent, has been a school teacher and was an unusually intelligent young man. He had decided to try farm life for this summer and secure a school next winter and so had hired to Childs & Co., to be with his brother. Their father lives on his farm in Goodhue Co. Their mother died several years since. There are five brothers and sisters remaining. Childs & Co., speak in terms of the highest praise of the boys and have done all in their power to aid in this sad affair, E. D. devoting his whole time and energy in the search for the bodies. Up to the hour of going to press the body of Chris. had not been reported found.

LATER. The body of Chris. was found about 2 p. m., on Wednesday by Wm. Marm and others, almost opposite the residence of Jas. Greenhalgh Jr., fast to a set line stretched across the river. It was in such a state of decomposition as to render it improbable that it can be sent to Goodhue County.

Might Have Been Severe.

On Sunday morning Mr. M. Mossefin's hired girl made a mistake that might have cost the lives of eight persons, her own included. Among the articles for breakfast she was preparing some pancakes, and, not finding the baking powder can in its accustomed place on the pantry shelf she skirmished about for it. She did not find it in the pantry so she looked upon a shelf in the cellar way, and finding a tin box, opened it and as the substance therein contained resembled baking powder she used it. A short time after breakfast all those who had partaken of those pancakes began to feel sick; some of them vomiting freely and recovering. Mrs. M., suspecting something wrong about the breakfast questioned the girl closely and eliceted the fact that the baking powder used came from the small can in the cellarway, then she knew that they had all taken a mild dose of rat poison which had been put in a little pepper box and kept for use as a mouse exterminator. After this discovery a thorough emetic was administered all around and all were soon over the effects of the dose. The lesson that girl learned by this experience will be a salutary one and it teaches that one can not be too careful in such important matters. Had the poison been arsenic or strychnine the results would have been far more serious. So many rumors have gone the rounds in relation to the affair that we deemed an authentic statement of the exact facts due to all concerned and we give them as they were told us by Mr. Mossefin himself.

Enterprising Youths.

Who says that the genus homo of our city, yclept the kids, are not enterprising and generous withal? At the lawn party Thursday evening several ambitious kids cut the wire screen at the pantry window and abstracted a generous quantity of cake and several dishes of ice cream. After eating the ice cream, however, they generously returned the dishes, showing that their object was but to supply the cravings of the kid nature, and not for paltry lucre. There seems to be a hoodlum element in this city which is increasing in a manner that calls for effective notice. In this case suspicion points to two young lads as the guilty parties—in fact the suspicion is said to be so much of a certainty that their arrest would be justifiable and may yet be determined upon. We would advise those boys to go a little slower in the future, for, even if they are not arrested for this offense they are spotted and will be closely watched in the future and should they be caught in like offenses in the future they will probably see the inside of some reform school if no worse.

100 100

CHOICE RESIDENCE LOTS

IN JEROME'S ADDITION!

Nearer the Business Center than any other Lots now for sale over there.

Above High Water Mark. Good Cellars and Good Wells

Easily Obtained. If you want a Building Lot, or if you desire a chance for investment where you can double your money inside of a year. It will pay you to look into this chance to

BUY AT YOUR OWN FIGURES, PRACTICALLY!

M. R. BROWN.

IT PAYS

TO TRADE WITH

BARNES & SLOCUM,

CASH DEALERS IN

Groceries and Crockery.

Get their prices and you will say so.

McKinnon Block, Robert St., Crookston.

No. 1 Hard.

W. D. Bailey returned from Duluth this week bringing with him specimens of iron ore taken from his iron mine which is located between Ely and Tower City, nearly 100 miles from Duluth. An analysis of the specimens he has, made by Robinson Bros., of Duluth, shows 62.40 per cent of solid iron; silica, 10.65 and phosphorus .056. The ore grades No. 2 but as it is the first in the mine, being taken out about four feet down the probability is that Bessemer ore will soon be reached which is the very best and valuable. Mr. Bailey considers the mine extremely valuable and has refused an offer of $100,000 for his interest. Says he can take $25,000 for a fourth interest which will give him capital to develop the mine. We trust that his bright dreams may be fully realized for he has always been a hard-working man and amply deserves all the good luck that may befall him.

Virtue Has Its Reward.

Mr. R. Smith, who has for so many years been a poor but honest wheat buyer of the democratic persuasion, has this week met with his reward in the shape of his commission as post master at the Corners—yclept Carman.

Polk County Needs a Jail.

The escape of Wm. Mills, the man committed to await the action of the Grand Jury, from East Grand Forks, but emphasizes what is perfectly plain to every man, that Polk County needs a new jail. A few weeks ago Sheriff Paulsrud took a man to the jail at Fergus Falls, who, a few days later was released owing to a defect in the commitment papers. Sheriff Paulsrud informs THE JOURNAL that when he presented his bill to the County Board the county attorney opposed its payment on the ground that the commitment papers had not been submitted to him by the Sheriff for his approval, and the bill was rejected. He says that when the prisoner, Mills, was turned over to him he did not propose to take any more chances of caring for prisoners for Polk County at his own expense so he took Mills to the Jail and put him in a cell. The County provides no jailer, so the Sheriff, or his deputy has to act in that capacity. Mr. Paulsrud, took the papers to the county Attorney and stated that the prisoner had said that he would plead guilty to the charge and accept whatever penalty the Judge should attach. The county Attorney said he would lay the matter before the Judge, who, when the matter was laid before him decided that the case would have to take its regular course. It was Monday noon before the Sheriff got this matter arranged and ready to take his prisoner to Fergus Falls which he intended to do that evening. On Sunday the prisoner was allowed a few hours after dinner in the corrider for exercise. On Monday noon one of the deputies fed the man, who plead to be allowed a short time out in the corridor. The deputy intending to be around there an hour or so granted the request and allowed the man to come out of the cell, intending before he went to the court room to lock him up in the cell again. This important duty he forgot and the prisoner improved the opportunity to make good his escape by getting under the floor and digging out through the wall in the rear of the jail. When the sheriff arrived the bird had flown, and no one had seen him go, but he was seen in the jail about four o'clock. The sheriff informs us that it was his orders to the deputy to keep the man in the cell and when he was there, this was done save a few hours on Sunday when he could watch him. Now it seems to us that the sheriff is not wholly to blame in the matter as some claim. He certainly cannot be in two places at once and while obliged to be in court, cannot be watching prisoners, nor can his deputies. There is reason in all things and the law does not require impossibilities. What the county should do is to build a good jail, where it ought to be, in the court house yard and supply a jailer to care for it, then, if with the proper facilities at command, the sheriff allows his prisoners to slip through his hands, punish him, as he would deserve.

For Sale.

A pure blood Polled Aberdeen Angus bull. Will sell cheap for cash or trade for colt. For terms see

THEODORE GREENHALGH.

Hayland.

For the privilege of cutting grass on railroad lands, call on [12-15] F. O. SUSTAD, Crookston.

LOTS.

Lots in exchange for farming lands.

STEENERSON & McMANUS

Blaine and Waterson.

Arrangements Being Made to Have Them Speak at the State Fair

At a recent meeting of the State Fair managers in St. Paul, there was considerable discussion over a proposition that Hon. James G. Blaine and Henry Watterson should be invited to attend the fair and deliver addresses. Each of the distinguished speakers would be given a separate day, and would undoubtedly, call out an immense assemblage. Ultimately it was decided that letters should be written to both gentlemen, extending to them an invitation to be present, as well as Hon. Norman J. Coleman, commissioner of agriculture. Incidental to the discussion, it was stated that Secretary Robert Miller of the democratic state central committee, when the subject was broached to him of inviting Messrs. Blaine and Watterson to the fair, had declared that if such a step were taken, he would address communications to every democrat in Minnesota decrying such an undertaking.

"But the people would come to hear these gentlemen," remarked President Merriam, "and surely we could not be accused of partiality if we had such representative men of both parties as Mr. Blaine and Henry Watterson, the world-renowned champion of the star-eyed goddess of reform. What we want to do is to bring crowds of people to the fair, and make it an object for them to come, and I cannot suggest any better attractions than the two gentlemen whose names we have been discussing.

We refer to farmers to whom we have made loans as to our promptness in dealing with them. Our old customers always recommend their neighbor to us.

STEENERSON & McMANUS.

THE OFFICE OF

COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS

WIL BE OPEN

EVERY SATURDAY.

RESIDENCE—With D. N. Taylor, Esq., Broadway.

A. F. LAPLANT.

PLAIN AND ORNAMENTAL

PLASTERING

Done to Order. All Work Warranted.

CROOKSTON, MINN.

Communicated.

ED. JOURNAL: Some of my friends have requested me to announce in your valuable paper, that my name will again be presented to the republican county convention on the 15th of August next for the nomination of county Treasurer. I do so with sincere thanks to the many who so often have honored me with their suffrage and who again voluntarily offer me their support. If nominated and elected, I can only promise to use my whole energy to faithfully and honestly perform the duties of the office. I have heard it reported that my friend Mr. Ole Thoreson, who was my opponent two years ago, should have my promise that I would support him for county treasurer this fall. It is true that I made Mr. Thoreson a proposition BEFORE the convention, that if he would withdraw from the contest for the nomination at that time, I would promise to support him this fall, but my proposition was not accepted. Mr. Thoreson, with his friends, went into the convention and made a strong and vigorous—though fair and honorable—fight for the nomination, but failed to get it. The vote of the convention being 50 for Thoreson and 68 for me. It was a close but fair contest in a convention that was conceded to be one of the fairest ever held in this county. I never made him a promise after the convention believing then, as I do now, that Mr. Thoreson was too true a republican and too honorable a man to go back on the proceedings of a convention in which he and his friends took such an earnest and active part.

Respectfully,

O. H. LICKEN.

Gus. Williams, one of the brightest comedians on the stage, will present his comedy of "Keppler's Fortunes" at the Opera House next Saturday evening, supported by his own powerful company. The fame of Mr. Williams as an actor and author of many popular comic songs and recitations is well known throughout the country. Mr. Williams will intrduce in "Keppler's Fortunes" a budget of his songs and specialties. The Detroit Tribune in speaking of the play, says:

"Keppler's Fortunes" is the name of a new comedy in which Gus. Williams appeared at White's theatre last night. Mr. Williams as Albert Keppler is a New York butcher. His only relative, a brother in Germany, dies intestate, and Keppler inherits a fortune of $250,000. His ambitious wife attempts to enter a fashionable set, and a new home is purchased. Keppler becomes the prey of a sharper who flatters him a good deal, quite upset by his good fortune, he disowns one of his daughters, who still clings to her old-time lover. About this time Keppler's lawyer discovers that the deceased brother left a will bequeathing his fortune to a grandchild, whose mother, cast off by the testator because of a marriage which had displeased him, had disappeared. Kepler accidently discovers that his grandniece, the heiress of the fortune, is a sewing girl in his own family. He makes this fact known, returns to butchering, and goes into politics as well. There are some pretty situations, and Mr. Williams is very pleasingly cast. Indeed, he has not been seen to better advantage in some years, especially in the more pathetic scenes in which the play abounds, his acting is very forcible. "When We Ran With the Old Machine," a song introduced by Mr. Williams in the third act, is a charming bit of melody and was nicely sung. The support is strong.

Miss Marie Hale, Rochester's favorite reciter, gave an elocutionary treat in our opera house last evening. Her easy, natural, simple style wins attention and excites the fullest sympathy from the beginning. No one who heard her will have anything but words of commendation.—Livingston County Herald—Tomorrow night at McKinnon Hall.

Kicked to Death.

Grand Forks Herald.

Yesterday afternoon, John O' Brien, one of the oldest and most respected farmers of Polk County, living near Mallory, was kicked by a valued horse and almost instantly killed. Mr. O'Brien was breaking priarie with a four horse team when something went wrong with the double trees and he got down from his plow to fix them. One of the horses evidently became frightened and kicked the owner in the stomach with terrific force. He only lived a few minutes and was tenderly carried to his home. The funeral will take place from the Catholic church, this city, tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock. Mr. O'Brien was a man of 60 years of age and had many friends and acquaintances in this city.

About to Resign.

Manager Fisher Soon to Leave the St. Paul & Duluth Road.

Duluth Daily Tribune.

The Tribune learns on excellent authority that Mr. W. H. Fisher, vice president and general manager of the St. Paul & Duluth railway, will shortly retire from his present position on that road to assume control of the Duluth & Winnipeg road with whose organization he is closely connected. It has always been understood that as soon as the construction of the road to Winnipeg was definately assured, Mr. Fisher was to take charge of the business of the new company. It is now understood that the construction of the Duluth & Winnipeg road will begin this year—indeed it is probable operations will begin at a very date—consequently, Mr. Fisher is likely to step out of the management of the St. Paul & Duluth in a few weeks.

We can loan money on better terms than anyone else in the valley. Money paid over the moment securities are executed. STEENERSON & McMANUS.

CUPID'S CUNNING.

They dashed across the gleaming snow—
Two lovers in a cutter,
And rosy cheeks were all aglow—
But 'twasn't cold or frost, you know,
For crimson comes when glances show
The things love dare not utter.

The eloquence of briefest speech
The secret may discover;
For ardent glances may beseech,
A thrilling touch, a sigh, may teach
The pleasant knowledge sought by each,
The secret of the lover.

But love is never long obtuse;
He set his wits contriving;
For said the knave with cunning ruse,
"I wish I had three arms." "Why choose
Three arms?" she asked. "I have to use
The other two for driving."

A crimson blush—a drooping head,
The inference ecstatic
The maiden caught, for lo! she said,
"Dear, I will drive the horse instead."
'Twas done and o'er the snow they sped
In happiness emphatic.

What need of wide experience,
Or teaching to assist her?
She wants no other evidence
Than that which subtly captures sense,
And so she deemed it no offense
When smack! her lover kissed her.
—Texas Siftings.

A RONDEL.

She said: "Don't! Stop!" How could I know
The nicer shades of prosody?
I soon forgot—her eyes shone so—
Where punctuating points should be.

The distant band throbbed tenderly;
The lights were dim; her tones were low—
She said: "Don't! Stop!" How could I know
The nicer shades of prosody?

Soon ecphoneme and comma flee;
From far off where the waltzers go
The perfumed notes swell to and fro—
Her sweet, red lips were close to me—
She said: "Don't! Stop!" How could I know
The nicer shades of prosody?
—Wasp.

ALL BUT.

BY ROSE TERRY COOK.

The Independent.

"Good-by, dear Mary. I hate to have you go. It's like going into another world, so far away. Tell John I never shall be satisfied till he settles East. I never have quite forgiven him for moving to California."

"O, mother! when he's doing so well. I didn't want to go, but he did not get on here; a small salary, and no prospect of a better, and the children coming!"

"Well, well, it was natural, and you can't feel it as I do, being younger; but you want to see the children some!"

"I guess I do!"

"And by that you may guess how I want to see you."

And the old lady wiped her eyes. She was a stout woman, in a plaid flannel dust cloak and poke bonnet. The cloak was odd and conspicuous, but Mrs. Watrous did not care for that; she wanted something soft to cover her dress, something that she could shake out of temporary creases, and keep on the hat rack for daily use; that cloak covered her morning dress when she went out for daily supplies, and hid the worn sleeves and frayed waist of her old black silk when she took a shopping tour, or a drive with some kindly friends, for Mr. Watrous did not keep a horse. It was a useful garment, and her husband always called it "Charity," because he said it covered a multitude of sins in his wife's dress.

Mary Watrous, the only child of this respectable couple, had married eight years ago the teller in the bank where her father had been cashier for many years. At first John Dutton had been content with his position; but after his three boys were born he began to reflect on the future, and having a good offer from a cousin of his in San Francisco, successful merchant there, he put his small patrimony of $5,000 into Sam Dutton's business, and now Dutton & Co. were making money steadily. This was the first time Mary had been home to see her parents after a three years' absence, and she had a new grandchild to exhibit, plump, rosy little Molly. The three boys were left at home with their father, under the nurse's charge; Mary thinking she could take care of Molly better than John could look after the boys without Katy's help.

Mr. Watrous had gone to get the baggage checked, and Mrs. Watrous stood by the car which waited on the track to be coupled to the express train just whistling in the distance; a train that made no stop in the next hundred miles.

As Mrs. Watrous wiped the tears from her kind eyes, Mary held Molly to the window to comfort her mother's heart with that lovely baby face set in yellow curls, lit by soft hazel eyes, just like her mother's and sparkling with dimples.

"By, Danma!" she shouted, kissing her fat hand and smiling. She was delighted to go, for she liked to ride—for a time.

Grandma looked up with her heart in her eyes.

"You darlin' baby! Good-bye, good-bye."

"Hullo, Molly!" put in grandpa's crisp voice.

"Dood-bye, Danpa!" baby responded, with another kiss.

"Here are your checks, Mary. Good-bye, again, dear. Mother, are you ready to go? I must be at the bank."

"Oh no! I must stay and see the last of them."

"Be careful, then, old lady. Don't get onto the track, or knocked down by the train. Counted your checks, Mary?"

"Yes, Father. Good-bye."

And off trotted Mr. Watrous, quite as grieved to part with his "girl," as he still called her, as his wife was; but, man-like, unwilling or unable to express it.

Just behind the car, perhaps a rod from it, stood the engine of a local accommodation train, spitting and hissing, ready to leave as soon as the California express should draw out. Mrs. Watrous was still close to the car when the first fast train came in, passed her, and then was switched on to the rail and coupled to the waiting car; she was holding Mary's hand when the two met, and the jar disturbed her; she started and almost fell.

"Oh, Mother! do be careful," were Mary's last words, as she let go the clinging fingers and gave a long, last look at the dear face, streaming with tears.

In another instant, just as she had replaced Molly on the seat and shut the window, she heard a scream outside. She sprang up and saw through the door, near which she was seated, her mother lying prostrate on the track and the other engine coming from the station, though slowly. The express train on leaving this station at once took a curve to the south, so that all Mary saw was a part of her mother's body in that unmistakable cloak, and two or three men running toward the track; but she saw enough. She dropped in a dead faint, hit her head against the corner of a seat, and lay insensible for hours, Molly screaming at the top of her voice, and all the women in the car devoting themselves to her and her mother.

At last Mary came out from her long swoon and was able to tell the shocked passengers what she had seen, just as they reached the first stoping place. She insisted on getting off there, though she trembled all over, and her head swam with the blow she had received. There would be no eastward train for three hours, the conductor said, and in that time, she thought, herself possession would return. The conductor took Molly out, and into the station, and Mary was helped by a kindly passenger, who spoke with authority to the woman in charge. He was a director on the road, and consequently Mary was well cared for, seated in the one rocking chair, a cup of hot tea brought her, and Molly beguiled, by the woman's little child, who always accompanied her mother to her place of work. Left to herself, Mary began to recall the fearful sight, to shudder, to remember her mother's words: "I must see the last of them!" Poor mother! she had indeed seen the last of her daughter and pretty Molly. And oh! why had she fainted? But for that, she might have persuaded the conductor to stop right there and let her get off. Now, she could not return to her father till he knew all, and had to bear the shock alone. She had three hours to wait here, alone, impatient, distracted; and she could not reach her father before six, his dinner hour.

Then she thought of him, of the sudden horror that had smitten him, and, womanlike, her thoughts went on into the future. Would he care to stay in L—? Would he not come to her? But her house was small, her children growing; how could she make him comfortable? She would telegraph to John; her trunks coming before her would startle him. Then she reflected that he would not know the trunks had come unless she were there too. But he knew she was to leave L— to day. She raised herself feebly from the rocking chair, and asked the woman in charge where she should find the telegraph office.

"Well, I can tell you, but it won't be of no use. Th' was a tornado swep' over the county yesterday afternoon, at least over the south part of it, and the wires betwixt here and Sent Lewis is all down. Mary sank back in her chair; she could do nothing for John; he must put up with his anxiety. An hour went by, local trains came and went, the usual sort of travelers came and went also.

Molly began to cry; she was tired and hungry. Mary crept over to the restaurant, now open to feed the passengers of a northern accommodation train who dined there. She got some bread and milk for the child, and tried to eat something herself; but food choked her, she could only swallow another cup of tea; she took Molly on her lap, and the child fell asleep; the baby head resting on her bosom comforted her sore heart, yet she cried bitterly over it, rcollecting how often she had sat in her own mother's arms in her childhood, and resting on her shoulder, found that blessed consolation that only a mother's arms can give. Oh, what should she do without mother! If she had only died peacefully in her bed, with tender ministry about her, loving words of faith, tears of parting, looks of farewell but to be so snatched out of a happy life, so rent from all this world in one crashing moment. Mary shivered at the thought. Words of the Litany she had so often responded to rung on that inward ear that hears our thought: "From battle, murder and sudden death, good Lord, deliver us?"

She had sometimes wondered at the last clause of the petition; she felt its force now; the terror of "sudden death" laid hold on her. "Oh! if ever she reached her California home in safety, she would never tempt a railway again! What if there had been an accident to the cars, and she had seen Molly crushed to death and could not lift a hand to save her?

She clasped the child so closely, at that horrid thought that she cried out in her sleep. Mary hushed her, and tried to control her thoughts. She endeavored to recall the consolations of her earnest religious faith; but the words even en of Scripture fell lifeless on her memory. Poor human nature is so weak, both in mind and body, that a blow staggers it and shakes even the foundations. She was stunned, hurt, desperate; neither submission nor indignation came at her call; she could only whisper a helpless, vague appeal to God, like

Children crying in the night
And with no language but a cry.

Presently Molly woke up, cross, hot and quite intractable enough to occupy her mother for the next half hour in soothing her fretful temper, washing the warm face and hands, smoothing the damp curls, and beguiling her sorrows with a red apple from the lunch counter.

Then after a little while, the window of the ticket office opened, Mary bought her ticket to L—, dropped a dollar into the station maid's hand, who received it with an astonished stare, and a grim "Thank-ye," and then grasping little Molly's hand went out into the fresh air and paced the platform till the porter shouted:

"Western Express! Passengers for the Eastern, all aboard!"

Once homeward bound, it seemed as if her grief and terror were renewed. Molly slept; but in spite of all her efforts, Mary could not help recalling the last thing her eyes saw before she fainted, and her soul cowered before what she must meet now.

The road seemed interminable; there was a delay at one station waiting for a freight train had jumped the track in the morning, and was neither off nor on as yet, and that delay involved another further on, when an excursion party of railway directors and their friends were due and had the right of way. It was dark when Mary reached L—but she took the first carriage that offered, and lifting in sleepy Molly, torn herself by conflicting emotions of grief, dread and anxiety, she at last arrived at her father's door.

She paid the driver hurriedly; and with Molly in her arms rushed in at the front door, which happened to be unlocked. A bright light streamed from the glass door of the dining-room at the end of the hall. Breathless, panting, pale as a sheet, and with a face of woe, she flung open the door dropped Molly from her grasp, and, with a wild shriek flung herself into her mother's arms. Yes, there was that deplored Mother, stout, hearty, uninjured in life or limb, just rising from the dessert that lingered on the dinner table, to see who came in at the front door in that eager, familiar fashion; and there sat her placid father, with the remainder of a big pear on his plate, his eyes wide open, his mouth agape, struck dumb by her entrance, for he had just said:

"I hope Mary has got to C— by this time, and taken her section in the sleeper. I telegraphed them to reserve a whole section; she will be so much more comfortable with Molly."

And here she was! weary, weeping, pallid and almost hysterical.

"Why, Mary Dutton!" exclaimed her mother, after Mary had sobbed out her piteous story.

"Why, I never in the world thought you was looking out, or I'd have telegraphed to the train. You see that other engine was very near, and I'd got my eyes sort of dull with crying, and for a minute I stood still to get my balance, that coupling of the cars shook me so, you know. Then I saw the engine begin to come, and I started across; it was foolish, but there was time enough, only my cloak had got unbottoned at the top and slipped back, so it was caught in a splinter, on the end of a tie, and that sort of hindered me. I stumbled, a woman screamed, for fear I was going to fall; but I didn't. I caught myself up, the cloak tore off my back and fell down; for in the pull the other button went, and I got over the other rail only just in time, and then I fell, but not to hurt me, for a man had run forward to get me off the track, and I fell right against him. There's the cloak, pretty well run over."

Mary turned. The torn and dusty remnants of "Charity" hung on a chair; for Mrs. Warren had brought them out to illustrate her story to her husband.

Mary seized the ragged mass with eager fury and thrust it into the open fire, forcing it under the flame with the tongs.

"Oh, Mary!"

Mother, I can't help it. The thing ought to be destroyed out of sight. I never could look at it again. Think! It made me believe you were run over; gave me all this agony of a whole day, this new journey, and brought me back, expecting to find you killed by the train."

"Well dear, I was—all but."

Mr. Watrous roared, Mary burst into tears, and her mother placidly remarked:

"A miss is as good as a mile' ain't it?" Nobody answered.

Sam Jones on Creeds.

The Rev. Sam Jones let himself out on creeds in Boston, and this is what he told his cultured hearers: There are too many fellows in this country in the intellectual chaingang, and they cannot get out of the creeds of their church. I love to live in the world, but not to be troubled with creeds. [Cries of "Amen."] I know I am on dangerous ground here in Boston when I am on creeds, for a fellow could get up a fight here on that question quicker than he could on stealing. [Loud applause and laughter.] Oh, brethern, in the name of God, it is not creeds that will save the soul, but personal and an every-day feeling to do right. [Loud applause.] Orthodoxy! Here in Boston you don't know what the name means. You could not tell to save your lives, could you? [Cries of "No, no," and a voice "No, and they could not tell at Andover." Loud laughter.] Well, if they cannot tell at Andover, we are adrift [loud laughter], for there is where we get our brains; that is the only lighthouse left along the coast. [Renewed laughter.] Knowledge does not mean a thorough acquaintance with any creed, but I have such a conception of Christ and his divine truth, of what has saved me, that I know how to tell other men how to be saved. [Applause.] A Methodist has two things to do; to go out and save souls and then keep them there. I want a knowledge that shall make you honest, spiritually and truthfully. God help the country that is simply putting whitewash on a rascal. Study to know right, and live up to it. But I have talked my hour, although there are big fish all up this stream; but we will go further up some other time. [Loud applause.]

A Boy Hero.

The bravery and thougtfulness of a bright little boy prevented the wrecking of a train and saved the lives of a number of passengers on the Western Division of the Newport News and Mississippi Valley Railroad. Between Scottsburg and Dawson Springs, Kentucky, on that road, is a sharp curve through a deep cut. As the morning train from Puducah to Louisville came rushing along, it was met at the entrance to this cut by a very small boy in a very large pair of boots, who came running down the track waving a white handkerchief. the train was stopped, and the little fellow led the way into the cut showing where a large rock, weighing several tons, had fallen from the top of the bank across the track. On account of the curve it was impossible to see the rock two hundred feet away on either side, and had the little fellow not flagged the train it must inevitably dashed into the obstruction. While it was being removed the passengers made up a purse for the boy, who, when he was presented with the money said modestly: "I didn't expect nothing; I just didn't like to see the train busted up." He stated that his name was Willie Lamb, and that he was thirteen years old. He had discovered the rock on the track about an hour before, and had waited for an up-train to prevent it from being wrecked. Such thoughtfulness on the part of so young a person deserves recognition at the hands of the company, who were probably saved several thousand dollars by this little fellow and his white handkerchief.

Farm and Household.

Brief Points.

The coming law which our farmers will support almost to a man will require the owner of a dog to give bonds to the amount of $1,000 for the good behavior of his cur, on which bond he may be sued for all damage to life or property which his worthless animal may cause.—Connecticut Farmer.

There are many ways suggested for starting a balky horse, but the most reliable method for making him go is to sell him.

Peat is a well known substance, used both for manure and for fuel. In its natural state peat is of little or no service as manure; but by exposing it to the effects of fermentation it becomes very useful as food for plants.

Beets or mangles can be raised in great abundance and at a low cost. With our best lands and in all seasons it is possible to raise ten bushels of beets to the same ground space that will produce one of corn. The cost of raising is only about three times that of corn per acre, and the feeding value of an acre of beets as a supplemental feed to corn is equal to five or more acres of corn.

The great want of the dairy over a large part of our country is not more cows, but better cows and better care and feeding. The times call for intense methods in conducting the dairy, and the call is far-reaching, going down to the roots of things, affecting the cow which produces, the feed and the methods of dispensing the same, from which the milk is produced.—Lyman E. Abbott.

A New York farmer writes to Farm and Home: "We had a valuable cow choked with a potato. A neighbor ordered fine-cut chewing tobacco put down her throat, and we inserted a piece about two-thirds the size of a hen's egg. The cow was bloated hard, but the remedy was successful, and the bloat all disappeared in fifteen minutes, the cow going to work as naturally as though nothing had occurred. We had tried a variety of means by which to remove it, but without avail."

Although the dairymen are gradually becoming educated to a knowledge of pure breed dairy stock, yet many of them require training in the art of making butter. To learn to make "gilt-edged" butter is equivalent to learning a trade, and millions of dollars are annually lost to our dairymen through imperfect knowledge of making butter. In Europe schools of instruction are rapidly increasing, and there is a necessity for something of the kind in this country.

The man who goes into the sheep business with a fixed purpose, knowing what line is best adapted to his locality and farm, and then adheres to that purpose is most likely to succeed. Do not look for a general-purpose sheep, advises a Western shepherd. All breeds produce wool and lambs; some excel in one point and some in the other, Decide what your location demands for a leading characteristic and then go and get it. If you have a flock of coarse, roomy-bodied sheep, get a Merino buck to improve the wool or a Southdown for early lambs.

One entitled to speak with some authority gives the following directions for preventing the spreading of the swine-plague: Seperate the well hogs from the sick ones—completely isolate them, and put as few together as possible. Give them good food, clean water and proper shelter in bad weather. Dr. Detmers recommends 10 drops of carbolic acid in the drinking water two or three times a day. Bury all hogs that die, or, better, burn them, and also their litter, and any wood work or pen on which they have been rubbing their sensitive and abraded skin.

The chief objections to corn meal as food for pigs, says the Cultivator, are its richness, and secondly, its liability to compact in the stomach, so that the saliva and other solvents cannot readily work on it. The food after mastication lies in a heavy mass that only the strongest stomachs can resolve. The cow and the sheep remasticate this food, mix more saliva with it, and thus escape much injury. But an over feeding of corn will put either sheep or cows "off their feet" quicker than almost anything else. The pig has no such recourse. Having his stomach filled with corn he founders, just as a horse would do under like circumstances.

Watering Trees.

One trouble in watering trees by applying water to the surface over the roots is that if such watering is followed by dry hot weather the surface soil bakes, forming a hard crust which the air cannot penetrate. The suggestion is made in an exchange to set a tile on end near the tree, the upper end coming a little above the surface, and water through it. In such case the surface would not be interfered with, but the water might be carried lower than needed. To overcome this difficulty the tile might be pierced with a number of holes, which would let the water out at its sides instead of its all going to the bottom. The holes could easily be be made by a small drill set in a bit stock. This method would be subirrigaation, instead of surface.

The Science of Breeding.

Successful breeding can never be accomplished by merely mating good stock to good stock, declares an experienced breeder of horses. Breeding is truly a science, and, like all sciences, to enable one to become proficient and adept requires profound study, depth of thought, sound judgment, and a vast amount of practical experience; and in a science is theory more swiftly swept to the winds. The writer further contends that, to be a successful breeder of superior stock for practical use, is both an honor and a virtue—an honor, as it is proof of mental capacity; a virtue, as one devotes time and experience to a cause from which fellowmen derive a benefit.

For Swine Vermin.

It is said that ticks and lice with which hogs often become covered can be easily got rid of by giving the swine a little sulphur in their feed occasionally. Hogs are frequently infested with these parasites, when the owner would not suspect it from the appearance of the animals, and consequently it is well to examine them closely now and then, thus being sure they have no such tax on their vitals to steal away what should go toward making growth and flesh.

Agricultural Multiplication.

"How many acres of land have you?"

"One hundred."

"Then you have bought some more; you had only twenty."

"No, I haven't bought any, I haven't had any given to me, I haven't rented any. Still I claim that I have got one hundred acres."

"How do you make it out?"

"Just this way. I bought twenty acres. I plowed it thoroughly, utilizing every foot of ground, making, on an average, one acre equal to two. That gave me forty acres."

"Just so."

"I then fertilized the land so that one acre produced as much as three did before. That made me twenty acres more, making the total sixty."

"I see."

"Then I practiced persistent cultivation, which I can prove will double the yield of an acre. Twenty acres more, you see, which makes me eighty."

"Yes, and now for the other twenty."

"The other twenty I got by using only the best of seed and by putting brains and system into my work. And to prove that my farm contains one hundred acres, I am willing to compare results with the average hundred acres anywhere in this section of country, Things equal to the same thing are equal to each other, you know."—Western Plowman.

England's Danger.

The scare in England over the completion of the New Russian railroad to Samarcand is no trivial affair This new Russian railroad into central Asia is a work of as great magnitude as was the building of Pacific railroads in this country. It does more than to give Russia the monopoly of the markets of central Asia, although that is a result of tremendous import. It also gives Russia command of strategic points of vital importance in a collision with England. It exposes India itself to attack at a point where the vast naval power of England would count for naught. It is possible now for Russia by means of this line of transportation to mass great armies within striking distance of the Indian frontier, and to do so at short notice. The toiling millions of India, so long ground under the iron heel of British tyranny, are ripe for revolt in many of the districts of that country, and would no doubt welcome Russian invasion. All this would seem to make a perilous situation for British supremacy in India. And the organs of British opinion have not been slow to appreciate the crisis which has come. They not only appreciate it, but are plainly acknowledging it. They put it flatly—the possible loss of India. But there is more in it than this, for England cannot lose India without losing vastly more. England can hardly lose India without the consequent wreckage of the British empire The loss of India would be of such a tremendous blow to English prestige that it is doubtful if the bonds of the British empire would be strong enough to hold long. Australia would soon go; the whole south ocean possessions would go; Canada would go. But if there should be no more than loss of India, it would be a staggering blow to England. England has in large part lived for over a century on the proceeds of the robbery of India—fattened on the very lifeblood of the millions of that oppressed country. The debt of India is guaranteed by England and hundreds of millions of Indian securities are held in England. To sweep this away would be to put a sword into the very vitals of England, and the gigantic movement of Russia into central Asia and down towards the Indian frontier is a menace of exactly this prospect.—Sioux City Journal.

The Original Abolitionists.

Magazine of American History.

The early east Tennesseans have no doubt a claim to priority in modern abolition. In the inauguration of the movement looking to the abolition of slavery throughout the union, she can justly claim precedence. As early as 1814 and 1815 Charles Osborn established abolition societies in Washington county. In the year 1820 Elihu Embree commenced in Jonesboro the Emancipator, devoted to the cause of the emancipation of the slaves. Mr Embree died early in 1821, and his paper passed into the hands of Benjamin Lundy, was removed to Greenville, and the name was changed to the Genius of Universal Emancipation. It was published in Greenville till 1824, when he removed it to Baltimore. It was not until 1829 that William Lloyd Garrison, a young Bostonian, joined Lundy in Baltimore. It was in this convention that Garrison first made the reputation for which he suffered in a Baltimore prison. He was induced by Lundy in Boston, the year before, to give his attention to the question.

The convention that formed the first constitution of Tennessee gave the elective franchise to all free men, and, under it free negroes voted till 1834, when they were deprived of that right under the new constitution.

Face Reading Not a Science.

New York Mail and Express.

"Physiognomy is rather a vagary of the imagination than a science," said a prominent student of human nature the other day, "and, therefore," he continued, "I deny that the expression of a man's face is really the index of the person's soul, as it is generally conceded to be, and as the object of language, is said to be the concealment of thought, so the expression of one's countenance is but the mask to conceal one's inner self.

"There is a tradition that far back in the days of which history tells us nothing there was no speech or language among men, but that men read each other's want and wishes in their faces, and as the world was pure nothing but purity appeared in the expression of the human face. But wickedness crept in, and men sought to keep from their faces the evil that was in their hearts, thus preventing the countenance from becoming the index of the soul.

"No," the speaker went on, "I have no faith whatever in physiognomy as a science, for as a science it is fanciful and wild. Take, for instance, the portraits of men who have become famous in the world of statesmanship, philosophy, science, art or letters, and search and scan their faces for traces to mark their fame, and how often will you be disappointed. The same is the case with men adepts in vice, cunning and crime. Little can be told from the external appearance of individuals as to their peculiar traits and characteristics by which they are known to their fellow men.

"That certain habits of life affix their stamp to face or form is, no doubt, true, but the solution of that condition is not in the reflex action of the mind and soul, but for the reason that a certain set of muscles are brought habitually into play and cause a special developement. Is the man necessarily all smiles and laughter that has wrinkles at the outer corner of his eyes and upward curving lines around his mouth. Yet those are the mechanical lines which would indicate a merry-hearted man, if the science of physiognomy is true. Those lines are only muscular, simply the result of habit, and may be dictated by the rankest hypocrisy.

"Naturally the brutal and ignorant classes will have coarser features, and will possess brutal and animal faces, generally resulting from inherited qualities, and, therefore, they will do coarse and brutal things. It will be an easy matter to trace a resemblance between the faces and the crimes of such people, in whom coarseness and brutality predominate, but where will you find the lines and ear marks of brutality in the faces of the handsome Wilkes Booth or the cultured and elegant Eugene Aram? Look upon the canvases bearing the portraits of the beautiful and angelic fiends that ruled the Emperors of Rome, and you will see only patrician faces, but they brought the empire to destruction.

"Instances of this character might be given indefinitely, but every one who has made a careful study of the subject will agree that the connection between the facial expression and the inner spiritual nature is a very difficult one to trace."

A Strange Spanish Sect.

Brooklyn Citizen.

Your readers may remember that some time ago I drew attention to a very remarkable phase of religious fananticism in the little village of Tolox, in the province of Malaga, which led to a State prosecution. The devotees of the religion, I may call to mind, took it into their heads, or rather were led to believe by their leaders, a woman who declared herself a prophetess, that the highest form of religion was to conduct the mundane affairs of this life in simple garb of Adam and Eve before the fall. This was bad enough and led, as I have said, to the intervention of the Crown, but it was not their only divergence from the ways of ordinary mortals, another portion of their doctrine being to inflict upon themselves wounds in the hands, breast feet, such as are shown in representation of the crucifixion. They also burnt all, or nearly all, their worldly possessions, in the belief that a higher power would provide them with food. Their behavior was such that, as stated, the Government felt called upon to interfere, and a day or so ago a number of leaders of this strange sect were put upon their trial. Already the most extraordinary revelations have been made, apart from what may be called the spiritual manifestation which these misguided people declare have been made to them. The most interesting feature in connection with the trial has been the experiments in hypnotism which have been made on the defendants by medical specialists, this being the first time hypnotism has been resorted to in Spain in the interests of justice.

In nearly every case the defendants proved to be good subjects. Many of the experiments tried by the doctors were of the most extraordinary character. One of the accused, for instance, when in a state of hypnotism, on being ordered to perspire, broke out almost in a state of profuse perspiration, while another, who was ordered to ascend a very high mountain, being the while in an ordinary room, behaved as if he were actually climbing, his breathing being difficult and his heart beating violently. When this man was told that he had reached the summit and might rest awhile, the symptoms of exhaustion gradually disappeared. Others were pricked with long pins, and gave no evidence of feeling what was being done to them.

A decided sensation has been created at Wilkesboure, Penn. Henry Hirner, a prominent citizen, appeared at the office of Ald. Donahue and had a warrant issued for the arrest of Henry Leim, a prominent hotel keeper, charging him with being intimate with his wife. Mrs. Hirner had made full confession to her husband, and implored him to keep it quiet. Her husband refused, and she took laudanum. She cannot live. She has three children.

FIFTIETH CONGRESS.

SENATE.

The resolution to print 5,000 additional copies of the report of the senate committee on pensions on the subject of vetoed pension bills was taken up, the question being on Mr. Cockrell's amendment to print 100,000 copies of presidential vetoes in the last and present congresses.

Mr. Cockrell explained the object which he had in suggesting the printing of the veto message in the Doherty case.

HOUSE.

On motion of Mr. Lawler, of Illinois, the senate bill was passed appropriating $200,000 for the erection of a public building in Chicago to be used as an appraiser's warehouse.

On motion of Mr. Blount, of Georgia, the senate bill was passed prohibiting the transmission through the mails in transparent envelopes of matter which would be prohibited if printed or written on the outside of the envelop.

A bill granting the use of certain property to the city of Tacoma, Wash., for a public park was passed.

Mr. Springer, of Illinois, submitted the conference report on the bill providing for an additional associate justice of the supreme court of Dakota. The report, which states that the bill now provides for two additional justices, was agreed to.

Mr. MacDonald, of Minnesota, from the committee on public lands, reported the bill to forfeit the lands in Minnesota granted to the Hastings & Dakota Railroad company. Passed.

SENATE.

The Republican senators in caucus decided unanimously to pass at this session a tariff reduction and reversion bill. The senate during the vacation of congress, intends to enter upon an investigation of the general relations of Canada to the United States, with a view of discovering whether it is within the power of our government to enact any laws which will place the Canadian railways even directly under the provisions of the interstate commerce act and prevent them from coming into competition with the American trunk lines and to cut rates.

The senate resumed consideration of the naval appropriation bill, the pending question being on the amendment striking out the item for the expenses of a commission to locate a navy yard on the gulf coast. The bill was passed.

Senator Hiscock introduced the well-known service pension bill, providing that all persons who served three months or more in the military or naval service of the United States, between April 12, 1861, shall be entitled to a pension at the rate per month of one cent for each day's service.

HOUSE.

The house committee on commerce has directed a favorable report upon the senate bill to amend the interstate commerce law. The report says the bill as reported does not materially differ from the senate bill.

The house considered a bill to establish a United States land court and to provide for a judicial investigation and settlement of private land claims, in Arizona, New Mexico and Colorado. It establishes a United States land court, to consist of a chief justice and two associate justices appointed by the president and confirmed by the senate.

SENATE.

Mr. Frye said he had given notice that he would call upon the fishery treaty. He was compelled to yield to the army appropriation bill, the question being in Hawley's amendment appropriating $750,000 for an army gun factory at the Watervliet arsenal, New York; $5,000,000 for the purchase of Steel for high-power coast defense guns; $500,000 for the purchase of submarine mines, and $100,000 for sub-marine controllable torpedoes. The amendment was agreed to without a division, and after the adoption of a few other amendments the bill was reported back (from the committee of the whole) to the senate.

Mr. Berry called for a seperate vote on Mr. Hawley's amendment, at proceeded to address the senate in opposition to it.

When a vote was reached Mr. Hawley's amendment was carried by a vote of 24 to 16.

A vote was then taken on the bill and it was passed.

A number of bills were reported from the committee and placed on the calendar, after which Mr. Allison moved to proceed to the consideration of the army appropriation bill, stating that it was important that it should be passed.

The fisheries treaty was then taken up and Mr. Wilson, of Maryland, made a speech in favor of its ratification.

HOUSE.

On motion of Mr. Townshend, of Illinois, a joint resolution was passed providing temporarily (until Sept. 1) for the support of the army.

The house then proceeded to the consideration of the bill to provide for postoffice buildings. The report accompanying the bill explains its provisions as follows: "It proposes to establish a plan for the construction of public buildings for the use exclusively of the postoffice department of a uniform character and which shall be especially adapted for the purposes of that department. Its provisions operate only in places where the gross receipts amount to $3,000 annually for two successive years. The extreme limit of cost to the United States for any building shall not in any case exceed $25,000. Subject to these limitations it provides for three classes of buildings, varying in cost according to the amount of gross receipts.

Pending action the house went into committee of the whole on the Oklahoma bill.

SENATE.

Mr. Cullom's resolution, as to the Canadian Pacific railway, went over till Monday without action.

Mr. Sherman gave notice that as soon as the sundry civil appropriation bill shall have been disposed of, he would insist on getting the fisheries treaty out of the way.

The senate then proceeded to the consideration of the fisheries treaty in open executive session, and was addressed by Mr. Salisbury in favor of its ratification.

Democratic senators, he said, had not opposed the open executive session from any apprehension that the public discussion of the treaty would injure the administration or the democratic party. On the contrary they believed that a full understanding of it would commend it to the favorable judgment of the country as a wise and just settlement of a controversy which had at times threatened the harmony and peace of the whole country.

HOUSE.

Mr. Maston, of Indiana, asked consent that the order assigning a night session for the consideration of private pension bills be so modified as to admit of the consideration of general pension legislation, but objection was made.

Mr. Townshend, of Illinois, from the committee on military affairs, reported back the army appropriation bill with senate amendments, and it was referred to the committee of the whole.

The house then went into committee of the whole, on the private calendar.

SENATE.

The senate bill setting apart a tract of land for a cemetery for the order of Odd Fellows at Central City, Col. and the senate bill appropriating $10,000 for the public building at Muskegon, Mich.

Mr. Palmer gave notice that he would call up the senate bill to encourage the holding of a national industrial exposition of the arts, mechanics and products of the colored race throughout the United States in 1888 and 1889.

The senate then resumed consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill, the pending question being on the paragraphs relating to the new library building in Washington. Among other amendments reported by the committee on appropriations and agreed to the following: Increasing the appropriation for the education of children in Alaska from $25,000 to $50,000, and making the item read: "For industrial education." Inserting an item of $340,744 for new hospital building at Rock Island arsenal. Inserting an item of $25,000 for repairs of dykes and embankments of the water power pool at the Rock Island arsenal.

HOUSE.

The senate bill for the erection of a public building at Allentown, Pa., having been laid before the house, Mr. Sowden, of Pennsylvania, asked unanimous consent for its immediate consideration, but a demand for the regular order operated as an objection.

The house then proceeded to the further consideration of postoffice buildings, but the hour expired without any action being taken.

The house then went into committee of the whole on the general appropriation bills, and a clash instantly occurred between the various bills on the calendar. The general deficiency bill was first reached, and after some debate was taken up.

Polk County Journal.

W. G. COOKE, Publisher.

CROOKSTON, · MINNESOTA.

It is said that San Francisco has been shaken 417 times by earthquakes in the last 80 years.

One of the Garret party, which has just returned home, thinks no party, save General Grant's ever met with so good reception in its tour around the world.

The estimated cost of the proposed suspension bridge over the North river at New York city is $37,000,000. It will give entrance for ten railroads into the city of New York. The central span will be 2,850 feet long.

The enterprise of removing Libby Prison from Richmond and setting it up in Chicago as a relic of the war has been abandoned, the Chicago parties having failed to meet the terms of its owners.

A woman who died at Marseilles desired by her will that her heart might be placed in the tomb of her second husband, and her body in the tomb of her first husband. The question naturally arises, which husband did she love the better?

Elderly ladies who used to charm their beaux by singing "Do They Miss Me at Home?" will be interested to know that Miss Caroline A. Briggs, who composed the verses, is now Mrs. Charles Mason of Fitchburg, Mass. The song was first published forty years ago.

A traveler at St. Clairsville, Ga., out of curiosity visited the court house and was almost horrified to find his only sister the defendant in a murder trial going on at the time. She had mysteriously disappeared from home years before and her whereabouts were unknown to her people.

In the case of the Bell Telephone company against the American-Cushman company, to restrain it from infringing on patents of the former, Judge Blodgett, in Chicago, decided in favor of the Bell company. Cushman claims to have invented a "talking box" in 1851, at Racine, and will carry his case to the Supreme court.

Arthur Stanley, claiming to have jumped with a parachute from Clifton Suspension Bridge, England, wants to go over Niagara, but receives no encouragement from the authorities. He proposes to wear a suit of cork and rubber. He anticipates that his parachute will do the proper thing when the edge of the falls is reached, but he is not sure what the rocks may do with his suit.

A woman in Chicago objected to her husband carrying a revolver for fear of an accident; so she took it out of his pocket and put in a hand-satchel for safe keeping. That afternoon she went shopping and took the satchel with her. By some mistake the contents got jarred and the revolver, which had been quite forgotten, went off and seriously wounded a messenger boy that happened to be passing at that moment.

The average price paid the average Iowa "school marm" by the year is $212.45. Presuming that her board and washing costs her about $3 per week, and her clothing and incidentals $50 more, she will then have a surplus of just $6.45 a year to build up a bank account, which in twenty years of hard work would amount to more than $100. Truly it has been said that it is the honor that forms the chief reward of a literary life.

A Portland, Me., lady who is with her husband salmon fishing near the eastern shore of the Province of Quebec, has had a novel and interesting experience. She hooked a large fish and after a full hour's fight with it finally won the battle. The salmon when landed was found to weigh fortytwo pounds, probably the largest salmon ever caught by a lady. Her husband says that if the fish could have held out a halfhour longer he would probably have pulled her into the river.

Gotlieb Young, of Columbia, Pa., is a brewer, and, like every good German, he has a pet. It is a fine large bloodhound. Joseph Baker is Gotleib's neighbor, and he is a great admirer of the gamecock, of which he has quite a number. The other afternoon the hound went over into Mr. Baker's yard and lost no time in making an attack upon a very lively gamecock. The bird was a good fighter, and didn't retreat at the approach of the dog. In a minute they were fighting fiercely, the rooster flying at his opponent in a manner which clearly indicated his dislike of the intruder. The fight waxed warm for a few moments. The dog got the worst of it. After they were separated it was found that the cock had planted both his gaffs in the dog's eyes, totally destroying the sight.

CONDENSED NEWS.

Washington News.

On motion of Mr. Spinola, of New York, the present rate of duty was restored on pipes, pipe bowls and all smokers articles not otherwise provided for. The next few items was passed over quickly, and amendments restoring the present rate of duty on the various articles were voted down without division.

Trains out of Washington after the Mills bill passed the house carried away a good many congressmen, and if the exodus continues there will not be a quorum left in the house. Now that the tariff bill is out of the way members of the house are not disposed to linger in Washington, and it will not be surprising to find that body without a quorum at any time.

The following nominations have been confirmed: Hugh W. Weir of Pennsylvania, chief justice of the supreme court of Idaho; Roderick Rose, associate justice of Dakota; C. H. Berry of Minnesota, associate justice of Idaho; J. H. Keatly of Iowa, United States judge of Alaska; Col. Thomas L. Casey, chief of engineers, with rank of brigadier general. Postmaster: F. P. Smith, Faulkton, Dak.; Otto A. Kohler, Hutchinson, Minn.; Charles W. Main, Tracy, Minn.

Several members of the commission appointed by President Cleveland to confer with the Indians and secure their consent to the opening of the great Sioux reservation, arrived at Bismarck. The commission consists of Capt. R. H. Pratt, of the United States army, chairman; Dr. Charles H. Hepburn of Carlisle, Pa.; the Rev. William J. Cleveland of Madison, Dak., and Judge Wright of Tennessee. They are anxious to arrive at the Standing Rock agency as early as possible, as the Indians are holding a council on the question, and their opposition to the opening of the reservation is growing rapidly. The interviews which the commissioners will hold with sitting bull and Gall will make spicy reading, as the two great chiefs are said to be bitterly opposed to the measure.

The Casualty Record.

During the progress of a game of baseball at Columbia, Ohio, between two nines of young boys, Edward Housch, an 11-year-old lad, was struck in the temple by the ball and so badly injured that he died the same day. The ball caused concussion of the brain.

John Currivan, a single man twenty-five years of age, left Morris, Minn., the 15th of this month and was not seen since until his body was found a day or two ago two and a half miles from town on the prairie. In his pocket was found a whisky bottle half full.

Maguires opera house at Butte, M. T., was burned, the fire originated from a garret. The adjoining buildings were damaged only by water. The loss on the theater is $40,000, insured for $18,000. The stock is owned by a company of which Maguire is the largest holder.

Mr. Booth, a brakeman on the Northern Pacific, was brought to Fargo, from Glyndon in a frightfully mangled condition. While uncoupling cars his foot caught in a frog and the car backed over him, cleaving his right leg from his body at the thigh joint and crushing the lower part of his body. He is not expected to live.

A waterspout burst in western Tamar county, Iowa, covering sixteen square miles, destroying everything in its way in the shape of grain, and over 100 hogs and a number of cattle were drowned. School houses and dwellings were torn to atoms and unroofed and windows broken by hail stones. The path of the stoom was north and south, about three miles wide and six miles long.

A terrible collision occurred on the Norfolk & Western railroad at Lynchburg, Va., between a freight and a material train, killing both engineers, one fireman and five of the crew. Both engines are completely wrecked and several cars demolished. The loss is estimated at $100,000. The conductor escaped with slight bruises. The accident was caused, it is claimed by the conductor of the material train, misunderstanding orders.

The Criminal Calendar.

John Miller, city circulator for the Chicago Daily News, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head.

Alex Woods, murderer, who recently escaped from Blackfoot, Idaho, and who was to have been hanged, has been captured at Bozeman.

A man went to Mr. Adams' barn at St. Vincent Minn., and hitched up Mr. Adams' horse and drove off. There is no trace of him yet, but thirty men are on his trail. He is believed to be in Manitoba.

Two dangerous counterfeiters were arrested at Pittsburg, Pa., while attempting to swindle an old man. They had $45,000 in spurious greenbacks and a large number of dies for quarter and half dollars. One of them offered the arresting officer $1,000 to let him go.

Simon ward, colored and blind, was hung at Clayton, Ala. The crime for which he was hung was the killing of another aged negro, both being inmates of the poor house at the time. The killing was done at night with an ax and was most brutal. They fell out about some lightwood splinters.

H. W. Moore and Mrs. Norton, the elopers, will skip to Canada, and then sail for London, where Moore will at once become the London correspondent of the New York World, this position having been given him by Joe Pulitzer since the elopement. Pulitzer, it is well known, is a good friend of Moore.

During a drunken row which occurred at a German gathering at the house of John Meyer in Nebraska City, Charles Hoffmeister had his skull crushed so badly that he will die. Jack Young received a shot through his right arm and John Hart was shot in the right side. His wound may result fatally. Meyers was arrested.

Michael Cronin of Huron and William Hedringteen of Chippewa Falls, Wis., drank three pints of whisky at Huron in their great joy at meeting each other. Before bedtime Cornin shot Hedrington in the breast, and the victim is in a dangerous condition. Cronin is in jail. He says he thought it was somebody else he was firing at.

After John Klein of Jamesville, Wis., had seen his wife safely to a train, she claiming that she wished to visit a sister in Chicago, he returned home and found in his wife's bed room a letter from O. F. Bradford a former admirer, asking her to join him at his former home. Klein at once telegraphed to the Chicago police to arrest the couple, and intends to follow the case up to the end.

A gang of roughs have been the terror of Alma Center and Merrillan Wis., for some time, but the sheriff happened at Alma Center when they were on an unusual spree. When the saloonkeeper refused to sell them more liquor they upset his billiard table and bar, and were proceeding to "do him up" when the sheriff dropped in on them and secured two. Other arrests will follow, with a view of breaking up the gang.

Dyer Scanlan, the notorious thief and desperado, was given ten years in the penitentiary by a jury at Chicago, and his notorious mistress, Mollie Mott, was given seven. The pair were on trial for the attempted murder of Policeman Nolan. Scanlan and the woman had been quareling over their spoils. Officer Nolan thinking a murder was imminent, and not dreaming who were the participants, burst in the door. The two thieves dropped their quarrel and turning on the officer wounded him frightfully and left him for dead. They were captured later by Inspector Bonfield.

Eleven men boarded the west-bound express at Ashtabula, Ohio, and they attempted to gain possession of it. At each door of the smoker the men took a stand and defied the passengers. Conductor Shephard and several drummers put on a bold front and drove them out of the car. The robbers then endeavored to prevent the train being stopped at Geneva, by overpowering the engineer, but did not succeed. The train slacked at Geneva, and a call was made upon the Citizens. Nine of the gang were captured. They are now in the Geneva jail guarded by twenty-five militia. They appear to be desperadoes instead of tramps.

The stage running between San Luis Obis, Cal., and Templeton was robbed by a masked man. The robber covered the driver with a revolver. He then compelled the passengers, six in number, and the driver to alight from the stage, and covered the heads of all with masks. The passengers were robbed of about $500 altogether. There was one lady passenger. Clothing was taken from her. The driver was then ordered to throw off Wells Fargo's express box and the United States mail bags. The box was chopped open and the contents, which are supposed to have been about $1,000, was taken. The mail also was opened and letters examined. The robber then escaped.

Henry Romas was deliberately and brutally murdered by Theodore Sutter at Chicago. Romaz had been paying attentions to Sutter's sister, which the latter objected to. Sutter came home late at night, and learning that Romaz had been at the house in the evening, seized a huge butcher knife and started in search of him. Finding him on the street, without a word he plunged the knife into Romaz's breast with such force as to completely sever two ribs. He then returned to his house where, in company with three friends, he barricaded himself and savagely resisted arrest, but was finally overpowered and locked up. Romaz died after indentifying Sutter as his murderer.

Foreign News.

There were 50,000 men and 168 guns in the St. Petersburg review. The review gave evidence that the Russian troops have much improved in the last few years. Emperor William greatly admired the troops, especially the Cossack artillery.

The police of the city of London are keeping close watch upon all American visitors. A detective entered a hotel recently and insisted upon holding a private interview with an American from St. Louis, who had previously visited Dublin. The gentleman complained to the United States consul, who has written a letter to the police authorities demanding an explanation of the detective's conduct.

In the British house of commons Lord Randolph Churchill asked the speaker for permission to question Mr. Coneybear as to whether he was the author of a letter appearing in the Star denouncing the conduct of the speaker in supporting the Tory motion for closure of the debate on the second reading of the Bann draining bill. The letter referred to accused the speaker of gross injustice to the minority and a breach of parliamentary decorum nothing short of a scandal, in assisting the government to suppress debate on a measure which handed to Irish landholders half a million of English money. Mr. Coneybear admitted that he was the author of the letter, and he was thereupon incontinently suspended by a vote of 245 to 158.

Mr. Borland, a well known resident, has arrived at Victoria from Hazelton to confer with the attorney general regarding the state of affairs at Hazelton, on the Skeena river, and tells the following story of the trouble. Last year an Indian named Jim murdered an Indian doctor at the forks of the Skeena. A posse of specials arrested the murderer, and he was shot by one of the posse named Green. The posse then returned to Hazelton, where they are at present hemmed in by the hostile Indians. They can hold out for a month if the Indians can be prevented from burning the place. Among the whites in the locality where the shooting occurred, are Mr. Clifford and wife, in charge of the Hudson Bay store; Rev. Mr. Fields and wife, and Mrs. Hankin and family. The Indians demand that Green be handed to them and $1,000 paid them. If the specials refuse they threaten to burn the houses and murder every white person in the locality.

Personal Notes.

The man who represented himself as Artist Remington of Harpers Weekly, and who killed himself at Trinidad, Col., is fully identified as Baron Raymondston Rhowski of Germany. His father is a colonel in the German army, and of noble lineage.

Mrs. Langtry has gone to housekeeping in a villa at Long Branch for the summer, and in a manner to create the belief that she and Freddy Gebhardt are already married. It is currently reported at the great Jersey resort that a quiet ceremony followed a quiet divorce in June, and that a honeymoon is now going on.

General News Items.

The prohibitionists of the Third Minnesota District nominate C. A. Fosness for Congressional honors.

John Mackay is said to have disposed of his cable to Jay Gould for $11,000,000. Mackay originally asked $13,000,000, but Gould refused the cable at these figures, but finally offered $11,000,000, which was accepted.

Southern Illinois farmers are complaining of the ravages of chinch bugs, which they claim are more numerous and destructive than ever before. A committee of fifteen will meet at Louisville, Clay couny, to devise means to get rid of the pests. Prof. Forbes, state entomologist, will address the meeting.

Great Falls, New Hampshire, is excited over the supposed elopement of Emery J. Randall, paymaster and treasurer of the Great Falls Manufacturing company, a prominent citizen, and Mrs. Juliette Worcester. The parties left Great Falls a few days ago. Randall has a wife and two daughters. It is supposed the couple have gone to Europe.

While a son of Sidney K. Ayers was plowing on one of the historical mounds of his father's farm near Delton, Wis., the plow struck against an obstruction which proved to be to all appearances the petrified body of a human being. Both arms and lower limbs are missing, but the head and shoulders are a most perfectly defined. The outlines of the face are almost distinguishable.

Mr. O'Connell, chief clerk of the New York court of common pleas, has lodged a complaint with the authorities in Ireland, in which he says his steps are constantly dogged by detectives, and asks to be relieved of this unwarranted surveillance. He alleges that since his arrival in Ireland he has visited religious and charitable institutions in Cork, and everywhere he has gone detectives have shadowed him.

The Lake Superior gold shaft at Ishpening, Mich., is being sunk as rapidly as possible. A syndicate of Detroit capitalists, at the head of which is Gen. Russell A. Alger, sent an expert to examine the mine. His report was favorable, and the syndicate will buy a controlling interest of 80,000 shares, paying $3 per share. The rest of the stock is principally held by local capitalists.

The report of a San Francisco grand jury has created a sensation. The city government is severely criticised. Crime is declared to be organized for offensive purposes. Twelve or fifteen hundred of the criminal class control affairs. To offend this criminal element is to invite complete political ostracism. The Chinese quarter is declared to be hideous and filthy beyond measure, and yet the evil spreads instead of being suppressed.

Although the figures for the Northern Pacific railroad are not yet made up, they are so nearly complete that the company is assured of a surplus of nearly half a million, which is the largest that it has ever had for a single year. The gross earnings, as published a few days ago, put up $15,923,619. This is a gain of $3,030,170 over the previous year, and probably the largest gross increase reported by any company in the country this year.

Information has been received from Crittenden county, Ark., to the effect that the grand jury which has been investigating the banishment of 18 negroes by an armed organization has made its report. The result is the return of nearly 40 indictments. The grand jury found that anonymous notes had been sent to a number of white men by negroes, giving the whites five days to leave the country. Upon receiving the threatening epistles, the whites met, armed and escorted out of the county the negroes implicated.

William McMichaels, a young reporter for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, eloped with sixteen-year-old Frances Paupeny, a member of the best Carondelet families, and the pair turned up recently in Belleville, Ill., looking for a marriage license. On account of the girl's youth the license was refused, and then the reporter telegraphed to her father, requesting him to give his consent. The father armed himself with a pistol and went to Belleville. Meeting the reporter in the county clerk's office, he tried to shoot him, but was prevented. The father stormed and swore, but was finally prevailed upon to consent, and the pair were married.

Joseph Schwab departed from his home in Manchester, Iowa, for Alsace on the 26th of last September and has not since been heard from. It was reported by the steamship company which sold him his ticket that a person bearing Joseph Schwab's name had crossed the ocean in one of their vessels. His brother in Alsace had been looking for him, but he did not come. Sept. 29 the body of a murdered man was found in Chicago and taken to the morgue. No one appearing to identify the remains, they were photographed and placed in a vault. Not long ago the Odd Fellows of Waterloo instituted a search for a missing brother. The picture of the dead man in Chicago resembled their man so much that they believed it was he. Then came the search for the murderer. Every clue was followed, and finally a man was arrested in France charged with the crime. In the prisoner's possession was found a return steamer ticket bearing Joseph Schwab's name; also Schwab's watch, finger rings and some of his clothes. The investigation is being pushed by Mrs. Schwab, who is now in Waterloo.

SHOCKING TRAGEDY.

A Man at Wahpeton, Dakota, Kills a Young Lady, and is Summarily Lynched.

Miss Mollie Korbell, of Wahpeton, Dakota, was murdered by deputy sheriff S. S. Elmer. The victim was a respected domestic in Sheriff Miller's family, and was entrusted with the management of the household during the family's temporary absence, and at the time of the murder and just given the prisoners in the jail their supper. Elmer and other employes of the sheriff boarded with him, and after supper Elmer asked the deceased if she intended going out. She replied that if she felt like it, she would do so. At this Elmer pulled his revolver and shot her three times—in the arm, below the ear and in the neck. The murderer immediately gave himself up to another deputy sheriff, who locked him in a cell. A great crowd soon gathered and began to prepare ropes and to break into the jail. The police were active, and under direction of the mayor several men were arrested and locked up. The latter belonged to the fire department, and some firemen rang the fire bell. Almost every member of the department gathered, and the mob made a rush for the city hall to tear it down.

A masked mob of 100 determined men then overpowered Sheriff Miller and Deputy Bronte through the cages and took the murderer out. The mob was well organized and headed by resolute men of Whapeton and Breckenridge. The sheriff offered all the physical resistance his 260 pound afforded, but did not attempt to shoot or fight because the mob were all his friends and said the life of the murderer not worth the life of a friend. After the hanging the mob quietly dispersed, and the hundreds of men and women who witnessed the hanging went home satisfied. Elmer said he did not know why he killed the girl, and was sorry that he had done so. When asked if wished to prey he said, "No."

Miss Korbel was twenty-one years old and was highly respected by all who knew her. Elmer had never kept company with her, and had no claim to her attention, and why he should murder the girl is a mystery.

The murderer came from Massachusetts to Minnesota in 1862 and enlisted at Fort Snelling. He has been about Wahpeton two years and has borne a good character, though frequently exhibiting a weakness for strong drink; but he was sober when the murder was committed. He formerly lived in Fargo and is well known throughout the county. Six years ago he was employed by John Haggart, sheriff of Cass county, and served as deputy sheriff. Previous to his arrival at Fargo he had been deputy sheriff at Rochester, Minn. He was given to drinking, more or less, and four years ago Mr. Huggart discharged him. He remained a while longer and then went to James B. Powers' Helendale stock farm. From there he went to Wahpeton, and has since acted as deputy under Sheriff Miller.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

The Bohemian farmers began to gather in town towards night. After some consultation it was decided to use strategy, and the Bohemians withdrew. In the middle of the night a sudden outburst of voices near the jail roused the whole town. All the citizens, and those of Breckenridge as well, repaired to the scene. About the jail was gathered a mob of about seventy-five masked men. They made a rush for the jail, but at the command of Sheriff Miller they halted. It was only for a moment, however. They surrounded the sheriff and his twelve deputies, and firmly, though without harsh treatment, hustled them to one side. With crowbars and sledge hammers they then attacked the cell of the prisoner. The wonderful nerve of the murderer was admired even by the most desperate of his lynchers. Elmer sat on his cot in his cell and watched the progress made by the workers who were battering down the cell doors, as if he doubted their skill in such work. Not a word escaped his lips, but when the third steel door that separated him from the mob fell he stood up and presented his head for the noose to be slipped over. When the mob left the jail, Elmer clasped the rope with both hands to keep from being jerked down and appeared perfectly cool. After leaving the court yard, the mob quickened its pace and was soon in a swift race for the bridge. The immense crowd pressed closely about the running prisoner when one partially tripped him and Elmer said: "Don't do that boys, I've got the worst of the deal now." When the mob stepped on the bridge and the rope had been thrown over a stringer, Elmer was asked if he had anything to say. "No, I guess not," he replied. "Why did you kill the girl?" was asked. "I did it in the heat of passion," he said. Elmer was asked if he wanted to send any word to relatives, or if he wished to pray. He said not, and asked the mob if they wanted to tie his hands in front or behind his back. They were tied behind his back. "Are you ready," was asked. "Yes," said Elmer "hoist away." The horrid deed was done; blood atoned for blood. The body was cut down at 4 o'clock by the coroner. The parents of the murdered girl watched every movement of the lynchers with delight.

WAR IN KANSAS.

A Terrible Fight in Which Several Men are Killed, the Number Being Stated as Eleven.

A terrible encounter between Hugeton and Woodsdale men occurred in Stevens county, Kansas, whereby seven men lost their lives. Sam Robinson, the city marshal of Hugeton, and M. Cook of the same town went to the Ddaley ranch, near Pony creek, accompanied by their wives, to look up some cattle, which they were trying to buy. While taking dinner Deputy Sheriff Short, a Woodsdale man, accompanied by five other Woodsdale men, rode up to the party, and asked Robinson to surrender, as he had a warrant for his arrest. Robinson said he would go a short distance from camp, leaving Cook and the ladies behind, and then give his enemies a chance to take him. He did so, and on reaching a convenient spot both parties opened fire, with the result that four Woodsdale men turned up their toes. The other two fled to the strip, and Robinson escaped without a scratch. Cook hastened to Hughton and gave the alarm, and soon an armed squad went to their assistance. Meeting a lot of Woodsdale men an encounter took place, in which three more persons were killed and a number wounded. The whole county is at war, but Sam Robinson has again disappeared. John Cross, sheriff of Stevens county, was one of the men killed in the second fight.

James Gerrard, a deputy sheriff of Stevens county, gives the following account of the affair: A warrant had been issued to Ed Short, constable and city marshal of Woodsdale, for the arrest of Sam Robinson. Robinson had gone to the neutral trip, and Ed. Short, William Housley and Dick Wilson went after him. They found him in a dug out, and ordered him to surrender. He said he would never surrender to Ed. Short. Ed told him he could get as many men as he wished from the strip, to go with him to the state (Kansas). Robinson did not surrender but got on his horse and made a run of six or seven miles to the Beaver river, where he got a fresh horse and soon distanced the boys, who then gave up the chase. Sheriff Cross, hearing that Short and his posse had been corraled down in the strip, started with four men for their relief, but they could not find them, so started back up the trail and went into camp. While they were asleep a Hugeton party surprised and disarmed them, made them stand up in line and shot them, killing four and wounding one. C. S. Toby says that the four killed were Sheriff John Cross, Robert Hubbard, C. W. Eaton, R. Wilcox, and that Herbert Tony was wounded. He also said that there might be one or two more killed, and that he heard Herbert Reed was wounded, but could not say how he got hurt. There must have been shooting besides the above affray, for a boy named Nathan Jones, who was on his return from Stevens county to Liberal, states that he passed near two squads who were firing at each other. The latest report that came in is that eleven men have been killed. So far reports are very contradictory and many of them unreliable, but there is no doubt that Stevens county people are in a terrible state of excitement, and that more shooting may be expected.

CONFEDERATE PROPERTY.

Such As Remained in British Hands at the Close of the War Claimed by the United States.

In letters from Mr. Littlepage, lately employed as an agent of the treasury department, to the solicitor of the treasury, he says: He infers that his special assignment would be to recover such property belonging to the late Confederate states as has been fraudulently or improperly diverted or concealed. He found that in the winter of 1864 he was ordered to the Confederate ship "The Texas" (alias "The Pampelero"). This vessel was built at Glasgow as a No. 1 sloop of war and was to have received her armament and equipment while lying off the coast of England by another vessel. Capt. Henry Sinclair, of the Confederate states navy, superintended the construction of the vessel, its cost being $1,400,000 all of which was fully paid by the Confederate government. The vessel started to sea, but having been reported as a Confederate cruiser was seized. Capt. Sinclair secured her release by guaranteeing that she should not go into the hands of the Confederacy until they should be entitled to have her. He then chartered her, and when a few months after the Confederacy collapsed she was sailing under the same charter. The vessel was fully paid for by the Confederate government and should belong to the United States. She is still valuable and is now trading between Edinburg and Copenhagen. There are several other Clydebuilt steamers constructed by the Confederate government, similarly disposed of by their agents or captains, which should now belong to the United States. There were also two powerful rams, built by Laird & Co., on the Mersey, ostensibly for the Chinese government, but inspected and tested by Confederate officers. They were seized by the British authorities and were finally disposed of by the Confederate agents in charge, and are now in the British navy. Powerful Clyde-built steamers and rams were built in France for the Confederate government. Two new Clyde-built steamers, the City of Petersburg and the old Dominion, which were built for the Confederate government and paid for by it, are now running between Liverpool and Dublin.

Mr. Littlepage files an itemized statement of Confederate property unrecovered by the United states government, amounting to $30,000,000, most of which is in English hands. He estimates that there are $6,000,000 worth in the United States, not including the value of many millions of dollars worth of cotton belonging to the Confederate government shipped from Brownsville, Galveston and Matamoras since the war.

Another Chicago Dynamiter Arrested.

A gunsmith named Rudolph Sevic was arrested at Chicago, and is now behind prison bars under bonds of $7,000. He is charged with being the individual who furnished dynamite to the conspirators who intended to assassinate the three law officers most prominent in the Haymarket prosecution. Sevic acknowledges that he has been illegally dealing in dynamite and that he has sold over fifty pounds of the explosive to various persons within a year. He will only admit having sold ten pounds to Chicago anarchists, and assets that he either never knew them or cannot remember who they were. Inspector Bonfield says he has proof that the ten pounds, if not more, went to Hronek, Chapek and Chleboun. When Sevic was marched into the dock, Inspector Bonfield said he was probably the most dangerous dynamiter in the city. The inspector appeared as prosecutor and said:

Sevic is a Bohemian gunsmith and a friend of Chapek, Hronek and Chleboun. June 21, 1887, he bought twenty-five pounds of dynamite of the American Powder company. He told me that he had sold this twenty-five pounds to a farmer living in Minnesota. I don't believe his story and have reason to believe that dynamite never went out of Chicago. On May 26, of this year, Sevic again bought twenty-five pounds of dynamite of the American Powder company. This dynamite was of exactly the same grade and had the same stamps as that found in possession of the three conspirators. I consider him a more dangerous man than any of the three, and I ask that he be held in larger bonds.

Sevic professed total ignorance of English, although Inspector Bonfield said that he knew it possibly well. Judge Lyon explained the case to the prisoner through an interpreter, and then assented to Inspector Bonfield's motion to continue the case a week in bonds of $7,000.

"There is no doubt of Sevic's connection with the conspirators," said Inspector Bonfield subsequently. "The identity of the dynamite itself proves that. Then Sevic is a friend and countryman of Hronek, Chapek and Chleboun. This comes pretty near proving Sevic's connection with the plot. The bombs made from this dynamite were of the 'devilish pattern.' One of them might have killed fifty men."

The police say that the discovery of the bombs, which are doubtless the product of Sevic's handiwork, is an important link in the chain of evidence against Hronek, Chapek and Chleboun. The bombs were the invention of Hronek, and their manufacture by a practical gunsmith goes far to show a deep-laid conspiracy. It is thought by the police that many more of the bombs are in existence, as there is no other probable theory to explain the use of the large quantities of dynamite handled by the Bohemian gunsmith. Sevic is twenty-eight years old and of intelligent appearance. He understands and speaks but little English. Inspector Bonfield also captured several infernal machines. They are of zinc, 4½ or 5 inches in height, of cylinder shape, 2½ inches in diameter. Inside of these cylinders are others of equal height, about an inch in diameter. These inside cylinders are filled with dynamite, and between them and the outside covering the space is filled full of cut glass, lead slugs and broken iron. In the tops of the inside cylinders fulminating caps are placed with fuses attached. Inspector Bonfield will not say whether or not these machines were in Sevic's house.

The Murder at Fond du Lac.

The sheriff and coroner returned from Fond du Lac to Duluth, bringing with them James Reney, the murderer, who killed Benjamin Clark of Duluth, known as "Slim." There had been a quarrel between the two men in a box car, which was side-tracked at Fond du Lac, and after they got out Reney cut Clark with a razor in the throat, the slash being from the left ear around to the right side of the windpipe and going in to the bone. Reney is a rather nice-looking man and does not look much like either a tramp or a murderer. In an interview he said he was an Irishman, twenty-nine years old, and had lived at Buffalo, where he was married seven months ago. He is a grain shoveler by trade, and a member of the grain trimmers union of that city. He came to Duluth three days ago on the steamer Nyack, looking for work, but failed to get it. Afterward he met a German here by the name of Grupp, and they decided to go to Claremont, Minn., to work in the wheat fields. They boarded a box coal car on the St. Paul & Duluth railroad, intending to go to St. Paul in that. In the car were three other men, one of them the man Clark, whom he had met the day before. Several of them were supplied with bottles of whisky and they drank around two or three times, though Reney says they were not drunk. After awhile Grupp went to sleep and Clark told Reney that he (Grupp) had some money, $1.50, and he intended to go through him. Reney objected to his doing so and the result was that they had a quarrel over it. At Fond du Lac the car they were in was switched off on a side track just above the village, and the rest of the train went on. All got out of the car, and Reney says he said to Grupp they had better go on or they would have a fuss, and they started ahead on the track. Before they had gone far Clark called to them to stop. Looking back they saw him running towards them. They stopped, Clark came up with them and grabbed Reney by the shoulder. Then, he says, he drew out his razor and cut him. Clark dropped, and he and Grupp started on a run for the woods, but he did not know he had killed the man at the time. In a few moments a dozen or more men were around the body and chasing them, one not far behind with a revolver in his hand, and and he heard one say, "He's dead." He then stopped and decided to give himself up. Grupp is detained as a witness.

Gen. Boulanger rode out in a carriage for the first time since his duel with Floquet. He drove through the Bois de Boulogue, followed by sixteen carriages filled with newspaper reporters and admirers who shouted "A bas Floquet," "A bas Ferry" and "Vive Boulanger" until they were hoarse. The general's carriage was escorted back to Paris by an immense crowd of howling gamins.

Gov. Hill of New York has commuted the sentence of Chiara Cignarale, the Italian woman who assassinated her husband, to imprisonment for life.

The officers of the Northern Pacific railway were in consultation for many hours at New York with Premier Greenway and Attorney General Martin of Manitoba. The general understanding among outsiders was that they were endeavoring to effect some plan for co-operation between the Northern Pacific and the Red River Valley railroad. Premier Greenway, when seen at the Fifth Avenue hotel late tonight, said that an agreement had been completed by the representatives of the Manitoba government and the Northern Pacific officials, but that it would no doubt require legislative endorsement and ratification by the Northern Pacific.

THE MILLS TARIFF BILL.

Dramatic Incidents Connected With Its Passage Through the House by a Majority of Thirteen.

According to general expectation the Mills tariff bill passed the house on Saturday, and a large attendance of people were present to see the closing debate.

The central figure was Mrs. Cleveland who gave the indorsement of her presence to the Mills bill when Mr. Mills made his opening speech, and who was there to represent the president and his approval at the close. In the executive gallery besides were Mrs. Secretary Endicott and her daughter and the wives of a few senators and bureau officers. The diplomatic gallery was filled with people who are not diplomats, although some of them have been and others hope to be. The speaker's seat in the gallery was occupied by the wife of the speaker and invited guests, and all the rest of the galleries were crammed to the last remnant of standing room by crowds which will always congregate at the capitol whenever there is a "field day."

The members came early, and were in their seats when the gavel fell. They did not leave them until it fell again, when the long roll had been twice called and the bill was declared passed by thirteen majority. Mr. Mills, ruddy of face and white of mustache, was among the first to take a seat. The previous question was to be moved by 11:30, and the house convened at 11. Promptly at 11:30 Mr. Mills commenced the speech of an hour, which was to close the debate.

The previous question was ordered at 1 o'clock, and at once the calling of the long roll began. The roll call was followed with the greatest interest. The speaker did not find it necessary to command the house to silence. It was silent. Something of dramatic effect was added to the roll call by the reading of the letter of Mr. Randall just before in which he announced his opposition to the bill.

Mr. Randall's letter, dated June 10 and addressed to Hon. W. A. Sowden, is as follows: If a vote on Mr. Mills' tariff bill is to be taken Saturday, the 21st inst, I fear my strength, by reason of recent illness, will not permit my presence in the house on that day and if absent I want you to secure me a pair with some one who favors that bill, as I would, if present, record my vote in opposition to it. Give this immediate care, as I do not want to be misunderstood. I want it announced and distinctly known that I am opposed to the passage of the bill in question.

As the roll proceeded the first name to attract attention was that of Anderson of Iowa. He voted, as he has done throughout the congress, with the Democrats and for the bill. The Democrats applauded his response as if in securing an independent vote they had scored a victory. They soon learned, however, that he laughs best who laughs last, for hardly had the vote of Anderson been recorded for the bill when Bliss of New York, a Democrat who represents manufacturers, and who said that if he should vote for the mills bill he would be defeated by 9,000, voted nay in a clear voice. This was a Democratic Roland for a Republican Oliver. The next name to attract attention was that of Brower of North Carolina. He voted for the bill because of the slight reduction on the tobacco tax.

Then came upon the roll call the greatest sensation of the day—Knute Nelson of Minnesota. Both sides watched him closely, for both sides expected his vote. Both sides understood that they had his assurance that he would vote with them. He spoke of favor of something like the bill at the beginning of the session when no tariff speeches had been made. He received the eulogies of the friends of the bill from that hour but all through the debate in the committee of the whole Mr. Nelson has spoken and voted generally with the Republicans. One of the Republicans said that Nelson had given assurances that he would vote against the Mills bill. But if Mr. Nelson made such promise he made them to the ear alone, for when his name was called he voted aye. There was tremendous applause on the Democratic side long continued. With the applause there were heard some hisses. Mr. Nelson himself was evidently not pleased to attract so much attention. He leaned forward upon his desk, colored somewhat and seemed altogether ill at ease. There were no further notable incidents as the roll call proceeded. Sowden voted as he said he would, against the bill. Foran, who has vigorously opposed the bill, dodged. The last name called was that of Speaker Carlisle, who voted for the bill in the midst of applause. The vote on the bill was a party vote except that of Sowden, Merriman, Bliss, and Greenman, Democrats, voted with the Republicans; Fitch and Nelson, Republicans, voted with the Democrats, and the Independents Anderson (Iowa) and Smith (Wis.) voted with the Democrats. When the speaker announced the passage of the bill the Democrats broke into cheers and waved bandanas wildly in the air.

The Sioux Commission.

The Sioux Indian Commission is now ready for work—all being new at Standing Rock. The commission has two clerks and an interpreter. They have two papers for the Indians to sign, one favoring the relinquishment of their lands, and the other against it. Each individual Indian will be called upon. There is great excitement on the reservation and among the five or six thousand now encamped around the agency there are none who favor the treaty. Some, however, say they are willing to listen to what the white chiefs have to say, and it is possible, but not at all probable, that the commission may be able to change the sentiment by explaining the details of the measures. The treaty takes from the Indians about one-half the lands, or 11,000,000 acres, which will be sold to settlers for fifty cents an acre. This fund, which it is estimated would soon be two or three millions is to be placed at interest for the benefit of the Indians. Besides this $1,000,000 is to be expended for farm machinery, etc., for the Indians who are to take land in severalty and live like white men. This feature is what Indians dislike. Some say they want to live like white men, but the majority say they want a hunting ground and they have been driven far enough by the whites. Some of the most noted chiefs of the Sioux nation are ready to confer with the commission, among them Gall, Mad Bear, Big Head, Running Antelope and John Grass. Sitting Bull is out on a hunt, and as he has already expressed his opposition to the treaty it is likely that his presence will not tend to lighten the task of the commission. The Indians have selected several orations to talk and will have their own interpreter also. They say they cannot always trust white men, and that all treaties heretofore made have been broken. It was expected that the most opposition to the treaty would come from the Rosebud and White Earth agencies, and that at Standing Rock very little opposition would be encountered. The action of the Indians during the past few days demonstrates the fact that the commission have a hard task before them, and that the securing of the signatures of three-fourths, of the Indians is doubtful.

There is a bitter fight in progress over the whisky questions at Harlan Court House, Ky., which bids fair to end in bloodshed. County Judge Lewis believes that a great deal of whisky is being sold in town in spite of the local prohibition law. Several grocerymen were tried a few days ago on that charge, but no proof was produced. Arrest angered the accused, and as Judge Lewis rode out of town at evening he barely escaped being shot by John Farley, and then Lewis rode back into town and assembling opponents of the traffic proceeded to search the stores of John Blair, Howard and others, suspected. They found liquor in several, rolled the barrels into the streets and emptied the contents on the ground. This was done under a guard of twenty men with Winchesters. Afterward the whisky men rallied and the factions encountered in the street. A hundred shots were fired, but nobody was killed.

Minneapolis detectives have corralled a gang of thieves, arrested five men, and recovered several thousand dollars worth of stolen property.

A passenger train on the Cannon Falls line of the Milwaukee road coming to Red Wing, struck a cow, and a freight car and one passenger coach and property car of Stetson's Uncle Tom's Cabin troupe left the track, and went down the steep twenty-five-foot embankment. W. A. Clark, canvasman, of Hurley, Wis., was standing in the door when the car was over-turned, and was caught and crushed to death. One lady had a leg broken, and another was badly bruised. Nearly all had ankles sprained or kindred injuries. Conductor Fitzgerald claimed the bell rope was tied, so that the engineer could not be notified. He claimed that the engineer could have seen the cow, as the track was straight for a distance before it was struck.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

The president has recognized J. B Hartsink as vice consul of the Netherlands at St. Paul for the State of Minnesota.

Architect Dunham of Burlington lost his pocketbook at Winona with about $300 and valuable papers. The next day it was handed to him by an honest hackman, who found it in the hack.

D. J. Johnson's merchant tailoring establishment at Farmington was broken into, and about $400 worth of goods stolen. No clue to the thieves.

The residence of E. Gage at Winona, was entered while Mr. Gage and Mrs. Gage were both up town and a gold watch and chain worth $75 and $4 in money was stolen.

A letter has been received by his family from Gen. C. H. Berry, expressing his appreciation of the honor and confidence placed in him by the president in appointing him to the supreme bench of Idaho but he is not ready yet to say whether he will accept the position or not.

John Gross, a German aged twenty-six, in the employ of the Beef Slough Logging company, fell from the edge of the boarding boat at the Minneiska boom while intoxicated and was drowned. Ordinarily Gross was a good swimmer.

George Scherer, a member of the Vigilant Hose company of Winona, was accidentally run over by the Mystic hose cart in running to a fire, and both legs were badly crushed.

Some one hired a horse and buggy from Mr. Nisken's hotel at Farmington to go to Rosemount, seven miles distant, and has not yet returned. It is learned that a companion entered the buggy with him at the outskirts of the village, and it is thought from other suspicious circumstances that they are persons implicated in the robbery of Johnson's tailoring establishment a few nights ago.

Burglars entered the Milwaukee depot at Zumbrota and took a few dollars from the till. A deaf and dumb man was arrested on suspicion, but no money was found in his clothes and he was released.

At a picnic held at Mendota, near St. Paul, a fight took place between Fred Bryant, a son of Judge D. N. Bryant, and Lawrence Ried, president of the village, in which Ried is reported seriously injured. Threats of lynching were indulged in by some of the most prominent of Reid's friends, but wiser counsels prevailed.

While a party of young men of Aitkin were in bathing near town Charles Everts, a single man about 28 years of age and a good swimmer, was drowned. He has relatives in Orange county, New York. He was a steady, temperate young man.

The hardware store of C. B. Johnson of Cannon Falls was burglarized of about $300 worth. The thieves entered through the cellar. They cut a hole through the door to the cellar large enough to put an arm through and turn the key which was left in the door.

The board of directors of the Lake Crystal Farmer's Mutual Fire Insurance company held a meeting at Lake Crystal. Applications have been made for insurance to the amount of $20,000, and an agent will soon be sent out to work for the company. The company was organized May 5, with a capital stock of $25,000.

A band of gypsies have been at Marshall some days and one night some of them were arrested for robbing Mrs. J. Middelton, a farmer's wife, of bedding, clothing, and provisions. A neighbor, who was passing found her in a fainting condition a few minutes after. He summoned help and arrested the theives. On trial they were found guilty and fined.

The funeral of the late George B. Whipple, held at the cathedral at Faribault was attended by the largest audience ever seen on a similar occasion in that city.

The heaviest rain and wind storm known at St. Cloud for years swept over that city from the Northwest. There was a little hail, and water ran in the streets in torrents. As the first storm passed it was succeeded by one from the southwest. A mile northwest of town at the Manitoba-Willmar junction, a perfect cyclone cloud was formed. It, however, connected with the ground but a small space, lifting the railroad section house and hay stacks above the grove, damaging trees and leveling fences and telegraph wires. It passed up Sauk river but did not seem to connect again. It looked like a waterspout.

The now celebrated case of the East and West Norway Lake churches against Johannes Halverson, the pastor of the minority, for the possession of the parsonage, is on trial at Willmar. Judge C. L. Brown of Morris presiding. A similar case tried a year ago resulted in a judgment in favor of the majority. While that case was being tried Mr. Frisbie, who was the defendant in the former action moved out of and Rev. Halvorsen moved into the parsonage, necessitating the bringing of the present action by the majority.

News was received in New Orleans of a brutal attack by Roderick Lowry, nephew of Gov. Lowry of Mississippi, upon his wife. The assault was committed in Jackson, but the particulars were suppressed. Mrs. Lowry had left her husband and gone to Jackson because her husband had beaten her. He followed his wife and under the pretense of seeking reconciliation was permitted to see her. Mrs. Lowry refused to return with her husband he choked and bit her in the most tigerish manner. Then he broke a water pitcher over his wife's head. Then he broke a bottle of medicine in her face. This was supplemented by kicks in her now prostrate body. Indignant citizens are hunting Lowry, and if caught he will be lynched. Mrs. Lowry's condition is critical.

The Prohibition Party.

The Minnesota State Convention Held at St. Paul, Where a Platform is Put Forth and a Ticket Nominated.

The largest prohibition gathering ever seen in the Northwest was the Minnesota prohibition state convention which assembled in St. Paul. J. W. Earle, of Otter Tail put the machinery in motion as temporary chairman. The report of the committee on credentials showed 405 delegates, representing sixty-five counties, present. The committee on permanent organization reported the following as the permanent officers of the convention: Chairman, S. B. Williams of Minneapolis; secretary, John J. Moe of Twin Valley; assistant secretary, D. R. Shepherd of St. Paul. In his speech of acceptance Mr. Williams alluded to the fact that he once before presided over a state convention where there were less than thirty delegates, and most of them left before the convention was over because some of the others were so strong on prohibition sentiment.

Col. Bain of Kentucky came into the hall at this juncture and was escorted to the platform amid rapturous applause. He afterward made a telling speech.

The committee on resolutions, through its secretary, Rev. W. W. Satterlee, made its report. It was read by resolutions and adopted with very little change, those which were made being in wording and not in matter. The platform, as adopted, follows:

Whereas, In all great reforms, history is constantly repeating itself, and as the great conflict for the fall of chattel slavery throughout the world has been fought and won, we now have another not less glorious, resulting to all lands, namely, the overthrow of alcoholic despotism which demand our mightiest efforts. England led in the first American is leading in this and the king of kings is at the head of our columns. In this latter conflict the issue is between the continued supply of intoxicants by manufacture, sale and importation and its immediate and unconditional prohibition.

Resolved, That in the future of this conflict we fully endorse the national platform adopted at Indianapolis by the Prohibition party, and commend to the suffrages of all citizens its nominees, Gen. Clinton B. Fisk and Dr. John A. Brooks, as president and vice president of these United States; that we regard the saloon traffic as the great curse of the human race and the most dangerous element in our government, and we demand its total suppression by constitutional and statutory enactments.

Resolved, That, as the license law of Minnesota grants all the revenue derived from the saloons in the villages and cities to their own use, while the taxation resulting is borne very largely by the farmer element, without power to prevent the granting of such license, we declare such law unjust and appeal to the farmers to assist us in crushing the saloon and preventing their robbery.

Resolved, That the indorsement of the license system by dealers and manufacturers of intoxicants is prima facie evidence that license, whether high or low, promotes their business and gives them a monopoly of a traffic that is believed to be a public evil, and proves the charge that license is a bar to prohibition.

Resolved, That high license has not appreciably decreased the evils of intemperance in our state, and has proven itself as great a failure in practice as it has always been recognized in principle; that saloons are rapidly increasing, and that here, as elsewhere, their reduction is only temporary; that it is good law, good logic and good reason that whoever aids, abets or countenances a crime is accessory thereto, and the Republican and Democratic parties do, by their license laws, give legal standing to the liquor crime and are therefore jointly responsible for its results.

Resolved, That we especially confirm the action of our national convention on the Sabbath question as judicious and wise, providing for the protection of our citizens who religiously observe the seventh day as Sabbath.

Resolved, That the announced intention of the national Republican party to remove from tobacco and intoxicating beverages the internal revenue taxes without abolishing the saloons and for the purpose of maintaining a high protective tariff upon articles of necessity in ordinary use, will result in cheap whisky and tobacco and high-priced clothing, and is opposed to the best interests of the people.

Resolved, That we recognize the Democratic party as the self-confessed advocate and defender of the liquor traffic, and, while we admire its candor, we deplore its lack of conscience regarding a great evil which is destroying the very foundations of our republic.

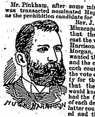
Resolved, That a great hindrance to the suppression of the traffic in beverages by the state law is found in the legal right of citizens of other states and countries to import such liquors into prohibition states, and we declare it to be the immediate duty of congress under the power to regulate commerce, both foreign and interstate, to prohibit the importation of intoxicating beverages into any state where the saloon traffic is made a statutory crime. This is a national question of permanent importance demanding the power of a national party.

Resolved, That it is the duty of the state legislature to require each railway company doing business in the state to provide suitable and adequate stock yards at such stations as may be designated by the railroad commissioners for the handling and shipping of grain, cattle and other products under such rules and regulations as will insure to every shipper equal rights, facilities and privileges.

Recognizing and declaring that the prohibition of the liquor traffic has become the dominant issue in national politics, we invite to full party fellowship all those who on this one dominant issue are with us agreed, in the full belief that this party can and will remove sectional differences, promote national unity and insure the best welfare of our entire land.

We recognize with heartfelt thanks the educational work of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, the Good Templars, the Sons of Temperance and the Scandinavian and Father Mathew Total Abstinence societies, which have contributed so much toward making the present measure of success possible.

Mr. Pinkham, after some minor business was transacted nominated Hugh Harrison as the prohibition candidate for Governor.



Rev. J. M. Bull of Minneapolis moved that the secretary cast the vote for Mr. Harrison. Rev. D. Morgan, however, wanted the roll called and the chairman of each county to cast the vote of the county for the choice so that the candidate would know that he had the full support of each delegate. The latter counsel prevailed and the roll call proceeded. It was without event, as each county voted solid for Harrison. Each chairman was allowed to cast the total vote of his county on the basis of the convention call, whether delegates were present or not, and the result was that 588 votes were cast, all for Mr. Harrison.

The ticket complete was made up as follows:

For Governor—Hugh Harrison of Minneapolis.

For Lieutenant Governor—Prof. Theodore L. Reimestad of Minneapolis.

For Secretary of State—Peter Thompson of Nobles county.

For State Treasurer—John H. Allen of Fergus Falls.

For Attorney General—Chas. E. Shannon of Duluth.

For Electors—At Large: Father Martin Mahoney of St. Paul, J. W. Earl of Fergus Falls.

First District—Dr. A. W. Ballard of Albert Lea.

Second District—James N. Wishard of Mapleton.

Third District—John Brinckerhoff of Faribault.

Fourth District—Alfred J. Flan of Minneapolis.

Sixth District—J. U. Barnes of Alexandria.

The committee to select a state central committee named the following gentlemen: At large, James P. Pinkham, chairman; George F. Wells, secretary; W. J. Dean, J. T. James, S. J. Turnblad; First district, C. N. McLaughlin, A. B. Quimby; Second district, J. P. Grout, W. F. Myer; Third district, William Johnson, M. W. Skinner; Fourth district, Father Mahoney, A. P. Peterson; Fifth district, A. A. Stone, A. B. Ebeltoft. The committee recommended that the number of delegates at large be increased from five to seven, and named Rev. D. Morgan and F. S. Reimestad at the additional members. The Northwestern Prohibitionist wanted a member of the committee, but after a long squabble their request was refused and the report adopted.

Mr. Lawrence announced the total sum subscribed for the fund as $4,600, one man, whose name he was forbidden to give, having contributed $400.

Rev. J. Pinkham, of Minneapolis was nominated for Congress in the Fourth district.

GRAND PARADE AND MASS MEETING.

The Prohibitionists literally took possession of St. Paul after 7 o'clock on the second night of the convention and owned the town, or a large portion of it. Shortly after that hour the delegates and local clubs began to form in line on Seventh street, near the market house. The line started about 500 strong, and marching to Third street, proceeded down to the union depot. Here the visiting clubs from Minneapolis were met and were escorted back to Market Hall. The route was over Sibley and Seventh streets, and as the procession moved through the city with several bands of music playing a fine display was made. The ladies were in open carriages. Every man and woman in line carried a new broom, bearing the characteristic white rosette of the Prohibitionists. Banners and transparencies were carried at intervals bearing significant legends, such as "We Say the Saloon Must Go," "No North, No South," "For God, Home and Native Land," and others of like nature.

When the procession arrived at Market Hall, and the crowd poured into the big building, the scene on the interior was a wild one for some time. Flags and brooms were waved, wild cries rent the air, such as "Fisk-Fisk-Fisk and Brooks," or "What's the matter with Fisk?" with the response in a voice of thunder, "He's all right." President Williams had some trouble in getting order out of the chaos, but finally succeeded.

Market Hall was crowded with one of the biggest audiences ever within its walls. Every seat was filled to overflowing, and hundreds of people, including many ladies, were standing in the aisles. Upon the stage were seated the candidates nominated for state offices during the day. It is estimated that fully 2,500 people were present. After a number of war and patriotic melodies, Col. George W. Bain, of Louisville, Ky., was introduced by the president as the first speaker of the evening. The telling parts of his speech were as follows:

Certainly we must feel satisfied with the audience we have to-night. I want to first make a point for the business men of this audience. I make the charge that at the bottom of the crime, social disorder, battle between labor and capital and the wrong of the poor lies the liquor business. I say until naked feet are shod, until shivering forms are clad, it's a shame to keep God's productions shut up in store-houses and they cry over-production. Within the last four years 22 hundreds of millions of dollars have gone out of the pockets of the working people for drink. Close every saloon in St. Paul next Saturday, keep them closed from sunup to sundown, let no man in or out, and by Saturday night there wouldn't be a beef steak left in a butcher shop in St. Paul. I tell you we men are getting things into a great shape. No wonder the women are wanting the ballot box to set things straight. They say this is a free country, if a man wants to drink let him do so, and take the consequences. The only trouble about that is that while they take the drink, somebody else has to take the consequences. There isn't a rose on the liquor seller's wife's bonnet that didn't cost roses from some other woman's cheek, not a jewel upon his daughter's fingers but cost jewels from some manly lives. I tell you to-night as a Southern man, that God will smite this country unles we take measures to protect the womanhood of the country. If there isn't enough manhood in this country to protect woman, let us put the ballot into the hands of our women.

Some days ago a well dressed person walked into a Faribault hotel and registered from Milwaukee, and inquired the whereabouts of one of the prominent men of the city. He spoke familiarly of him to the landlord, saying he would have to hunt him up as he had business with him. The landlord assigned a room to his guest and took up his baggage. The gentleman partook of several meals, being very liberal in his praises. After several days and no return of the guest the landlord began to feel a little nervous, and looked to see what his guest had left for security. The heavy baggage contained a good-sized rock and the small piece a bag of sand.

The tug Mystic arrived at Port Townsend from Alaska with the schooner Dolphin, Grace, Ada and Anna Beck in tow. These schooners were seized in Behring sea for illegal seal fishing, and will be sold at public auction Aug. 22.

A man giving the name of W. B. Gillett of Boston, who sojourned at the Queen's hotel in Winnipeg, has done up a Winnipeger, Mr. Radford, to the extent of $1,700. Gillett produced bank drafts to this amount and skipped for Minnesota.

War has broken out afresh in Pike county, Ky. Detectives arrived there looking for "Kentucky Bill," a desperado. They ran foul of the McCoy party, who supposed the detectives were after them, and a battle ensued. It is believed that John Dottson McCoy was killed. A number of others were wounded. The clothing of the detectives was riddled with the bullets from the 800 shots that were fired.

It is learned that the object of the plot which was discovered at Rustchuk was to murder Prince Ferdinand. Two of the ringleaders, Boguteff and Ivanoff, have been arrested.

John Miller, a wealthy farmer seven miles north of Hastings, Nebraska, was found dead in his wagon this afternoon upon his return from Hastings. He was of quarrelsome and vengeful nature, and was arrested some time ago for incendiarism. It is supposed that he was drugged in Hastings.

Robert Hogan, a clerk in the office of Supt. Cosgrave, of the Northwestern, was arrested at Winona, Minn. He confessed to have stolen a gold watch belonging to Mrs. C. F. Hummer, and also a revolver from a satchel in the depot. He is a boy of about twenty years, and had been implicitly trusted. His parents are very respectable people.

Two men, named Henry and Martz, Germans, were murdered near Washtucha lake Washington Territory. N. O. Bluthem is charged with the crime, and a warrant has been issued for his arrest.

United States Marshall Gross has received a letter from Harlan, Kentucky stating that his deputy is in the court house with 100 men armed with Winchesters and that he will try to hold it. The whiskyites are arming and threaten to have blood for the destruction of their property. William Howard, who has a record of three men killed by him, is their leader. The letter states there is certain to be further trouble.

The work of launching the big Nova Scotia timber raft was superintended by an expert sent from New York by the owner. The raft was taken in tow by a tug to a safe anchorage. The boats have been ordered from Boston to take the raft in tow. The raft will be insured for $30,000.

A freight train broke in two on the Omaha & Republican Valley railroad near Yutan, Nebraska, and a Wabash car loaded with shelled corn was ditched. While the train men were transferring the corn to another car about an hour afterwards they discovered the bodies of six dead tramps in the car. They had been stealing a ride, and the ditching of the car caused them to be smothered to death in the corn. Three bodies are identified. One is the body of John C. Taylor, cigarmaker, Louisville, Ky.; another is that of Charles Spokes, who had a brother at Wymore, Neb., and a third is that of Charles R. Talbot, who had letters from Columbus, Neb. The other three are unknown.

Fremont Evans deliberately murdered Bertha Shultz in Pawnee City, Nebraska. Evans, who was second cook at the Exchange hotel, had been paying attention to Miss Schultz, a laundry girl at the hotel, and a few days ago proposed marriage to her. She refused him, which greatly provoked him. Afterwards, while Bertha was in a neighboring yard, Evans met her and stabbed her to the heart with a penknife. She died immediately. Evans, who is in jail, was very cool and deliberate, and even boasted that he sharpened his penknife for the purpose of murdering the girl.

A German named Clotten had been arrested for threatening to murder Mr. Gladstone. Clotten, when questioned by the police, said he had sent the manuscript of a story to Mrs. Gladstone with the request that she read it. When he asked for the return of the copy he was told that it had been mislaid and could not be found. He then wrote the letter to Mr. Gladstone.

Republican Campaign.

Where Cleveland is Strongest.

From what the London papers say it is clear that Cleveland could carry England in the coming election. He should go there and run.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

Monkeying With the Buzz Saw.

The New York Herald reports that "the Democrats have got their wedge into the Republican majority in Wisconsin." Let's see, what was it happened to that reckless Frenchman who got his head into a lion's mouth the other day? We seem to remember that the coroner remarked, as he inspected the headless trunk that the man ought to have known better.

For the Benefit of the Sugar Planters.

A Democratic President and a Democratic House of Representatives ask the people to abandon this trifling duty on wool in order that they may enjoy what appears to the Democrats to be the inestimable privilege of paying one hundred millions of dollars to maintain a few sugar planters in Louisiana, whose crops grow less year by year.—From the Baltimore American.

No Dodging in This Campaign.

Let us, then, have an honest, not a hypocritical campaign. The issue is not of details as to the protective tariff. It is much bigger than that. The Democrats strike at the heart of the protective theory, for they deny the right of congress to lay a tax for protection. Democrats who are too cowardly to come up to the issue squarely will do well to drop out and fall to the rear. The dodging and squirming and lying of 1880 are not going to be repeated this year.—Washington Post.

A Result of Free Trade.

"At present tin-plate making is practically unknown in this country, though we are as well fitted to make it as England and Wales, from which countries most of our tin-plate comes. Within six years we have paid British manufactures over $100,000,000 for tin-plate, besides paying freight. As near as I can learn the total wages paid the British laborers in the production of the tin-plate imported into the United States last year were about $9,000,000. My wish is that such amount shall be expended in our own country, and that it shall go to our own wage-workers."

Two Men.

Benjamin Harrison and Grover Cleveland are about the same age. Both are of honest parentage. Both are lawyers. Both sought homes and business in growing cities. So much for the likenees between them. And there it ends.

Harrison took a bride with him to Indianapolis. Cleveland went to Buffalo a bachelor.

Harrison built a home. Cleveland lived in his law chambers.

Harrison taught a Sunday school class of young lawyers. Cleveland—he traveled in another direction.

Harrison was elected reporter to the Supreme court of Indiana with honorable and most responsible duties. Cleveland was elected sheriff of Erie county, an office that also has its duties.

The war broke out. Harrison volunteered, Cleveland was drafted. Harrison recruited a regiment and went to the front. Cleveland recruited a substitute and remained in Buffalo.

Harrison has been true to every promise he has made to man or woman, to party or the nation. Cleveland has been true to himself, and kept such promises as is was for his interest not to break.

Such are the two candidates. How well do they represent the parties that support them.—Boston Traveler.

Under British Free-Trade.

Mr. E. O. Lanxay, an American resident at Liverpool, England, for twelve years, writes thus detailing his experience under British Free-trade: "As a personal illustration of the benefits; first, I get my clerks much lower, my servants cost me much less, and my Free-trade American friend thinks that my house rent is surprisingly low. So it is. But I forgot to tell that I, the tenant, pay the taxes of 8⅓ per cent upon the rental, and I also forgot to tell him that I also pay an inhabited house duty of 7d. upon the pound rental, then I have an income tax of 7d, on the pound, and stamp taxes on every hand, and by actual comparison with a friend in America it cost me about 15 per cent more to serve my table here than it does him in America.

But I do get my clothing cheaper, because the poor fellow that made it gets about 10s. per week, but, unfortunately for me, I eat more than I wear. If the laboring man in America does not, let him throw up his hat for Free trade. I will promise him a cheaper coat, but can not promise him the money to buy it with."—Boston Commercial.

The Respect of His Fellow-Men.

There is occasion for reflection in the kind interest that is shown in General Harrison by the throngs of his fellow-citizens who daily visit him. Ever since his nomination his home has been the destination of one delegation after another of admirers who call to pay their respects and wish him success. It is estimated that he has shaken hands with more than fifty thousand people since he was nominated four weeks ago, and yet he is to-day as he was a month ago, simply a plain private citizen. The mere curiosity seeker visits the White House so he can say he has seen the President. But the thousands who are visiting Gen. Harrison are friends not curiosity seekers, for so far as official rank is concerned, he is on the same plane with his visitors. But this great outpouring of neighbors and friends is a testimony to General Harrison that he possesses in an unlimited degree, the respect and confidence of his fellow-men, and as a candidate for the highest office in the land they want he should know it. That is a good deal to say of a man. It can only be said of a gentleman. It can only be said of a man whose private life is pure and spotless. It can only be said of a man whose public life is free from dishonor or reproach. It can only be said of a man whose daily walk and conversation are so clean and wholesome that those who know him best can say "there is a good true man." So far we have not heard of any throngs of people flocking to Washington to congratulate Mr. Cleveland on his renomination and wish him success.

The Battle Ground of 1888.

The state of New York is once more to become the battle ground of a presidential canvass, and again the Democracy counts upon defection in the ranks of its foes, as in 1844 and 1884, to bring it to victory. It realizes that its prospects of winning are unfavorable, and that defeat, as overwhelming as it is deserved, is certain to come if the ranks of its opponent remain unbroken. Bourbon journalists and Bourbon stump speakers may talk gayly and confidently of the chances of the party, but the wiser and more thoughtful members are aware that if the Republican lines stand firm the Democracy is doomed to disaster in the coming election.

There are the best of reasons for the belief that the diversion from the ranks of the Republicans in New York which elected Cleveland in 1884 cannot be repeated this year. Most of the independent Republicans who, repelled by Blaine's candidacy and deluded by Cleveland's reform promises, voted the Democratic ticket four years ago are back in the old fold again.

Nor is there the slightest probability that a defection like that which put the foes of Democracy in the minority in New York forty-four years ago can occur this year. A hasty utterance of Henry Clay, the Whig candidate in that year, made in a private letter which eventually found its way into print, diverted enough Whig votes in New York to the Liberty party to give that state to the Democrats and make James K. Polk president. These bolters, unaware, however, at the time of the full consequence of their acts, on account of a partial disagreement with their standard bearer on a question of governmental policy placed in power a party which they had combated during all their manhood years, and to which they were diametrically and unalterably hostile on every issue of national concern. The regret at their folly which these individuals subsequently carried with them to their dying day did not blot out the record which they had enabled to slave power to make, but it prevented any subsequent Whig bolt while that party remained a national organization. Their compatriots throughout the country trust that the New York Republicans will get out every Republican vote in the state for the ticket this year.—New York Press.

Military Efficiency of France.

The military ability of France, and her system of fortification, are splendidly developed, especially when one considers the shifting policies of the war department under her peculiar administration of republicanism. It may be said, however, that each new minister, urged on by the national feeling, has accelerated rather than abated or suspended movement. For five years following the re-establishment of the republic, the national assembly spent much of its time in supplementing the organic laws of '72, which were copied in the main from those of Prussia. Universal liability to arms, non-substitution, and the abolishment of paid enlistment, are the first features of the modern military statutes. Liability to service in the actives or reserves extends from twenty to forty years. The annual contingent is divided into two categories, the first serving three in active army. Since Boulanger's time in the reserve, and the second, only one year in the years with the colors, and two years in the war office—and the subtle inspiration of his policy is now becoming manifest, the enlistments have been localized. In consequence of this concession, thousands of trained soldiers, armed for revolution as well as war, are caserned at their own firesides, which enables them to balance their interest between subjects of home politics and trainings for national defence. Including the Gendarmerie and Garde Republicaine, France has at present a peace footing of 525,711 men. Deducting vacancies, absentees and sick, the total would be 465,000. The territorial force, officers and men, is about 590, making the total active 1,155,000. The German authorities narrow the total war force of France to something less than 4,000,000; both Hennebert and Froment, who are perhaps the best authorities on the subject, approximate it at over 4,100,000.

MARKETS.

CHICAGO.

No. 2 spring wheat, 80½ @ 81⅛c, No. 2 red, 81c; No. 2 corn, 45⅝c; No. 2 oats 29¾@30c.; No. 2 rye, 45c; No. 2 barley, 62c; No. 1 flax seed, $1.10; prime timothy seed, $2.40; mess pork, per bbl., $13.75@13.80; lard per 100 lbs., $8.65; short rib sides (loose), $8.12½@8.15; dry-salted shoulders (boxed), $7.25@7.40; short clear sides (boxed), $8.87½@9; sugars, cut, loaf, 8⅜c; butter, creamery, 14½@18½c; dairy, 12½@16c; eggs, 15@15½c.

MINNEAPOLIS.

Wheat: No. 1 hard 82¼c; No. 1, northern 81¼c; No. 2, northern, 77¾c; corn 40@47c. Oats, 28@32c. Barley 30@50c. Flax, $1.03. Mixed feed, $10@10 per ton. Hay $7@8. eggs, fresh 16½ @ 17c; mutton, dressed 7 @ 8½c. potatoes, old, per bu. 45 @ 55 c. potatoes, new, per bu. 60 @ 70 c; spring chickens per doz. $2.00 @ $3.00; wool, medium, 21 @ 27; coarse unwashed 17 @ 19; butter, creamery, 16 @ 18c; dairy, 12 @ 14c; grease butter 4 @ 5c.

ST. PAUL.

Wheat, No. 1 hard, 83c; No. 1 Northern, 81c; No. 2 Northern, 78c. Corn, Sample, 40c; No. 2, 43c. Oats, No. 2, mixed, 32c No. 1, white, 32½c No. 2, white, 31½c; No. 3, 30c. Millstuffs, Ground feed, $16.50; corn meal, unbolted, $17.00; bran, bulk, $9.00, Hay, No. 1, $5; No. 1 upland prairie $7.50; timothy, $12; Flax Seed—$1.05; potatoes, per bu. 65c; eggs, 14½ @ 15½c.

MILWAUKEE.

Wheat cash, 78c; 79⅝c; August, 68¼c. Corn; No. 3, 47c. Oats; No. 2 white, 35c. Rye; No. 1, 56c. Barley; No. 2, 50c. Provisions strong. Pork $13.02½. Lard $8.40; August, $8.47½. Butter; dairy, 13@ 14c. Eggs; fresh, 14@ 14½c. Cheese; cheddars, 8@11½c.

DULUTH.

Wheat, August, 83c., September, 81¼c.; October 80¾c.; December, 81¼c.

Murder in St. Paul.

In St. Paul, George Jones shot and killed Jack Lucy near the corner of Robert and Seventh streets. It appears that the two men, who were friends, were drinking together in John Provencher's saloon, and Jones was left asleep in one of the wine rooms. When he awoke he found that his friend Lucy had left him and, feeling in his pockets, discovered that all his money amounting to about $60, was missing. He suspected Lucy of committing the theft, and he told several friends that Lucy had robbed him. Jones and Lucy met on Robert street, and then the trouble began. Lucy approached Jones and exclaimed: "I'll knock the tar out of you if you say I robbed you." In reply Jones told Lucy to get out of the way or he would get the worst of it. Lucy made some kind of a remark in return, when Jones whipped out a 32-caliber revolver and fired three shots at his adversary. Lucy also drew a revolver, but did not shoot. After the ball from Jones' revolver struck him he turned around and went to his room in the Walther house, in front of which the shooting occurred. Drs. Bushnell and Glidden were immediately called, but could do nothing for the wounded man, who died about twenty minutes after being shot.

"TARIFF AND WAGES."

A Novel Discussion.

George W. Elliot, A. M., Rochester, N. Y., has just published in book form, through Moulton, Wenborne & Co., Buffalo, N. Y., the very original and interesting dialogue discussion between "PAUL (a young graduate) AND HIS FATHER," an American farmer, which appeared serially three years ago in The American Rural Home, and attracted wide atention. The father is a thoroughly well posted man of affairs, who is theoretically a free-trader, but practically, as an American, a strong defender of a judicious tariff. He thus treats both sides very fairly and gives each, in the dialogue, a chance to be heard. He discusses general principles and under his theory that selfishness must be the secret of success of international commercial policy, and self-sacrifice the secret of success in national commercial policy, he makes out a strong defense of simple protection. In the matter of wages, he holds that wages begins and ends with production, and hence if judicious protection stimulates production, as he holds, then a judicious tariff maintains the source of wages. This book makes men and boys think. It unfolds the dark mysteries of the tariff simply and should have a wide reading. Mr. Elliott, as advertising manager of H. H. Warner & Co.'s safe cure house, Rochester, N. Y., has had unusual opportunities to see the effects of different commercial policies in eight sections of the globe. In Cloth, 50 cts.; in paper, 25 cts.; prepaid by Moulton, Wenborne & Co.' Buffalo, N. Y.

Col. F. H. Impey, once of the Davenport Gazette and secretary to the governor of the state, has been put in jail in Denver for stealing books from the public library and selling them. He is a talented man, but whisky has made him a tramp and a vagabond.

E. Bley shot and killed the two Moritz brothers at Kanlatus, about 18 miles from Palouse Junction, W. T. The quarrel started over a stallion belonging to the Moritz brothers, which Bley had corralled. He demanded $80 damages from the Moritz brothers for allowing the horse to run at large. They refused and exchanged some words. Bley went to his house, got his six-shooter and returned on his horse and shot one of the brothers in the neck. He fell into the arms of his wife, who was standing by. The other brother started to run, around the corral, when Bley followed him and shot him four times. The first one shot died inside of four hours after. Both were buried at Colfax. Both parties were worth $50,000. Bley is under arrest.

Gen. C. H. Berry returned to Winona from Boston, where he had been in attendance on the national prison congress. He stopped at Washington to thank the president for his appointment to the supreme bench of Idaho. Gen. Berry will accept the position offered him, and will leave for Idaho soon.

Moxie.

Old men use Moxie the year round to keep their nervous system strong enough to support the functions of their body, and mend up the break down of a long business life. The young city bloods to remove the effects from liquors and a night of dissipation. A tumbler full will break a recent intoxication in an hour, with no ill effects of stimulation.

President Cleveland is aboard the steam yacht Susquehanna, on his way to Sandy Hook on a blue-fishing excursion. He is the guest of Joseph Stickney, the big coal merchant, and owner of the yacht. In the president's party are: Dan Lamont, Postmaster General Dickenson, Smith M. Weed of Plattsburg and James J. Hill of St. Paul.

A "Put and Call."

This is a funny phrase to the uninitiated, but all the brokers understand it. They use it when a person gives a certain per cent. for the option of buying or selling stock on a fixed day, at a price stated on the day the option is given. It is often a serious operation to the dealer, but there is a more serious "put and call" than this: when you are "put" to bed with a severe cold and your friends "call" a physician. Avoid all this by keeping in the house Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The great cure for pulminary and blood diseases. Its action is marvelous. It cures the worst cough, whether acute, lingering or chronic. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Short Breath, Consumption, Night Sweats, and kindred affections, it surpasses allother medicines.

Col. D. S. Lamont, the president's private secretary, writes to an Albany paper that the colonel intends to retire from public life this fall and is preparing for the change.

W. H. Worthington, editor of the "Patrons of husbandry," published at Columbus, Mass., writes under date of Feb. 25, 1882: "Your great remedy, Allen's Lung Balsam, I have used in my family for fifteen years for coughs and colds, and know it to be the best." 25c., 50c., and $1.00 a bottle.

Willie C. O'Brien, aged eight years, Samuel Dutson, thirteen years, and Jacob Henage, eleven years, were drowned in the Missouri river at Omaha while bathing. They were all on a log, which rolled and tipped them suddenly in the water over their depth.

"A Word to the Wise is Sufficient."

Catarrh is not simply an inconvenience, unpleasant to the sufferer and disgusting to others—it is an advanced outpost of approaching disease of worse type. Do not neglect its warning; it brings deadly evils in its train. Before it is too late, use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It reaches the seat of the ailment, and is the only thing that will. You may dose yourself with quack medicines 'till it is to late—'till the streamlet becomes a resistless torrent. It is the matured invention of a scientific physician. "A word to the wise is sufficient."

The democrats, of St. Paul, Minn., at their primary meetings, favored Albert Scheffer as their candidate for Governor on the democratic ticket. Scheffer is a candidate for the same place on the republican ticket.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria,

Patrick Burk and Henry Halverson were suffocated in a well at Peterson & Gilbert's place, near Crystal Springs, Mich. Burk went down into the well and immediately called to be pulled up because of the foul air. Those at the top did not understand, and Halverson went down, supposing him in a fit, meeting the same fate.

The North Star Lung and Throat Balsam is a sure cure for Coughs and Colds.

McGarigle, the Chicago boodler is singing in is Canadian choir.

Many men of many minds;
Many pills of various kinds.

But for a mild, effective, vegetable purgative, you had better get Dr. Price's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. They cure sick headache, billious headache, dizziness, constipation, indigestion, and billious attacks; 25 cents a vial, by druggists.

W. D. Howells receives $2,000 for his short stories.

BEAUTY of Skin & Scalp RESTORED by the CUTICURA Remedies.

NOTHING IS KNOWN TO SCIENCE AT ALL comparable to the CUTICURA REMEDIES in their marvelous properties of cleansing, purifying and beautifying the skin, and in curing torturing, disfiguring, itching, scaly and pimply diseases of the skin, scalp and blood, with loss of hair.

CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, and CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Beautifier, prepared from it, externally, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood Purifier, internally, cure every form of skin and blood disease, from pimples to scrofula.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; RESOLVENT, $1; SOAP, 25c. Prepared by the POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CO., Boston, Mass.

Send for "How to Cure Skin Diseases."

Pimples, blackheads, chapped and oily skin prevented by CUTICURA SOAP.

Dull Aches, Pains and Weaknesses instantly relieved by the CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER, the only pain-killing plaster. 25c.

IF ANY OF YOUR FAMILY are troubled with Cholera, Cramps or Bowel Complaint, give them PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER.

DO NOT FORGET
Perry Davis' Pain Killer

At this season of the year it is always well to keep it on hand.

Do not trifle with yourselves by testing untried remedies. Be sure you call for, and get the genuine PAIN-KILLER, as many worthless nostrums are attempted to be sold on the great reputation of this valuable medicine.

Directions accompany each bottle.

Price 25 cts., 50 cts. and $1 per bottle.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

JONES HE PAYS the FREIGHT 5 Ton Wagon Scales, Iron Levers, Steel Bearings, Brass Tare Beam and Beam Box for $60. Every size Scale. For free price list mention this paper and address JONES OF BINGHAMTON, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in many cases removes the tumors. It is equally efficacious in curing all Skin Diseases. DR. SWAYNE & SON, Proprietors, Philadelphia. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT can be obtained of druggists. Sent by mail for 50 Cents.

MANGE, Galls, Scratches, Cracked Heel, Thrush, and all diseases of the feet and irritations of the skin of horses and cattle quickly and permanently cured by the use of Veterinary Carbolisalve. 50c. and $1 at Druggists.

True Economy

It is true economy to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla, for "100 Doses One Dollar," is original with and true only of this popular medicine. If you wish to prove this, buy a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and measure its contents. You will find it to hold 100 teaspoonfuls. Now read the directions, and you will find that the average dose for persons of different ages is less than a teaspoonful. This is certainly conclusive and unanswerable evidence of the peculiar strength and economy of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"I took Hood's Sarsaparilla for loss of appetite, dyspepsia, and general languor. It did me a vast amount of good, and I have no hesitancy in recommending it." J. W. WILLEFORD, Quincy, Ill.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

Tutt's Pills

Regulate The Bowels.

Costiveness deranges the whole system and begets diseases, such as

Sick Headache,
Dyspepsia, Fevers, Kidney Diseases,
Bilious Colic, Malaria, etc.

Tutt's Pills produce regular habit of body and good digestion, without which, no one can enjoy good health.

Sold Everywhere.

SICK HEADACHE

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills. They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.

Price 25 Cents.

CARTER MEDICINE CO., NEW YORK.

Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price.

GOLD is worth $500 per lb. Pettit's Eye Salve is worth $1000, but is sold at 25 cents a box by dealers.

DRAKE UNIVERSITY AND CALLANAN COLLEGE

Open next Session Sept. 11th. Literary, Normal, Commercial, Musical, Art, Bible, Law and Medical Departments. 80 able Instructors; Facilities Superior; Expenses Low; Surroundings Pleasant. Address G. T. Carpenter, Chancellor, Des Moines, Ia.

Mrs. Dart's Triplets.

President Cleveland's Prize for the three best babies at the Aurora County Fair, in 1887, was given to these triplets, Mollie, Ida, and Ray, children of Mrs. A. K. Dart, Hamburgh, N. Y. She writes: "Last August the little ones became very sick, and as I could get no other food that would agree with them, I commenced the use of Lactated Food. It helped them immediately, and they were soon as well as ever, and I consider it very largely due to the Food that they are now so well." Lactated Food is the best Food for bottle-fed babies. It keeps them well, and is better than medicine when they are sick. Three sizes: 25c., 50c., $1.00. At druggists. Cabinet photo. of these triplets sent free to the mother of any baby born this year.

Address WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

DWIGHT'S SALERATUS

TO MAKE A DELICIOUS BISCUIT ASK YOUR GROCER FOR COW-BRAND SODA OR SALERATUS AND TAKE NO OTHER.

S. E. OLSON & CO.'S MAMMOTH WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DRY GOODS HOUSE, 213 AND 215 NICOLLET AVENUE, MINNEAPOLIS. THE CHIEF BARGAIN HOUSE OF THE NORTHWEST.

Mail Orders receive our best attention. Shopping done through this department as advantageously as in person. Send for samples.

TOWER'S FISH BRAND. None genuine unless stamped with the above TRADE MARK.

SLICKER Is The Best Waterproof Coat Ever Made.

Don't waste your money on a gum or rubber coat. The FISH BRAND SLICKER is absolutely water and wind proof, and will keep you dry in the hardest storm. Ask for the "FISH BRAND" slicker and take no other. If your storekeeper does not have the "FISH BRAND", send for descriptive catalogue to A. J. TOWER, 20 Simmons St., Boston, Mass.

HUDSON CLOTHIER.

The finest, largest and only thoroughly complete stock of Clothing for Men, Boys and Youths' wear in the Northwest. No trash. Good, honest goods, and at figures beyond competition. Send to us for anything you need in Clothing, Furnishings, or Hats or Caps, and you will be astounded. We came to do the Clothing business of the Northwest, are doing it, and always will.

SO DEAL WITH US.

Rules for self-measurement furnished on application. Satisfaction guaranteed.

HEAD AND SHOULDERS OVER ALL!

J. L. HUDSON CLOTHIER, Corner Seventh and Robert Sts., Hotel Ryan Block, St. Paul, Minn.

MARVELOUS MEMORY DISCOVERY.

Wholly unlike artificial systems. Cure of mind wandering. Any book learned in one reading. Classes of 1087 at Baltimore, 1005 at Detroit, 1500 at Philadelphia, 1113 at Washington, 1216 at Boston, large classes of Columbia law students, at Yale, Wellesley, Oberlin, University of Penn., Michigan University, Chautauqua, &c., &c. Endorsed by Richard Proctor, the Scientist, Hons. W. W. Astor, Judah P. Benjamin, Judge Gibson, Dr. Brown, E. H. Cook, Prin. N. Y. State Normal College, &c. Taught by correspondence. Prospectus post free from Prof. LOISETTE, 237 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

SHED NO MORE TEARS from sore or inflamed Eyes; but weep for joy that you have found a sure cure for all Eye Ailments in Redding's RUSSIA SALVE

The most soothing and healing Ointment in the world. Established in 1806 and now used in thousands of families, for SORE EYES, SORE JOINTS, and INFLAMMATION OF ALL KINDS.

Price 25 Cents—Sold Everywhere

$5 TO $8 A DAY. Samples worth $1.50 FREE. Lines not under the horse's feet. Write BREWSTER SAFETY REIN HOLDER CO., Holly, Mich.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION

GLEK—HARMLESS. Positive Cure for failing Manhood. Irresistible health. $1 Bottle, by druggists. Glek Co., 33 S. Halsted, Chicago.

FREE By return mail. Full Description Moody's New Tailor System of Dress Cutting. MOODY & CO., Cincinnati, O.

CAMPAIGN MEDALS.—Cleveland & Thurman, Harrison & Morton; in Alax Bronze, 3 designs, 4 samples for 25c. The Schwaab Stamp & Seal Co., Milwaukee, Wis., and Chicago, Ill.

PENSIONS $50,000,000 for Soldiers, [illegible] or parents. [illegible] cured. [illegible] lot Free! PATRICK O'FARRELL, [illegible] Washington, D. C.

ALLEN'S IRON TONIC BITTERS

The most Elegant Blood Purifier, Liver Invigorator, Tonic and Appetizer known. The first Bitters containing Iron ever advertised in America. J. P. ALLEN, Druggist & Chemist, St. Paul, Minn.

WELLS, &c.

Send for our catalogue, &c. on Well Boring and Coal Prospecting Machines, &c. LOOMIS & NYMAN, TIFFIN, OHIO.

ST. PAUL SCHOOL FURNITURE CO., ST. PAUL, MINN.

School Furniture and School Supplies. Correspondence solicited from church officers and school boards. [illegible] Ask for Catalogue.

Big G. Cures in 1 TO 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture. Mf'd only by the Evans Chemical Co. Cincinnati, Ohio. Trade Mark.

I prescribe and fully endorse Big G as the only specific for the certain cure of this disease. G. H. INGRAHAM, M. D., Amsterdam, N. Y. We have sold Big G for many years, and it has given the best of satisfaction. D. R. DYCHE & CO., Chicago, Ill. $1.00. Sold by Druggists.

MARLIN REPEATING RIFLE New Model 1888 Just Out.

Uses 32 & 44 cal. Winchester cartridge. Works easier, is simpler, stronger, lighter, than any other. DON'T BUY TILL YOU SEE IT.

BALLARD GALLERY, HUNTING AND TARGET RIFLES. Send for Illustrated Catalogue. MARLIN FIRE ARMS CO., Box 18 D, NEW HAVEN, CT.

O THE BUYERS' GUIDE is issued March and Sept., each year. It is an encyclopedia of useful information for all who purchase the luxuries or the necessities of life. We can clothe you and furnish you with all the necessary and unnecessary appliances to ride, walk, dance, sleep, eat, fish, hunt, work, go to church, or stay at home, and in various sizes, styles and quantities. Just figure out what is required to do all these things COMFORTABLY, and you can make a fair estimate of the value of the BUYERS' GUIDE, which will be sent upon receipt of 10 cents to pay postage. MONTGOMERY WARD & CO. 111-114 Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

N. W. N. U. 1888 No. 31.

HOW IT WAS DONE.

TID-BITS.

Yes, it is done; but how 'twas done,
Or what I said, I can't discover;
I only know that she is won,
And I am her accepted lover.

I know I stumbled coming in,
To make a graceful entrance trying
And several chairs were tangled in
My feet in all directions flying.

I know I looked a perfect fool,
While she talked on in manner kindly,
At last, unmindful of all rule,
I saw my chance, and grasped it blindly.

I knew no more until I saw
My dexter arm her waist surrounding;
One little hand (now mine in law)
My other hand I found impounding.

THE LITTE SPY.

"Corporal, you trained as a detective, did you not?"

Colonel Cardonne was steadfastly regarding me with his keen gray eyes.

"And acquired quite a reputation," I replied, with the customary salute. "It wasn't a local one, either," I added, with pardonable pride.

"Then you are the man I want," the colonel rejoined, a grave look filling his face. "There's a spy in our midst and I expect you to arrest him."

Our armies were investing Vicksburg. The battle of Champion Hill had been fought, which placed us between the armies of Johnston and Pemberton without a possibility of their effecting a junction.

The Colonel told me why his suspicions had been aroused, and gave me a few clews, not about the culprit, but about his methods. He was communicating with the enemy by means of the Yazoo river or Chickasaw Bayou.

Within three days I captured the culprit, a boyish-looking fellow connected with the quartermaster's department.

He offered no protest, he made no denials; he was either a brave young fellow or else was supremely indifferent about results.

I took him before the Colonel, and when his eyes rested upon that officer I saw his face redden with surprise and confusion. He was smoothly shaven and that made the rush of blood more preceptible.

I related the circumstances of his arrest and his conduct under it, and presented certain papers which I found upon his person. The Colonel and two other members of his staff who were present at once decided that he was guilty.

"I see the name John Davis here. Is that your name demanded the Colonel.

"It is not," replied the spy. "However, I have been known by that name."

"What is your real name?" asked the Colonel.

"Delos Demarra," was the prompt, fearless reply, without a suspicion of evasion about it.

It was an odd name, but pleasing in sound, for he had pronounced it with rare distinctness.

Happening to look at the Colonel just then I noticed a change in his usually stolid face; it lasted scarcely a second, and yet I plainly saw it. I could not help but connect it with the flush that passed over the face of the spy.

I was confident, too, that the effect produced by the announcement of the name had not escaped the observation of the young man. Something like a smile stirred his lips, and there was a suggestion of reserved strength in it.

After a consultation between the Colonel and his staff, I was ordered to take the prisoner to the guard house.

That night, while in my tent, I became aware of the presence of an intruder. I was instantly on the alert, but instead of springing up, I remained quiet, and a minute later heard him step out in the moonlight. I walked noiselessly to the door and saw Colonel Cardonne pass out of sight. There was no mistaking his commanding figure and erect bearing.

"What did he want in my tent?" I thought.

Then it came to me like a flash. Stepping to the place where I kept the keys to the guard-house I found that they were gone. My curiosity did not abate.

"I am not responsible for what the colonel may do," I muttered to myself.

I crept into my bunk and soon fell asleep. In the morning I found the keys in their place. I had not heard the colonel return them, and almost felt like looking upon the affair as a dream.

A little later and it was known all over the camp that the spy had effected his escape. Of course the colonel investigated the matter with a show of thoroughness, but without result, and by and by the case was forgotten.

One day, just as our brigade was about to go into action, I said:

"Colonel, a word with you, please."

He stopped and paid me respectful attention. He was a soldier in every sense of the word, but without arrogance.

"You did not call me to the witness-stand in that investigation," I said.

"What investigation?" he asked.

"In connection with the escape of the spy," I reminded.

"Oh!" ejaculated the Colonel. "I did not know you had anything to tell."

"Ah, Colonel, I had a great deal to tell," I said. "I wasn't going to push myself forward. I held back for your sake. Colonel Cardonne, I saw you come into my tent and take the keys."

He was a little startled.

"Is that so?" he asked, in a queer tone.

"Yes," I replied. I shall never betray your secret, Colonel, but I am everlastingly curious to know what it all meant."

"Well, Corporal, so would I be," he said with a short laugh. "You have been very frank and very discreet, and I'll tell you all about it after the battle."

It was the 17th of May, and the battle which ensued was the battle of the Black River Bridge. The Colonel was wounded and was sent to the hospital.

In an engagement which occurred three months later, I was wounded, taken prisoner, and conveyed to a Confederate hospital.

There were several female nurses, one of whom was especially kind to me. She was clad in sombre hue, but that did not detract from her loveliness. Her very presence did me good.

As I was unable to speak, my most troublesome wound being in my cheek, I found my gratification in simply watching her. I fell desperately in love with her, which was not an inexplicable occurence to me, and possibly not to her, for she was conscious of her charms.

One morning I heard cannonading and noticed that it became suggestively distinct. The tide of war was surging that way and a tangible evidence of it came in the form of a shell which crashed through the roof of the hospital.

The fuse was still burning, and to my intense surprise and admiration my handsome nurse picked up the shell and flung it out of the window.

"We don't want the nasty thing in here—do we, boys?" she said.

A number of the wounded men clapped their hands in applause.

"You are a brave womtn," I said.

"Why Corporal," she exclaimed, coming to me, "those are the first words you have spoken since entering the hospital."

I was about to reply, but she cautioned me not to.

"Wait a few days," she said with one of her bewildering little smiles.

A week later I said to her:

"You called me Corporal."

"Yes," she replied; "your chevron designates your rank. You forget that.

"No," I don't. We have met before and you know it. For days I have been trying to conjecture. It isn't a fancy I am sure."

"No, Corporal, it isn't," she said, with a repressed smile, a twinkle of mischief in her glorious brown eyes. "I am Delos Demarra. You once arrested me for a spy."

It dawned on me then, and I have no doubt my face expressed my surprise. I censured myself for not having at once recalled that sweet voice and smile and those calm, fearless brown eyes.

"I escaped, you remember," she reminded me, with a slight smile.

"Without a display either of nerve or sagacity on your part," I replied.

"Why do you say that?" she quickly asked, one dainty hand uplifted.

"Colonel Cardonne helped you," was my answer.

"Oh!" she ejaculated, rifts of red and white crossing her face. He told you so?"

"He got the keys of the guard-house from me," I replied.

I did not add that he had obtained them by stealth. She looked at me steadfastly, almost confidingly, I thought—with a longing for me to say more.

"You are on the wrong side of this issue," I remarked.

"I believe there is a difference of—of—sentiment," she replied, a little dryly.

"It is more than a sentiment," I ventured to say.

"Well, we will not argue about it," she replied, with one of her charming gestures. "I entertain opinions, and you'll allow me to do that, I know. I'll nurse you, so that you can go home. You'll hold me no grudge for that, I am sure. I did the same for Colonel Cardonne."

"In a—a—a Union hospital?" I asked.

"Why, to be sure," she replied.

"And he's gone north?"

"Yes. He'll be back though. Now we have talked enough, don't you think?"

Our next conversation was still more personal. I proposed marriage and told her my history and prospects, both of which were good. All was of no avail. She refused, kindly, of course, but with hopeless positiveness.

"You love some one else," I said.

"That wouldn't be very strange, would it?" she asked, that soft, bewildering smile once more about her lips.

"Well, no," I disconsolately admitted.

* * * * * * * *

The close of the war found me enjoying the rank of Colonel, while my friend, Colonel Cardnne, had been promoted to a General.

A few years ago I spent a week or two at one of our popular mountain resorts. While sauntering along a wooden path I met a sprightly miss of four or five summers. She had soft questioning brown eyes, was prettily dressed and did not seem in the least shy. While I glanced around, wondering where her protectors were I heard some one call out:

"Delos, darling! Delos!"

Oh, how that name thrilled me! Looking at the child again my emotion increased, for I recognized in her a strong resemblance to the woman whose hand I had sought in marriage. A minute later a vivacious, bright-faced, graceful young girl came in sight.

"I heard you call this sweet little thing Delos," I said lifting my hat; "pray, what is her last name?"

"Cardonne," she answered.

"Ah," I ejaculated, my hand at my mouth to hide its nervous twitching.

"The General and myself are old friends. Is he here?"

"Just beyond the bend in the path sir," she said, with a courtesy.

I found the General seated beside his wife on one of the rustic benches. He gave me a hearty welcome and then introduced me.

"You have met before," he said, laughingly. "You once arrested her as a spy."

"And she was guilty," I replied. "She afterwards nursed me in the hospital."

"Oh, she did, eh!" exclaimed the General. "Why, Delos, you never told me."

"Didn't I dear?" she said in an odd tone. "I supposed you knew. You told the Colonel that you released me."

"Why, no, I didn't!" declared the General.

"You admitted it," I reminded.

"Well; maybe I did," rejoined he, laughing.

Mrs. Cardonne was sociable with me; still she was reserved enough to show me that she had not forgotten my passionate declaration of love.

"General!" I said, as we walked back to the hotel together, "you promised to explain this to me."

"explain what!" asked he.

"Your previous acquaintance with the—the—spy."

"Oh," he ejaculated. "Well, I believe I did promise. However, there isn't much in it. We were betrothed before the war, both being from the South. Then came the appeal to arms.

I had been educated at West Point; I was a child of the State; I was in the regular army. I owed my country allegiance. My convictions of duty rose higher than preferences; I espoused the Union cause. Delos, here, was a fiery little Southerner, and she broke the engagement, as she had threatened that she would. Loving her as I did I helped her out of the trouble caused by her arrest, and she repaid it by nursing me back to life. The war ended—so did our estrangement. Nothing very remarkable in all that was there?"

It has satisfied my cuirosity," I simply replied.

The young girl I met in the path was Mrs. Cardonne's sister. She is my wife now, and whenever I hear the name Delos it does not disturb me any more than the name Beky, Ann or Bridget would.—New York Journal.

Shoeless Confederates.

An old soldier recently talked to a reporter of the Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution, his subject being certain shoeless confederate soldiers:

If you had been around just after the rout at Nashville you would have thought there were 10,000 elephants loose in the country. The ground was covered with snow, and, as you may imagine, the air was eager and nipping. The routed confederates put down the snow-covered pikes, making for Corinth and thence to Mobile, 240 miles distant. We were clothed with nothing but shirts and breeches, comparatively few owning old hats, and only here and there a fortunate man with a pair of shoes. The half-starved and half-frozen men wrapped their feet in old sacks and any sort of rags they could get until the tracks they made were great round holes in the snow like the tracks of elephants. Gen. Lowery—God bless his soul tried to do something for us. He had some shoemakers, and at night would make the soldier report at his headquarters, where the shoe-shop would be located. Green hides—not an hour off the cows' backs—were used for shoemaking. A soldier would plant his foot on the hairy side of the hide and the shoemaker would cut out a round piece of skin, split it in various directions, and with a coarse twine gather up the ends and literally sew the foot up in the raw hide with the skin inward. The shoes were good for about twenty-four hours' use, and then they would draw our feet and we would have to cast them aside and go back to the bagging. When I got to Mobile with a lot of fellows we took quarters in a warehouse. Theodore Hamilton was playing "The Wife" at the Mobile theatre, and I got a ticket. I went to the theatre bareheaded and barefooted and in my shirt sleeves. I thought it was the best show I ever saw. After the performance an old man carried me home with him and gave me a long-tailed coat, a hat and a pair of shoes. When I got back to the warehouse the boys tore the tails off the coat, but she was a double-breasted fellow and I stuck to her. I looked like a jaybird with his tail pulled out.

Gettysburg and the Franco-Prussian War.

Gen. Longstreet in the February Century.

During the Franco-Prussian war I kept a map of the field of operations with colored pegs, that were moved from day to day to indicate the movements of the two armies. Bazaine had been driven to shelter at Metz. McMahon had been driven back to the route leading from Paris to Metz, and seemed in doubt whether he would go to Paris or to Bazaine's relief. He suffered himself to be forced north of the route between these points. On the morning that the wires brought us that information two or three of the French Creoles of New Orleans visited my office to inquire my views of the movements then proceeding. I replied, "McMahon's army will be prisoners of the war in ten days." They were very indignant and stated that I was a Republican and in sympathy with the Prussians. My reply was that I had only given them my solution of a military problem. The Prussians were on the shorter route to Paris or to Metz, so that if McMahon should attempt to move in either direction the Prussians, availing themselves of the shorter lines, would interpose and force McMahon to attack, but he had already been so beaten and demoralized that he could not be expected to make a successful attack, and would therefore be obliged to surrender. If he had gone directly to Paris before giving up his shorter route, it is possible that he could have organized a succoring army for the relief of Metz.

Had we interposed between Meade and Washington our army, in almost as successful prestige as was that of the Prussians. Meade would have been obliged to attack us wherever we might be pleased to have him. He would have been badly beaten like the French, and the result would have been similar.

I do not mean to say that two Governments would have been permanently established; for I thought before the war, and during its continuance, that the people would eventually get together again, in stronger bonds of friendship than those of their first love.

Life of Attorney-General Garland.

In striking contrast with the ostentatious manner of the life of Secretary Whitney is the simplicity which pervades the humble home of Attorney-General Garland, writes "Carp" to the Cleveland Leader. A visitor to his house on Fourteenth street would find him suddenly transported to some farmer's domicile. It is a two-story frame cottage which he lives in, located close by a market where farmers and the butchers bring their products to sell to the people. In the little room which the attorney-general uses as his library or study, and where he receives his visitors, the furniture consists of a deal table, an old-fashioned rocking chair and one or two other chairs of little value, unless the sole object be to furnish a seat for the weary sojourner which will not break down under his weight. On some plain shelving, and around on the floor of the room, are stored the law books of the host, this apparently being the extent of his library. A soap-box contributed by the grocer serves for the storage of the coal used in keeping up fire. The attorney-general does not live thus plainly for temporary effect among his own people, but has always done so.

Capt. Joe's Vengeance.

"Just before Custer made his famous Wichita campaign against the rekskins," says Capt. Joe Smith of Kansas, "I was hunting and trapping on the Cimmaron River on the line of the Indian Territory. There were three of us, my partners being named Hank White and Lew Benson, respectively, and brave, good men they were. We were about ready to pack up and get out of the hunting grounds when White accidently fired a bullet into his hip, and we found ourselves forced to lie close until he could walk. It was a severe but not a dangerous wound, and it was likely that in about a fortnight he would be able to move. The Indians had not bothered us any to speak of up to this time; but now, as if to add to the perplexities of our situation, the devils seemed to be overrunning the neighborhood. We had a camp which was well nigh impregnable to attack, and the cowards contented themselves with lurking about and seeking to cut one or the other of us off without exposing themselves. I was fired upon twice in one day, and next day Benson got a bullet through his cap.

While we had ceased trapping one of us must do more or less hunting to supply the camp, and only one could go out at a time. White was a little better than helpless, and we dared not leave him alone. His wound was rapidly improving at the end of ten days, and we were feeling sanguine that he could use his leg in another ten, when I went out one morning after meat. Game had become shy and scarce in our immediate vicinity, and I made a jaunt of about six miles up the river to reach some wooded bottom lands. It was mid-afternoon before I returned, having the hind quarters of a doe and a fine turkey. I took the usual precautions when approaching camp, but met with no alarm until I entered it. Then I found White dead and scalped, and brutally disfigured, Benson missing, and all our traps and peltries and other property gone. The Indians had been there. I was so taken aback that it was some minutes before I could act. Then I went out to scour for their trail and seek evidence as to whether Benson had been carried off or murdered. I was circling about the place when I heard a voice faintly calling, and entered a thicket about eighty rods from camp, to find Benson lying on the ground in his blood; He had been wounded in three places: He was hardly better than a dead man, and it way in whispers that he told me the story. I had been gone about two hours, and he had started for the river to get some water, when he was fired upon and six Indians dashed at him. Benson had a Henry rifle in his hand, and he treed and returned the fire, killing one of the indians. They were between him and the camp, and while two of them held him at bay, the other three went in and killed White and packed up the property. Benson could not expose himself, nor could he pursue when they drew off. Had they hungered for his life they could easily have taken it, but they seemed satisfied with what they had acomplished. The man didn't live an hour after relating the particulars, and I went down on my knees by his dead body and swore to revenge my comrades.

A month later twenty men of us—pioneers, hunters, Indian fighters, and scouts, banded together to hustle a band of five or six redskins who had captured and run off some horses from a couple of ranches lying between the south fork of the Platte and the north fork of the Niobrara rivers. They had a full day's start, but their Captured animals were obstinate and unruly, and they made but slow progress. I had been elected Captain of the band, and about sundown of the first day, knowing pretty well the route the Indians must take for the next two, I called in some of the oldest scouts for a consultation. The result was that we planned a short cut, and rode all night and until noon next day to make sure work of it. Then one took a position in a dry run bordering the edge of a narrow valley through which the Indians were expected, and every man saw that his firearms were in order. We had over two hours to arrange the details, and when the savages finally appeared in sight we were gratified to discover that the band we had first pursued had been strengthened along the route by others. There were now thirteen redskins. We were stationed along the run about four feet apart, and it was understood that not a shot was to be fired until the head of the band was fairly abreast of the head of our line. It seemed too bad that there were not just thirty Indians, so as to give us man for man, but that was a matter we couldn't improve on.

"They came into the valley without even the slightest suspicion of our presence. The herd was driving better, causing no trouble, and some of the Indians seemed to be asleep as they jogged along. As they rode in close order their line did not exceed ours in length, and every one was a fair target as we got the signal and fired upon them. Nine of them keeled off their saddles as dead as bricks, while the other four were wounded, and were dispatched by second shots. Not one of them was alive two minutes after the first trigger was pulled, and, as I rolled the body of the leader under my foot, I felt that poor White and Benson might sleep better in their lonely graves."

A Singular Suicide.

The London Times thus gives the particulars of the singular suicide of a Russian surgeon: A remarkable suicide has recently been committed in St Petersburg. A short time ago a woman, aged twenty-three years, came to consult Dr. Botkine, who found that she was suffering from a tuberculous ulcer. An operation being deemed necessary, Dr. Botkine sent her to M. Kolominne, a surgeon of considerable repute. He administered to her a slight dose of saline acid of cocaine, and finding this did not take effect he increased the dose and performed the operation with complete success, but a few hours afterward he received a message to say that his patient seemed to be dying, and he found upon hurrying to her, that, judging by the feebleness of the pulse and bluish appearance of the face, she was suffering from the effects of poison. All the efforts made to save her were of no effect, and she died the same evening. M. Kolominne was so overcome that he denounced himself as her murderer, though all his colleagues assured him that he was in no way to blame. But he would not listen to them, and a few days afterward he blew his brains out, leaving a note in which he said: "I must have been the victim of some temporary aberration, and this has caused the catastrophe which drives me to despair. I am not guilty for my intentions were good; but I cannot live."

Sights at a North Carolina Camp-Meeting.

Corr. New York Commercial Advertiser.

All preliminaries having been settled, the first minister ordered all to fall in for the march "two by two, preachers in front, men together, women together." Instantly there was a stir among the people. The platform was vacated, its occupants moving by couples outside the arbor. The others followed, a promiscuous throng old and young, with the preternaturally solemn visages. Old men leaning on sticks, girls with lithe forms arrayed in gay colors, tall, lank women, fat, saucy-looking boys, muscular, large-boned men. The preacher from "the land of the sky" handed a book to his stalwart brother, who gave out the hymn, "There's Room Enough in Heaven." The singer started the tune, and with feet keeping time and bodies swaying in unison the long string of dusky worshipers began the farewell march. Passing the nearer tents, then retracing their steps for half the distance, then turning toward those on the right of the quadrangle, the procession twisted sinuously by all the huts in turn, receiving constant additions as it passed them, until nearly every colored person on the ground was in line. Long before the round was completed, the sun emerged from the clouds and shone hotly upon the throng. The preachers, whose heads were bare, spread their handkerchiefs over them, keeping one hand on top all the time to prevent them from being blown away.

The procession finally halted on the hillside, a great circle of humanity. The preachers entered it; at their order all faced inward. Exhortations from several brethren were addressed to the impenitent, the ministers resumed their places, and then there was a counter-march in a single file, a circle within a circle, until each had shaken hands with every other, all singing and swaying to the music as before. Finally the head of the procession emerged from the ring and started for the arbor, the directing preacher and most of those who followed having fallen into a not ungraceful dancing step. They entered, the ministers and elders marched to the platform, their tune and steps growing livelier all the while. Some fifty of the women rushed into the open space, while others hastened to the benches and mounted them. Those dancing in front of the platform grew more and more excited; they glided back and forth, twirling themselves like tetotums, or leaped several feet from the ground, all keeping time to the music, which waxed louder and louder. The preachers were moving in every joint, patting their hands on their knees and stimulating the excitement. Some women dropped from exhaustion and were carried out all were pallid, their breathing was labored and spasmodic; even the preachers showed signs of weakening, when suddenly one of them raised his hand. Almost immediately the singing ceased and he managed to say in a voice scarcely audible: "All kneel and pray." The request was obeyed. In the midst of a quiet and hush in strange contrast to the previous noise and whirl, a voice was heard, clear, calm and not over loud, asking God's blessing on their farewell. Then a sonorous benediction was pronounced, and the great McElroy camp-meeting of 1886 was over.

Cures For Cleveland.

Ex-mayor Daniel R. Clymer, of Reading Pa., who is a philanthropist, makes public this correspondence.

EVERGREEN PALACE, READING, PA., Jan. 11.

DEAR PRESIDENT:—I regret learning of your affliction. I know of three things that will keep you certainly in good tune for years to come, viz.: One quart of alcohol, 95 per cent. Put in two onions, well bruised. Hang it inside a glass window. Let the sun shine on it three days for distillation. Then bathe the limbs. The relief is unsurpassed. This done, wrap the limbs with the enclosed absorbent cotton. Secure with the elastic binding enclosed. A rigid cord is hurtful. Third relief: Take a tumbler of water, nearly hot, every morning. It gives great relief to the system. A gentleman has taken it for four years with a little salt; was in bad health, weight 130 pounds, now he is up to 176, revolutionary weight. I have great reluctance and hesitation in giving the facts stated, but it should be, and is a source of solicitude to every citizen, to have our chief citizen in good health. Wishing yourself and Mrs. Cleveland many years of happy wedded life, I am, dear sir, very truly your friend,

DANIEL R CLYMER.

The Ladies of Lima

From the Buenos Ayres Herald.

The ladies of Lima are all eyes. They have the reputation of being, as a class, the most beautiful in the world, and meeting them on the way to mass in the morning, or shopping later in the day, one can easily see how they obtained it; but, knowing them in their homes, the opinion changes, and you conclude after calm reflection that they are not so pretty as the women of New York. It is the manta, which they wear in such a coquettish way, that gives them their reputation for beauty, for it conceals every feature except their bewitching eyes and lovely olive complexion.

No matter how ugly her mouth or her nose is; no matter how high her cheek-bones or large her ears; no matter whether she is as crawny as a scarecrow or as bald as a bat, a "manta" will make any woman with pretty eyes look handsome, and, like charity, it covers a multitude of sins. This garment, which is peculiar to Peru, and is worn by ladies of all ages and social positions, from the President's wife to the laundress who comes after your linen, is a sort of foster-sister to the mantilla of Spain. It is usually of crepe from China, and costs anywhere from $10 to $500, according to its quality.

EVERY-DAY MARTYRS.

That Was the Subject of Rev. Dr. Talmage's Sermon at a Chautauqua Assembly.

An important chautauqua assembly was held at Lakeside, Ohio, at which the leading professors, scholars and clergymen of this and other lands have addressed the audiences. The Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., of Brooklyn, has been there, and preached to an immense throng. The subject of his sermon was, "The Martyrs of Every Day Life." He took for his text, "Thou, therefore, endure hardness."—II. Timothy, ii., 3. Dr. Talmage said:

Historians are now slow to acknowledge the merits of great military chieftains. We have the full length portraits of the Cromwells, the Washingtons, the Napoleons and the Wellingtons of the world. History is not written in black ink, but in red ink of human blood. The gods of human ambition do not drink from bowls made out of silver, or gold, or precious stones, but out of the bleached skulls of the fallen. But I am now to unroll before you a scroll of heroes that the world has never acknowledged; those who faced no guns, blew no bugle blast, conquered no cities, chained no captives to their chariot wheels, and yet, in the great day of eternity, will stand higher than those whose names startled the nations; and seraph, and rapt spirit, and archangel will tell their deeds to a listening universe. I mean the heroes of common, every day life.

In this roll, in the first place, I find all the heroes of the sick room. When Satan had failed to overcome Job, he said to God: "Put forth thy hands and touch his bones and his flesh, and he will curse thee to thy face." Satan had found out what we have all found out, that sickness is the greatest test of one's character. A man who can stand that can stand anything. To be shut in a room as fast as though it was a bastile. To be so nervous you cannot endure the tap of a child's foot. To have luxuriant fruit, which tempts the appetite of the robust and healthy, excite our loathing and disgust when it first appears on the platter. To have the rapier of pain strike through the side, or across the temples, like a razor, or to put the foot into a vice, or throw the whole body into a blaze of fever. Yet there have been men and women, but more women than men, who have cheerfully endured this hardness. Through years of exhausting rheumatisms and excruciating neuralgias they have gone, and through bodily distresses that rasped the nerves, and tore the muscles, and paled the cheeks and stooped the shoulders. By the dim light of the sick room taper they saw on their wall the picture of that land where the inhabitants are very sick. Through the dead silence of the night they heard the chorus of the angels. The cancer ate away her life from week to week and day to day, and she became weaker and weaker, and every "good night" was feebler than the "good night" before—yet never sad. The children looked up into her face and saw suffering transformed into a heavenly smile. Those who suffered on the battlefield, amid shot and shell, were not so much heroes and heroines as those who in the field hospital and in the asylum had fevers which no ice could cool and no surgery cure. No shout of a comrade to cheer them, but numbness, and aching, and homesickness—yet willing to suffer, confident in God, hopeful of heaven. Heroes of rheumatism. Heroes of neuralgia. Heroes of spinal complaint. Heroes of sick headache. Heroes of lifelong invalidism. Heroes and heroines. They shall reign for ever and ever.

Hark! I catch just one note of the eternal anthem: "There shall be no more pain." Bless God for that.

In this roll I also find the heroes of toil, who do their work uncomplainingly. It is comparatively easy to lead a regiment into battle when you know that the whole nation will applaud the victory; it is comparatively easy to doctor the sick when you know that your skill will be appreciated by a large company of friends and relatives; it is comparatively easy to address an audience when in the gleaming eyes and flushed cheeks you know that your sentiments are adopted; but to do sewing where you expect that the employer will come and thrust his thumb through the work to show how imperfect it is, or to have the whole garment thrown back on you to be done over again; to build a wall and know there will be no one to say you did it well, but only a swearing employer howling across the scaffold; to work until your eyes are dim and your back aches, and your heart faints, and to know that if you stop before night your children will starve. Ah! the sword has not slain so many as the needle. The great battlefields of our last war were not Gettysburg and Shiloh and South Mountain. The great battlefields of the last war were in the arsenals, and in the shops and in the attics, where women made army jackets for a sixpence. They toiled on until they died. They had no funeral eulogium, but in the name of God, this day, I enroll their names among those of whom the world was not worthy. Heroes of the sewing machine. Heroes and heroines. Bless God for them.

In this roll I also find the heroes who have uncomplainingly endured domestic injustices. There are men who for their toil and anxiety have no sympathy in their homes. Exhausting application to business gets them a livelihood, but an unfrugal wife scatters it. The exasperations of business life augmented by the exasperations of domestic life. Such men are laughed at but they have a heart breaking trouble, and they would long ago have gone into appalling dissapation but for the grace of God. Society to-day is strewn with the wrecks of men, who, under the northeast storm of domestic infelicity, have been driven on the rocks. There are tens of thousands of drunkards in this country to-day, made such by their wives. That is not poetry. That is prose. But the wrong is generally in the opposite direction. You would not have to go far to find a wife whose life is a perpetual martyrdom. Sometimes harder than a stroke of the fist: unkind words, stragglings home at midnight, and constant maltreatment which have left her only a wreck of what she was on that day when in the midst of a brilliant assemblage the vows were taken, and full organ played the wedding march, and the carriage rolled away with the benediction of the people. What was the burning of Latimer and Ridley at the stake compared with this? Those men soon became unconscious in the fire, but there is a 50 years' martyrdom, a 50 years' putting to death, yet uncomplaining. No bitter words when the rollicking companions at 2 o'clock in the morning pitch the husband dead drunk into the front entry. No bitter words when wiping from the swollen brow the blood struck out in a midnight carousal. Bending over the battered and bruised form of him, who, when he took her from her father's home, promised love, and kindness, and protection, yet nothing but sympathy, and prayers, and forgiveness before they are asked for. No bitter words when the family Bible goes for rum, and the pawnbroker's shop gets the last decent dress. Some day, desiring to evoke the story of her sorrows, you say: "Well, how are you getting along now?" and rallying her trembling voice, and quieting her quivering lip, she says: "Pretty well, I thank you, pretty well." She never will tell you. In the delirium of her last sickness, she may tell all the secrets of her lifetime, but she will not tell that. Not until the book of eternity are opened on the thrones of judgment will ever be known what she has suffered. Oh! ye who are twisting a garland for the victor, put it on that pale brow. When she is dead the neighbors will beg linen to make her a shroud, and she will be carried out in a plain box with no silver plate to tell her years, for she has lived a thousand years of trial and anguish. The gamblers and swindlers who destroyed her husband will not come to the funeral. One carriage will be enough for that funeral—one carriage will carry the orphans and the two Christian women who presided over the obsequies. But there is a flash, and the opening of a celestial door, and a shout: "Lift up your head, ye everlasting gate, and let her come!" And Christ will step forth and say: "Come in! ye suffered with me on earth, be glorified with me in heaven." What is the highest throne in heaven? You say: "The throne of the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb." No doubt about it. What is the next highest throne in heaven? While I speak it seems to me that it will be the throne of the drunkard's wife, if she with cheerful patience endured all her earthly torture. Heroes and heroines.

I find also in this roll the heroes of Christian charity. We all admire the George Peabodys and the James Lenoxes of the earth, who gave tens and hundreds of thousands of dollars to good objects.

But I am speaking this morning of those who, out of their pinched poverty, help others—of such men as those Christian missionaries at the West, who are living on $250 a year that they may proclaim Christ to the people, one of them, writing to the secretary in New York, saying: "I thank you for that $25. Until yesterday we have had no meat in our house for three months. We have suffered terribly. My children have no shoes this winter." And of those people who have only a half loaf of bread, but give a piece of it to others who are hungrier; and of those who have only a scuttle of coal, but help others to fuel; and of those who have only a dollar in their pocket, and give 25 cents to somebody else; and of that father who wears a shabby coat, and of that mother who wears a faded dress, that their children may be well apparelled. You call them paupers, or ragamuffins, or emigrants. I call them heroes and heroines. You and I may not know where they live, or what their name is. God knows, and they have more angel's hovering over them than you and I have, and they will have a higher seat in heaven.

They may have only a cup of cold water to give a poor traveler, or may have only picked a splinter from under the nail of a child's finger, or have put only two mites into the treasury, but the Lord knows them. Considering what they had, they did more than we have ever done, and their faded dress will become a white robe, and the small room will be an eternal mansion, and the old hat will be a coronet of victory, and all the applause of earth and all the shouting of heaven will be drowned out when God rises up to give his reward to these humble workers in his kingdom, and to say to them: "Well done, good and faithful servant." You have all seen or heard of the ruin of Melrose Abbey. I suppose in some respects it is the most exquisite ruin on earth. And yet, looking at it I was not so impressed—you may set it down to bad taste—but I was not so deeply stirred as I was at a tombstone at the foot of that abbey—the tombstone placed by Walter Scott over the grave of an old man who had served him for a good many years in his house—the inscription most significant, and I defy any man to stand there and read it without tears coming into his eyes—the epitaph: "Well done, good and faithful servant," Oh! when our work is over, will it be found that because of anything we have done for God, or the church, or suffering humanity, that such an inscription is appropriate for us? God grant it.

Who are those who are bravest and deserved the greatest monument—Lord Claverhouse and his burly soldiers, or John Brown, the Edinburgh carrier, and his wife? Mr. Atkins, the persecuted minister of Jesus Christ in Scotland, was secreted by John Brown and his wife, and Claverhouse rode up one day with his armed men and shouted in front of the house, John Brown's little girl came out. He said to her: "Well, is Mr. Atkins here?" She made no answer, for she could not betray the minister of the Gospel. "Ho!" Claverhouse said, "then you are a chip of the old block, are you? I have something in my pocket for you. It is a nosegay. Some people call it a thumbscrew, but I call it a nosegay." And he got off his horse, and he put it on the little girl's hand; and began to turn it until the bones cracked, and she cried. He said: "Don't cry, don't cry; this isn't a thumbscrew; this is a nosegay." And they heard the child's cry, and the father and mother came out, and Claverhouse said: "Ha! it seems that you three have laid your holy heads together determined to die like all the rest of your hypocritical, canting, snivelling crew; rather than give up good Mr. Atkins: pious Mr. Atkins, you would die. I have a telescope with me that will improve your vision," and he pulled out a pistol. "Now," he said, "you old pragmatical, lest you should catch cold in this cold morning of Scotland, and for the honor and safety of the king, to say nothing of the glory of God and the good of our soul, I will proceed simply and in the neatest and most expeditious style possible to blow your brains out." John Brown fell upon his knees and began to pray. "Ah!" said Claverhouse, "look out, if you are going to pray; steer clear of the king, the council, and Richard Cameron." "Oh! Lord," said John Brown, "since it seems to be Thy will that I should leave this world for a world where I can love Thee better and serve Thee more. I put this poor widow woman and these helpless, fatherless children into Thy hands. We have been together in peace a good while, but now we must look to a better meeting in heaven, as for these poor creatures, blindfolded and infatuated, that stand before me, convert me before it be too late, and may they who have sat in judgment in this lonely place on this blessed morning, upon me, a poor, defenseless fellow creature—may they in the Last Judgment find mercy which they have refused to me, Thy most unworthy, but faithful servant. Amen." He rose up and said, "Isabel the hour has come of which I spoke to you on on the morning when I promised hand and heart to you: and are you willing now, for the love of God, to let me die?" She put her arms around him and said: "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away. Blessed be the name of the Lord!" "Stop that snivelling," said Claverhouse. "I have had enough of it. Soldiers, do your work. Take him! Fire!" and the head of John Brown was scattered on the ground. While the wife was gathering up in her apron the fragments of her husband's head—gathering them up for burial—Claverhouse looked into her face and said: "Now, my good woman, how do you feel now about your bonnie man?" "Oh!" she said, "I always thought weel of him; he has been very good to me; I had no reason for thinking but weel of him, and I think better of him now." O what a grand thing it will be in the last day to see God pick out his heroes and heroines. Who are those paupers of eternity trudging off from the gates of heaven? Who are they? The Lord Claverhouses and the Herods and those who had scepters, and crowns, and thrones, but they lived for their own aggrandizement, and they broke the hearts of nations. Heroes of earth, but paupers in eternity. I beat the drums of their eternal despair. Woe! woe! woe!

But there is great excitement in heaven. Why those long processions? Why the booming of that great bell in the tower? It is coronation day in heaven.

Who are those rising on the thrones with crowns of eternal royalty? They must have been great people on the earth, world-renowned people. No. They taught in a ragged school. Taught in a ragged school! Is that all? That is all. Who are those souls waving scepters of eternal dominion? Why, they are little children who waited on invalid mothers. That all? That is all. She was called "Little Mary" on earth. She is an empress now. Who is that great multitude on the highest thrones of heaven? Who are they? Why they fed the hungry, clothed the naked, they healed the sick, they comforted the heartbroken. They never found any rest until they put their heads down on the pillar of the sepulchre. God watched them. God laughed defiance at their enemies who put their heels hard down on these His dear children; and one day the Lord struck his hand so hard on His thigh that the omnipotent sword rattled in the buckler, as He said: "I am their God, and no weapon formed against them shall prosper." What harm can the world do you when the Lord Almighty with unsheathed sword fights for you?

I preach this sermon for comfort. Go home to the place just where God has put you, to play the hero or the heroine. Do not envy any man his money or his applause, or his social position. Do not envy any woman wardrobe, or her exquisite appearance. Be the hero or the heroine. If there be no flour in the house, and you do not know where your children are to get bread, listen, and you will hear something tapping against the window-pane. Go to the window and you will find it is the beak of a raven, and open the window, and there will fly in the messenger that fed Elijah. Do you think that the God who grows the cotton of the South will let you freeze for lack of clothing? Do you think that the God who allowed the disciples on Sunday morning to go into the grain-field, and then take the grain and rub it in their hands and eat—do you think God will let you starve? Did you hear the experience of that old man: "I have been young but now I am old, yet, have I never seen the righteous forsaken, or his seed begging bread?" Get up out of your discouragement, O! troubled soul, O! sewing woman, O! man kicked and cuffed by unjust employers, O! ye who are hard beset in the battle of life and know not which way to turn, O! you bereft one, O! you sick one, with complaints you have told no one, come and get the comfort of this subject. Listen to our great Captain's cheer: "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the fruit of the tree of life which is in the midst of the paradise of God."

The jury at Mitchellstown, Ireland, was investigating the case of John Mandeville returned a verdict declaring the death was caused by the unjustifiable treatment to which he was subjected while confined in Tullamore prison.

Republican County Convention.

A delegate convention of the Republican voters of Polk County, Minnesota, is hereby called to meet at the Court House, in the city of Crookston, in said county, on Wednesday, August 15th, 188, at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of electing 9 delegates and 9 alternates to attend the 45th Republican Legislative Convention to be hereafter called, and for the purpose of electing 9 delegates and 9 alternates to attend the Republican State Convention, at St. Paul, Sept. 5th, 1888; also for the purpose of nominating the following county officers, to-wit:

Auditor.
Treasurer.
Register of Deeds.
County Superintendent of Schools.
County Attorney.
Sheriff.
Court Commissioner.
Surveyor.
Coroner.
County Commissioners for the 1st, 3d and 5th districts.

The several election precincts in the county will be entitled to representation as follows, the basis of representation being one delegate for each election district and one delegate for each fifty votes, or a major fraction thereof, cast for the republican candidate for governor in 1886.

Andover	2	Lake Pleasant	1
Angus	1	Lessor	2
Black River	2	Lowell	2
Bygland	2	Louisville	1
Belgium	1	Liberty	1
Brislet	1	Numedal	1
Bray	1	Norden	2
Badger	2	Nesbit	1
Brandsvold	2	North	1
City of Crookston—		Northland	2
1st ward	3	Onstead	2
2d ward	2	Poplar River	1
3d ward	3	Polk Center	2
4th ward	3	Parnell	1
5th ward	1	Queen	2
Crookston	1	Red Lake Falls	1
Euclid	2	" " village	2
Emardville	2	Rocksbury	2
Fairfax	2	Roome	2
Fanny	1	Russia	1
Farley	1	Reis	2
Fisher	2	River Falls	1
Fisher, village	3	Rosebud	2
Gentilly	1	Sletten	2
Godfrey	2	Sanders	2
Grand Forks	2	Sullivan	2
Garden	3	Sandsville	1
Gervais	1	St. Hilaire village	2
Grove Park	2	Tabor	1
Garfield	3	Tilden	2
Huntsville	2	Terrebonne	1
Hammond	1	Tynsid	2
Hubbard	3	Vineland	2
Higdem	2	Winger	2
Krag	2	Wyandotte	1
Kertsonville	1	Woodside	2
Keystone	1	Hill River	2
Knute	2	Lambert	1

By Order of Republican County Committee.
Crookston, July 23, 1888.
H. E. IVES, Temporary Sec'y.
HOWARD LANKESTER, Chairman.

The democratic party pretends to be the friend of the people, yet is solidly opposed to the admission of Dakota for fear that Dakota would go republican. How is that for the "poor man's friend?" "The party of freedom?"

Why don't the democratic papers mention the attitude of their party on the sugar tariff? They pretend that their party is the friend of the poor man, and that the Mills bill is calculated to aid him. Will they explain how a bill that makes no appreciable reduction in the sugar tariff helps the poor man? Or how a party that favors the Mills bill is the friend of the poor man?

The Times, in attempting to explain away the telegram business flounders around and makes the matter worse. He says that neither one of the telegrams gave his opinion but that his opinion was reserved for the Times. Worse and worse. While accepting service for both the Globe and Pioneer Press he does not pretend to tell either one of them the truth or give them a fair report but reserves that for his own sheet. By his own showing he did not have a truthful or fair account of the meeting at all for certainly the one in the Times was everything but that. The very efforts he makes to explain the matter but shows the clearer his insincerity and utter lack of truthfulness for a man who will not be true to the interests of his employers will not be true to the interests of the people.

McKenzie says we quoted the democratic platform for an editorial. Well, McKenzie cannot be blamed for what he don't know so we do not harbor any ill will against him. Neither do we wonder that he gets so badly mixed up going—as he did, into the democratic ranks without a change of heart—for revenue only and not having ever experienced that change. He simply put on a Cleveland hat put a red wipe in his pocket, and, without even turning his coat, imagines he is a full-fledged democrat. That is why, when he sees a sound republican editorial in THE JOURNAL he imagines it is sound democracy. But Mac aint to blame for that at all, and, in fact he does pretty fairly well for a man who is trying to carry water on both shoulders, who believes in one party and tries to preach the doctrines of another. The only one thing that he does accomplish well, however, is to furnish another sample of democratic insincerity, and therein is he in full and hearty sympathy with that party whose only principle is to win the fight at all hazards. Great is the democracy of the democrats.

It is said that there are republicans who intend to vote the democratic ticket in order to insure a proper reduction of the tariff. If there is any such republican in existence we wonder if he ever stopped to consider how he is to benefit himself. What evidence does the democratic party furnish that they will correct the evil. The Mills bill, did you say? Well, what does that bill prove? It proves the democratic claim of free trade to be a hollow sham and a mockery, and that the party leaders, at least, recognize the benefits of protection to American industries, because it insists on keeping a good big tariff on all articles in which the southern people are interested, and removing it from all articles in which the "northern mudsills" are interested. If, as they say, free trade is the thing for the country, why don't they make it universal? If it is such a good thing, why don't they apply it to articles in which the southerner is interested? If that party is the only one through which an equitable and just reduction of the tariff can be had, why is it that for all the years the democrats have held control of the House, no attempt has ever been made (except the Mills abortion) and why was this bill hatched up just on the eve of an important presidential election? It was done for policy only. It was done because the democratic leaders realized that the demand for reduction is so great that they thought some kind of a bill on the subject nesessary to capture votes enough to elect Cleveland again; but when they came to frame their bill, lo! the southern brigadier, and the sugar trust monopolist said: "Be careful how you monkey with sugar! You had better let that item pretty severely alone or you will hear from us!" And the bosses dared not disobey the warning. That their only motive is simply policy is as clear as the noonday sun, and no intelligent republican voter will be deceived by their specious pretensions. We are thoroughly convinced of the necessity for tariff reduction, but for that reason we cannot trust the important work to a party whose every act but shows its only interest in the matter to be purely selfish. Whose past history is but a record of unfaithfulness to its trusts whenever it has had a chance. If any republican has decided to vote the democratic ticket, it cannot be for the reason that he expects to accomplish tariff reduction because, if he is a reading, thinking man, he knows that it will not be done that way. While that party makes great pretensions they do not fulfill their promises, nor do they intend to do so. If a man is honest and sincere in his intentions he will give the matter sincere thought and attention, which will convince him how vain his hopes for relief from the democratic party will prove.

The Times man says he is not making a personal fight on Hon. S. G. Comstock, "only showing up his public record." The only instance in which he has attempted to "show up his public record" was when he said that "Mr. Comstock was the hardest worker against the Donnelly bill in the senate," and Mr. Comstock showed the fallacy of that statement by showing that the Donnelly bill never reached the senate. Did Mr. McKenzie, as a gentleman should, acknowledge his error and apologize? Far from it. Instead of doing so, he attempted to smooth over his own ignorence of the facts and to leave the impression that somehow Mr Comstock lies about it. If it is not "personal" to call a man a monopolist, "a railroad hired man" and all that, what would you call it. And if all that stuff is n't calculated to injur a man's character in the eyes of the voters and said only for the purpose of inducing men to vote against him what is it done for. Now we have no objections to have any man investigate the public record of Mr. Comstock all he has a mind to—in fact we prefer that he should do so. It is right that the people should know what kind of a man this is whom the republicans have honored with a nomination for congress, all we object to is the personal manner in which the democratic press attempts to besmirch his character by calling him a "monopolist," "a railroad hired man," and all that, implying by that, that he is a dishonorable man, for he says he is a man of the people and if elected will work for the people and they say he is a railroad monopolist who is to be elected in the interest of the railroad only. If this is not a "personal attack" upon one of the best and truest citizens of the Northwest, in reason's name, what is a "personal attack?" We defy Mr. McKenzie to take his files and show one instance (other than the one above quoted) where he has attempted to say anything against "Mr. Comstock's public record" and we furthermore challenge him to show by that public record where Mr. Comstock has ever done one thing unworthy the representative of the people who have honored him for fourteen years with public office. For Mr. McKenzie to say that Mr. Comstock is a "railroad hireling" and a "monopolist" proves nothing and does not cover the case. Let him prove his assertions by showing up that "public record" if he can, if he expects people to take any stock in the assertions of a man who can write two such contradictory telegrams as he did and send them away as the truth. Mac is so anxious to serve his new masters that he seems to have little regard for the truth left, if he ever did have any.

A Case of Interest.

Red Lake Falls Gazette.

On Monday, A. R. Holston went to St. Hilaire and served preliminary papers in the case of Mrs. Aasine Olson vs Erick M. Hoff, of St. Hilaire. Plaintiff alleges that defendent is a saloon keeper; that he sold liquor to her husband, who was a habitual drunkard; that in returning home from the saloon, her husband was in an intoxicated condition; that he fell or was thrown from his wagon and was killed; that death was the direct result of the intoxicants sold; that damages are asked in the sum of $5,000.

The decision of the district court will be of great importance to saloon keepers as it will tend to establish their responsibility for the acts of drunken men.

The date for the meeting of the Minnesota Editorial Association has been changed from Aug. 29th to Sept. 6th. Upon conclusion of the business meeting an excursion will be taken to Sault Ste Marie, Mich.

Consistent Republicanism.

Minneapolis Evening Journal.

There have been two Republican congressional conventions held in Minnesota since the National convention in Chicago, and both have declared in favor of tariff reform. The Red Wing convention said:

> That, while supporting the doctrine of protection to American industries, American labor, American homes, American fisheries and American honor, we demand * * such reduction or repeal of duties as will relieve from unnecessary burdens the necessaries of life and those articles, other than luxuries, which do not enter into competition with the products of American labor.

The Rochester convention said yesterday:

> That in the imposition of duties on foreign imports we demand such revision of the present tariff laws as will correct all inequalities therein and make return to the taxpayers to the fullest extent without injury to the cause of American labor or menacing the prosperity of the country, and we would respectfully invite the attention of the voter to the fact that all revision of our tariff legislation of the war period has been effected by the Republican party, and we declare our implicit confidence in its ability and sincere purpose to effect in the future such reduction of our internal revenue and readjusting of our tariff laws as will be most conducive to the welfare of the varied interests of the American people.

There is nothing new in this doctrine. There can be no doubt that a majority of the Republicans of Minnesota are in harmony with this general view of the tariff question. The Republican State convention will not agree to anything less pronounced in favor of tariff reform, and it ought not to.

Nevertheless there seems to be a feeling that there is some divergence some were between the policy of the national party and the views of Minnesota Republicans. Such declarations as we have quoted from the platforms of the Third and First districts seem to some out of harmony with the national platform and those who are troubled about it look at one another in an embarrassed manner as if there were some inconsistency somewhere.

But these difficulties are vastly more imaginary than real and come from too narrow a view of the case. The Republicans of the Northwest are very decidedly in favor of tariff reform, but they are very far removed from being free traders. They are protectionists and their attitude toward the system of protection needs no defense. They stand by the record of their party as a whole. Let us glance over the record and see if there is anything inconsistent in their position.

The present tariff was never intended by the party that made it to be an inflexible, unreconstructable affair. After the war there remained the enormous interest on the national debt to be paid, in addition to which there was the rapid reduction of the principal of that debt to which the increasing revenues were applied. And yet the Republican party did not resist the modification of the tariff. As early as 1867 General Garfield supported a bill for the reduction of the tariff and in 1872 a bill making a ten per cent reduction, with numerous additions to the free list, was passed. The chief opposition to this bill at the time within the party came from those who thought the reduction should have been greater.

Ten years later President Arthur said in his message to congress:

> "I recommend an enlargement of the free list so as to include within it the numerous articles which yield in considerable revenue, a simplification of the complex and inconsistent schedule of duties upon certain manufactures, particularly those of cotton, iron and steel, and a substantial reduction of the duties upon those articles, and upon sugar, molasses, silk, wool and woolen goods."

The tariff commission in 1883, composed of protectionists, reported to congress that: "Early in its deliberations the commission became convinced that a substantial reduction of tariff duties is demanded, not by a mere indiscriminate popular clamor, but by the best conservative opinion of the country." And upon the report of that commission was based the bill passed by a Republican congress which made the most substantial and rational reduction of the tariff since the war. In 1884 the Republican platform said: "The Republican party pledges itself to correct the inequalities of the tariff and reduce the surplus."

Such, in very brief outline, touching only a few of the important facts, has been the policy and attitude of the party of protection ever since the war. It is only now in 1888, when the protective system is so seriously menaced by a free trade Democracy, that the Republican party fails in its platform to emphasize, as it has always done, the idea of tariff reduction, and, in its zeal for the preservation of the protective principle, declares itself in favor of the entire abolition of the internal revenue system rather than surrender the protective system. That is, after all, only a half truth. The maintenance of the protective system is certainly more important than the fate of the internal revenue system. The one is a revenue expedient. The other is an industrial and commercial factor of vital importance.

But the sin of the platform is one of omission. It should be more explicit. It leaves too much to be inferred from the previous record of the party. The average voter looks at the current declaration only and forms his opinion without regard to, and often without knowledge of, the related facts. The Republican party is not opposed to a judicious readjustment of the tariff from time to time as constantly changing conditions may require. It never has been and is not now. It has made the only reduction of the tariff ever effected and is pledged by its history and by abundant precedent to make such further revisions as may from time to time seem advisable. Its platform, in the zeal of its framers to emphasize the devotion of the party to protection to American industries as opposed to the free trade policy of the Democracy, is unfortunate not in that it has made that fact prominent, but in that it has failed to reiterate also its former pledges to adjust the inequalities of a tariff which no one claims is always adopted, without revision, to the changing conditions of trade and manufactures. It would be as reasonable to declare the Democratic party the party of protection because they once placed their party standard in the hands of Horace Greely, the most pronounced protectionist in the country, as to accuse the Republicans of having now abandoned a policy to which they are committed by a consistent record of more than 20 years.

The Republicans of the First and Third districts have no occasion to defend their platform or their Republicanism. Both are entirely consistent with the long-established principles of their party.

Hon. W. R. MERRIAM.

The Young Men Would Support Him and Make the Fur Fly,

Minneapolis Tribune.

Among the candidates for the gubernatorial nomination at the hands of the republican party, the Hon. W. R. Merriam has, perhaps, the most enthusiastic following. Himself a young man—he is only 39 years old—he enjoys the confidence and admiration of the young republicans of the state who, under his aggressive leadership, have rapidly pushed themselves to the front rank in this party.

Mr. Merriam is a typical Northwestener. Endowed with great native intelligence and energy, and possessed of a liberal education, his career as a business man is one of remarkable success. He is president of one of the largest and strongest banking institutions west of Chicago, has amassed a handsome fortune and is looked upon as a business man of commanding ability in a community distinguished for its able and enterprising business men. His name is identified with many of the most successful manufacturing and business enterprises in this state, particularly in St. Paul; in fact, few men of his age have done more than W. R. Merriam for the promotion of the interests of their communities. As president of the State Agricultural society he brought the institution up to a prosperous and flourishing condition and demonstrated that he possessed executive ability to a very high degree.

As a member of the legislature to which he was elected in 1882, and reelected in 1886, he distinguished himself as a consistent republican of conceded ability. Although the farmer element, which at that time was suspicious of any man identified with large moneyed interests, was in control of the house in 1886, Mr. Merriam was elected speaker, and at the end of the session it was the unanimous verdict of republicans and democrats, grangers and non-grangers, that he had made the best speaker that the house had ever had.

Mr. Merriam is unassailable in his private as well as his public record. He has ever been a consistent republican and at present is one of the most conspicuous in the ranks of the young progressive and aggressive element of the party. He is in full accord with his party on the questions of high license and the tariff, and if nominated would have nothing to explain of any of these accounts. If nominated the young men would rally to his support and make the fur fly. As governor he would give the people a vigorous, conservative and clean administration.

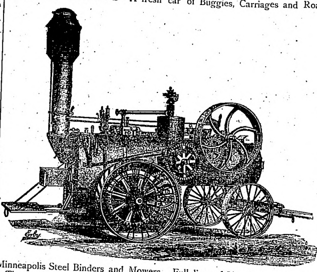
REMOVED.

HUGGARD, LARSEN & CO.

have removed their stock to their new building, opposite the New York store on, cor. Broadway and Robert. You can't miss it,

SIGN OF THE JACKSON WAGON.

JUSTRECEIVED—A fresh car of Buggies, Carriages and Road Carts.



General Agents for
RUSSELL & CO'S WORLD KNOWN
Engines, Separators and Saw Mills.

Minneapolis Steel Binders and Mowers. Full line of Hay Rakes, Hand and Self Dumps. J. Thompson & Son's Cross Plows and Breakers, NEW MODEL Walking Gangs and Breakers, Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machines' Pumps, Full line of Extras. TWINE. Come and see us!

Stewart & Laurence,

WHOLESALE AND RETTIL

HEAVY AND SHELF

HARDWARE,

BAKER STEEL BARBED WIRE.

JEWETT'S STOVES AND RANGES,

Plymouth Binding Twine

D. H. BATES,

—DEALER IN—

Lumber, Building Paper,

PAINTS, OILS,

DOORS, WINDOWS, AND MOULDINGS

ALSO

FARM MACHINERY

AGENT FOR THE CELEBRATED

MILWAUKEE HARVESTER,

(FORMERLY THE DENNETT,)

AND THE CELEBRATED

WINONA PLOWS

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

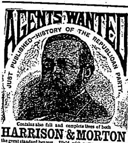
You will find it to your advantage to call when need of anything in my line.

D. H. BATES,

CARMAN, - - - MINN

AGENTS WANTED

JUST PUBLISHED—HISTORY OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.



Contains also full and complete lives of both

HARRISON & MORTON

the great standard bearers. Ills'd. with numerous superb portraits. Among the authors will be found the names of Senators Frye, Chandler, Hawley, Ingalls, John D. Long, popular ex-gov. of Mass., McKinley of Ohio, writes on the Tariff, Henry Cabot Lodge, and a number of others of a like prominence. The only authentic Campaign Book, indorsed by the Nat. Rep. Com. Don't be induced to get any other. Distance no hinderance as we pay all freight charges. Send 50 cents in 1c. stamps for outfit and be the first in the field, or write for full particulars and Special Terms sent free to all. WINTER & CO., Pubs., Springfield, Mass.

JOHN CROMB,

Attorney-at-aw,

ECOND STREET, CROOKSTON,

THE SECOND HAND STORE,

(Yvernault's Old Place,)

Main Street, - - Crookston, Minn,

KEEPS A FINE, LARGE STOCK OF

NEW FURNITURE,

At Prices Unrivalled in this market. Also a Large Stock of

SECOND HAND FURNITURE,

Little worn. Parties desiring to dispose of Old Furniture can exchange it with me for New Furniture at a Bargain, or I will Pay Cash for it. Call and see my stock and get prices

PETER GOTHIA.

DENTISTRY!

J. H. THOMAS, D. D.S.,

ROBERT STREET, - CROOKSTON, MINN

Artificial Teeth from one to an entire set inserted. Gold, Silver or Artificial Filling used a desired. Regulating Children's Teeth a specialty. ALL WORK WARRANTED,

Report of the Board of Equalization.

ONE YEAR OLD HORSES.
Black River,	lowered	10	per cent.
Bygland,	raised	5	"
City of Crookston,	do	100	"
Fiser,	lowered	15	"
Fisher, village,	do	15	"
Garfield,	raised	30	"
Gervais,	do	30	"
Godfrey,	lowered	5	"
Grove Park,	raised	10	"
Higdem,	do	5	"
Hill River,	do	5	"
Hubbard,	lowered	10	"
Huntsville,	do	5	"
Keystone,	raised	35	"
Kertsonville,	do	5	"
Knute,	lowered	10	"
Lambert,	raised	100	"
Lake Pleasant,	do	5	"
Lessor,	lowered	12½	"
Louisville,	raised	10	"
Nesbit,	lowered	10	"
Onstad,	raised	12½	"
Polk Center,	do	10	"
Queen,	do	25	"
Rosebud,	do	12½	"
Sandsville,	lowered	12½	"
Sletten,	raised	5	"
Sullivan,	do	100	"
Tabor,	do	5	"
Tilden,	do	180	"
Tynsid,	do	60	"
Wyandotte,	do	25	"
City of East G. Forks	do	100	"
4th Assessment Dist	do	100	"
TWO YEARS OLD.
Black River,	lowered	25	"
Brandsvold,	raised	10	"
Bray,	lowered	25	"
City of Crookston,	raised,	30	"
Emardville,	do	10	"
Euclid,	lowered	10	"
Farley,	do	25	"
Fanny,	raised	10	"
Fisher,	lowered,	20	"
Fisher, village,	do	20	"
Garden,	raised	10	"
Garfield,	do	15	"
Gervais,	do	33⅓	"
Godfrey,	lowered	15	"
Hammond,	do	25	"
Higdem,	raised	10	"
Hill River,	do	20	"
Hubbard,	lowered	25	"
Keystone,	do	5	"
Kertsonville,	do	50	"
Lambert,	do	50	"
Lake Pleasant,	do	15	"
Lessor,	do	20	"
Louisville,	do	5	"
Nesbit,	lowered	10	"
North,	do	10	"
Norden,	do	15	"
Onstad,	raised	25	"
Poplar River,	do	30	"
Queen,	lowered	10	"
Roome,	raised	5	"
St. Hilaire, village,	do	5	"
Sandsvills,	do	25	"
Sullivan,	do	65	"
Tabor,	do	10	"
Terrebonne,	do	10	"
Tynsid,	do	25	"
Vineland,	lowered	25	"
Woodside,	do	50	"
City of E. G. Forks,	raised	50	"
Columbia,	lowered	10	"
3d Assessment Dist.,	do	15	"
THREE YEAR OLD HORSES.
Andover,	raised	5	"
Angus,	do	25	"
City of Crookston,	do	10	"
Crookston,	do	25	"
Euclid	do	15	"
Fairfax,	do	15	"
Fanny,	do	25	"
Fisher,	do	5	"
Fisher, village	do	10	"
Garden,	do	10	"
Garfield,	do	25	"
Gervais,	do	10	"
Gentilly	do	50	"
Godfrey	do	12½	"
Grove Park,	do	25	"
Hammond,	do	25	"
Higdem	do	20	"
Huntsville,	do	10	"
Keystone,	do	10	"
Kertsonville,	do	50	"
Lake Pleasant,	do	10	"
Lessor,	do	10	"
Louisville,	do	40	"
Liberty,	do	20	"
Lowell,	do	10	"
Nesbit.	do	10	"
North,	do	10	"
Onstad,	do	25	"
Poplar River,	do	10	"
Polk Centre,	do	50	"
Red Lake Falls, vil.,	do	5	"
" " Tp.,	do	10	"
Reis,	do	5	"
Roome,	do	5	"
Rocksbury,	do	5	"
Sanders	do	10	"
Sullivan,	do	50	"
Tabor,	do	25	"
Terrebonne,	do	25	"
Tilden,	lowered	5	"
Tynsid,	raised	25	"
Wyandotte,	do	50	"
East Grand Forks,	do	do	"

Board adjourned to 1:30 o'clock p. m.

[Continued next week.]

DR. M. WATTS.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.

Office over Merchants' Bank,

Professional calls by day or night promptly attended to.

SCANDI AMERICAN

BANK.

Authorized Capital..........$200,000
Paid in Capital..........50,000

COLLECTIONS A SPECIALTY.

OFFICERS:

C. Hendrickson, President.
G. M. Barber, Vice President.
C. O. Christianson, 2d Vice President.
A. G. Gallash, Cashier.
D. Ellington, Asst. Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

O. H. Lucken..........Crookston
L. K. Aaker.......... "
J. H. Locken.......... "
T. J. Thorsen.......... "
P. E. Sandager..........Grafton, D. T.
A. E. Johnson..........St. Paul, Minn.

NEW CIGAR STORE,

SIGN OF THE BIG INJUN.

H. F. BROWN, Proprietor

Second Street,

CROOKSTON, - - - MINN.

Cigars of every known brand, from a cheroot to a 25 center. Cigarettes, Chewing and Smoking Tobaccos of all kinds, Snuff, Pipes to suit the fancy of all, from a corn-cob pipe to a meerschaum.

Particular attention is invited to our line of Meerschaum Goods. NONE FINER IN THE NORTHWEST.

Drop In and See the New Store!

H. F. BROWN,

Polk County Journal.

W. G. COOKE, Publisher.

CROOKSTON, MINN., AUGUST 2.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

Warren Register: The Bolton saloon building is being moved by Thos. Harris, of Crookston, for Mr. Johnson, to a lot on Johnson Ave., just west of Znerold's. Mr Harris also raised and leveled Otto Edwardh's saloon and P. Ruedy's building on Main Street.

The Farmer: On the Stanton farm near Morris, Minn., wheat was sown very early, the seeder used being a broadcaster, made on the principle of the old Cahoon machine, with which most farmers are familiar, The seed was harrowed in thoroughly. On June 28th the grain was very thrifty and of excellent color. On some of the neighboring farms the drill was used for putting in the crop. The fields are weedy and the wheat small, light colored and unpromising. The seeding was done considerably later than in the first mentioned case. The season in the region about Morris has been very dry. Now, who will determine the question whether the better crop has been the result of early seeding or the manner of seeding.

Kittson County Enterprise: A mass meeting of the farmers of the county met in Riddell hall last Saturday afternoon to discuss a system of drainage for this county. The farming communities were well represented but not a business man of Hallock was present, much to their shame. It was a meeting where every merchant, mechanic, lawyer and doctor should have been present, as the success of the farmer means the success of the business man. Capt. Donaldson, who has been the agitator of this important scheme, called the meeting to order and was made chairman. In opening the meeting, he scored the business men of Hallock severely for their lack of interest as shown by their not being present. Will Arnold, the Polk County surveyor, was present with plans, plats etc., and addressed the audience in a very explicit manner. A committee was then appointed to meet on Saturday of this week for the purpose of perfecting arrangements and getting to work. Such committee are Capt. Donaldson, Ed. H. Love, C. J. McCollom, Chas. Clow, H. A. Rache, F. A. Sandquist, Frank Calmar, E. N. Davis, A. J. Perrault. After the meeting of that committee on Saturday, the people of the county will be asked to help along this scheme by subscriptions and every farmer and business man should give it aid. There is no use in the editor telling you how great the damage has been this year, as you are competent to judge for yourselves, and to know whether a thorough system of drainage is necessary or not.

The Competition of Indian Wheat.

American Agriculturist for August: Prof. Robert Wallace, professor of agriculture and rural economy in Edinburgh University, Scotland, after four months' investigation of India the past summer, tells us that the fear of competition from this source has been largely exaggerated. He says it is a mistake to think that the Indian area in wheat will increase in the next ten years in the same ratio as it has the past five years. It will increase gradually, but the difficulties in the way will prevent any such development of experts as has caused so much alarm of late. The late rapid growth of the wheat crop has been due to the fact that much of it was produced on land previously occupied for some other crop, This substitution cannot go on much longer, for the teeming millions of that empire must have food to live on, and only in the newer parts of the country can the wheat area be much further extended. There are great difficulties of developing new sections of that country.: First, because it is hard to get workmen to settle in new districts, and secondly, there is want of money and a want of the necessary extra supply of power. Again, since wheat requires reasonably dry land, failures must occur every few years in the moist climate of that country. A continuous growth of wheat on lands heretofore cropped with leguminous plants, such as clover, etc., is also tending to exhaust the soil, and the yield of wheat per acre is bound to diminish. Prof. Wallace concludes by warning people to beware of Indian wheat statistics, which are not compiled from returns made by practical wheat growers, and are based to a considerable degree on guess-work. This report from so eminent and disinterested authority will be of interest to every wheat-grower in America, as showing that Indian wheat is not to usurp the place of American wheat in the foreign market.

The Profits of Dairying.

Western Rural and American Stockman.

C. P. Goodrich, in a recent address, said that he took account of his wheat raising, and found it was not paying him. Besides, it was exhausting his soil. He concluded to study up dairying, and having done so, he went into the business with nine cows. At the end of the year, the total proceeds footed up to $348.66, or $38.74 per cow. Men said he had done well. He thought he had taken good care of his cows and fed them well, and figured the cost of keeping at $25 per cow. That left but $13.74 for caring for and milking her and making up the product. Pretty small pay, he thought.

The next year he determined to feed better. He put in some fodder-corn, and bought in the fall, six and one-half tons of bran at $7 per ton. Some said it was no better than sawdust. Fed it with ground corn and oats; took better care of his cows; learned something about marketing butter, and at the end of the year found he had made 250 pounds of butter to the cow, and the total proceeds from the same nine cows was $696.42, or $77.83 each. He estimated the cost of keeping at $33 per head, leaving $44.33 to pay for the work and the profit.

When he commenced feeding his cows well, many farmers said he would ruin his cows by high feeding: that he would "wear out the machine in a few years by crowding it so hard." But he thought that even if this were true, he could afford to wear out a machine in two or three years as long as he could make profit enough on it to buy two new ones. But instead of wearing out the machine, her capacity for giving milk will increase, with good feeding, till she is eight years old, and hold good for several years longer. That in this way the tendency to give milk can be strengthened, educated, as it were, by use, the same as the muscles of the blacksmith's arm grow stronger the more he wields the sledge. And not only this, she will in consequence, transmit milk-giving qualities to her offspring, so that each generation will be an improvment on the preceding, even if no improved blood be added. He says he shall never buy a cow that was starved when young, and that is an excellent rule.

Depends on the Man.

Hoard's Dairyman.

It is interesting to ask say, fifty dairy farmers the following questions:

"Have you made any money in dairying during the past season of high priced feed? A majority, say three-fourths, will declare in the negative. The balance will reply in the affirmative. Of the latter it will be found, on close scrutiny, that some have made double the money that the rest have and the reason will be invariably found to be due to their intelligence.

(1) They were intelligent enough years ago to put themselves in possession of a dairy cow, by buying a thorough-bred bull of some one of the dairy breeds, and crossing him upon their native cows they have built up a herd that with the same food will produce fifty to seventy-five per cent. more butter than did the old herd:

(2) They have been intelligent enough to make a study of what constitutes real dairy conditions. They have learned that cold stables are very costly in extra feed; cold water the same way. They have learned that they must surround a herd of mothers with true maternal conditions, if they expect from them a profitable maternity.

(3) They have been intelligent enough to see that is is the liberal, and and not the stingy feeder that makes money.

And so starting with the proper foundation—the true dairy cow—they have gone along in obedience to the dictates of intelligence at every step, and they are the ones that have made money, even with high prices of feed. One question seems pertinent here. How did they become intelligent? The answer is a very simple one. They became intelligent just as the lawyer, doctor, preacher, banker or mechanic does. They expended, at least, an ounce of brains to every ten pounds of hard work. They were not conceited nor ignorant enough to suppose that the garnered experience of others such as they could find in dairy papers was of no benefit to them. So they read and studied and made money. The others have the comfort at least of knowing that somebody made money the past year.

California Wines and Brandies.

Max Ericsson is constantly receiving California Wines and Brandies, the choicest of liquors of all kinds at wholesale and retail, which he can supply at the shortest notice. No use to send below for such things, as Max can supply them as cheaply and of as good quality as you can get anywhere. Go and see what Max can do for you.

Money to Loan.

We have the cash always on hand to loan on good farm security. No second mortgage. No delay. No commission.

STEENERSON & McMANUS.

A Snap.

M. R. Brown offers 100 lots, near the business portion of the city at figures that will give the purchaser a chance make a good thing. Look into this and be convinced.

For Sale.

A full blood Jersey bull calf. Will sell cheap for cash or trade for a colt, heifer calves, a few pigs or anything but dogs or cats. I have no use for the animal and he is too valuable to veal. Address, M. E. BARTLETT, Fairfax.

For Cash or Trade.

A thoroughbred Holstein-Friesian bull, for cash, on time or trade for cows. For particulars address THE JOURNAL office.

Farm loans completed and money paid over the day application is made.

STEENERSON & McMANUS.

CARLETON COLLEGE,

NORTHFIELD, MINN.

Fall Term Opens September 5, 1888,

THE COURSES ARE

CLASSICAL, LITERARY, SCIENTIFIC. ENGLISH-ACADEMY AND MUSICAL,

Besides Preparatory and Post-Graduates studies.

Instruction given in Drawing and Painting.

Special facilities for study in Pure Mathematics and Astronomy.

Extensive Chemical and Biological Laboratories.

Open to students of either sex.

Expenses very low.

For Catalogues and Circulars address,

[14-15] JAS. W. STRONG, President.

CROOKSTON

CREAMERY,

WALSH & BJOIN, Prop's.

The Croookston Creamery is now ready for business, and solicits the patronage of every progressive farmer. At the prices that we now pay, you can make more money out of your cream than you can to make it into butter yourself. It only needs a trial to convince you.

We invite the patronage of all who are interested in their own welfare, as well as that of the county to call and see us.

Crookston Nurseries

Established in 1879

Tree Claim Stock

A SPECIALTY.

I will furnish my customers and others, trees and seeds for Tree Claims at reduced figures in the spring of 1887. Also all the hardier varieties of small fruits, such as Currants, Gooseberries, and Raspberries. Also good thrifty Transcendent and Hislop Crab-Apple trees, Cottonwood and Box Elder trees. Box Elder and Ash seed, and Willow cuttings. Also garden seeds. The firm of Haseltine Bros. was dissolved in June, 1883. E. W Haseltine has no interest or share in the old Crookston Nurseries, nor is he successor to the old firm of Haleltine Bros. as ha, been advertised. I continue business on the old grounds in Crookston. Don't fail to send for catalogue of prices

FRANK T. HASELTINE, Prop.
Crookston, Minn

TONSORIAL PARLORS,

PROF. THOMPSON' Prop.

Robert Street, - - Crookston, Minn

HOT AND COLD BATHS.

W. A. ROBERTSON,

D. D. S.

Graduate of Dental Department of the University of Maryland.

OPERATIVE AND MECHANICAL

DENTIST.

OFFICE, IN McKINNON BLOCK.

THE PERKINS WIND MILL.

BUY THE BEST AND SAVE MONEY

It has been in constant use for 19 years, with a record equaled by none. We give each purchaser a

WARRANTY

as follows: We warrant the Perkins Wind Mill. sold this day. to out-last and do better work than any other make, and not blow down, unless the Tower goes with it. and against any wind that does not disable buildings in the vicinity.

We manufacture both Pumping and Geared Mills and carry a full line of Wind Mill Supplies.

AGENTS WANTED.

Send for Catalogue, Circulars and Prices.

Address PERKINS WIND MILL & AX CO.
Mishawaka, Ind.

THE OLD RELIABLE

CROOKSTON

LOAN AGENCY

STILL ON DECK.

MONEY

On Real Estae.

MONEY

On Approved Chattels.

Always on hand at the Lowest Rates.

Consult your best interests by giving me a call when you Want Money.

A. D. STEPHENS,

Second Street, Crookston, Minn.

U. S. LAND OFFICE.
Crookston, Minn., June 21, 1888.

Complaint having been entered at this office by Charles S. Attix against the heirs of John O. Fay, deceased, for abandoning his homestead entry No 7,197, dated May 5th, 1882, upon the n½ sw¼ and w½ nw¼ Sec. 22, Township 149 north, Range 43 west, in Polk County, Minn., with a view to the cancellation of said entry; the said parties are hereby summoned to appear at this office on the 4th day of September, 1888, at 10 o'clock a. m., to respond and furnish testimony concerning said alleged abandonment.

[10-15] H. H. DICKMANN, Register.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston, Minn., July 24th, 1888.

Complaint having been entered at this office by Hans Christopherson against Louis St. John for abandoning his Homestead Entry No. 11,712, dated April 1st, 1886, upon the e½ sw¼ and lots 3 and 4, S. 18, T. 153 n. R. 46 w. in Polk County, Minn., with a view to the cancellation of said entry, the said parties are hereby summoned to appear at this office on the 14th day of Sept. 1888, at 10 o'clock a. m., to respond and furnish testimony concerning said alleged abandonment.

[14-19] L. K. AAKER, Receiver.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston, Minn., July 11th, 1888.

Complaint having been entered at this office by Peter O. Berggrew against John Scarborough for failure to comply with law as to timber culture entry No. 1259, dated June 17th, 1879, upon the southwest quarter S. 20, T. 154 n. R. 49 w., in Polk County, Minn., with a view to the cancellation of said entry, contestant alleging that the said John Scarborough did not break or plow nor caused to be broken or plowed any part of said land the first year after the date of said entry, that there has been no improvements of any kind made on said land since the date of said entry, the said parties are are hereby summoned to appear at this office on the 11th day of Sept. 1888, at 9 o'clock a. m., to respond and furnish testimony concerning said alleged failure.

[14-19] H. H. DICKMANN, Register.

S. L. COLLINS

PROPRIETOR OF

MAIN STREET

Livery, Feed and Sale Stables

CORNER MAIN AND FOURTH STS, WEST SIDE,

Crookston, - - - - Minnesota.

Horses bought and sold on commission.
Everything neat and nobby.
Feeding a specialty.

FINE HEARSE

in connection which I will attend to in person.

1878. 1888.

Fontaine & Anglim,

Have the largest and most complete stock of goods in the city, consisting, in part, of

CARPETS AND HOUSE FURNISHING GOODS, DRY GOODS, NOTIONS BOOTS AND SHOES, GENTS', YOUTHS AND CHILDREN'S CLOTHING STAPLE AND FANCY GROCERIES.

Pries very Low. Farmers' Produce Taken in Exchange.

THE CROOKSTON

AUCTION AND COMMISSION

STORE.

SECOND HAND GOODS of all kinds Bought and Sold. Also Sold on Commission. We are prepared to sell Stock and Machinery at our Yards in Crookston, or to attend Sales anywhere in Polk County at Reasonable Rates. Orders solicited. It will be to your interest to see our stock of

SECOND-HAND AND NEW GOODS

And get prices before purchasing elsewhere.

BERTHIAUM AND MICHAUD, Proprietors,

BROADWAY, - - CROOKSTON, MINN.,

Between Robert and Fletcher Streets.

THE BEE HIVE!

Established in 1879.

HACK & GALLASCH

Invite Your Attention to Their New

SPRING AND SUMMER STOCK

OF EVERYTHING IN THE LINE OF

DRY GOODS, NOTIONS, BOOTS AND SHOES.

HATS AND CAPS.

IN OUR GROCERY AND PROVISION DEPARTMENT

Will be found a Full and Complete Stock of Fresh and Reliable Goods which we can sell at the very Lowest Living rates. We point with pride to our CHINA DEPARTMENT and challenge any competitor to beat it. Goods delivered free to any part of the city. When in need of anything in our line. call and see

HACK & GALLASCH. COR. MAIN & SECOND STS.

First National Bank

OF CROOKSTON

PAID IN CAPITAL, - $100,000
SURPLUS, - - $11,000

Money to loan on long or short time on approved security

Interest on time deposits. Faithful attention to Collections and prompt remittance.

GEO. Q. ERSKINE, President.
WM. ANGLIM, Vice President.
CHAS. E. SAWYER, Cashier

DIRECTORS:

Wm. Anglim, K. D. Chase, F. D. Childs.
Geo. Q. Erskine, S. F. Markham, H. M. Pierce
E. M. Walsh. John Moore. W. H. Crosby.
Chas. E. Sawyer.

CHRISTIANSON BROTHERS,

(Correspondents Fargo Loan Agency.)

REAL ESTATE,

Farm Mortgage Loans and Insurance.

Special Bargains in Choice Farm Lands, improved and unimproved. Low prices and easy terms.

—OFFICE ON ROBERT STREET,—

CROOKSTON, - - - - MINN.

THE PIONEER

SAMPLE ROOM,

AUGUST WENTZEL, Prop.

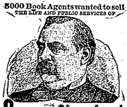
THE CHOICEST OF

WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS

Constantly on hand. Convenient to depot and all business places in the city.

GIVE ME A CALL.

5000 Book Agents wanted to sell THE LIFE AND PUBLIC SERVICES OF



Grover Cleveland

Full and complete from his boyhood to his nomination in St. Louis, with personal reminiscences, incidents and anecdotes. Profusely illustrated with steel portraits and wood engravings. The book also contains a superb Portrait and a full and complete LIFE OF MRS. CLEVELAND, together with a complete biography of ALLEN G. THURMAN. This is the only authentic Life. Don't be induced to get any other. There will probably be unauthorized Lives, but this is the right one. Distance no hindrance, as we pay all transportation charges. Send 50 cents in 1c. stamps and be the first in the field, and thus reap the golden harvest. Write for full particulars and Special Terms sent free to all. Address, WINTER & CO., Pubs., Springfield, Mass.

NEW MEAT

MARKET

At Steenerson Bros. Old Stand, on Main Street,

SANDS BROTHERS, Prop's.

Having purchased this stand we have put in a large and complete stock of Fresh and Salt Meats of all kinds, secured the services of a thoroughly competent butcher, and are now ready to supply the Choicest Roasts and Steaks of Beef, Pork, Mutton, and everything in our line. We invite your patronage. Orders delivered when desired.

SANDS BRO'S, MAIN STREET.

MONTANA SHORT LINE.

When traveling every one should consider well the questions of economy, comfort, safety and speed, these questions being of the same importance in a journey of an hour as in one of several days' ride. An examination of the map will convince anyone that this is the most direct route to and from all the principal points in Central and Northern Minnesota, Dakota and Montana. Our equipment and time are excellent. Our rates are the lowest, but this fact is something which speaks for itself. Definite figures and maps can be obtained by applying to any Agent of the Company, or the General Passenger Agent.

ST. PAUL MINNEAPOLIS MANITOBA RAILWAY.

The following are a few of the Principal Points reached via this Line:

ST. CLOUD, SAUK CENTRE, FERGUS FALLS, CROOKSTON, ST. VINCENT, HUTCHINSON, PAYNESVILLE, MORRIS, APPLETON AND BRECKENRIDGE, MINN.; WATERTOWN, ABERDEEN, ELLENDALE; WAHPETON, FARGO, GRAND FORKS, GRAFTON, DEVILS LAKE, BOTTINEAU AND BUFORD, DAKOTA; GLASGOW, DAWES (FT. BELKNAP), ASSINNIBOINE, FT. BENTON, GREAT FALLS, HELENA AND BUTTE, MONTANA; WINNIPEG, MANITOBA, AND ALL PACIFIC COAST POINTS.

Parties seeking farms or business locations will find unusual opportunities for both on this line in Northern Dakota and Montana, also in Minnesota where the Company has for sale at low prices and on favorable terms 2,000,000 acres of excellent farming, grazing and timber lands. For maps and other information address,

J. BOOKWALTER, Land Commissioner. C. H. WARREN, Gen'l Pass. Ag't.
ST. PAUL, MINN.
A. MANVEL, Gen'l Manager. W. S. ALEXANDER, Gen'l Traffic Manager.

FROM ST. PAUL No. 3 daily	Miles	STATIONS	TO ST. PAUL No 4 d'ly
8:03 p. m.	00	Lv...St. Paul...Ar	7:50 a. m.
9:19 p. m.	11	...Minneapolis...	6:25 "
10:15 a. m.	294	...Crookston...	5:25 p. m.

No. 3. Through sleeper to Fergus Falls, Crookston and Winnipeg.
No. 4. Through sleeper from Winnipeg, Crookston and Fergus Falls.

CROOKSTON AND MINOT—Trains leave Crookston daily, Sundays excepted at 10:20 a. m. and arrive at Crookston from Minot at 5:15 p. m., Sundays excepted.

ST. HILAIRE BRANCH—Trains leave Crookston Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 10:45 a. m. arriving at St. Hilaire at 12:15 p. m. Leave St. Hilaire same days at 2:00 p. m. arriving in Crookston at 4:00 p. m.

C. H. MIX, Agent
A. MANVEL, Gen'l Manager. C. H. WARREN, Gen'l Pass. Agent.
W. S. ALEXANDER, Traffic Manager.

Northern Pacific

RAILROAD.

The New Route Between

Grand Forks,

AND

St. Paul,

Minneapolis,

Duluth,

And all points East. The direct line to

Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, British Columbia, Puget Sound and Alaska.

EXPRESS TRAINS DAILY,

To which are attached Pullman Palace Sleepers and Elegant Dining Cars. On overland trains, Emigrant Sleepers Free. The only line

YELLOWSTONE PARK.

TIME SCHEDULE.

Depart West Bound.		Arrive East Bound.
4:50 p. m.	St. Paul	7:50 a. m.
4:50 "	Minneapolis	6:35 "
3:45 "	Duluth	7:15 "
8:10 "	Brainerd	1:15 a. m.
1:00 a. m.	Winnipeg Junction	8:59 p. m.
2:31 "	Twin Valley	7:35 "
3:27 "	Fertile	6:32 "
4:01 "	Tilden	5:55 "
4:35 "	Red Lake Falls. { Depart. Arrive.	5:50 " 5:10 "
5:25 "	South Euclid	4:29 "
5:35 "	Buffington	4:20 "
5:41 "	Keystone	4:05 "
6:25 " Ar. 6:15 " De.	Grand Forks	De. 3:55 " Ar. [illegible]
7:12 "	Kelly's	3:05 "
7:27 "	Mekinock	2:50 "
7:42 "	Beans	2:37 "
7:31 "	Gilby	2:28 "
8:02 "	Johnstown	2:17 "
8:15 "	Forest River	2:05 "
8:35 "	Grafton	1:38 "
7:33 "	Drayton	12:50 "
10:15 "	Arrive....Pembina....Depart	11:35 a. m

Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars between Grand Forks and St. Paul. Dining Cars on west bound trains. Coupon Tickets on sale to all points South, East and West. For full information as to time, rates, address

W. E. JERMAINE, Ticket Agent, Grand Forks.
CHAS. S. FEE, Gen. Pass. Agent.
St. Paul, Minn.

CLEVELAND HOUSE,

R. BURKHARDT, Prop.

Handy to Depot.
Handy to Post Office.
Handy to Land Office.
Handy to Stables.
Handy to Court House.

The most convenient Hotel to any business house and to deal with of any Hotel in the city. Give me a call.

Terms $1. Yours truly,

RUDY BURKHARDT.

A. P. HOLAND

(Successor to S. S. Johnson,)

PHOTOGRAPHER

COPYING and ENLARGING

in all sizes and first-class work guaranteed.

PICTURE FRAMES

made to order, on short notice.

Any work in my line neatly and promptly executed at lowest living rates.

GIVE ME A CALL.

Studio opposite Post Office,
Robert Street, - - Crookston, Minn

Woman's Temperance Column.

[This column is at the disposal of the temperance ladies of Crookston, who will edit it each week.]

We are rejoiced to hear that Mr. Harrison and President Cleveland, the republican and democratic candidates for president, are both total abstainers; Mr. Cleveland, it is reported from Washington, having some time ago given up drinking at the request of his wife. "Thus," says the bibulous Sun, "The candidates of the two great parties are both temperance men, and this is a fact which we think never occurred before." If temperance is again set back twenty years this fall, all the candidates in 1892, it seems likely, will be prohibitionists as well as abstainers.

It is too true that by our present school system we do not prepare pupils for life, but for examination

Rev. Dr. W. K. Huntington prescribes the three T's—Toil, Thrift and Temperance—as the best antidote to poverty.

There is no better place to raise healthy, upright, noble, men and women than in the sweet rural homes of this great and "goodly" land.

Russia spends twenty-five per cent. more for the preservation of public health than for public education. "Public health is public wealth" is their motto.

Dr. J. W. White, senior Professor of Physical Science in the Pennsylvania University, has forbidden the use of tobacco in any form by the students.

The way to sleep, says a scientist, is to think of nothing. But Dr. Hammond asserts this is a mistake, and says the way to sleep is to think it is time to get up.

In London there is temperance hospital from which all alcoholic medicines are excluded, "without incurring any risk or delay in recovery, and with advantage rather than detriment.

The effects of tobacco on the health of men of letters, and its influences on the future of French Literature, is the theme for the best essay on which the French Society for the Prevention of the Abuse of Tobacco offers a prize of one thousand francs.

Dr. Day, superintendent of the Washington Home, Boston, says that his experience sustains the views of others, that inebriety is increasing, and the insane types of inebriety are also increasing. This, he believes, is due in part to beer drinking and increased nervousness.

Surgeon Major Nathaniel Alcock, in the Lancet says: "The explanations hitherto offered of the action of altitude upon phthisis amount to three—greater expansion of the chest from aerial rarefaction, absence of bacterial organisms from the air, and general tonic effects."

N. Y. Tribune, October 18, 1884: Upon what does the success of the liquor traffic depend? Upon debased manhood, degraded womanhood and defrauded childhood. It holds a mortgage over every cradle; a deed, written in heart's blood over every human life. Shall mothers hear this and be silent? Shall fathers know this and remain silent?

The Appeal of Womanhood.

[Extract from an address by Mary T. Lathrop, of Michigan.]

I do not know what you may think of the woman's crusade, but let me say, as a woman that stood inside it, that the womanhood of this nation never laid such a tribute at the feet of its manhood. If you want to find out what a boy is worth, go and ask his mother. By the time she goes into the jaws of death to give him birth, and then puts into him her days of love and nights of cares, and he stands before her, strong and clean and tall at twenty-one, she can tell you what he is worth, from the crown of his head to the soles of his feet; and when the legalized dram-shop takes hold of him and tears him down, fiber by fiber, and puts oaths on the lips she used to kiss, and crushes out his mother's hopes, it is no wonder she makes outcry. If you want to know what home is worth, go and ask a loving woman who has kept herself as pure as God's lilies for her marriage day, when, with a great shine in her eyes she puts herself over into the hands of one man, for better or for worse, for richer or for poorer, until life's end. And when the dram-shop, with its fearful curse, crosses the threshold of the home they built together, and takes down her strong tower of hope, stone by stone, and degrades the father of her children it is no wonder woman makes outcry.

What was the woman's crusade? It was a long-smothered sob breaking into a cry; It was a midnight prayer coming abroad at noonday. You men sometimes say to us, as we stand in places like this, "Home is your kingdom." We do not dispute it; we know it better than you know it; but it was our kingdom that was outraged. You say to us, standing ballotless and defenseless before this vampire of our civilization, "You do not need the ballot; we defend you by love and law." Do you? When for eighty-five years, by well defined license legislation, motherhood has been uncrowned and her children slain by law, and you have made no protest against it! You have prayed about it in prayer meeting, but when it comes to the sweep of empire in the ballot-box and in political organizations, you have made no protest Oh! men, I do not believe a civilization is worth much that cannot protect its women and babies. And grand as you are and strong as you are and true as you are, you will never be able to protect your women and your children and the dram shop at the same time.

Oh! in shame, in very shame, either get up and strike down this enemy of the home and of wifehood and of childhood, or else put the ballot into the hand of your women for their own protection.

The Polk County Journal.

H. E. COOKE, Editor and Proprietor. DEVOTED TO THE WELFARE OF POLK COUNTY. TERMS---$1.50 Per Annum

VOL. XII. CROOKSTON, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, AUGUST 9. 1888. NO. 16

Polk County Journal.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES:

One Dollar and Fifty Cents, if paid in advance, to any address inside of Polk County. If outside of Polk County 15 cents must be added for postage. If not paid in advance $2 per annum to any address.

ADVERTISING RATES.

SPACE.	1 w.	2 w.	3 w.	1 m.	3 m	6 m.	1 year
¼ inch	$.50	$1 00	$1 25	$1 50	$3 00	4 50	$ 6 00
1 inch	75	1 25	1 75	2 00	4 50	6 00	10 00
2 inches	1 50	2 25	3 00	3 50	6 50	9 50	15 00
3 inches	1 75	2 75	3 75	4 50	9 50	13 50	20 00
4 inches	2 50	3 50	4 50	5 50	10 00	18 00	25 00
5 inches	3 00	4 00	5 00	6 00	12 50	20 00	30 00
¼ column	3 50	4 50	5 50	6 50	15 00	25 00	35 00
½ column	6 00	7 50	10 00	12 00	25 00	35 00	50 00
1 column	9 50	12 00	15 00	18 00	35 00	60 00	100 00

Entered at the Post Office in Crookston as Second Class matter.

MILLER, FOOTE & SWEATT,
ATTY'S-AT-LAW,
McKinnon Block, - - Crookston, Minn.

THE PIONEER
HARNESS SHOP,
M. RAUENBUEHLER, Proprietor.
A full supply of everything kept by the trade.
Cor of Broadway and Third Sts,
CROOKSTON, - - MINN

D. H. FISK,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND LOAN AGENT.
☞ Collections a Specialty. ☜
FERTILE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA.

P. C. SCHMIDT,
ATTORNEY AT LAW. | MONEY TO LOAN
Crookston - Minn

H. STENEERSON,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
Crookston, Minn.

FRANK IVES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
AND
Solicitor of Patents and Pensions,
CROOKSTON, MINN.

Having special arrangements with one of the most reputable and responsible firms of Patent Lawyers in Washington, I can offer better inducements to inventors than can be secured elsewhere, and absolute certainty against "leakage" of valuable facts pertaining to business entrusted to my care.

A. H. DUNLOP, M. D.,
Graduate McGill University, Montreal.
LICENSED COLLEGE PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON QUEBEC.
Office on Second Street, Crookston.

M. M. VAN DYKE,
Physician and Surgeon,
Office corner of Main and Second Streets,
CROOKSTON, - - MINNESOTA

A. A. JUST, M. D.,
Homoeopathic Physician and Surgeon,
Office on Broadway, east side, opposite Wm. Anglim's residence.

A. C. WILKINSON,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
(Successor to R. A. Wilkinson,)
Room 5, Furnet Block } Crookston, Minn.

M. LeGUEE,
Veterinary Surgeon.
Residence and office on Jerome's Addition.
CROOKSTON, - - - MINN.

G. G. HENAULT
Practical Dentist,
SECOND STREET,
CROOKSTON, - - MINN

OFFICE IN DOBSON'S BLOCK,
Over Mrs. Bangs' Fashionable Millinery Store.

☞ All work in my line skilfully and promptly performed. Give me a call.
G. G. HENAULT.

MINNESOTA HOUSE,
(FORMERLY BOX HOUSE.)
ONE-HALF BLOCK FROM DEPOT.
WM. HEIDRICH, - - Proprietor.
Having rented this Popular House and thoroughly re-fitted and re-furnished it throughout, I am now prepared to meet the wants of all who want good and cheap accommodations.
☞ Farmers custom specially invited,
Terms $1.00 per Day.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For President,
BENJ. HARRISON
Of Indiana.

For Vice President,
LEVI P. MORTON,
Of New York.

For Member of Congress, 5th District,
SOLOMON G. COMSTOCK,
Of Clay and Polk Counties.

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

A Republican State Convention for the state of Minnesota will be held on Wednesday, September 5th, 1888, in Market Hall, in the city of St. Paul, at 12 o'clock, noon, for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following positions:

Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.
One Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.
Governor.
Lieutenant Governor.
Secretary of State.
State Treasurer.
Attorney General.

And for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the convention.

All citizens who believe in the principles of the Republican party; who desire its success, and who will support the candidates nominated by the National Republican Convention held in Chicago, June 19th, 1888, are invited to co-operate in the election of delegates.

The counties are entitled to the following number of delegates and an equal number of alternates.

Aitkin	4	Martin	4
Anoka	5	Meeker	6
Becker	5	Mille Lacs	3
Beltrami	2	Morrison	4
Benton	3	Mower	7
Big Stone	4	Murray	4
Blue Earth	9	Nicollet	5
Brown	5	Nobles	4
Carlton	3	Norman	4
Carver	4	Olmsted	7
Cass	3	Otter Tail	11
Chippewa	4	Pine	3
Chisago	6	Pipe Stone	4
Clay	5	Polk	9
Cook	2	Pope	5
Cottonwood	4	Ramsey	20
Crow Wing	4	Redwood	4
Dakota	6	Renville	6
Dodge	5	Rice	8
Douglas	6	Rock	4
Faribault	6	St. Louis	10
Fillmore	9	Scott	3
Freeborn	7	Sherburne	4
Goodhue	12	Sibley	4
Grant	4	Stearns	6
Hennepin	38	Steele	6
Houston	6	Stevens	4
Hubbard	2	Swift	4
Isanti	5	Todd	5
Itasca	2	Traverse	4
Jackson	5	Wabasha	6
Kandiyohi	7	Wadena	4
Kanabec	8	Waseca	5
Kittson	3	Washington	7
Lac qui Parle	6	Watonwan	4
Lake	3	Wilkin	3
Le Sueur	5	Winona	8
Lincoln	4	Wright	8
Lyon	5	Yellow Medicine	5
McLeod	4		--
Marshall	4	Total	150

St. Paul, July 20, 1888.

JOHN S. PILLSBURY, Chairman.
JOEL P. HEATWOLE, Secretary.

☞ The Chairman or Secretaries of the different county conventions will please report to the Secretary of the State Central Committee, the names and post office address of the delegates and alternates, and also the county committeemen. If this is done promptly it will be of great service to the party, and insure prompt and active work. The State Committee request this kind favor of each county convention.

Republican County Convention.

A delegate convention of the Republican voters of Polk County, Minnesota, is hereby called to meet at the Court House, in the city of Crookston, in said county, on Wednesday, August 15th, '88, at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of electing 9 delegates, and 9 alternates to attend the 45th Republican Legislative Convention to be hereafter called, and for the purpose of electing 9 delegates and 9 alternates to attend the Republican State Convention, at St. Paul, Sept. 5th, 1888; also for the purpose of nominating the following county officers, to-wit:

Auditor.
Treasurer.
Register of Deeds.
Judge of Probate.
County Superintendent of Schools.
County Attorney.
Sheriff.
Court Commissioner.
Surveyor.
Coroner.
County Commissioners for the 1st, 3d and 5th districts.

The several election precincts in the county will be entitled to representation as follows, the basis of representation being one delegate for each election district and one delegate for each fifty votes, or a major fraction thereof, cast for the republican candidate for governor in 1886.

Andover	2	Lake Pleasant	1
Angus	1	Lessor	2
Black River	2	Lowell	2
Bygland	2	Louisville	1
Belgium	1	Liberty	1
Bristet	1	Numedal	1
Bray	1	Norden	2
Badger	2	Nesbit	1
Brandsvold	2	North	1
City of Crookston—		Northland	2
1st ward	2	Onstead	2
2d ward	3	Poplar River	1
3d ward	2	Polk Center	2
4th ward	4	Parnell	1
5th ward	1	Queen	2
Crookston	1	Red Lake Falls	1
Euclid	2	" " village	2
Emardville	1	Rocksbury	2
Fairfax	2	Roome	2
Fanny	1	Russia	1
Farley	1	Reis	2
Fisher	2	River Falls	1
Fisher, village	3	Rosebud	2
Gentilly	1	Sletten	2
Godfrey	2	Sanders	2
Grand Forks	2	Sullivan	2
Garden	3	Sandsville	1
Gervais	1	St. Hilaire village	2
Grove Park	2	Tabor	1
Garfield	3	Tilden	1
Huntsville	2	Terrebonne	1
Hammond	1	Tynsid	2
Hubbard	2	Vineland	2
Higdem	2	Winger	2
King	2	Wyandotte	1
Kertsonville	1	Woodside	2
Keystone	1	Hill River	2
Knute	2	Lambert	1

By Order of Republican County Committee.
Crookston, July 26, 1888.

H. E. IVES, Temporary Sec'y.
HOWARD LANKESTER, Chairman.

Tariff Reform.

The St. Paul Globe says: "The democratic party is the home of the tariff reformer." It is a very easy thing to make a bare-faced assertion like the above, but a very different thing to produce the proof to substantiate the assertion. In the common, ordinary affairs of life it is said that "actions speak louder than words." In the political management of the democratic party the rule holds especially true. They say they are tariff reformers but their actions show that they are not. During all the time that they have had control of that branch of congress wherein all bills upon the subject must originate, they have professed to be in favor of tariff reduction, yet they have never made a move in that direction until the emergencies of this campaign forced them to make some kind of a move, so they hatched up the Mills bill—a bill that is calculated to destroy protection to northern and protect southern industries. This shows that they are not sincere in their professions of reduction, that in reality, they dare not advocate free trade, for if free trade is such a very desirable thing why do they not apply it universally, in the south as well as the north? The Globe, as well as all democratic papers is very careful not to touch upon the attitude of its party on the sugar question but contents itself by the assertion that the democrats are the only paper in favor of tariff reform. The republican party does not do so much bragging but keeps steadily on in the honest endeavor to bring about a just and equitable tariff revision, consistent with an equitable protection to all American industries. The proof is plainly shown in its attitude on the sugar clause to the Mills bill, wherein the republicans demanded a reduction of one-half the tariff on sugar, in the attitude which such leaders as Garfield, Grant and others took upon the question. A party is known as much by its fruits as is a tree and the fruits of the democratic party so far have been as Dead Sea apples—unfit for use.

Will They Take Him Down.

Minneapolis Journal:

Brooks, the third party prohibition candidate for vice president, has shown his real purpose in joining the third party so clearly that there is talk of his being withdrawn from the ticket. He was a Missouri slave-holding preacher politician before the war, whose sympathies were all with the rebels, but whose courage was not strong enough to make a soldier of him. According to his own account, he followed the troops away when it got too hot for him at home. It is claimed that he was a confederate chaplain for a time and he makes his boasts that while Gen. Fiske was shooting one way, he was praying the other. If Brooks' prayers had been more effectual than Fiske's bullets the third party would never have had the opportunity he has now, and which he is using now for all it is worth, to abuse the party that crushed the rebellion he prayed for.

This blusterer and braggart, who thanks God that though he may have been a rebel and a slaveholder and a fire-eating democrat he never was a republican, is rather overdoing the thing. The reports from Illinois, where he has been taking his revenge on the republican party for depriving him of his slaves and whipping him back into the Union, are to the effect that the republican prohibitionists who had expected to vote the prohibition ticket, are thoroughly disgusted and are tearing off their Fiske and Brooks badges and declaring that they will never vote for such an unreconstructed rebel for vice president. The old soldiers are especially indignant that any party should dare to offer such a candidate for the suffrages of loyal men. The third party prohibitionists have done what the democrats themselves have not dared to do.

Why He Will Vote For Harrison.

Minneapolis Journal.

Some of our democratic contemporaries are a good deal disturbed by the organization of old soldiers' Harrison and Morton clubs and don't seem to like the idea of the veterans going into such organizations as soldiers. It is rather suggestive, it must be admitted, but then that can't be helped. It ain't the old soldiers' fault.

In the meantime the following letter from Maj. Isaac Hall, of Lewis county N. Y., one of the heroes of Gettysburg to a friend in Utica, has a bearing on this matter that may be worth considering.

"If I live I shall support Gen. Harrison at the coming election, for the simple reason that he is a soldier, and that I can vote with my personal friends. It doesn't make so much difference to me who is president as who my friends are, except that Harrison is a soldier, and Cleveland is no friend of the soldier. My democratic friends cannot now complain of my change of base. I have been a black sheep in their flock too long already on account of having been a soldier and helped to save the ground they walk upon. For the last 45 years I have supported every democratic presidential nominee, and every democratic county nominee. I am no politician, and have never asked nor received any favors of the democracy, nor of any other politician. This is not Jacksonian democracy. A soldier is an eyesore to a democratic politician of today. The South reward their soldiers, the Northern democracy desert theirs."

Maj. Hall says it does not make so much difference to him who is president as who his friends are. Is it any wonder that an old soldier should feel that way, under existing circumstances?

We have often heard the expression, "Why, he don't know whether he is afoot or horseback." If you want to see men and women in just this condition of mind, attend the Minneapolis Industrial Exposition and see the wonderful effects of hypnotism as practiced by Prof. Carpenter who so controls the mind of a subject that he possesses a "mental vision" only which to him transforms a broom into a child, and a chair into a red-hot stove, and so on ad infinitum.

The future of this Republic depends upon its educational institutions. The Sunday school is the great conservator of morals, and the lessons therein learned never fail to exert a beneficial influence all through life. No matter what the creed, the golden rule stands pre-eminent in all. Minneapolis proudly points to the many evidences of progress and enterprise which abound within her gates, but if she can gather (as those in charge promise to do) fifteen thousand (15,000) Sunday school children in the great Exposition building on "Floral Day, Tuesday, August 28th, she will score another point, quite as important as any that mark her path of glory, for it will show conclusively that in her race for financial and commercial prosperity, the moral education of her youth has not been neglected, but rather has received uncommon attention.

Nelson's Vote.

A Letter from ex-Lieutenant Governor Gilman on Nelson's Vote on the Mills Bill.

The following letter from the pen of ex-Gov. Gilman appears in the St. Cloud Journal-Press:

"By raising fine party points Mr. Nelson might have justified himself with his constituents had he voted against the passage of the Mills bill for reduction of the tariff; but he has chosen to act as heretofore in the direction of what he believed to be the wishes of a large majority of his constituents, to whom he is alone responsible, and in conformity with each of the three platforms upon which he has been elected to congress, as well as in the interest of his party in this district. Had he awaited the advent of a bill wholly to his mind he would have waited out his third term. His vote on this occasion was intended to be in line with all his votes upon the tariff question, for which he has been most emphatically endorsed by his district. Mr. Nelson is favorable to a reasonably protective tariff. It was, however, a foregone conclusion that if the Mills bill should be defeated there would be no tariff legislation this season. It was also certain that the Mills bill after passing the house could not pass the senate without the objectionable wool clause and other objectionable clauses being remedied. Mr. Nelson's vote in effect expressed what I personally know to have been his desire, to-wit: that the bill should go before the republican senate, where it might be properly amended, passed by that body and then returned to the house of representatives for its concurrence. Should that point be reached and the house concur, Mr. Nelson's district, to which he is responsible, will probably obtain the "material and judicious reduction of the tariff," it has instructed Mr. Nelson to secure. Should the senate act as indicated, and the house refuse to concur through democratic opposition, then that party will be held responsible. In either case Mr. Nelson understands that he is doing what he was sent there to do and that it is not his fault that others than his party associates originated and supported the measure in question. Most of his constituents care but little regarding the origin of a measure which they understand reduces their burdens of taxation, and their expectations have been such that they would hardly have been satisfied had Mr. Nelson contented himself with criticising and objecting to the propositions of the other party without himself taking or recommending any affirmative action. The republicans may have cause to rejoice that the Mills bill is where Mr. Nelson's vote has helped to put it.

Yours truly, C. A. GILMAN.

Minneapolis Journal: "Minnesota will be found in the democratic column this year," says a southern democratic paper. There will be Minnesota votes in the democratic columns, of course, because democrats are allowed to do everywhere in Minnesota what republicans are not allowed to do in many portions of the South; but it is because there is this freedom of the ballot in Minnesota that there is no danger of Minnesota being found on the democratic side.

We can loan money on better terms than anyone else in the valley. Money paid over the moment securities are executed. STEENERSON & McMANUS.

Babyhood for August is, as usual, full of seasonable hints and practical advice to young mothers. In the department of "Nursery Problems" alone a great variety of interesting topics may be found, such as "Sucking the Tongue," "Quinine as a Cause of Deafness," "Slow Gain in Weight," "Throwing up Milk After Nursing," "Coated Tongue," "Rings Under the Eyes," "Time for Weaning," "Slow Teething," etc. It is very desirable that Babyhood, whose many useful suggestions and careful medical advice make it indispensable to every young mother, should be found in every nursery, and persons willing to aid in extending Babyhood's usefulness will find it a pleasant and profitable task. The publishers offer unusual inducements to energetic canvassers. 15 cents a number; $1.50 per year. Babyhood Publishing Company, 5 Beekman Street, New York.

The Servant Question.

It is probably quite safe to say that of all perplexing questions which arise in the life of the average house-keeper, nothing is more perplexing, or a source of more anxiety of thought, than the servant question, and any help to the solution of this will certainly be welcomed; therefore we commend the pamphlet just issued; "The Servant Question; a View of the Inner Side," by H. S. Drayton, editor of the Phrenological Journal, containing hints on the choosing and governing of servants, and giving very definite information in regard to the understanding of their characters and dispositions from the form of the head and face and other external manifestations. Dr. Drayton writes from a practical point of view, and not only does he give suggestions in regard to the selection of servants, but the points made in regard to the management of this part of the household are especially apparent to all who have experience with household affairs. As if to insure its being read by the entire class for whom it is intended, the price is made 10 cents, which may be sent in stamps, to Fowler & Wells Co., Publishers, 775 Broadway, New York.

"The Writer" to be Enlarged.

So great has been the success of The Writer, the Boston magazine for literary workers, that its publishers propose to enlarge it in January, at the beginning of the next volume, and to increase the price to two dollars a year. The Writer was started only a year and a half ago, but it has already made itself a permanent place among the standard monthly magazines. It is earnest, practical, bright, helpful and interesting, and it stands unique as the only periodical in the world devoted to discussing the practical details of literary production. Its conductors, William H. Hills and Robert Luce, are both trained newspaper men, and the contents of the magazine are full of that practical common sense which is always the distinguishing characteristic of successful newspaper workers. Articles in the August number, for instance, warn writers against dependence on "moods," show them a practical "Use for Scrap-Books," make a critical analysis of 'Newspaper Information and Editorial Preferences," sets forth "Some Mistakes of Would Be Authors," and discuss "Ideas, and How They Are Discovered,' with other interesting topics. Puzzling questions about all sorts of practical matters connected with literary work are answered in an interesting way, and a score of "Helpful Hints and Suggestions" to writers are given. There is also a unique reference list of about 120 "Literary Articles in Periodicals" printed during July. The present price of The Writer is 10 cents a number; one dollar a year. Address The Writer, P. O. Box 1905, Boston, Mass.

First National Bank
OF CROOKSTON

PAID IN CAPITAL, - $100,000
SURPLUS, - - $11,000

Money to loan on long or short time on approved security.
Interest on time deposits. Faithful attention to Collections and prompt remittance.

GEO. Q. ERSKINE, President.
WM. ANGLIM, Vice President.
CHAS. E. SAWYER, Cashier

DIRECTORS:
Wm. Anglim, K. D. Chase, R. D. Childs,
Geo. Q. Erskine, S. F. Markham, H. M. Pierce
E. M. Walsh, John Moore, W. H. Crosby,
Chas. E. Sawyer.

THE OFFICE OF
COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS
WIL BE OPEN
EVERY SATURDAY.
RESIDENCE—With D. N. Taylor, Esq., Broadway.

The Minnesota Loan and Trust Co.
HAVE ESTABLISHED AN AGENCY AT CROOKSTON.
☞ MONEY LOANED ON IMPROVED FARMS,
IN ANY PART OF THE RED RIVER VALLEY.
NO DELAY! NO BONUS!
Money Supplied the Moment Notes are Signed. Letters of inquiry promptly answered.
STEENERSON & McMANUS, Agents,
Two doors South of U. S. Land Office. CROOKSTON, MINN

HARMLESS SPUR WIRE
FENCING.
Cannot injure or tear stock. Comparatively cheapest fencing made. Is endorsed by every one who uses it, Strongest, most visible and only safe fence.
☞ SEND FOR CIRCULARS AND PRICES. ☜
IN USE IN MANY OF THE STATES AND TERRITORIES.
Manufactured by the
LARM MANUFACTURING CO.,
Cor. Clinton and Van Buren Sts., Chicago, Ill.
For Sale by G. M. Barber, Second Street.

C. H. SAAKE,
Practical Watchmaker and Jeweler.
I HAVE NOW IN MY Store the Largest, Best and Cheapest stock of JEWELRY,
CLOCKS,
SILVERWARE
ever offered at retail. There is positively no store in Crookston that can compare with my magnificent line of Goods.
NO BANKRUPT STOCK,
No goods tarnished by snare or deceit, but Honest Goods bought direct from the best manufacturers, with clean, solid cash. Do not forget name and place!
C. H. SAAKE, Main Street, Opposite Merchants' Nat'l Bank

JUST RECEIVED, ONE CARLOAD
Wagons and Buggies
FROM RACINE WAGON AND BUGGY COMPANY.
We venture to say without fear of contradiction that this is the finest car of goods, in the Buggy line, ever brought into Crookston.
NO SNIDE OR BANKRUPT STOCK,
The real Simon Pure Racine Manufacture.
WE can please the most fastidious in style and finish, and we guarantee every Buggy sold. We ask our customers, and the public generally, to give us a call, if they want a first-class Buggy or Wagon at bottom prices. Our Platform, Spring and Delivery Wagons are Real Beauties.
A FULL STOCK OF
Farm Machinery and Implements
CONSTANTLY ON HAND.
McKINNON BRO'S,
McKinnon Block, - - - - - - - - - - Main Street.

Polk County Journal.

W. G. COOKE, Publisher.

ROOKSTON, MINN., AUGUST 9.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

'Round Home.

Wheat, No. 1 Hard, 69 cents.

Miss Mary L. Ayers returned home on Thursday's belated train.

Miss Hattie Page came up for a few day's visit in the city, last week.

Rev. Mr. Griffith was over from Casselton, last week, visiting his family.

Mr. Geo. Q. Erskine started on Sunday on a week's trip to Racine, Wis.

Cashier Hanson, of the Merchants', took a trip to the Saintly city last week.

C. G. Rapp, Harry Ives and Sam Dayner were down from St. Hilaire last week.

Mrs. L. H. Judson, of the fifth ward, is entertaining her niece, Miss Jessie Campbell.

Yvernault is brightening up his place a bit by the use of paint, robbing it of its former funereal aspect.

Jas. A. Miller and son, of Hammond, took a business and pleasure trip to Dakota a few days since.

Miss Annie Hanna, teacher in district 74, brought her scholars to the city last week to have their pictures taken.

Passengers on the Manitoba report crops in an advanced stage as far north as Barnesville, some being cut even north of that point.

The city band, with H. F. Brown as business manager, and Gallagher as leader, is being drilled to quite a high standard of excellence.

The ladies of the Norwegian Lutheran church gave an ice cream festival in the old post office building, Wednesday evening of last week.

James A. Tyler, a Minneapolis contractor, passed through the city on Friday evening's train, having put in a fifty barrel flour mill at Argyle.

Anne Milne, who has been attending her sister's school near Gentilly, was taken quite sick last week, but soon recovered with careful nursing.

Some of our readers will be pleased to learn that Rev. B. F. Bronson, lately of this city, has improved in health and strength since moving to St. Paul.

Our boys and childrens department replete with all the novelties of the season. Parents will do well to look us over before purchasing.

C. O. D. Clothing House.

The proposed plan of placing a Lutheran church on the lot adjoining the Baptist church, will not be carried out the Baptists having secured the lot.

A. W. Thornton, for several years a resident of the fifth ward, has been engaged for a few weeks past in traveling for the Minnesota Fire Association.

While loading heavy timbers into a car, for Jas. Sheasgren, Joe Bergen los his balance and strained his back so seriously as to compel him to take a layoff.

The Standard Oil Co's tank house, on the hill, is rapidly nearing completion, and will be a neat, substantial building of considerable size, 60,000 brick being used in its construction.

Dan McDonald's sisters, Mrs. Marshall, of Bismarck, and Miss Ellen, of Ada, were visiting with Dan's family last week and went from here to visit their brothers at Turtle River, D. T.

A school district has this year been organized in the town of Crookston, north of the city, and present indications are that a house will be built this fall and a short term of school taught.

John J. Dahl, with three of his neighbors, came in from the town of King last week for the purpose of ordering a steam thresher with which to shell out their big crop he predicts for that locality.

Do your trading at the C. O. D. Clothing House and save money.

Last Thursday, J. H. Pratt, while coupling cars at Angus, had his hand badly hurt. Just as he made the coupling his foot slipped, and in saving himself from falling, he forgot his hand which followed the link. The first two fingers and thumb were badly crushed. He came to Crookston and placed himself in the hands of Dr. Dampier, who thinks the fingers can be saved. Mr. Pratt is an old railroader, having been a freight conductor and locomotive foreman, and was putting in time breaking until he could have a run of his own.

In our last issue, we mentioned the action of certain "enterprising youths" who give their own rowdyish inclinations precedence over the laws of decency and the city. At the reception last Wednesday evening they kept up their record, taking a bolder stand than ever before, utterly disregarding the requests or commands of gentlemen having authority to make such commands, to retire, even after being liberally treated to the best fruit to be had. Things have come to a pretty pass in Crookston, when a social affair, representing some of the best society in the city, can be disturbed by a band of hoodlums so reckless in their demonstrations as to strike tin pans against the house and hoot through the open doors and windows at the inmates. It is high time some action was taken to prevent such disturbances, and, judging from the talk of some of our most prominent citizens, the boys have about "reached the end of their rope."

D. Jacobus has returned from a visit to St. Paul and Faribault.

John McLean informs THE JONRNAL that his mother is doing nicely since the operation on her eyes.

Mat Ruedy and family returned from Ashland, Wis., this week, satisfied that Polk County is good enough for them.

The W. C. T. U. of this district will hold their annual convention, at Ada August 16th and 17th. The clergy are, specially invited to attend.

Jas. McNulty represented Tilden in the city this week. He says that, owing to too much rain Polk County will net get more than a two-thirds yield of wheat.

Fred Date was in from Maple Bay Tuesday to remark that (down here) we don't need any more rain—and we are prepared to vouch for the correctness of the assertion.

Mrs. E. E. Bangs reports the safe arrival of herself and Miss Gorman at Helena on the 4th inst. Mrs. B. did not stand the journey very well and was tired and sick upon her arrival.

A short time since THE JOURNAL mentioned a difficult surgical operation that Dr. LeGuee performed on one of Bill Welsh's dray horses. On Monday we saw the horse at work apparently as well as ever.

Mrs. Julia B. Nelson, vice presiden of the state W. C. T. U. will speak in the Baptist church next Sunday evening at eight o'clock. Mrs. Nelson is a fine speaker and will undoubtedly have a crowded house.

On Monday morning Peter Cornelius was smiling all over his genial countenance when he informed our reporter that a "little 14 pound girl" came to live with him on Sunday. We should not call that so awful little.

J. F. Holmes drove down from Red Lake Falls on Tuesday just to show off a new three-year-old he has bought (and take in the democratic convention on the side). J. F. is a "Farmer" from away back—admits it himself!

We satisfy all our customers, we ask no bonus, and we pay over money on loans the moment notes are signed.

STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

Ed. Carey announces himself a candidate for the republican nomination for sheriff. Mr. Carey is a well known business man of Polk County, and should the lightning strike his rod would no doubt make a good official.

Mrs. Z. Daoust and three children, started this week for a visit to her old home in Montreal, Canada, where her oldest boy is attending college. Her eldest daughter will enter school there.

THE JOURNAL is informed that all of Charles Vance's children are down with diphtheria. Charlie seems to have a great deal of sickness in his family to contend with lately. The cases in the city so far reported have all been of very mild type, very few cases resulting fatally.

Gallasch and Ellingston were very much disconcerted to find, when they essayed to lock up for the night that the lock was broken and wouldn't lock worth a cent. At a late hour we saw them hard at work upon it with an experienced locksmith, bound to lock that door that night if they had to work till morning to accomplish it.

D. Berthiaume was over to the west side last week to see the boys and talk some politics. He says there are but few democrats over there and those few will all vote the republican ticket as far as county officers are concerned. He dropped across the ruby a minute to chat with old friends and found Grand Forks to be a mighty good place—to leave.

Z. Daoust, since closing out his hotel business, has been agent for the Minnesota Fire Association. He desires to return thanks to all old patrons and friends for past favors and to invite a continuance of the same in his new line. He says that his travels about this country more than ever convince him of its stability and inherent worth. In his humble opinion we have the best country on earth.

A small urchin of the city was asking his father for a political cap, declaring he wanted one with Cleveland and Morton's names on it, "they were going to be elected next fall." When questioned as to his authority, he replied: "I heard a man say so down to Herb's!" That's the way with a good many who wear a black band on their hats, but they'll find a man's saying so won't make Cleveland president.

Mr. W. S. Hawes has accepted a position in Duluth as time-keeper for the Corrigan Brothers, at a salary of $3 per diem, and left for his new field of labor on Monday. He will be employed upon the docks, and, if he is suited, will remain permanently. Mrs. Hawes goes home to New York for a summer's visit at the old home. We are sorry to see such men as Mr. H. leave this new country, but rejoice with him in his good fortune.

On Saturday last a span of Steege's bronchos got away from him, near the Commercial Hotel, and lit out down Broadway at full speed. At the bridge they dashed through back lots and one of them ran behind the Norwegian church, jumping the sidewalk onto Ash, ran across it and jumped the opposite ditch and sidewalk, making a leap of about 40 feet and landed in the weeds on head and shoulders. For a time it seemed to be hurt internally so badly as to render recovery impossible, but later it was brought up to the stables and was alive at 6 p. m.

Mrs. W. A. Robertson is away on a visit to Fargo, the guest of Mrs. Chas. Sweatt.

Big bargains in summer goods—Lawns, Sateens, Straw Hats, at the New York Store.

Red Lake Falls Gazette: A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Carl Kretzschmar Monday morning.

It is said that Mrs. Robert Houston does not like the far away western country, and that she is trying to persuade Robert to come back to America to live.

Dr. Buckman, of St. Paul, last Friday performed an operation upon Mrs. George McLean's eyes and it is hoped that the old lady's eyesight may be fully restored.

Overcoats for fall wear in Worsteds, Kerseys, Meltons. Look our line over while on your shopping tour.

C. O. D. Clothing House.

M. J. Darling started for Tacoma last week to look after his business interests. Mrs. D. will spend the winter there. M. J. expects to be back here again before winter.

Miss Millie Phillips went to Barnesville last week and joined the excursionists who went from that place to Geneva Beach, where the Alexandria people met them and a grand picnic ensued. She reports a splendid trip.

The Kittson County Enterprise entered its seventh year last week. The Enterprise starts in right by heartily supporting the republican ticket. This was the only thing needed to make of it one of the best local papers in the Northwest.

Our assortment of French, Scotch and domestic flannel shirts never more complete styles and prices correct.

C. O. D. Clothing House.

On Monday p. m. a little girl went into Fred Anderson's and ordered five cents worth of candy. While Ed. Greenhalgh, the clerk, was getting the candy, she swallowed the nickel. Ed. says she turned pale with fright, but seemed none the worse for it otherwise.

Elsewhere in this issue appears the call for the prohibition county convention, which is published as a matter of regular advertising business at legal rates. Upon the basis of that call the number of delegates that may obtain admission is unlimited, susceptable to indefinate, expansion.

G. D. Francis has something new in the line of photography—two-thirds life-size portraits, richly framed in gilt, which he is furnishing at the remarkably low price of five dollars each. You can see specimens of this work in the down stairs windows of the block occupied by him, corner of Broadway and Robert.

Kittson County Enterprise: Mr. A. C. Smith, an ornamental painter from Crookston, was in Hallock on Tuesday and Wednesday, and secured a large amount of work and will return to this place with his crew of men on Monday. Mr. Smith is an artist in his profession, and those wishing good work should give him a call.

Toby Valaer has returned from Ashland, Wis., satisfied that there are many worse places than Crookston. Tob says that Moser & Moeckel are doing a fair business and making some money in their brewery and that Siebel, who used to live here, is doing very well, also. Toby thinks he is perfectly satisfied with this country.

C. H. Saake, our enterprising jeweler, will open a branch store at Stephen, in Marshall County. We can assure the good people of Stephen that they have secured a jewel of a jeweler, as Saake is one of the best and most honorable workmen in the business. We trust that he will receive all of the patronage he deserves, which is an unlimited amount.

Full line of hosiery, gloves, underwear in endless variety.

C. O. D. Clothing House.

Red Lake Falls Gazette: D. D. Williams went to Crookston Tuesday, to try as plaintiff's attorney, a Northern Pacific indemnity land case. The settler will probably win the case in the local land office, and the decision will be appealed to the department of the interior at Washington. As, by mutual consent, this is made a test case, the the final issue will be watched with much interest.

THE JOURNAL was slightly in error last week as to the finding of the body of Chris. Lockrem. It seems that it was James Greenalgh's little boy, Willie, who found it. The boy has a set line across the river and is in the habit of visiting it morning, noon and night, so after dinner on Wednesday he went, as usual to his line where he found the body caught fast to the line. He at once ran to the house and acquainted father who bade him run and inform the men who were in search of the body. He did so and upon their arrival they found it difficult to get the body out at that point so procuring a boat, one of them towed the body down to Barrette's landing, the others coming to town to acquaint Mr. Childs and procure a coffin. Upon viewing the remains, it was found impossible to ship them below, so they were put into a neat coffin and interred in the new cemetery about midnight. The body of Torger was laid beside his brother at 10 a. m. on Thursday. Their brother, Andrew, made arrangements with F. T. Haseltine to plant some trees about the graves. By the Index, we see that Torger had lived in Norman County, where he had made many warm personal friends who mourn his early death.

Wedding Bells.

The marriage of Robert Leick to Miss Clara Larock occurred on Wednesday evening, August 1, 1888, in the Congregational Church. A large gathering of invited guests awaited the coming of bridal party who, at a little after the appointed time, entered the church and proceeded, as Prof Linberg played the Wedding March, to the altar in the following order:

Mr. and Mrs. Hitchcock; Mr. Crawford and Miss Flanders; the Bride and Groom.

The ceremony was performed in a simple and earnest manner by the pastor, Mr. Medlar, after which they proceeded to the residence of the newly wedded pair, on the corner of Fourth and Elm. Arriving at the house, Mr. and Mrs. Leick were presented to the parents of the bride, by the ushers, Messrs Hall and Carruth, after which, the groomsmen and ushers brought refreshments, consisting of cream, cake and fruit The remainder of the evening was devoted to the expression of good will by hosts of friends and the bestowal of numerous suitable and costly presents, a list of which we give below:

One silver castor, two silver butter dishes, silver spoon holder, sett silver knives and forks, two setts silver fruit knives, sett silver nut picks and cracker, two setts silver teaspoons, sett silver table spoons, silver mounted carving sett, silver flower vase, two silver butter knives, silver sugar spoon, two silver fork and knife holders, silver cream pitcher, silver pie knife, gold watch and chain, $5 gold piece, glass water sett, two glass flower vases, twelve napkins and table cloth (colored), six white napkins, twelve white napkins, fancy tea pot, real china tea sett—sugar bowl, cream pitcher and tea pot, cut glass fruit dish, picture and frame, large book—"Mountain, Lake and River, fancy glass cream pitcher, two glass flower vases, china grape dish, elegant marble clock, sett tumblers, glass butter dish, glass fruit dish, pin cushion, two silver cake baskets, silver tooth pick holder, box fancy work.

Mike Schuler has returned from the oil regions in New York. He says that business is all O. K. yet, all that is needed being a little more capital and somebody to push things. He intends to see what can be done about it.

The new band acquitted itself creditably on Tuesday evening.

Call at Mrs. E. E. Bangs' Millinery Parlors for Mrs. Ozias' Celebrated Orange Cream for the toilet. [14-tf]

John McLaughlin reports the death of his wife's mother, which event occurred at her home in Mentor, on August 4th.

C. Riedesel, Helland's shoemaker, showed our reporter some number 13's he was building, but neglected to say who would occupy them.

The case of Corrigan vs Tarbell, on trial as we went to press last week, resulted in disagreement. The Jury could not unanimously decide the question.

We loan money to pay up railroad lands.

STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

Louis Cuillierier was down from Louisville with vegetables on Wednesday. He finds time to mix in a little gardening with wheat raising to good advantage.

The parade on Tuesday evening was quite a showy affair, over 100 torches being in line. The most appropriate motto they had—"Vote for Cleveland," took fire and burned up early in the tramp.

We have only one note and mortgage we make a loan the day applied for, charge no bonus, and make interest payable at our office in Crookston.

STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

Mrs. I. U Jennings will sell Millinery at less than cost for the next twenty days. [13-tf]

I desire to announce myself a candidate for the office of sheriff of Polk County, subject to the decision of the Republican County Convention to be held on the 15th inst.

EDWARD CARY.

In the parade, on Tuesday evening, appeared the following transparencies: On one side was "monopolists can protect themselves." on the other, "down with free whiskey." The bearer of this strange device had apparently paid more attention to the latter than anything else, in fact, so top-heavy had the mottoes become that he had to be excused from duty before the end of the parade.

On all loans we make, interest payable at our office in Crookston.

STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

Having filled the office of Sheriff of Polk County for the past two years, I hereby announce myself a candidate renomination, subject [illegible] the decision of he Republican county convention, to be held on August 15th, 1888.

NELS O. PAULSRUD.

The M. E. entertainment at McKinnon Hall on Friday evening, was a pleasant affair and a success financially as well as otherwise. Miss Hale entertained the audience with choice selections recited in her own inimitable style. Mrs. T. Adams sang, the dollys appeared on dress parade and J. W. Wheeler favored the audience with a song, which, as it was rendered better than we could have done it ourself, we consider excellently well done. Miss H. may favor us with another visit 'ere she returns east, and she may be sure of a warm welcome.

100 100

CHOICE RESIDENCE LOTS

IN JEROME'S ADDITION!

Nearer the Business Center than any other Lots now for sale over there.

Above High Water Mark. Good Cellars and Good Wells

Easily Obtained. If you want a Building Lot, or if you desire a chance for investment where you can double your money inside of a year. It will pay you to look into this chance to

BUY AT YOUR OWN FIGURES, PRACTICALLY!

M. R. BROWN.

IT PAYS

TO TRADE WITH

BARNES & SLOCUM,

CASH DEALERS IN

Groceries and Crockery.

Get their prices and you will say so.

McKinnon Block, Robert St., Crookston.

Thursday evening, August 2d, marks another "gala day" in the history of the Salmagundi Club—an event that will long be a treasured recollection to those of the members of the Club who had sufficient courage to brave the threatening rain and rough and muddy roads—an event full of merriment and pleasure, the loss of which will always be regretted by the "weak hearted" who staid at home "for fear of getting wet," as well as by those who were per force of circumstances deprived of the enjoyment of a delightful entertainment. Mr. and Mrs. S. M. McKee had kindly tenderad the freedom of their always hospitable and cozy farm home to the Salmagundi for their regular meeting, accompanying the invitation with the tempting reques to take tea with them. Thursday, it rained as usual, and the anticipation of a delightful drive and happy meeting faded from the hearts of well-nigh all. Towards evening, however, it ceased raining, but the clouds were still threatening and few dared think of venturing out so far as "McKee's" on a night like that. Not so with all, however. About 5.30 p. m. a carriage, containing Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler, Dr. and Mrs. Robertson and Miss Maggie Brown, was discovered speeding out of the city headed for the North Pole. The meaning of this was not difficult to interpret; and they were soon followad by Mr. and Miss Kelso, Messrs Mix and Rogers in another carriage, apparently possesed of a strong determination to overtake the leaders, which by the way, proved a vain effort until the destination was reached. But the next and last to follow was not a carriage. More than thirty minutes after the last carriage had disappeared in the horizon, a "lone horseman, mounted on a sturdy steed," was seen swiftly galloping northward, horse and rider plainly intent upon crowding miles into the fewest minutes possible, and the shout of joy that hailed them at their destination, was a welcome to be proud of—the horseman was young Mr. Milne. To comply with the invitation and the wishes of the host and hostess, the program was modified for the evening, as the following brief synopsis of it shows: (1) Supper. (2) Music—instrumental—by Messrs. Wheeler, Kelso and Milne. (3) Paper—Mark Twain—Mr. Mix. (4) Singing—Male Chorus. (5) Reading—The Duel—Mr. Wheeler. (6) Chorus Singing—The Club.

The great feature of the evening was the supper—a magnificent, excellent, delicious supper—enjoyed as seldom ever supper was enjoyed before. The paper on Mark Twain, by Mr. Mix, also deserves special mention. It was an able effort, entertaining and instructive, and compelled the closest attention and received well merited applause. Happiness and merriment reigned throughout the whole entertainment and it was not until a late hour that the journey homeward was thought of. The night was a dark one, and had not the beaming countenances of a delighted party lighted the way, the drive home would have been both dreary and difficult. But with so much happiness aboard, it could be nothing but a pleasure trip to the end, as Mr. Mix, who acted as conductor, can testify. The Salmagundi extends to Mr. and Mrs. McKee hearty thanks for the deep interest they manifest in its welfare and prosperity generally, and especially for the charming treat accorded it on the evening of August 2d.

The Lost Girl.

On Monday afternoon, August 8th Oleanna Abrahamson, aged four years and six months, daughter of Bernt Abrahamson, was lost on the prairie in the town of Russia two miles east of Russia Station. With an older sister she was looking for the cows and becoming tired sat down to rest while the older sister continued the search. Upon her return to the spot where she left her little sister she was no where to be found and although diligent search was made by the anxious parents and friendly neighbor no trace of the little one was ever found though the search was continued for weeks at intervals, until winter. On Thursday, August 2d, Mr. O. S. Johnson was mowing in a slough, about one mile from where the little girl was last seen, when he came upon some bones and some clothing, and thinking that it might afford a clue to the mystry of the lost girl he notified Mr. Abrahamson who recognized the petticoat, which was in a state of almost perfect preservation, as the one worn by his little girl at the time she was lost. From the appearance of things it is the impression that the girl wandered into the slough and was drowned though how the poor little lost girl met her death can never be more than a conjecture. The finding of the remains, however, establishes the fact of her death beyond a peradventure and relieves the friends of the fear that she might have been carried away by Indians.

Best residence lots in the city and on your own terms; mind, ON YOUR OWN TERMS.

STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

One of "Uncle Sam's boys in blue" passed through the city last week en route for a new station in Washington Territory. He came from New Orleans and complained of Minnesota weather as being too cold for comfort.

Those enterprising clothiers, Rosenthal & Wile, come to the front with a big announcement this week. They are always on deck to supply your wants and are not afraid to use printers' ink freely to inform you of the fact. Call 'round and see 'em.

Last Sunday, a terrible accident occurred at the residence of Andrew Carlson, near the railroad bridge, by which his little boy, three and a half years of age was fatally burned. It seems he and a five years-old cousin being left alone, filled a pipe with sawdust, and lighted it. In some way fire from the pipe fell upon the little fellow's clothing and in an instant he was enveloped in flames. Assistance reached him too late to prevent his being so fearfully burned that death ensued on Tuesday afternoon about 4 o'clock.

The following account of the business of the United States land office, shows up pretty well.

53 Cash Entries embracing...	5110 17
51 Preemption filings "......	6377 00
53 Homestead Entries "......	7980 33
277 Final Homesteads "......	42824 89
14 Timber Culture Entries...	1632 89
Total Cash receipts..............	10344 17

A Card.

I desire to announce to the voters of Polk County that I am candidate for nomination for County Attorney of Polk County, all rumors to the contrary notwithstanding, subject to the approval of the Polk County republican convention.

HALVOR STEENERSON.

Fall Stock

—OF—

Men's,

Boys'

AND Children's

CLOTHING

ARRIVING

DAILY!

Desirable

Styles!

Standard

Quality!

Lowest

Prices!

It Pays to Trade at the

C. O. D.

Clothing House.

THE LOVE OF CALIBAN.

From the San Francisco Argonaut.

The room of the Lady Lucrece was full of cool shaddows, though it was mid-summer, and the purple-bordered linens at the windows swayed in the hot wind. There were purple-bordered linens, too, on the couch where the Lady Lucrece lay—one can not do much at noontide in Pisa when it is mid-summer. The heavens seemed to hang down near to the languorous earth; a palpitant white heat shimmered on the streets; the lazaroni slept; at the bath-houses the attendants went about in shifts of linen; the shops and the stores were silent; it was too hot even to hate. If one had a vengenance to take he waited till nightfall, when it should be cooler. And the Lady Lucrece, fragrant from her bath, lay on her couch amid the fresh linens, and sprinkled powder on her breasts to keep the moisture from gathering there.

As the long day wasted itself in languid hours the lady smiled, although it was not her wont.

"How many hours till moonlight?" she asked of her maid.

"Six and more, gracious mistress," replied the maid, drowsily; and she wiped her forehead upon her sleeve.

"Ah," sighed the Lady Lucrece, "bring in Massimiliani."

A moment later a queer, haltingstep was heard on the tiled floor in the hall outside. The curtains at the door were the green which the sea wears in the morning. They parted, and Massimiliani stood between them. Had nature had her way he would have been tall, but some mysterious force had bent him almost double, and his humped shoulders and heavy head hung always toward the earth. He was not merely grotesque, he was hideous. There are men that nature has jested with; Massimiliani she had cursed. He made a salutation with his hands—he could bend no lower.

"I am forever bowing," he said to his mistress. "My grace was so great the first time I had occasion to make a salute to a lady, that I never was allowed to rise."

"Who was the lady?" queried his mistress, shutting her eyes as he stood before her.

"The only woman with whom I shall ever lie—Mother Earth." He looked straight down at Lady Lucrece. She did not cover her bosom—why should she for Massimiliani?—no one counted him a man. He was as free to come and go as the spaniel that lay upon the rugs.

"I do not want gibes this afternoon," said his mistress. Massimiliani spread out his huge dark hands and smiled.

"Then my gracious lady did not send for me?"

"Send for you? Yes, I sent for you?"

"It cannot be. You have forgotten. For what am I but a gibe? It cannot be a question of wisdom, or it would not lie between a woman and a fool. Perhaps it was a matter of grace, and you want me to dance, or a matter of beauty, and you wish me to smile, or a question of sweet sounds, and you wish me to sing."

The Lady Lucrece sat up and put the damp hair back from her brow.

"I had sooner hear a chorus of ravens," she said, but she laughed as she said it. No one minded Massimiliani, and she pulled at the end of his long, hanging sleeve to make him squat upon the floor by her feet, which he did with a mocking gesture.

"Princes have been here before me," said he.

The lady looked haughty, but she was not ill-pleased.

"It does not relate to singing," said she.

Massimiliani leaped to his feet and seized some roses that lay at the foot of the couch.

"The flowers!" he cried, and flung them from the casement.

His mistress stared at him in amazement.

"From the Lord Ascanio," she replied mechanically.

"There was a tarantula among them. Are you so good, madam, that your lovers must send you to heaven?"

"Fool!" cried the lady, angrily, "there was no tarantula among the roses."

Massimiliani sat down again upon the floor.

"Go on with your tale," said he, "I am no greater fool than I was before."

The Lady Lucrece sat pondering, with her elbows on her knees, and her flushed cheek in her hands.

"Fool," said the Lady Lucrece, and her breath came faster, "you have not heard, have you——"

"God gave me straight ears, the saints be thanked," the jester sardonically interrupted.

"——Night after night, since the summer came, a voice below my window? It always comes when the shadow of the balcony hides his figure."

"That he may not see your face, if you lean out, and so lose his inspiration!" interjected the dwarf. The lady struck him on the ear with her jeweled hand. The blow was light, but the dwarf shivered. "The voice," said he, "what was it like?" The lady fell back again into her old attitude. The flowing sleeves dropped from her arms. The loose strings of pearls with which they were wreathed, tumbled down to her elbows. Massimiliani spread himself flat upon the floor, and bracing his heavy head against his hands, watched her as a tiger does his prey.

"Ah, fool! I think you know I never loved. Men are so little, I could rule them all; I do not want a man that I can rule. But his voice—it sings of war, of great deeds, terrible and grand. And yet, Massimiliani, it sings of love—of love which counts power, and money, and name as nothing. It does not sue for love; it demands it as a right. The verses which he sings are no other man's; they are his own, and he weaves them as he sings. He does not mind that I am great, he loves me for my soul, he loves me for my pride, for my will, for my scorn of pretty things. He knows me as I am. He is the first living creature who has ever done so. It mounts—this voice—up to my lattice like a vine. It runs through gay melodies like rippling water. It grows as sad as the voice of the night-bird. I weep when it sings of death; I throw up my arms and walk the room, strong as a giant, when it sings of war, and when it sings of love, fool, I bury my face in my arms and blush. All day I lie and dream of it, and in my sleeping dreams at night I hear naught but it. I dream how we shall meet and where. I am sure he must be beautiful."

A sound from the man at her feet caused her to stop. The fool had rolled on his back in a convulsion of laughter, and the tears trickled down his cheeks.

"Fool!" cried the lady, springing from the couch in anger.

"Mother of God!" exclaimed the dwarf. "Will the eternal snows melt and desert the blossom? Will the tower fall? Shall I be straight? Will God take pity? Will my lady love?" He threw his jangling punchinello at her feet, and tore his cap from his head. "Wear them," he cried, "my bauble and my cap! I never cracked so excellent a jest."

"Slave!" The lady grew pale with rage. "To-morrow, you shall see, for I shall find which of my courtiers it is that sings thus, and I will marry him and none but him."

"None but him, gracious lady? And all these perfumed knights that have been praying to you while moons grew great and faded into sheaths again and waned to darkness, and these that hold a courtly contest for your hand?"

"I will marry him alone who knows my soul, and shows it to me in song. I sent for you that you might search him out, I thought you might do me some service."

"Aye, for the scorn of fifteen years, which you have given me?"

"Have you not given me back scorn for scorn?"

"At least to-day I have made you forget we are not equals. You are defending yourself against me, mistress, against your slave!"

"Leave me! To-morrow mind, at night when my friends are with me, I shall find who sang those songs, and I will be his wife, and none but wife. You think I cannot love, I have known none but fools though they were not all as ugly as devils. Out of my sight. I do not need your aid." The fool, with his bestial head hanging, and his hot eyes rolling threw up his hands with a frantic gesture and rushed from the room.

The day passed. Evening came, and, later, the moon-light. Under the balcony the shadows were dark. The Lady Lucrece walked in the chamber where the candles stood dark in their silver sconces, and only the moon lit the white marble which her garments swept. She waited long the voice did not come. The moon reached the west, and still the lady paced the floor. At length the longed-for melody, pure, vaulting, triumphant, burst into a song of victory and love; but ere it had sung a score of words it was choked into silence. A sound arose to the lady's ears of passionate weeping; there was a discordant jangle of the lute as though a disregardful hand had brushed it heavily and the night wore on in silence. The next day no one saw the jester Massimiliani nor the Lady Lucrece till it was night—a festal night—and the stately apartments were ablazed with light. Never had Pisa known such a festival. Liberty reigned in hall and hovel, and the Lady Lucrece was the central figure of the festival. She sat at the end of a hall on a dais. Robes of azure silk fell all about her; jewels looped up her hair, glittered on her arms, clasped her white neck, and shone in the fastening of her slippers. About her were flowers, perfume, light, music, men who were courtly, women who were beautiful. There were marbles, carvings, tapestries, statues, and fountains. But the deep fire in the eyes of the Lady Lucrece did not catch its inspiration from any of these things. It was midnight when she ordered the music to stop. She had been dancing and all the sensuous rhythm of the motion seemed impersonated in her. She went back to the dais and stood there, young and fair, in the shadow of the ancient carvings. A look of maidenliness, unwonted in her, spread itself over her face. The came of tyrants, and the blood of the tyrant was in her; but now she looked as gentle as any maid that ever begged her lover for another kiss.

"I have sworn an oath,' said she, "and to-night I must keep it. The people of Pisa have long wished me to take a lord, but I have found none whom I desired. But, for many nights, some one has sung beneath my window. I do not know the man, but my soul is wedded to the voice, and I will marry him alone who can prove to me to-night that it is his." Her hauteur had returned. She was again the daughter of a line of dukes; she was commanding and not seeing. No one replied or moved. The lady spoke again.

"Surely he need not fear; he may trust me." She waited still; a woman's tremors came back to her. "He must have loved me," she cried, "it was the voice of love. Let me but look on him who sang those songs to me." She held out her arms. The jewels on her bosom rose and fell. She seemed half sinking beneath the tremulous agitation. Suddenly from behind the back of that great chair upon the dais there sprang Massimiliani, the hideous jester.

"It was I!" he cried, "It was I!"

A murmur, half wrathful half jeering, a bubble of laughter, surged up from the company.

"Fool!" cried the lady, "this is no time for jests."

"It was I!" he cried, "It was I!"

"Let us hear your voice, knave!" cried a saucy little fellow of sixteen. He flung a coin toward the fool. Massimiliani seized the coin and flung it in the young noble's face. The bent back that had never straightened seemed almost to straighten now, and a voice full of passionate sadness, yet melodious and thrilling, came out of a form which seemed to be the covering for only unclean things. It was an existent paradox; an astounding; incongruity; the antithesis of facts. And as he sang, a hope leaped into his eyes and a triumph into his voice. Desire belongs not alone to Adonis; even a Caliban may love. The lady's head was bowed upon her breast. The song he had chosen was the unfinished one she listened to the night before. The humpback bent forward in hideous importunity, but the lady's face was shaded with her silken scarf. He grew mad with a tumult of wild surmises as to what her mode might be. At length she raised her face and he saw. It was the tyrannical disdain of her race—the unspeakable contempt of a ruler for a presumptuous and menial knave—the mad mortification of an outraged woman and the chaste pipue of a maiden. He saw and comprehended at a glance. He knew it was all over. The song died upon his lips. The swords of the nobles, which amazement had kept in their sheaths, were out. Massimiliani leaped toward his mistress, caught her in his arms, kissed her where the jewels were lost in her bosom, and as the fierce Italians surged up to him he buried his stillette in his breast.

So died the last jester of Pisa.—Ella W. Peattie.

Changes in Western Climate.

"When I came here in .872," said President David B. Perry of Deane college, Crete, Neb., to a correspondent recently, "many people were incredulous of the growth of this state. The atmosphere was excessively dry and it was doubtful whether corn or tame grass or fruit trees would grow. The sod was tough and stubborn, and shed the little rain that fell quickly. We had interminable wind storms. It would blow, blow, blow, day after day, till the din was unbearable. I have seen people fairly worn out with the incessant, strenuous, wearisome blasts that so relentlessly kept a whirl and racket about them. And there used to come, in summer, occasional hot blasts from the south that would wilt our grain, especially our corn. But there has come a most remarkable change. The atmosphere is not nearly so dry. Ladies have to guard within doors, against mildew occasioned by dampness much as they do at the east. We have much more rain, and it is much more evenly distributed over the year than it used to be. We have fewer and fewer wind storms, and the heated winds that did such mischief do not trouble us at all. See for yourself the crops we raise! Look at that corn-field. There are 200 solid acres as fine as any in the world."

"Well, but what has induced so great a change? Are you sure it is permanent?" "I am sure it is permanent because I know what has caused it. Hundred of thousands of acres, year after year, were plowed up and the soil rendered porous. You know we are the great soldier state. There was a vast army of men at the close of the war, who went home to find their old places occupied and their occupation gone. They came out here. They put in their homestead and timber claims for government land and went vigorously to work at farming. The people at Beatrice have a Grand Army reunion shortly and they count on 60,000 of the boys being there. Such wide spread tillage of wholly new land has prepared the surface soil to receive and retain moisture. The corn itself, by its shade, prevents rapid evaporation. So do our countless groves. Arbor day is a great institution out here, as you can anywhere and everywhere see."

"And you think the moisture in the earth increases the rain-fall?" "Most certainly. The influence of the clouds and soil becomes reciprocal."

"But what should effect the winds so remarkably?" "This same circumstance of a more moist atmosphere. The air is heavier, less volatile. Besides the groves are very important in their influence in breaking the force of the wind. It cannot now sweep across the state as if it were a sheet of water. The groves constantly interrupt and break its force."

"It seems almost incredible that so radical a change should have occurred so soon." "Yes, I would not believe it if I had not seen it and felt it. You can judge for yourself whether we are troubled to raise crops. We have had five successive years of them. Last year the railroads themselves were dismayed at the corn to be moved. Away out, 150 miles to the west of here, in Phelps county and Gasper, and Lincoln, the cultivation is going on—so it is north of the Platte, and also south of us in Kansas."

A Signal for War.

"Hey, Rube!" called out a ground and lofty tumbler from the stoop of a Union square dramatic agency, says the New York Herald, and at the cry some half-dozen gentlemen who had graduated from the sawdust turned around, clenched their fists, and tried to look savage.

The tumbler laughed.

"You don't understand that hail, do you?" he asked a reporter who was with him.

"No; what is it?"

"That's circus lingo," said he. "'Hey, Rube!' is a sort of grand hailing sign of distress among the profesh on the road. How it came into use I don't know. I suppose it was started in some old-fashioned row under the canvas, and has lasted up to this. Anyway, I've heard it in my life pretty often, and every time there was blood on the face of the moon."

"What does it mean?"

"Well, it signifies to a circus company, from the star rider down to the caravan driver, that he must hustle around, get a bale stick or something, and then use it for all he's worth. It is not easy for a person in New York to understand the trouble circus men meet with in country districts. Sometimes they bring it on themselves, I admit, by cutting up too much with the country folks, and causing bad blood that way. But, as a general thing, you'll find that the hay-seed roughs and the game birds of the factory towns will try to pick a quarrel with the circus hands, and then there is no end of rows between them. One would think in the old days that a circus company was made up of your later-day pugilists, and was going around for the express purpose of fighting the best men at every stand they had. It those times it was customary for the country fellows to get together and beat the admission, carry the entrance with a crush, and do what they felt like inside. Well, sometimes they succeeded and got in all right. Then a new responsibility fell on the ringmaster or whoever was master of ceremonies. He had to put all the hands on their guard and prepare them for action. A little coolness and some deception were necessary. He never stopped the performance. That would have given the intruders a cue for raising mischief. The exercises kept right on, but when the ring master was ready he just went out in the sawdust, where he could be heard, and shouted, as though he wanted one of the boys: 'Hey, Rube! Every one knew what that meant, and in a twinkling every soul who could bear arms, so to speak, was eqipped and ready for the fray. Then, if there was occasion for it, a 'bouncing act' was performed that knocked your metropolitan shows of that kind into the shade. Sometimes they were downright pitched battles fought in the tent. But generally the circus people came off all right. The cry of 'Hey, Rube!' put them on the alert, and were never caught napping. That's why all the old timers on the road are stirred up when they hear that cry."

The Hot Springs of Yellowstone Park.

It can do no possible harm to tell the whole truth about the Yellowstone, and to acknowledge that while the great park contains certainly the seven wonders of the world in natural magnificence, the great spaces between these different wonders are immense distance of utterly uninteresting scenery, which one traverses over roads covered with a white binding dust which is very nearly intolerable. It is true that the hot springs, and the geysers, and the Paint Pots, and the falls, and the canyon, and the lake, and the many colored pools, are worth any amount of trouble in getting to them; but it is also true that they are worth taking any amount of trouble to lessen the trouble; and since it could all be removed by so simple a thing as a few rails and a locomotive, it is certainly a pity that a state of things should be left existing which prevents the very young, and very old, the very fastidious or the very weak from enjoying the real wonders of such a journey.

In the meantime, however, there is no railway, and our friends, as the next best thing, would hire special teams and camp out.

Joseph was pressed into service as guide. It was very cold in the corridors of the hotel, but a single step from the piazza proved their light satteen travelling dresses more comfortable than the blue flannel gowns still waiting for the reputed frost of the Yellowstone. Colored glasses were necessary to shield the eyes the intense glare in the sunlight of the snowy terraces, dropping one after another for two miles from the dark pine woods above and around them, like a series of beautiful frozen cascades.

"I notice there is only one man who has the courage for figures," said the man of sense, referring to his guide-books as they crossed the white plateau at the base of the extinct springs, and paused at the foot of Old Liberty cap, the cone of an extinct geyser, towering fifty feet into the air. "He seems to know all about it, and declares that it took just fifty-four centuries to build up this thing."

"I can tell you who he is said the knowing Joseph, with a laugh. "He's the man that tells you the boiling river puts 50,000 barrels of hot water into the Gardner every twenty-four hours. I've often told him he'd oughter have let us know when he was going to measure it."

"'Any estimate of the age of the lower terrace would be pretty conjectural'" read the man of sense from another guide-book. "Still I suppose there is no doubt about its being a matter of centuries. In that case, how soon do they expect to finish repairing Devil's Thumb?"

For they had walked over the smaller column, which was not only extinct but crumbling with age and decrepitude. Art was endeavoring to assist nature and repair the waste by bringing water from the hot springs just above in wooden troughs, letting it trickle down the sides of the cone and evaporate, to leave its snowy deposit to repair the ravages of time.

"Well, that feller that knows so much about the figgers," explained Joseph, "says the orange geyser builds a foot in a century. And he says the hot springs will deposit a sixteenth of an inch in four days. All I know about it is that I can put a beer bottle under some of the falling water and turn it round once or twice and have it beautifully coated over with a white crust that won't crumble in a day or two."

"Question: It you can coat a beer bottle in a day or two, how long will it take to build a geyser cone? Come, Mabel, you were last at your books."

"Fifty-four centuries," answered the maiden, promptly.

"Correct. You may go up to the head;" and the imperturbable pointed to the upper terrace towering above them.

It was not at all a steep climb, but they had to be wary about stepping into the little rills of hot water trickling down from the upper springs.

"What is that dust?" exclaimed the convert, suddenly. "I never saw dust rising from ice before."

"Well, marm," said the smiling Joseph, "in the first place, 'tain't dust; and in the next place, 'tain't ice. The dust is steam, and the ice is formation."

"Of course," said the convert. "I ought to have known. But I can't divest myself of the idea that all this white rock is arctic snow."

"Well I don't know,'" said the imperturbable; "this isn't exactly what I should call arctic."

He had been, with the maiden, the first to reach the top, and was gazing into the depths of the first of the mammoth hot springs. The wind had blown toward him a sudden whiff of hot, sulphurous steam, and he had stepped back quickly, only to find that he had stumbled into one of the innocent-looking rills, that was decidedly warm, even through his boot.

But what a magnificent sight it was! The whole snowy mass, that had looked cold and silent under the pale moon the night before, was now glowing, gleaming, pulsating with life under the morning sun. For perhaps a hundred acres the white surface was studded with brilliant pools, set like jewels, clear as diamonds, lovelier in color than opals, in rims of fretted frost delicate as lace and firm as marble. Over these coraline edges trickles softly the gentle overflow of the lovely lakes, falling, falling tremulously and without a sound, over the fluted reed-like columns of the terraces below, only to leave them harder than they were before.

"Isn't it incredible," said the man of sense, "that water so particularly clear should hold anything in solution so particularly hard?"

"I don't know," murmured the imperturbable, dreamily. "It's like the careless remark of a woman who had packed her trunks for Europe, that sometime she would like to go to the Yellowstone; it sounds remarkably simple, but you will find before long that there is an adamantine purpose at the bottom of it."

Greenfield, Mass., gave a striking example of neighborly kindness by voting not to prosecute the bonds of the defaulting Treasurer, Foster, because prosecution would throw the entire loss, $10,000, upon the shoulders of his only responsible bondsman, Charles Henry. Mr. Henry is an old and respected merchant, who recently retired with just enough money to pass an old age of comfort. The suit, if successful, would have stripped him of everything. This issue was squarely made in the meeting, and the town voted not to prosecute.

MINNESOTA CONGRESSMEN.

Two Democratic Conventions Held and Thomas Wilson and J. L. MacDonald Re-nominated.

THOS. WILSON

The first congressional district democratic convention met at Rochester, and after organization proceeded to adopt a platform in which President Cleveland is extolled, and his course endorsed; Hon. Thomas Wilson was eulogized and endorsed, and the career of Mark H. Dunnell severely criticized and denounced. The closing resolutions were these

Resolved, That we favor liberal pensions for all honorably discharged Union soldiers and their dependents under such restricting and discriminating acts as should be enacted from time to time and as shall meet with the sanction of the soldiers themselves as organized and which shall not be construed so as to reward the unworthy and unentitled as against the true patriot and the deserving.

Resolved, That we have seen with pleasure the recent fraternal reunion of the "Blue" and the "Gray" upon the battlefield of Gettysburg, where a quarter of a century ago American valor displayed a courage unequalled in the history of the world; that under the wise administration of President Cleveland sectional feeling has passed away, and the whole country is united now in ties of fraternal liberty and unity.

Resolved, That we invite electors who believe in honest government by the people and for the people to unite with us in the return of our nominees to place and duty, that such places may be honorably filled and such duties honestly discharged.

The resolutions were adopted by a rising vote and cheers. On motion the convention proceeded to nominate a candidate for congress, and Thomas Wilson was nominated by a rising vote amidst great enthusiasm.

THIRD DISTRICT.

The third congressional democratic convention met at Red Wing on the same day, and after the usual preliminary proceedings the committee on resolutions sent up the following resolutions, which were received with considerable enthusiasm and unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the Democracy of the Third congressional district of the State of Minnesota hereby fully and emphatically endorse the national platform of the Democratic party adopted by the St. Louis convention, and congratulate the country upon the nomination of Cleveland and Thurman. That we are honestly in favor of a reduction of the existing tariff taxes upon necessaries, to the extent that no more revenue shall be collected from the people than is necessary for the support of the government economically administered; that we also endorse the course of Hon. John L. MacDonald, our representative in congress, and particularly commend him for his faithful and fearless discharge of his official duties.

Chairman Child announced as the next business the nomination of a candidate for congress.

E. C. Stringer of Hastings secured the floor. He nominated Judge MacDonald two years ago and he was again appointed to that, no doubt, pleasing duty again. His speech was a clean cut and forceful one.

"I rise to nominate the gentleman who now represents you in congress," said Mr. Stringer. "Yet it is hardly necessary for me to formally nominate him. The people did it long ago. This district was created by a Republican legislature for Republican purposes, but in Judge MacDonald we found a candidate to thwart their aims. His record you know, and his personal and public life you know, and no man need be ashamed to vote for Judge John L. MacDonald. He is the only man who can lead us again to victory."

At the suggestion of Mr. Stringer a vote was taken on the nomination by roll call each county casting its solid vote for Judge MacDonald.

Another Murderer Hung.

Charles, better known as "Blinkey," Morgan was hanged in the Ohio penitentiary. The crime for which he gave his life was the murder of Detective Hulligan near Ravenna. As the hour of execution approached he became somewhat nervous. During the day he wrote an order turning over his body to Dr. Clemmer for scientific purposes, but later recalled the order at the request of Nellie Lowry, his reputed mistress, who wished the body. At 1:10 the warden informed Morgan that the time had come for him to execute the sentence, and the party at once started from the cell into the execution room. Morgan was as cool as he had been all day, and walked up the scaffold with a firm step. On the scaffold he said he had no statement to make. The noose was adjusted and at 1:20 the trap fell, Morgan saying just before: "Good-bye, Nellie," referring to the Cleveland woman, Nell Lowry. His collar caught the rope in some way and prevented the noose from drawing as it should, and his neck was not broken. He was strangled. Morgan addressed a letter to the warden of the penitentiary in which, after praising the warden for his efficient management, he protests that he is innocent of the murder of Detective Hulligan, and of the theft of the furs. He claims that he was in Philadelphia at the time the murder occurred. The letter concludes as follows:

I have read of men being murdered for their money, but I am judiciously, or rather injudiciously murdered. In conclusion I repeat I am innocent of any complicity with the robbery of the furs or the murder of Detective Hulligan. I write this statement to obviate the necessity of making any verbal remarks from the scaffold, and also to keep reporters of the press from butchering up to suit their own ideas what I desire to say. You will understand from the foregoing, honored sir, that I shall have nothing to say save what I have written here.

On the morning of Jan. 28, 1887, the fur store of Benedict & Rudey, Cleveland, was entered, and $8,000 worth of sealskin sacques and furs taken, and Harry McMunn, a noted crook, was arrested as one of the probable burglars. Requisition papers were secured, and Capt. Hoehn and Detective Hulligan of Cleveland prepared to take their man back to the scene of his crime. When the 11 o'clock train for Cleveland reached Ravenna the two officers were set upon by a band of thugs, and after Hulligan had been half murdered and Hoehn so badly injured that he laid for months hovering between life and death, the prisoner McMunn, was unshackled from his captors and hurried away by the desperadoes. Hulligan and Hoehn were taken to Cleveland that night, and after lingering in great agony until Feb. 8th, Detective Hulligan died of his injuries. Suspicion pointed to three men as the probable murderers, namely: Charles Morgan, Bill Hanley and Pat Harrington. They were apprehended after a hard struggle at Alpena, Mich., on June 28th, 1887. During the struggle with Morgan, Sheriff Lynch, of Alpena, was shot in the leg, and blood poisoning setting in he died in great agony. Morgan was found guilty of murder in the first degree and sentenced to be hanged. The fight to save his life was very bitter.

HORRIBLE LOSS OF LIFE.

Another Tenement House Fire in New York in which Thirteen persons are Roasted Alive, and More Will Die from Injuries.

Thirteen people were burned to death in a six-story building in the rear of No. 197 Bowery, New York City. Six more, burned so badly that they will probably die, were removed to various hospitals. The house was a ramshackle affair hidden in the middle of the block, the only entrance to it being a narrow alleyway from the Bowery. In this caged-in building lived 150 people. Each of the six floors was occupied by a single family, the head of which was a tailor who made clothing for the cheap wholesale clothing houses and employed from fifteen to twenty men, women and children, in addition to his family, in making up the clothing. They were all Polish Jews, who worked, ate and slept in the crowded rooms. While all the occupants of the building were busily at work, flames broke out on the lower floor. The fire had, when discovered, already gained such headway that it was in full possession of the stairway and, escape by it seemed impossible. Many of the frightened inmates rushed down through the flames and escaped to the narrow court yard, with clothes ablaze and hands and bodies burned. Six of them were so severely burned that they may die. There were fire escapes on the front and rear of the house, but before any of the inmates had tried to escape by them the flames had ascended through the house and were reaching from the windows, so that descent by the fire-escapes was impossible. One man, already half burned to death, leaped from a fifth story window and fell a mangled mass of flesh in the little court yard. Others jumped from the second story windows and escaped with bruises. One poor woman lay upon her back in a little store in the Bowery with not only her clothing but her hair burned off. She was unconscious, and the surgeon said she would not live to reach the hospital. Another young girl was delirious with pain. She was not so badly burned as the others, but in a mad jump from one of the windows she had received internal injury, and also cut a terrible gash in the side of her head from which the blood gushed forth.

Charles W. Norman, property man of the People's theater, which adjoins the burned building, with several of his comrades, ran to the roof of the theater, carrying a small ladder, which they stretched over to a window of the burning building. A woman with her hair and clothes already ablaze appeared at the window, and Norman called to her to cross over on the ladder. She cried back that she could not leave her two children. Norman tried to cross over on the ladder, but the flames drove him back and he could not save her. Afterwards the charred bodies of the mother and two children were found in the building. After the fire the fireman found thirteen bodies in the building. That of the man who leaped from the fifth story window increased the death list to fifteen, while it is feared that the death of some if not all those in the hospitals will make this number greater. Several of the bodies were burned so badly that they fell apart when moved, and the firemen were obliged to lower them from the windows in nets.

The report of the Missouri river commission for the year ended June 30 says that no money was appropriated for continuing improvement on this river last year and no progress was made. The commission ask for $1,000,000 for general improvements below Kansas City, and a like sum from the mouth of the river to Sioux City. It also asks for $150,000 to continue surveys, examinations and pay personal expenses of the commissioners.

It is doubtful whether Congressman W. L. Scott of Pennsylvania will be able to take an active part in the campaign. He is seriously ill at the house of his daughter at Long Branch. He is a man of slight physique, extremely nervous, the head of great business enterprises. He aspired, besides, to be the chief adjutant of the administration and the executive of the campaign. He has broken down.

The lecture delivered by Prof. Goodwin Smith at Winnipeg on the question of our trade relations with the United States was most successful. The audience was unanimous for reciprocity.

For the last ten days the weather has been bitterly cold in some parts of Invernesshire, Scotland, and there was a fresh fall of snow on the Grampian range. Snow completely covered the Glenfeshie hills, and in the Corries it lay to a depth of six inches. The thermometer registered 47 deg., on the grass. The effect on the principal moors in Scotland will be disastrous.

Ex-Senator James C. Fair was attacked at San Francisco by a man named Eisfelder, who drew a revolver, and was knocked down by a blow on the head from the butt of the ex-senator's pistol. Eisfelder had threatened to publish a scurrilous article against Mr. Fair if the latter did not pay him $5,000. The difficulty occurred on the steps of the Nevada bank.

Mr. Noyes, postmaster at Goodwin, Minn., together with his wife and two other ladies went in bathing in the Crow river. Mr. Noyes ventured out over his depth, and before any assistance could reach him, was drowned. He was a young man, twenty-seven years of age.

A few months ago William K. Shaw, a stranger, opened a wholesale liquor house in Sioux Fall, Dak. Lately William Roth of Norwich, Conn., arrived, and had Shaw arrested on a charge of adultery, claiming that he was living with his (Roth's) wife. It seems from the best information obtainable that Roth, who was cashier of the Shetucket National Bank of Norwich, Conn., was on Feb. 25, 1885, sentenced for four years in the penitentiary for perjury for swearing to a false statement of the condition of the bank, but was recently pardoned by President Cleveland. During his imprisonment Shaw won the affections of Roth's wife and eloped with her, bringing up in Sioux Falls last spring.

The postal authorities are after William Raines Colby, formerly of Chicago, but now of San Francisco, for the robbing of a mail car in 1874, near Austin, Tex. Colby, in 1875, under the name of Raines, was pastor of a Baptist church at Hearne Junction in Texas, where he robbed a mail car, for which crime he was sent to the penitentiary. He was pardoned out by President Grant, on account of a severe illness which he thought to be fatal. After that he figured as a spiritualistic medium in New York, San Francisco, Boston and Chicago. Shortly after he was pardoned out of the penitentiary it was discovered that he was the man who committed the robbery near Austin mentioned above, and it is for this crime the authorities want him.

Among the passengers on the steamer Rotterdam, at New York, was the Rev. J. V. Dundas of Rice county, Minn., who declared that he had no dutiable articles in his baggage. A custom officer, however, found in his trunk a fine white Indian crepe shawl and a quantity of men and ladies' underwear, and 5,000 cigars in boxes snugly fitted in a false bottom of his trunk. The trunk was seized.

Matthew Byrne, a young stable helper of Staten island, jumped from the Brooklyn bridge. He is severely injured and may die. The cause of the leap is supposed to be unrequitted love.

Lightning struck the house of Lawrence McLaughlin at Hazelwood, ten miles west of Faribault, Minn., during the late storm, killing Mrs. McLaughlin and her two sons Patrick and Lawrence.

The Swedish Lutheran church at Centre City, Minn., was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. The church was erected in 1882 at a cost of over $30,000. Insured for $10,500. It is believed that steps will be taken to rebuild at once. The heavy rain which continued to fall during the fire saved the village from total destruction. A number of outhouses and barns were struck by lightning and destroyed in the vicinity. The storm was one of the most severe in memory.

Early one morning at Blair, Nebraska, G. W. Tucker, engineer of the Acme mill, who sleeps in the building, was awakened by three burglars, who were attempting to carry away several sacks of flour. Tucker fired at the burglars, and one of them fell. They picked up the wounded man and carried him away. A big pool of blood was found on the floor. It is believed that the man is fatally shot.

Twenty-eight petitions, signed by over 2,000 people, have been received by Gov. Hemple, of Washington Territory, asking him to commute the death sentence of Mrs. Pyle, waiting execution at Walla Walla, Wash. It is the first case in the history of the Northern Pacific coast where a woman has been sentenced to death.

Mary Flynn has filed a petition in the district court of Iowa for $10,000 damages against her uncle, Michael Flynn, a wealthy farmer of this county. The petition charges Flynn, who is her guardian, with hanging her to a tree until she was nearly dead. Since the alleged assault the girl has been living with relatives here.

In reference to the dispatch of Secretary Bayard to Gov. Morehouse of Missouri, that papers concerning the application by the British government for a respite for Maxwell had been sent by mail, John J. Martin, one of Maxwell's attorney's, says that it came about through the efforts of Maxwell's father with Lord Salisbury. He claims that testimony is now obtainable which will clear Maxwell.

The list of fatalities on St. Paul's cable railway was lengthened by the death of William Thompson, a soldier of the regular army, who was run over and killed. The car was coming down the hill at a rapid rate, and when it had neared the corner, Thompson attempted to jump on without singaling the gripman. His foot struck the side platform on the grip car, but the force of the motion swung him around and he fell between the cars, when the wheels of the rear car passed over him, killing him almost instantly.

Republican Pointers.

Cal Brice and the New York Aqueduct Swindle.

Chairman Brice, of the Democratic National Campaign Committee, protests that he never had any interest in the New York aqueduct contracts; but he admits at the same time that "a relationship was formed" between him and the contractors which protected him as one of their sureties. The distinction is hardly sufficient to satisfy the country that the Democratic party has chosen a strictly honest man to conduct its affairs in the present canvass.—St. Louis Globe Dem.

Southern Favoritism.

The following are some of the features of the Mills bill which disclose its intense Southern and sectional character:

Louisiana sugar	68 per cent. duty.
Southern rice	100½ per cent. duty.
Northern Lumber	no duty.
Northern wool	no duty.
Northern salt	no duty.
Northern beans and peas	no duty.
Northern vegetables	no duty.
Northern flax (not dressed)	no duty.
Northern lime	no duty.

A Thoroughbred Rebel.

Senator Butler of South Carolina went home to make a speech at the dedication of a monument to ex-Confederate soldiers at Greenville, S. C. This is a passage from his speech as published in one of his own organs just received at Washington:

We were citizens of an independent commonwealth, independent in the sphere of her constitutional action before we became Confederate soldiers, and in becoming Confederate soldiers we did not cease to be citizens of an independent commonwealth. We became soldiers in obedience to the commands of our state, not of a revolutionary or irresponsible faction, but of a fully equipped organized government to which we then owed our primary allegiance, and when we ceased to be her soldiers we still remained citizens of our state, rejoicing still as citizens of a constitutional government devoted to its traditions and principles. Upon the failure of the Confederate government we renewed our allegiance to the Federal government, always remaining loyal citizens to our state; therefore whoever says we are traitors simply advertises his ignorance or lies. We can stand the epithet "rebel" because that places us in good company.

The Smile Drill.

Probably very few persons know what a smile drill is. It is one of the pleasant and harmless pranks with which the naval cadets at Anapolis refresh their powerful minds, when jaded with great intellectual exertions. The upper-class man holds up one finger, and the poor lower-class man must smile—just a little. Up goes another finger, and the smile must broaden; still another, and it is wider than before. At last all the fingers are up, and the grin is stretched as far as a grin can be. The rather painful situation can be prolonged until the cruel upper-class man is tired of seeing the other fellow smile. Then he closes his hand and the smile must instantly cease. Prompt obedience is the essence of smile drill, as of every other.

President Cleveland is putting the Democratic party through a smile drill on the question of free trade. He put up one finger, and they made an agonized effort to smile, though they didn't feel in the least like it. Then he put up another, and the smile was wider and sadder than before. The poor Democracy know that, while it might be fun for Mr. Cleveland, it was death to them. Now he has got both hands up, and the party has a smile on apparently happy as it is broad, but a second look shows that it is haggard and forced. Hundreds of manufacturers and thousands of workingmen are leaving the party because they don't want free trade. On a certain evening next November President Cleveland will suddenly take in his hands, and the smile on the broad red face of the Democracy will give place to an expression of settled gloom.—N. Y. Tribune.

Five Good Reasons.

To the Editor of the Tribune.—Sir: Please give me five good reasons why a man should be a Republican. J. Walter.

1. Because there is everything in the record of the Republican party which he may be proud, and nothing of which he will be ashamed. It saved the Union, emancipated the slaves, restored specie payments, and reduced the National debt one half. Unlike the Democratic party, it has never been in alliance with slave-owners and the rum-power; it never pronounced the war for the Union a failure and sued for a craven peace; and it has never arrayed itself against the principles of honest finance and National honor.

2. Because Republicanism does not stand for the suppression of a single Democratic vote in any State of the Union. In every Republican State Democrats are free to vote as they please, and their ballots are counted as they are cast. Democracy stands for the suppression of Republican votes by intimidation, crime and fraud in every State formerly in rebellion.

3. Because the Republican party in its tariff legislation laid the foundations of a National prosperity unexampled in modern times, and defends the cause of American industry to-day against the combined attack of English manufacturers and the free-trade Democracy. The Solid South in the Confederate Constitution pronounced for free trade precisely as the party of Buchanan, Breckenridge and Douglas had done before the war, and as the party of Tilden, Hancock and Cleveland has done since. Republicanism is the cause of industrial independence.

4 Because the Republican party is American in its sympathies and its policy, believes in governing and developing America for the benefit of Americans, and would neither order its tariff policy for the accommodation and profit of foreigners, nor lower the country in the estimation of the world by compromising American honor through pusillanimous diplomacy. The Democratic party is equally un-American in its foreign and its domestic policy.

5. Because the Republican party is recruited from the more inteligent and progressive elements of American population, and is the organization in which all friends of Civil Service reform, practical temperance legislation, or of any other movement in the direction of good government naturally belong. The Democratic party is not hospitable to any real reform in government, as the Civil Service reformers have learned to their shame.—Tribune.

What's in a Name.

The people of this country don't care a red cent what you call, or pretend to call, the revenue policy of the democratic party. You may call it free trade, British free trade, revenue reform, tariff for revenue only, tariff reduction, or by any other of the dozen forms of expression used to describe it. It is the thing itself which concerns the American people—not the name of it.

The actual policy of the democratic party is a policy which vastly enhances the importation of foreign-made goods into this country in competition with goods which are made in this country. Isn't that so? Of course it is; nobody denies it. Indeed, it is the avowed purpose of the Mills bill, which is admitted to be only a partial carrying out of the democratic purpose.

Now, never mind what this policy is to be called for a moment. This is the thing which the democratic party wants to bring about. It wants to bring it about, because the opposite policy is in force through the existing tariff. The existing tariff is intended to restrict the importation of foreign-made goods which would come into competition with home made goods. The object of the democratic party is to get rid of a tariff of this kind. The democratic party would partially accomplish this object if it could put the Mills bill in force.

By way of recapitulation, then, it simmers down to this: The amount of revenue to be raised being identically the same, the two parties would put duties on entirely different articles, or in different rates on the same article—the Republican party with a view to keep foreign-made articles out of competition with home-made articles; the democratic party with a view solely to get revenue.

Now you call these opposing policies what you please. In brief outline, these are the policies. The republican policy is correctly called the protective policy. The democratic policy, whatever you call it, is the opposite of the republican policy. The opposite of the protective policy is as a matter of fact, the free trade policy. It is properly so denominated in the formulas of the books of political economy. It is so understood in England. It is so understood by free traders everywhere.

All this splitting of hairs to which the democratic press is addicted just now about the mere name of the democratic policy is intended to deceive serious minded voters as to the actual policy of the party—as to the very thing which the party will do if it gets the power to do it.—Sioux City Journal.

THE LOVE OF CALIBAN.

From the San Francisco Argonaut.

The room of the Lady Lucrece was full of cool shaddows, though it was mid-summer, and the purple-bordered linens at the windows swayed in the hot wind. There were purple-bordered linens, too, on the couch where the Lady Lucrece lay—one can not do much at noontide in Pisa when it is mid-summer. The heavens seemed to hang down near to the languorous earth; a palpitant white heat shimmered on the streets; the lazaroni slept; at the bath-houses the attendants went about in shifts of linen; the shops and the stores were silent; it was too hot even to hate. If one had a vengenance to take he waited till nightfall, when it should be cooler. And the Lady Lucrece, fragrant from her bath, lay on her couch amid the fresh linens, and sprinkled powder on her breasts to keep the moisture from gathering there.

As the long day wasted itse in languid hours the lady smiled, although it was not her wont.

"How many hours till moonlight?" she asked of her maid.

"Six and more, gracious mistress," replied the maid, drowsily; and she wiped her forehead upon her sleeve.

"Ah," sighed the Lady Lucrece, "bring in Massimiliani."

A moment later a queer, halting step was heard on the tiled floor in the hall outside. The curtains at the door were the green which the sea wears in the morning. They parted, and Massimiliani stood between them. Had nature had her way he would have been tall, but some mysterious force had bent him almost double, and his humped shoulders and heavy head hung always toward the earth. He was not merely grotesque, he was hideous. There are men that nature has jested with; Massimiliani she had cursed. He made a salutation with his hands—he could bend no lower.

"I am forever bowing," he said to his mistress. "My grace was so great the first time I had occasion to make a salute to a lady, that I never was allowed to rise."

"Who was the lady?" queried his mistress, shutting her eyes as he stood before her.

"The only woman with whom I shall ever lie—Mother Earth." He looked straight down at Lady Lucrece. She did not cover her bosom—why should she for Massimiliani?—no one counted him a man. He was as free to come and go as the spaniel that lay upon the rugs.

"I do not want gibes this afternoon," said his mistress. Massimiliani spread out his huge dark hands and smiled.

"Then my gracious lady did not send for me?"

"Send for you? Yes, I sent for you?"

"It cannot be. You have forgotten. For what am I but a gibe? It cannot be a question of wisdom, or it would not lie between a woman and a fool. Perhaps it was a matter of grace, and you want me to dance, or a matter of beauty, and you wish me to smile, or a question of sweet sounds, and you wish me to sing."

The Lady Lucrece sat up and put the damp hair back from her brow.

"I had sooner hear a chorus of ravens," she said, but she laughed as she said it. No one minded Massimiliani, and she pulled at the end of his long, hanging sleeve to make him squat upon the floor by her feet, which he did with a mocking gesture.

"Princes have been here before me," said he.

The lady looked haughty, but she was not ill-pleased.

"It does not relate to singing," said she.

Massimiliani leaped to his feet and seized some roses that lay at the foot of the couch.

"The flowers!" he cried, and flung them from the casement.

His mistress stared at him in amazement.

"From the Lord Ascanio," she replied mechanically.

"There was a tarantula among them. Are you so good, madam, that your lovers must send you to heaven?"

"Fool!" cried the lady, angrily, "there was no tarantula among the roses."

Massimiliani sat down again upon the floor.

"Go on with your tale," said he, "I am no greater fool than I was before."

The Lady Lucrece sat pondering, with her elbows on her knees, and her flushed cheek in her hands.

"Fool," said the Lady Lucrece, and her breath came faster, "you have not heard, have you——"

"God gave me straight ears, the saints be thanked," the jester sardonically interrupted.

"——Night after night, since the summer came, a voice below my window? It always comes when the shadow of the balcony hides his figure."

"That he may not see your face, if you lean out, and so lose his inspiration?" interjected the dwarf. The lady struck him on the ear with her jeweled hand. The blow was light, but the dwarf shivered. "The voice," said he, "what was it like?" The lady fell back again into her old attitude. The flowing sleeves dropped from her arms. The loose strings of pearls with which they were wreathed, tumbled down to her elbows. Massimiliani spread himself flat upon the floor, and bracing his heavy head against his hands, watched her as a tiger does his prey.

"Ah, fool! I think you know I never loved. Men are so little, I could rule them all; I do not want a man that I can rule. But his voice—it sings of war, of great deeds, terrible and grand. And yet, Massimiliani, it sings of love—of love which counts power, and money, and name as nothing. It does not sue for love; it demands it as a right. The verses which he sings are no other man's; they are his own, and he weaves them as he sings. He does not mind that I am great, he loves me for my soul, he loves me for my pride, for my will, for my scorn of pretty things. He knows me as I am. He is the first living creature who has ever done so. It mounts—this voice—up to my lattice like a vine. It runs through gay melodies like rippling water. It grows as sad as the voice of the night-bird. I weep when it sings of death; I throw up my arms and walk the room, strong as a giant, when it sings of war, and when it sings of love, fool, I bury my face in my arms and blush. All day I lie and dream of it, and in my sleeping dreams at night I hear naught but it. I dream how we shall meet and where. I am sure he must be beautiful."

A sound from the man at her feet caused her to stop. The fool had rolled on his back in a convulsion of laughter, and the tears trickled down his cheeks.

"Fool!" cried the lady, springing from the couch in anger.

"Mother of God!" exclaimed the dwarf. "Will the eternal snows melt and desert the blossom? Will the tower fall? Shall I be straight? Will God take pity? Will my lady love?" He threw his jangling punchinello at her feet, and tore his cap from his head. "Wear them," he cried, "my bauble and my cap! I never cracked so excellent a jest."

"Slave!" The lady grew pale with rage. "To-morrow, you shall see, for I shall find which of my courtiers it is that sings thus, and I will marry him and none but him."

"None but him, gracious lady? And all these perfumed knights that have been praying to you while moons grew great and faded into sheaths again and waned to darkness, and these that hold a courtly contest for your hand?"

"I will marry him alone who knows my soul, and shows it to me in song. I sent for you that you might search him out, I thought you might do me some service."

"Aye, for the scorn of fifteen years, which you have given me?"

"Have you not given me back scorn for scorn?"

"At least to-day I have made you forget we are not equals. You are defending yourself against me, mistress, against your slave!"

"Leave me! To-morrow mind, at night when my friends are with me, I shall find who sang those songs, and I will be his wife, and none but wife. You think I cannot love, I have known none but fools though they were not all as ugly as devils. Out of my sight. I do not need your aid." The fool, with his bestial head hanging, and his hot eyes rolling threw up his hands with a frantic gesture and rushed from the room.

The day passed. Evening came, and, later, the moon-light. Under the balcony the shadows were dark. The Lady Lucrece walked in the chamber where the candles stood dark in their silver sconces, and only the moon lit the white marble which her garments swept. She waited long the voice did not come. The moon reached the west, and still the lady paced the floor. At length the longed-for melody, pure, vaulting, triumphant, burst into a song of victory and love; but ere it had sung a score of words it was choked into silence. A sound arose to the lady's ears of passionate weeping; there was a discordant jangle of the lute as though a disregardful hand had brushed it heavily and the night wore on in silence. The next day no one saw the jester Massimiliani nor the Lady Lucrece till it was night—a festal night—and the stately apartments were ablazed with light. Never had Pisa known such a festival. Liberty reigned in hall and hovel, and the Lady Lucrece was the central figure of the festival. She sat at the end of a hall on a dais. Robes of azure silk fell all about her; jewels looped up her hair, glittered on her arms, clasped her white neck, and shone in the fastening of her slippers. About her were flowers, perfume, light, music, men who were courtly, women who were beautiful. There were marbles, carvings, tapestries, statues, and fountains. But the deep fire in the eyes of the Lady Lucrece did not catch its inspiration from any of these things. It was midnight when she ordered the music to stop. She had been dancing and all the sensuous rhythm of the motion seemed impersonated in her. She went back to the dais and stood there, young and fair, in the shadow of the ancient carvings. A look of maidenliness, unwonted in her, spread itself over her face. The came of tyrants, and the blood of the tyrant was in her; but now she looked as gentle as any maid that ever begged her lover for another kiss.

"I have sworn an oath,' said she, "and to-night I must keep it. The people of Pisa have long wished me to take a lord, but I have found none whom I desired. But, for many nights, some one has sung beneath my window. I do not know the man, but my soul is wedded to the voice, and I will marry him alone who can prove to me to-night that it is his." Her hauteur had returned. She was again the daughter of a line of dukes; she was commanding and not seeing. No one replied or moved. The lady spoke again.

"Surely he need not fear; he may trust me." She waited still; a woman's tremors came back to her. "He must have loved me," she cried, "it was the voice of love. Let me but look on him who sang those songs to me." She held out her arms. The jewels on her bosom rose and fell. She seemed half sinking beneath the tremulous agitation. Suddenly from behind the back of that great chair upon the dais there sprang Massimiliani, the hideous jester.

"It was I!" he cried, "It was I!"

A murmur, half wrathful half jeering, a bubble of laughter, surged up from the company.

"Fool!" cried the lady, "this is no time for jests."

"It was I!" he cried, "It was I!"

"Let us hear your voice, knave!" cried a saucy little fellow of sixteen. He flung a coin toward the fool. Massimiliani seized the coin and flung it in the young noble's face. The bent back that had never straightened seemed almost to straighten now, and a voice full of passionate sadness, yet melodious and thrilling, came out of a form which seemed to be the covering for only unclean things. It was an existent paradox; an astounding; incongruity; the antithesis of facts. And as he sang, a hope leaped into his eyes and a triumph into his voice. Desire belongs not alone to Adonis; even a Caliban may love. The lady's head was bowed upon her breast. The song he had chosen was the unfinished one she listened to the night before. The humpback bent forward in hideous importunity, but the lady's face was shaded with her silken scarf. He grew mad with a tumult of wild surmises as to what her mode might be. At length she raised her face and he saw. It was the tyrannical disdain of her race—the unspeakable contempt of a ruler for a presumptuous and menial knave—the mad mortification of an outraged woman and the chaste pipue of a maiden. He saw and comprehended at a glance. He knew it was all over. The song died upon his lips. The swords of the nobles, which amazement had kept in their sheaths, were out. Massimiliani leaped toward his mistress, caught her in his arms, kissed her where the jewels were lost in her bosom, and as the fierce Italians surged up to him he buried his stilletto in his breast.

So died the last jester of Pisa.—Ella W. Peattie.

Changes in Western Climate.

"When I came here in 1872," said President David B. Perry of Deane college, Crete, Neb., to a correspondent recently, "many people were incredulous of the growth of this state. The atmosphere was excessively dry and it was doubtful whether corn or tame grass or fruittrees would grow. The sod was tough and stubborn, and shed the little rain that fell quickly. We had interminable wind storms. It would blow, blow, blow, day after day, till the din was unbearable. I have seen people fairly worn out with the incessant, strenuous, wearisome blasts that so relentlessly kept a whirl and racket about them. And there used to come, in summer, occasional hot blasts from the south that would wilt our grain, especially our corn. But there has come a most remarkable change. The atmosphere is not nearly so dry. Ladies have to guard within doors, against mildew occasioned by dampness much as they do at the east. We have much more rain, and it is much more evenly distributed over the year than it used to be. We have fewer and fewer wind storms, and the heated winds that did such mischief do not trouble us at all. See for yourself the crops we raise! Look at that corn-field. There are 200 solid acres as fine as any in the world."

"Well, but what has induced so great a change? Are you sure it is permanent?" "I am sure it is permanent because I know what has caused it. Hundred of thousands of acres, year after year, were plowed up and the soil rendered porous. You know we are the great soldier state. There was a vast army of men at the close of the war, who went home to find their old places occupied and their occupation gone. They came out here. They put in their homestead and timber claims for government land and went vigorously to work at farming. The people at Beatrice have a Grand Army reunion shortly and they count on 60,000 of the boys being there. Such wide spread tillage of wholly new land has prepared the surface soil to receive and retain moisture. The corn itself, by its shade, prevents rapid evaporation. So do our countless groves, Arbor day is a great institution out here, as you can anywhere and everywhere see."

"And you think the moisture in the earth increases the rain-fall?" "Most certainly. The influence of the clouds and soil becomes reciprocal."

"But what should effect the winds so remarkably?" "This same circumstance of a more moist atmosphere. The air is heavier, less volatile. Besides the groves are very important in their influence in breaking the force of the wind. It cannot now sweep across the state as if it were a sheet of water. The groves constantly interrupt and break its force."

"It seems almost incredible that so radical a change should have occurred so soon." "Yes, I would not believe it if I had not seen it and felt it. You can judge for yourself whether we are troubled to raise crops. We have had five successive years of them. Last year the railroads themselves were dismayed at the corn to be moved. Away out, 150 miles to the west of here, in Phelps county and Gasper, and Lincoln, the cultivation is going on—so it is north of the Platte, and also south of us in Kansas."

A Signal for War.

"Hey, Rube!" called out a ground and lofty tumbler from the stoop of a Union square dramatic agency, says the New York Herald, and at the cry some half-dozen gentlemen who had graduated from the sawdust turned around, clenched their fists, and tried to look savage.

The tumbler laughed.

"You don't understand that hail, do you?" he asked a reporter who was with him.

"No; what is it?"

"That's circus lingo," said he, "'Hey, Rube!' is a sort of grand hailing sign of distress among the profesh on the road. How it came into use I don't know. I suppose it was started in some old-fashioned row under the canvas, and has lasted up to this. Anyway, I've heard it in my life pretty often, and every time there was blood on the face of the moon."

"What does it mean?"

"Well, it signifies to a circus company, from the star rider down to the caravan driver, that he must hustle around, get a bale stick or something, and then use it for all he's worth. It is not easy for a person in New York to understand the trouble circus men meet with in country districts. Sometimes they bring it on themselves, I admit, by cutting up too much with the country folks, and causing bad blood that way. But, as a general thing, you'll find that the hay-seed roughs and the game birds of the factory towns will try to pick a quarrel with the circus hands, and then there is no end of rows between them. One would think in the old days that a circus company was made up of your later-day pugilists, and was going around for the express purpose of fighting the best men at every stand they had. In those times it was customary for the country fellows to get together and beat the admission, carry the entrance with a crush, and do what they felt like inside. Well, sometimes they succeeded and got in all right. Then a new responsibility fell on the ringmaster or whoever was master of ceremonies. He had to put all the hands on their guard and prepare them for action. A little coolness and some deception were necessary. He never stopped the performance. That would have given the intruders a cue for raising mischief. The exercises kept right on, but when the ring master was ready he just went out in the sawdust, where he could be heard, and shouted, as though he wanted one of the boys: 'Hey, Rube! Every one knew what that meant, and in a twinkling every soul who could bear arms, so to speak, was eqipped and ready for the fray. Then, if there was occasion for it, a 'bouncing act' was performed that knocked your metropolitan shows of that kind into the shade. Sometimes they were downright pitched battles fought in the tent. But generally the circus people came off all right. The cry of 'Hey, Rube!' put them on the alert, and were never caught napping. That's why all the old timers on the road are stirred up when they hear that cry."

The Hot Springs of Yellowstone Park.

It can do no possible harm to tell the whole truth about the Yellowstone, and to acknowledge that while the great park contains certainly the seven wonders of the world in natural magnificence, the great spaces between these different wonders are immense distance of utterly uninteresting scenery, which one traverses over roads covered with a white binding dust which is very nearly intolerable. It is true that the hot springs, and the geysers, and the Paint Pots, and the falls, and the canyon, and the lake, and the many colored pools, are worth any amount of trouble in getting to them; but it is also true that they are worth taking any amount of trouble to lessen the trouble; and since it could all be removed by so simple a thing as a few rails and a locomotive, it is certainly a pity that a state of things should be left existing which prevents the very young, and very old, the very fastidious or the very weak from enjoying the real wonders of such a journey.

In the meantime, however, there is no railway, and our friends, as the next best thing, would hire special teams and camp out.

Joseph was pressed into service as guide. It was very cold in the corridors of the hotel, but a single step from the piazza proved their light satteen travelling dresses more comfortable than the blue flannel gowns still waiting for the reputed frost of the Yellowstone. Colored glasses were necessary to shield the eyes the intense glare in the sunlight of the snowy terraces, dropping one after another for two miles from the dark pine woods above and around them, like a series of beautiful frozen cascades.

"I notice there is only one man who has the courage for figures," said the man of sense, referring to his guide-books as they crossed the white plateau at the base of the extinct springs, and paused at the foot of Old Liberty cap, the cone of an extinct geyser, towering fifty feet into the air. "He seems to know all about it, and declares that it took just fifty-four centuries to build up this thing."

"I can tell you who he is said the knowing Joseph, with a laugh. "He's the man that tells you the boiling river puts 50,000 barrels of hot water into the Gardner every twenty-four hours. I've often told him he'd oughter have let us know when he was going to measure it."

"'Any estimate of the age of the lower terrace would be pretty conjectural'" read the man of sense from another guide-book. "Still I suppose there is no doubt about its being a matter of conturies. In that case, how soon do they expect to finish repairing Devil's Thumb?"

For they had walked over the smaller column, which was not only extinct but crumbling with age and decrepitude. Art was endeavoring to assist nature and repair the waste by bringing water from the hot springs just above in wooden troughs, letting it trickle down the sides of the cone and evaporate, to leave its snowy deposit to repair the ravages of time.

"Well, that feller that knows so much about the figgers," explained Joseph, "says the orange geyser builds a foot in a century. And he says the hot springs will deposit a sixteenth of an inch in four days. All I know about it is that I can put a beer bottle under some of the fallin, water and turn it round once or twice and have it beautifully coated over with a white crust that won't crumble in a day or two."

"Question: If you can coat a beer bottle in a day or two, how long will it take to build a geyser cone? Come, Mabel, you were last at your books."

"Fifty-four centuries," answered the maiden, promptly.

"Correct. You may go up to the head;" and the imperturbable pointed to the upper terrace towering above them.

It was not at all a steep climb, but they had to be wary about stepping into the little rills of hot water trickling down from the upper springs.

"What is that dust?" exclaimed the convert, suddenly. "I never saw dust rising from ice before."

"Well, marm," said the smiling Joseph, "in the first place, 'tain't dust; and in the next place, 'tain't ice. The dust is steam, and the ice is formation."

"Of course," said the convert. "I ought to have known. But I can't divest myself of the idea that all this white rock is arctic snow."

"Well I don't know,'" said the imperturbable; "this isn't exactly what I should call arctic."

He had been, with the maiden, the first to reach the top, and was gazing into the depths of the first of the mammoth hot springs. The wind had blown toward him a sudden whiff of hot, sulphurous steam, and he had stepped back quickly, only to find that he had stumbled into one of the innocent-looking rills, that was decidedly warm, even through his boot.

But what a magnificent sight it was! The whole snowy mass, that had looked cold and silent under the pale moon the night before, was now glowing, gleaming, pulsating with life under the morning sun. For perhaps a hundred acres the white surface was studded with brilliant pools, set like jewels, clear as diamonds, lovelier in color than opals, in rims of fretted frost delicate as lace and firm as marble. Over these coraline edges trickles softly the gentle overflow of the lovely lakes, falling, falling tremulously and without a sound, over the fluted reedlike columns of the terraces below, only to leave them harder than they were before.

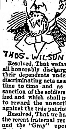
"Isn't it incredible," said the man of sense, "that water so particularly clear should hold anything in solution so particularly hard?"

"I don't know," murmured the imperturbable, dreamily. "It's like the careless remark of a woman who had packed her trunks for Europe, that sometime she would like to go to the Yellowstone; it sounds remarkably simple, but you will find before long that there is an adamantine purpose at the bottom of it."

Greenfield, Mass., gave a striking example of neighborly kindness by voting not to prosecute the bonds of the defaulting Treasurer, Foster, because prosecution would throw the entire loss, $10,000, upon the shoulders of his only responsible bondsman, Charles Henry. Mr. Henry is an old and respected merchant, who recently retired with just enough money to pass an old age of comfort. The suit, if successful, would have stripped him of everything. This issue was squarely made in the meeting, and the town voted not to prosecute.

MINNESOTA CONGRESSMEN.

Two Democratic Conventions Held and Thomas Wilson and J. L. MacDonald Re-nominated.



The first congressional district democratic convention met at Rochester, and after organization proceeded to adopt a platform in which President Cleveland is extolled, and his course endorsed; Hon. Thomas Wilson was eulogized and endorsed, and the career of Mark H. Dunnell severely criticised and denounced. The closing resolutions were these:

Resolved, That we favor liberal pensions for all honorably discharged Union soldiers and their dependents under such restricting and discriminating acts as should be enacted from time to time and as shall meet with the sanction of the soldiers themselves as organized and which shall not be construed so as to reward the unworthy and unentitled as against the true patriot and the deserving.

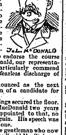
Resolved, That we have seen with pleasure the recent fraternal reunion of the "Blue" and the "Gray" upon the battlefield of Gettysburg, where a quarter of a century ago American valor displayed a courage unequalled in the history of the world; that under the wise administration of President Cleveland sectional feeling has passed away, and the whole country is united now in ties of fraternal liberty and unity.

Resolved, That we invite electors who believe in honest government by the people and for the people to unite with us in the return of our nominees to place and duty, that such places may be honorably filled and such duties honestly discharged.

The resolutions were adopted by a rising vote and cheers. On motion the convention proceeded to nominate a candidate for congress, and Thomas Wilson was nominated by a rising vote amidst great enthusiasm.

THIRD DISTRICT.

The third congressional democratic convention met at Red Wing on the same day, and after the usual preliminary proceedings the committee on resolutions sent up the following resolutions, which were received with considerable enthusiasm and unanimously adopted:



Resolved, That the Democracy of the Third congressional district of the State of Minnesota hereby fully and emphatically endorse the national platform of the Democratic party adopted by the St. Louis convention, and congratulate the country upon the nomination of Cleveland and Thurman. That we are honestly in favor of a reduction of the existing tariff taxes upon necessaries, to the extent that no more revenue shall be collected from the people than is necessary for the support of the government economically administered; that we also endorse the course of Hon. John L. MacDonald, our representative in congress, and particularly commend him for his faithful and fearless discharge of his official duties.

Chairman Child announced as the next business the nomination of a candidate for congress.

E. C. Stringer of Hastings secured the floor. He nominated Judge MacDonald two years ago and he was again appointed to that, no doubt, pleasing duty again. His speech was a clean cut and forceful one.

"I rise to nominate the gentleman who now represents you in congress," said Mr. Stringer. "Yet it is hardly necessary for me to formally nominate him. The people did it long ago. This district was created by a Republican legislature for Republican purposes, but in Judge MacDonald we found a candidate to thwart their aims. His record you know, and his personal and public life you know, and no man need be ashamed to vote for Judge John L. MacDonald. He is the only man who can lead us again to victory."

At the suggestion of Mr. Stringer a vote was taken on the nomination by roll call each county casting its solid vote for Judge MacDonald.

Another Murderer Hung.

Charles, better known as "Blinkey," Morgan was hanged in the Ohio penitentiary. The crime for which he gave his life was the murder of Detective Hulligan near Ravenna. As the hour of execution approached he became somewhat nervous. During the day he wrote an order turning over his body to Dr. Clemmer for scientific purposes, but later recalled the order at the request of Nellie Lowry, his reputed mistress, who visited the body. At 1:10 the warden informed Morgan that the time had come for him to execute the sentence, and the party at once started from the cell into the execution room. Morgan was as cool as he had been all day, and walked up the scaffold with a firm step. On the scaffold he said he had no statement to make. The noose was adjusted and at 1:20 the trap fell, Morgan saying just before "Good-bye, Nellie," referring to the Cleveland woman, Nell Lowry. His collar caught the rope in some way and prevented the noose from drawing as it should, and his neck was not broken. He was strangled. Morgan addressed a letter to the warden of the penitentiary in which, after praising the warden for his efficient management, he protests that he is innocent of the murder of Detective Hulligan, and of the theft of the furs. He claims that he was in Philadelphia at the time the murder occurred. The letter concludes as follows:

I have read of men being murdered for their money, but I am judiciously, or rather injudiciously murdered. In conclusion I repeat I am innocent of any complicity with the robbery of the furs or the murder of Detective Hulligan. I write this statement to obviate the necessity of making any verbal remarks from the scaffold, and also to keep reporters of the press from butchering up to suit their own ideas what I desire to say. You will understand from the foregoing, however, that I shall have nothing to say save what I have written here.

On the morning of Jan. 28, 1887, the fur store of Benedict & Rudey, Cleveland, was entered, and $8,000 worth of sealskin sacques and furs taken, and Harry McMunn, a noted crook, was arrested as one of the probable burglars. Requisition papers were secured, and Capt. Hoehn and Detective Hulligan of Cleveland prepared to take their man back to the scene of his crime. When the 11 o'clock train for Cleveland reached Ravenna the two officers were set upon by a band of thugs, and after Hulligan had been half murdered and Hoehn so badly injured that he laid for months hovering between life and death, the prisoner McMunn, was unshackled from his captors and hurried away by the desperadoes. Hulligan and Hoehn were taken to Cleveland that night, and after lingering in great agony until Feb. 8th, Detective Hulligan died of his injuries. Suspicion pointed to three men as the probable murderers, namely: Charles Morgan, Bill Hanley and Pat Harrington. They were apprehended after a hard struggle at Alpena, Mich., on June 28th, 1887. During the struggle with Morgan, Sheriff Lynch, of Alpena, was shot in the leg, and blood poisoning setting in he died in great agony. Morgan was found guilty of murder in the first degree and sentenced to be hanged. The fight to save his life was very bitter.

HORRIBLE LOSS OF LIFE.

Another Tenement House Fire in New York in which Thirteen persons are Roasted Alive, and More Will Die from Injuries.

Thirteen people were burned to death in a six-story building in the rear of No. 197 Bowery, New York City. Six more, burned so badly that they will probably die, were removed to various hospitals. The house was a ramshackle affair hidden in the middle of the block, the only entrance to it being a narrow alleyway from the Bowery. In this cage-in building lived 150 people. Each of the six floors was occupied by a single family, the head of which was a tailor who made clothing for the cheap wholesale clothing houses and employed from fifteen to twenty men, women and children, in addition to his family, in making up the clothing. They were all Polish Jews, who worked, ate and slept in the crowded rooms. While all the occupants of the building were busily at work, flames broke out on the lower floor. The fire had, when discovered, already gained such headway that it was in full possession of the stairway and escape by it seemed impossible. Many of the frightened inmates rushed down through the flames and escaped to the narrow court yard, with clothes ablaze and hands and bodies burned. Six of them were so severely burned that they may die. There were fire escapes on the front and rear of the house, but before any of the inmates had tried to escape by them the flames had ascended through the house and were reaching from the windows, so that descent by the fire-escapes was impossible. One man, already half burned to death, leaped from a fifth story window and fell a mangled mass of flesh in the little court yard. Others jumped from the second story windows and escaped with bruises. One poor woman lay upon her back in a little store in the Bowery with not only her clothing but her hair burned off. She was unconscious, and the surgeon said she would not live to reach the hospital. Another young girl was delirious with pain. She was not so badly burned as the others, but in a mad jump from one of the windows she had received internal injury, and also cut a terrible gash in the side of her head from which the blood gushed forth.

Charles W. Norman, property man of the People's theater, which adjoins the burned building, with several of his comrades, ran to the roof of the theater, carrying a small ladder, which they stretched over to a window of the burning building. A woman with her hair and clothes already ablaze appeared at the window, and Norman called to her to cross over on the ladder. She cried back that she could not leave her two children. Norman tried to cross over on the ladder, but the flames drove him back and he could not save her. Afterwards the charred bodies of the mother and two children were found in the building. After the fire the fireman found thirteen bodies in the building. That of the man who leaped from the fifth story window increased the death list to fifteen, while it is feared that the death of some if not all those in the hospitals will make this number greater. Several of the bodies were burned so badly that they fell apart when moved, and the firemen were obliged to lower them from the windows in nets.

The report of the Missouri river commission for the year ended June 30 says that no money was appropriated for continuing improvement on this river last year and no progress was made. The commission ask for $1,000,000 for general improvements below Kansas City, and a like sum from the mouth of the river to Sioux City. It also asks for $150,000 to continue surveys, examinations and pay personal expenses of the commissioners.

It is doubtful whether Congressman W. L. Scott of Pennsylvania will be able to take an active part in the campaign. He is seriously ill at the house of his daughter at Long Branch. He is a man of slight physique, extremely nervous, the head of great business enterprises. He aspired, besides, to be the chief adjutant of the administration and the executive of the campaign. He has broken down.

The lecture delivered by Prof. Goodwin Smith at Winnipeg on the question of our trade relations with the United States was most successful. The audience was unanimous for reciprocity.

For the last ten days the weather has been bitterly cold in some parts of Invernesshire, Scotland, and there was a fresh fall of snow on the Grampian range. Snow completely covered the Glenfeshie hills, and in the Corries it lay to a depth of six inches. The thermometer registered 47 deg., on the grass. The effect on the principal moors in Scotland will be disastrous.

Ex-Senator James C. Fair was attacked at San Francisco by a man named Eisfelder, who drew a revolver, and was knocked down by a blow on the head from the butt of the ex-senator's pistol. Eisfelder had threatened to publish a scurrilous article against Mr. Fair if the latter did not pay him $5,000. The difficulty occurred on the steps of the Nevada bank.

Mr. Noyes, postmaster at Goodwin, Minn., together with his wife and two other ladies' went in bathing in the Crow river. Mr. Noyes ventured out over his depth, and before any assistance could reach him, was drowned. He was a young man, twenty-seven years of age.

A few months ago William K. Shaw, a stranger, opened a wholesale liquor house in Sioux Fall, Dak. Lately William Roth of Norwich, Conn., arrived, and had Shaw arrested on a charge of adultery, claiming that he was living with his (Roth's) wife. It seems from the best information obtainable that Roth, who was cashier of the Shetucket National Bank of Norwich, Conn., was, on Feb. 25, 1885, sentenced for four years in the penitentiary for perjury for swearing to a false statement of the condition of the bank, but was recently pardoned by President Cleveland. During his imprisonment Shaw won the affections of Roth's wife and eloped with her, bringing up in Sioux Falls last spring.

The postal authorities are after William Raines Colby, formerly of Chicago, but now of San Francisco, for the robbing of a mail car in 1874, near Austin, Tex. Colby, in 1875, under the name of Raines, was pastor of a Baptist church at Hearne Junction in Texas, where he robbed a mail car, for which crime he was sent to the penitentiary. He was pardoned out by President Grant, on account of a severe illness which he thought to be fatal. After that he figured as a spiritualistic medium in New York, San Francisco, Boston and Chicago. Shortly after he was pardoned out of the penitentiary it was discovered that he was the man who committed the robbery near Austin mentioned above, and it is for this crime the authorities want him.

Among the passengers on the steamer Rotterdam, at New York, was the Rev. J. V. Dundas of Rice county, Minn., who declared that he had no dutiable articles, in his baggage. A custom officer, however, found in his trunk a fine white Indian crepe shawl and a quantity of men and ladies' underwear, and 5,000 cigars in boxes snugly fitted in a false bottom of his trunk. The trunk was seized.

Matthew Byrne, a young stable helper of Staten island, jumped from the Brooklyn bridge. He is severely injured and may die. The cause of the leap is supposed to be unrequited love.

Lightning struck the house of Lawrence McLaughlin at Hazelwood, ten miles west of Faribault, Minn., during the late storm, killing Mrs. McLaughlin and her two sons Patrick and Lawrence.

The Swedish Lutheran church at Centre City, Minn., was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. The church was erected in 1882 at a cost of over $30,000. Insured for $10,500. It is believed that steps will be taken to rebuild at once. The heavy rain which continued to fall during the fire saved the village from total destruction. A number of outhouses and barns were struck by lightning and destroyed in the vicinity. The storm was one of the most severe in memory.

Early one morning at Blair, Nebraska, G. W. Tucker, engineer of the Acme mill, who sleeps in the building, was awakened by three burglars, who were attempting to carry away several sacks of flour. Tucker fired at the burglars, and one of them fell. They picked up the wounded man and carried him away. A big pool of blood was found on the floor. It is believed that the man is fatally shot.

Twenty-eight petitions, signed by over 2,000 people, have been received by Gov. Hemple, of Washington Territory, asking him to commute the death sentence of Mrs. Pyle, waiting execution at Walla Walla, Wash. It is the first case in the history of the Northern Pacific coast where a woman has been sentenced to death.

Mary Flynn has filed a petition in the district court of Iowa for $10,000 damages against her uncle, Michael Flynn, a wealthy farmer of that county. The petition charges Flynn, who is her guardian, with hanging her to a tree until she was nearly dead. Since the alleged assault the girl has been living with relatives here.

In reference to the dispatch of Secretary Bayard to Gov. Morehouse of Missouri, that papers concerning the application by the British government for a respite for Maxwell had been sent by mail, John J. Martin, one of Maxwell's attorney's, says that it came about through the efforts of Maxwell's father with Lord Salisbury. He claims that testimony is now obtainable which will clear Maxwell.

The list of fatalities on St. Paul's cable railway was lengthened by the death of William Thompson, a soldier of the regular army, who was run over and killed. The car was coming down the hill at a rapid rate, and when it had neared the corner, Thompson attempted to jump on without signaling the gripman. His foot struck the side platform on the grip car, but the force of the motion swung him around and he fell between the cars, when the wheels of the rear car passed over him, killing him almost instantly.

Republican Pointers.

Cal Brice and the New York Aqueduct Swindle.

Chairman Brice, of the Democratic National Campaign Committee, protests that he never had any interest in the New York aqueduct contracts; but he admits at the same time that "a relationship was formed" between him and the contractors which protected him as one of their sureties. The distinction is hardly sufficient to satisfy the country that the Democratic party has chosen a strictly honest man to conduct its affairs in the present canvass.—St. Louis Globe Dem.

Southern Favoritism.

The following are some of the features of the Mills bill which disclose its intense Southern and sectional character:

Louisiana sugar	68 per cent. duty.
Southern rice	100½ per cent. duty.
Northern Lumber	no duty.
Northern wool	no duty.
Northern salt	no duty.
Northern beans and peas	no duty.
Northern vegetables	no duty.
Northern flax (not dressed)	no duty.
Northern lime	no duty.

A Thoroughbred Rebel.

Senator Butler of South Carolina went home to make a speech at the dedication of a monument to ex-Confederate soldiers at Greenville, S. C. This is a passage from his speech as published in one of his own organs just received at Washington:

We were citizens of an independent commonwealth, independent in the sphere of her constitutional action before we became Confederate soldiers, and in becoming Confederate soldiers we did not cease to be citizens of an independent commonwealth. We became soldiers in obedience to the commands of our state, not of a revolutionary or irresponsible faction, but of a fully equipped organized government to which we then owed our primary allegiance, and when we ceased to be her soldiers we still remained citizens of our state, rejoicing still as citizens of a constitutional government devoted to its traditions and principles. Upon the failure of the Confederate government we renewed our allegiance to the Federal government, always remaining loyal citizens to our state; therefore whoever says we are traitors simply advertises his ignorance or lies. We can stand the epithet "rebel" because that places us in good company.

The Smile Drill.

Probably very few persons know what a smile drill is. It is one of the pleasant and harmless pranks with which the naval cadets at Anapolis refresh their powerful minds, when jaded with great intellectual exertions. The upper-class man holds up one finger, and the poor lower-class man must smile—just a little. Up goes another finger, and the smile must broaden; still another, and it is wider than before. At last all the fingers are up, and the grin is stretched as far as a grin can be. The rather painful situation can be prolonged until the cruel upper-class man is tired of seeing the other fellow smile. Then he closes his hand and the smile must instantly cease. Prompt obedience is the essence of smile drill, as of every other.

President Cleveland is putting the Democratic party through a smile drill on the question of free trade. He put up one finger, and they made an agonized effort to smile, though they didn't feel in the least like it. Then he put up another, and the smile was wider and sadder than before. The poor Democracy knew that, while it might be fun for Mr. Cleveland, it was death to them. Now he has got both hands up, and the party has a smile on apparently happy as it is broad, but a second look shows that it is haggard and forced. Hundreds of manufacturers and thousands of workingmen are leaving the party because they don't want free trade. On a certain evening next November President Cleveland will suddenly take in his hands, and the smile on the broad red face of the Democracy will give place to an expression of settled gloom.—N. Y. Tribune.

Five Good Reasons.

To the Editor of the Tribune.—Sir: Please give me five good reasons why a man should be a Republican. J. Walter.

1. Because there is everything in the record of the Republican party which he may be proud, and nothing of which he will be ashamed. It saved the Union, emancipated the slaves, restored specie payments, and reduced the National debt one half. Unlike the Democratic party, it has never been in alliance with slave-owners and the rum-power; it never pronounced the war for the Union a failure and sued for a craven peace; and it has never arrayed itself against the principles of honest finance and National honor.

2. Because Republicanism does not stand for the suppression of a single Democratic vote in any State of the Union. In every Republican State Democrats are free to vote as they please, and their ballots are counted as they are cast. Democracy stands for the suppression of Republican votes by intimidation, crime and fraud in every State formerly in rebellion.

3. Because the Republican party in its tariff legislation laid the foundations of a National prosperity unexampled in modern times, and defends the cause of American industry to-day against the combined attack of English manufacturers and the free-trade Democracy. The Solid South in the Confederate Constitution pronounced for free trade precisely as the party of Buchanan, Breckenridge and Douglas had done before the war, and as the party of Tilden, Hancock and Cleveland has done since. Republicanism is the cause of industrial independence.

4. Because the Republican party is American in its sympathies and its policy, believes in governing and developing America for the benefit of Americans, and would neither order its tariff policy for the accommodation and profit of foreigners, nor lower the country in the estimation of the world by compromising American honor through pusillanimous diplomacy. The Democratic party is equally un-American in its foreign and its domestic policy.

5. Because the Republican party is recruited from the more intelligent and progressive elements of American population, and is the organization in which all friends of Civil Service reform, practical temperance legislation, or of any other movement in the direction of good government naturally belong. The Democratic party is not hospitable to any real reform in government, as the Civil Service reformers have learned to their shame.—Tribune.

What's in a Name.

The people of this country don't care a red cent what you call, or pretend to call, the revenue policy of the democratic party. You may call it free trade, British free trade, revenue reform, tariff for revenue only, tariff reduction, or by any other of the dozen forms of expression used to describe it. It is the thing itself which concerns the American people—not the name of it.

The actual policy of the democratic party is a policy which vastly enhances the importation of foreign-made goods into this country in competition with goods which are made in this country. Isn't that so? Of course it is; nobody denies it. Indeed, it is the avowed purpose of the Mills bill, which is admitted to be only a partial carrying out of the democratic purpose.

Now, never mind what this policy is to be called for a moment. This is the thing which the democratic party wants to bring about. It wants to bring it about, because the opposite policy is in force through the existing tariff. The existing tariff is intended to restrict the importation of foreign-made goods which would come into competition with home made goods. The object of the democratic party is to get rid of a tariff of this kind. The democratic party would partially accomplish this object if it could put the Mills bill in force.

By way of recapitulation, then, it simmers down to this: The amount of revenue to be raised being identically the same, the two parties would put duties on entirely different articles, or in different rates on the same article—the Republican party with a view to keep foreign-made articles out of competition with home-made articles; the democratic party with a view solely to get revenue.

Now you call these opposing policies what you please. In brief outline, these are the policies. The republican policy is correctly called the protective policy. The democratic policy, whatever you call it, is the opposite of the republican policy. The opposite of the protective policy is as a matter of fact, the free trade policy. It is properly so denominated in the formulas of the books of political economy. It is so understood in England. It is so understood by free traders everywhere.

All this splitting of hairs to which the democratic press is addicted just now about the mere name of the democratic policy is intended to deceive serious minded voters as to the actual policy of the party—as to the very thing which the party will do if it gets the power to do it.—Sioux City Journal.

Polk County Journal.
W. G. COOKE, Publisher.
CROOKSTON, - - MINNESOTA.

The late James Freeman Clarke left an autographic will giving his entire estate to his wife, from whom he says he received it.

The champion fish liar lives at Ironwood, Mich. He tells of a party of four trouters who caught 3,000 trout in three days, gave 250 to their friends and ate the others—2,750.

Out in Delano, Cal., a black ram was mean enough to chase a black bear and run him up a tree, where he was shot by the gentle shepherd in charge of the flock.

Some time ago a woman was drowned in a creek near Americus, Ga. Now it is said that her ghosts haunts the place and walks back and forth across the bridge spanning the stream, carrying a torch in her hand.

In Webster county, Ga., recently, twenty hogs belonging to a farmer took refuge from a storm under a clump of bushes that grew near a tall pine tree. The tree was struck by lightning and every hog instantly killed.

Deer are seen nearly every day in the vicinity of Bangor, Me., and seem to be gaining confidence in man. A fine specimen was seen grazing in a pasture a few days ago by a man driving past, and the animal did not leave at his approach.

About the maddest man in North Carolina is he who, while in New York, ordered the "pie with the biggest name" on the hotel bill of fare, and found "nothin, but huckleberry" which he had eaten all his life; and worse, that when he got home some wag told all his neighbors of it.

A dentist in Calgary, Manitoba, has been busy lately extracting teeth from Indians. It is stated that before the advance of civilization, when the natives subsisted solely on Buffalo meat, decayed teeth were unknown among them. Braves who stand the torture of the sun dance without flinching are reduced to a state of abject terror when they feel the cold grip of the forceps.

In England there is just space enough between the edge of the railroad station platforms and the footboards of the passenger cars to let an unwary traveler fall between and be ground to pieces by the moving train. An accident or two has happened, and an agitation has begun in favor of reform in either the footboards or the platforms. "In America," the reformers urge, "such an accident could not happen."

A young blacksmith of Long Branch has died from hemorrhage, due to the extraction of a tooth by a New York dentist. A physician, who was called to attend the case, succeeded in stopping the flow of blood for a time, but it was finally found necessary to take the patient to the hospital, where he died in spite of everything that was done there to stop the hemorrhage. A New York paper says that the occurrence is not an unusual one in the metropolis, as there is about thirty of the same kind reported at the Coroner's office every year.

A curious story anent the Japanese emperor's opinion of dancing is told by The Tokio Dempo. That journal relates that recently a minister of state, while in audience, touched upon the subject of dancing, whereupon his majesty expressed the opinion that the prevalence of such a voluptuous custom was a sure indication of the decay of the nation. The state minister in question, hearing his majesty express such strong views on the subject, upon retiring from his presence immediately gave private orders to those engaged in the construction of the new palace to dismantle the dancing saloon in the new building, which was already completed.

The British Admiralty has been aware for some time that hidden danger was lurking somewhere in the Southern part of the Red Sea. Two British steamers had a brief but bitter experience with the invisible enemy, and then they foundered, but, strange to say, their captains were unable to tell within quite a number of miles where the trouble could be found. Last year three British men-of-war cruised around, one after the other, from shore to shore, only to report at last that their search was fruitless. In April of this year, however, another vessel stumbled upon the cause of all the damage. It was a little patch of coral, hardly 20 feet square, hidden under 15 feet of water, while all around it the sea was about 180 feet deep. It was not long before dynamite made trouble for that coral reef, and mariners are again able to traverse the Red Sea in tranquility of mind.

RESUME OF THE NEWS

Doings at Washington.

Mr. Muldrow, assistant secretary of the interior, says that the department has received no official information as to the refusal of the Indians to sign the Sioux treaty. "Nor," said he, "do we expect to have any statement from the commissioners unless they shall be able to arrive at a result, or until it shall become apparent that they will not be able to come to a conclusion. We had no intimations that the treaty would not be signed." Senator Sabin expressed great surprise that the Indians had refused to sign, and could hardly credit the report. All of his information had been that the treaty would be signed. Congressman Lind thought that some plan would yet be discovered by which the Indians would be made to see that the treaty would be of benefit to them.

The Record of Casualties.

On the logging road about 15 miles east of Otsego lake in Michigan a train of empty flat cars struck the dry limbs of a fallen tree across the road and jumped the track. Twenty-five workmen are reported injured, 16 seriously and three will probably die. They are nearly all Polanders.

William Small, an old citizen and prosperous farmer, living on a large farm between Utica and St. Charles, Minn., was in his field shocking barley. The sky was clear, but the oppressiveness of the air gave warning of a coming storm. Suddenly a bolt of lightening struck Mr. Small dead. The current entered at the back of the neck and followed down the spine, tearing his trousers and shoes completely off.

The hoisting works of the bimetalic mills of the Granite Mountain grant, at Phillipsburg, Montana, was fired while the bucket was being heated to tar ropes. A spark ignited the tar and it spread quickly to the rafters and roof, and owing to the scarcity of water nothing could be done to save the works. A hundred men were at work in the shops, but escaped through a 200-foot level to an air shaft and to the surface. The works were the finest in the country, but will be immediately rebuilt.

A. Hart, of St. Peter was drowned in the Minnesota at Le Sueur, Minn. He had been to Henderson after a load of malt, and was returning via the ferry road. Upon arriving at the river, it is supposed that he had fallen asleep and awoke up just as his team arrived at the water's edge, the ferry boat being on the opposite side. The bank being steep, he was unable to turn his team around, and he jumped off his load, unfastened the horses from the wagon, and in getting them around they stepped off into over fourteen feet of water, drawing him with them.

Criminal Doings.

Willie Ellsworth of Laporte, Ind., the 18-year-old son of Dr. Ellsworth, was shot in the bowels by Oliver White, another youth of the same age, killing him almost instantly It was the result of a boyish quarrel.

Rudolph Sevic, the Chicago gunsmith alleged to be implicated in the dynamite plot against the lives of Judges Gary, Grinnell, and others, was leased on bail, the bonds on various charges against him aggregating $10,000.

The body of Michael Weisr was found near the depot at Lake Linden, Mich., with his head blown off and brains scattered 100 feet. It is supposed he suicided by discharging a Hercules shell in his mouth. He was single aged forty.

Masked robbers entered the farm house of Conrad Doup, in Knox county, Ohio, beat the old man with a club, bound him with a chalk line and then stole $2,000 from a trunk in which Doup kept his money. No clue to the robbers.

Gov. Martin, of Kansas, has decided that the lawlessness engaged in by Steven's county people must stop. Accordingly he has directed Attorney General Bradford and Brig. Gen. Meyers to proceed there, investigate the situation and report to him as soon as possible.

Chris Nelson, a railroad laborer, shot himself in the head at Spokane Falls, W. T., and died soon after. He came from Minnesota a few weeks ago. The city authorities are at a loss to know how to find his relatives. Nelson was well supplied with money. He was of Danish extraction.

Frank Chleboun, whose testimony was chiefly the cause of securing the indictment of his comrades in the Chicago anarchist "revenge" cases, was released on bail. Though he was indicted with the others, the charges against him will not be pressed in consideration of his turning state's evidence.

George Newman, a prosperous farmer of Lloyd county, Iowa, was found hanging from a tree. He and his wife went to Charles City, and while returning home got into a quarrel. Newman jumped out of the wagon and his wife drove home. This was the last seen of Newman until he was found dangling from a tree. It was unquestionably suicide.

George Townsend, who lives near Randolph, Wis., came home drunk and commenced to abuse his mother. His brother Emery told him to desist sev eral times, but George paid no attention to him, and, fearing that his brother would kill his mother, Emery secured a revolver and shot four bullets into him. Townsend, it is thought, will recover. Emery gave himself up.

State Senator Meserrey, who had returned home from the investigation of the university troubles at Iowa City, was stabbed three times in a personal encounter which was bred in a political caucus. The ex-postmaster, a Cherokee, was struck by Meserrey and he retaliated with a pocket knife. Meserrey has a long scalp wound and deep cut under one arm.

Two deputy sheriffs were fatally wounded near Conway, Ark., while trying to arrest Fred Conway, a farmer. While the warrant was being read to him the latter drew a knife and stabbed one of the officers, who, drawing his revolver, fired at Conway, but killed the other deputy instead. The sheriff has sent a posse after the murderer, but those who know him say he can never be taken alive.

Frank C. Bush, a lad of seventeen years, is locked up at Chicago awaiting the arrival of an officer from Madison, Wis., with the requisition for him on a charge of burglary. Recently Frank went to Madison to visit a friend named Harry Shaw, and while he was there young Shaw, with Louis Reed, Fred Merrill and three other lads, broke into a safe belonging to Merrill's father. The burglars realized $1,000. Bush left for Chicago. The following day one of the thieves weakened and the entire gang was arrested. Bush admits his guilt.

A daring burglary was committed at Duluth, Minn, which very nearly caused the death of an old and respected resident. Washington Watts was awakened by a noise in his bedroom, and looking up, he saw a man in the act of leaving the room. Jumping out of bed, Mr. Watts asked what he was doing there. The only answer was a volley of brutal oaths followed by a crack of a revolver. The bullet grazed Watts' right eye-brow, inflicting a slight wound, but he pluckily sprang forward and closed with his assailant before he had time to fire a second shot. They both rolled to the foot of the stairs where the robber managed to break loose and get away. In the fall Mr. Watts broke one of his fingers, cut his right knee severely and was otherwise bruised and hurt.

Foreign Cullings.

The Winnipeg banks decided that American money cannot go in Manitoba and a big discount will be made on the currency of this country. The discount is 3 per cent on all paper money. Silver dollars go for 95 cents; 50-cent pieces for 40 cents; 25-cent pieces for 20 cents. There is no discount on 10 and 5-cent pieces. Winnipeg is flooded with American money.

Personal Gossip.

Bartley Campbell, the well known playwright and manager, died at the Middleton, N. Y., insane asylum. He had been ill in bed for some weeks and his death was not unexpected. Mr. Cambell was born in Allegheny City, Penn., in 1843. At the age of fourteen years he went into newspaper life at Pittsburg.

Hon. Samuel J. Randall has been taken in a special car to Wayne station. It was said by Dr. Mallin and Col. Gerker that Mr. Randall bore up well throughout the entire journey from Washington, and that the only discomfort experienced was at the latter city, when being removed from his residence to the car. He was fatigued by the transfer, and gave evidence of it.

Miscellaneous News Items.

McGarrigle, the noted Chicago boodler, was in Winnipeg last week for several days, registering at a hotel under an assumed name. The object of his visit was to meet his wife, who arrived from Chicago and proceeded with her husband to Banff next day.

The body of Samuel Josephs, traveling agent for M. & H. B. Moses, New York, was found in the lake at Marquette, Mich. The coroner's jury found a verdict of suicide while in unsound mental and hysterical condition.

A stone weighing about 1,000 pounds fell from the third story of the court house at Chicago, making the fourth or fifth one which has fallen from this building within a few years. A few hours previous to the accident a huge rock fell from the fifth story of a house on Clark street, grazing the head of John Burgess, who was on the sidewalk.

The published story to the effect that the town of Findlay, O., is in danger of being blown up by a subterranean explosion of natural gas in the not very distant future is discredited by geologists. Prof. G. K. Gilbert, of the geological survey, said that he would question the story having any foundation from the name of the geologist alone.

Druggist Whitney of Des Moines, Iowa was searched recently in a new fashion. Under directions of a lawyer the searchers employed an amateur photographer, who forced his instrument through the druggists rear window and secured an instantaneous view of a party all drinking together in couples and groups. This photographer is likely to have quite a sale for his pictures.

W. C. White, who was shot at Bird Plain, Minn., was not so badly wounded as first reported. Dr. Murphy of St. Paul was called and he thinks his chance for recovery good. Parker is in jail at Beaver Falls. He says that when White was at his (Parker's) father's house in Hudson, Wis., two weeks ago he applied opprobrious epithets to his dead wife and her mother, Mrs. Parker. For that and his treatment of his wife, he shot him.

The building inspector of St. Paul issued a permit to The Pioneer Press company for the construction of their elegant new twelve-story building at the corner of Fourth and Robert streets. The building is to cost $650,000, and the inspector's fee on the permit amounted to $327.50. In comparison as to size The Pioneer Press building is to cost more than any building ever erected in St. Paul. Next to the court house, it is the most costly building ever constructed in the city.

The grasshopper question at Perham, Minn., is still unsolved. Millions of small ones have hatched out the past two weeks on land that was plowed last fall and this spring. The full-fledged ones are beginning to lay their eggs. The air is full of the hoppers, which fly a few miles and begin to eat in a new place. It is now a little over four weeks since the bounty was offered and during that time 13,184 bushels have been caught, paid for and buried. The work of destroying them wil be kept up.

Two squads of Indians from the White Earth and Leech Lake reservations are picking blueberries, the one at Twin lakes, the other at the thoroughfare between the upper and Gull lakes, two or three miles apart and twelve or fifteen miles from Brainerd, Minn. One day a burly Indian from each squad came to Brainerd, and, having procured whisky, started for their camps bent on a fight. Near Gull lake they set upon a half-breed teamster of J. H. Hallett, who is trading with the Indians, and with knives and bludgeons nearly killed him. Other Indians interfered or he would have been murdered. Growing out of this a bloody fight ensued among the Indians themselves.

Indians Refuse to Sign the Sioux Treaty.

Sitting Bull has returned to the Standing Rock agency, and if his influence has been used at all it has been in the direction of engendering still stronger opposition to the proposed treaty. In the last private council nearly all the Indians now at the agency participated. Speeches were made by John Grass, Long Dog, Mad Bear and others, all against the measure. The feeling was more intense than ever, and not only was a vote taken which was unanimous against signing either paper, the red or black, but the most solemn oath known to the Sioux was taken. Each arose and swore by the Great Spirit that he would never sign the papers. It is evident that the commission, when it met the Indian in council, did not know of this part of the proceedings for it was more hopeful, and Chairman Pratt was confident that after the day's council the Indians would sign.

Gov. Church, who arrived from Bismark was introduced to the Indians as being next to the great father, and he spoke for about half an hour, urging the Indians to reconsider their action and sign the treaty. He assured them of the friendliness of the great father and that the measure under discussion was in their interest; that they ought to accept it. Maj. McLaughlin also talked. He told them that, as he had always had their confidence, he would not advise anything that was not for their best interest. He advised them to sign. Judge Wright also made a calm and convincing argument, the best that has yet been made, but, so far as could be observed, not the least impression was made upon the Indians.

John Grass said he could not understand why the whites were so anxious to get a portion of their lands, when there was so much vacant land on the other side of the river. He said he would not sign, and that all the Indians had decided not to sign either paper. His declaration discouraged the commission somewhat but they continued to argue. Mad Bear also spoke against the measure. Sitting Bull did not say anything, but he talks freely to the Indians individually. Gall has not said much thus far, but what he has said has been emphatic. Running Antelope, who has always been friendly to the whites, and because of friendliness heretofore has had but little influence with the braves, is also opposed to the measure and does not hesitate to tell the commission of his opposition. Sitting Bull and Rain-in-the-Face would not even sit in the council, but remained outside. Sitting Bull refuses to state where he has been during the past ten days, but it is supposed he has held conferences with emissaries from Red Cloud and other chiefs in lower agencies, who are also opposed to the measure. The Indians are anxious to have the councils end as some of them say they have crops up the Cannon Ball to look after, and that it will do no good to keep them longer. They remain, however, as they put it, because they did not want to shame their agent, whom they love.

The Minnesota Election.

The election in Minnesota this fall includes all the state offices, presidential electors, congressmen, members of the house, possibly part of the senators, and several district judges. The list which will be voted on in the state is as follows:

Seven presidential electors; governor to succeed A. R. McGill; lieutenant governor to A. E. Rice; secretary of state to succeed Hans Mattson; treasurer to succeed James Bobleter; attorney general to succeed M. E. Clapp; chief justice of the supreme court to succeed James Gilfillan, and an associate justice to succeed M. W. Collins.

Congressmen are to be elected to succeed Thos. Wilson in the First district, John Lind in the Second, J. L. MacDonald in the Third, Edmund Rice in the Fourth and Knute Nelson in the Fifth. The judges of district courts throughout the state whose terms expire and whose successors are to be elected are as follows:

First district, William M. McClure; Second district, William Louis Kelly; Third district, C. M. Start; Fourth district, William Lochren, J. P. Rea, H. E. Hicks; Fifth district, Thomas S. Buckham; Sixth district, M. E. Severance; Seventh district, D. B. Searle; Eighth district, James C. Edson; Eleventh district, O. P. Stearns; Twelfth district, J. H. Brown; Fifteenth district, C. B. Sleeper; Sixteenth district, Calvin L. Brown.

The Irrepressible Apaches.

The war department has received a telegram from the commanding officer at San Carlos, Ariz, as follows:

At the request of the acting Indian agent I sent Capt. Lee, Tenth cavalry, with his troop and some scouts up San Carlos to arrest three Indians reported intrenched in rocks and resisting. Lee, upon arrival, found they had fled. The command followed several trails, upon one of which they were found. Scouts exchanged shots with a small party said to belong to Cassadia s' band. The scouts think they killed one Indian. Some scouts and herders driving 250 agency cattle to a grazing camp were attacked by a party of Indians fifteen miles from here. The scouts and herders fled, and what became of the cattle is as yet unknown. I will do all I can to quiet the Indians, but there may be serious trouble. The bands are those of Cassadais and Chilchuana. Seicer thinks if the Indians will leave the reservation they will go North and West

Imprisoned in a Deep Well.

John P. Anderson, living on a farm near Johnstown, Neb., was cleaning an old well about seventy feet deep. The curbing gave away and precipitated him to the bottom beneath a mass of dirt. When it became known that he was buried his neighbors went to work to dig him out. They concluded he was dead and arrangements were made for the funeral to take place on Monday. They kept on digging for the body and on Sunday they were startled to hear the prisoner speak to them and ask them to let in some light. The curbing had so fallen as to let in air and protect him from the weight of the dirt. The new well was down about fifty-five feet and it was proposed to tunnel into the old well. The men were frightened out of the new well just as they were about to reach the old one. They were afraid of a caving in. A man then went down the old well in answer to an appeal from Anderson, and finding that there were only three or four feet of sand and boards to go through, he dug away the sand, and lifting a board gave Anderson food and water. The first he had had since Thursday. A rope was then let down and Anderson tied it round himself, but it was unsuccessful. A later dispatch says: John Anderson has passed the ninth day in the well at Johnstown, Neb. Food and water have been given him regularly and he is gradually growing stronger. The rescuers worked as rapidly as circumstances would permit in removing the dirt from above him. This had to be done with utmost caution as the displacing of one board or the giving away of any part of the earth on which his frail platform rests is liable to precipitate Anderson to the bottom of the well 100 feet below. The old curbing is all that is covering him now. This has formed into the roof of the box in which he is and to get at him from the top a hole must be cut in this roof. All efforts was made to saw through the roof, but it was abandoned as the sand commenced to cave and Anderson's platform sunk two inches. The greatest hope of his rescue now is on account of the fact that tools have been passed in to him and he works as hard as his strength will permit in bracing the platform. The danger of gorging himself after his long fast is now past and he eats with relish and avidity all the food that is passed in to him.

John Anderson, who has been imprisoned in a well at Johnstown, Neb., was rescued after ten days of unceasing labor by neighbors. Anderson showed the effect of his unfortunate accident, but did not look so emaciated as was expected. So intense has been the excitement and sympathy for the unfortunate man that business of all kinds has been suspended for the past few days, farmers and merchants alike going to the scene and rendering their asistance. The rescue was effected by lowering a board 18 inches long and 10x12 inches square, into which Anderson crawled and was raised by means of a rope. He is in care of physicians, who have hopes of his complete recovery.

Wholesale Horse Stealing.

The police of Chicago have succeeded in capturing a sixteen-year-old robber, whose achievements in the horse stealing line are unparalleled in this part of the country. His name he gives as Edward Brown, and he claims to have come from Texas about June 6. Brown came in with a carload of Texas ponies, and when his friends had sold their stock and returned home he formed the acquaintance of Charles Crane, also hailing from Texas. Brown soon proposed that they go into the horse-stealing business on a large scale, being convinced that it would be very profitable. A business partnership was formed between the two Texans, and a barn rented on the west side of Chicago that would hold about twenty horses. Nightly forays were begun, and were successful. The boys hired five men as grooms, bought hay by the ton, oats by the car load. In less than twenty-four hours after they started in business, they had stolen five horses and sold three of them for a liberal price. The boldness of their plans was remarkable. They would hitch two stolen horses to a stolen carriage and drive along Michigan avenue until they saw a team which suited them. To see a good horse meant ownership for them, for they would follow it home and in all probability secure it that night. Every few days the two Texans would go out into suburbs to look for good horses, and citizens began to frequent the stables for the purpose of buying stock. All the time complaints were coming in to the police thick and fast, but they could not find the thieves. July 12, however, was a fatal day for the adventurers. They stole a horse and buggy from a North side citizen, and drove to a blacksmith shop near by to have some slight repairs made. While waiting one of them stole the blacksmith's watch and was soon accused of the theft. Both drew revolvers and compelled the blacksmith to apologize for the charge. As soon as the boys had left the smith complained at the Lakeview police station: giving a good description of the bandits. A detective was detailed on the case. He was about to give up the search when suddenly he saw the boys driving west on Washington boulevard. He secured a horse, followed them to their barn and shadowed the place for three or four days, as he could not believe that they alone could have been guilty of such a gigantic scheme of horse stealing as was before his eyes.

Crane became suspicious of the espionage and fled, but Brown was arrested. On his person was found $400 in cash. Twenty-five horses and eighteen stolen vehicles have already been turned up, and more are coming in every day. The horses are uniformly fine, and the vehicles range from a dog cart to a four-in-hand. Brown confessed everything.

Iowa Railroad Rates.

The decision of Judge Brewer is not entirely satisfactory to the managers of the Iowa roads. He virtually acknowledges the right of the state to delegate the power of making rates to the railroad commissioners, and the only question that is to be decided when the matter comes up for trial is whether the rates made by the commissioners are reasonable or not. Even if they succeed in showing that they are unreasonable, the question will arise. Are their own rates fair and reasonable? While it is admitted that their local rates are fair, it is also admitted that the rates on competitive tariff are much too high compared with the interstate rates, and that they are calculated to injure the business and manufacturing interests of the state. The railroads feel that they have nothing to gain by continuing the fight with the state authorities and that in the end they must come out of the little end of the horn. They are inclined to make a compromise with the state authorities and agree upon rates that will be alike satisfactory to the people of the state and to the railroads. It is believed that the latter, by having the commissioners enjoined from putting their new tariff into effect, simply wanted to gain time in order to prevail upon the state authorities to agree upon a compromise tariff. That such is the object was indicated by a meeting of the presidents and vice-presidents of the principal Western roads in Chicago. The question considered was what steps are necessary to stop further trouble with the state authorities. It was suggested that the present fight on competitive through business should be stopped, and that state rates should be made to correspond with the through and interstate rates. Harmonious action, however, could not be secured.

It is the opinion that if the interstate rates from Eastern points to Illinois, Iowa and other territory could be restored and maintained no difficulty would be experienced in establishing satisfactory tariffs in the granger states. Finally it was agreed to call a meeting of Western, Northwestern and Southwestern managers to fully consider the mat- and decide upon a plan for the settlement of the difficulties.

The cases of Chairman Hoge and Murphy, charged with being implicated in the Burlington dynamite conspiracy, were called in court at Chicago. They waived examination and asked that the bail formerly given be allowed to stand for their appearance. In the absence of any opposition from the prosecution this was done. The informers, Kelly and McGilvary, Hoge's clerks, followed suit, waiving examination and being held on their former bonds.

The commissioner of the general land office has called upon the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad company to restore 90,827 acres of land to the government which were erroneously patented to the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad company, to which the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad company succeeds.

Fred S. May, commission merchant and agent at Winnipeg for the firms of Fairbanks & Co. and Libby, McNeil & Libby, Chicago, has skipped the town for the states, leaving a shortage fo $1,800 due these firms, which cannot be collected from Winnipeg merchants He was last heard of in Kansas City.

Sheridan's Last Ride.

Death of the Gallant Hero and the Nation's Idol, Gen. Phil. Sheridan, after a Prolonged Illness.

NONQUITT, MASS., Aug. 5.—Gen Sheridan's death occurred at 10:20 this evening. Previous to the sudden appearance of heart failure, at about 9:30, there had been no premonitions today of an unfavorable change in his condition. The weather has been warmer than usual, and the general was at times a little restless, but seemed generally bright and cheerful today. His voice was strong. He took a full supply of nourishment and slept occasionally as usual, and the doctors and his family were in hopeful spirits. At 7 o'clock Mrs. Sheridan and the doctors went to the hotel for supper and soon after their return the usual preparations for the night were made. At about 9:20 Col. Sheridan said "good night" to his brother and went to the hotel. There had been through the day no sign whatever of any unfavorable change in his condition. At 9:30 symptoms of heart failure suddenly appeared and Drs. O'Reilly and Mathews, who were with him at the time, immediately applied the remedies which were so successful in all previous similar attacks, but this time they were without effect, and despite all that could be done the general sank into a condition of complete unconsciousness, and at 10:20 breathed his last. Mrs. Sheridan, the Sisters Mahan and Justinian, and the faithful body servant Klein were also at his bedside throughout his dying hours.

GEN. SHERIDAN

THE NEWS AT WASHINGTON.

WASH., Aug. 5. Owing to the lateness of the hour at which the news of Gen. Sheridan's death was received, it was decided by Col. Lamont not to communicate it to the president till morning. One of the servants at Secretary Endicott's was notified of the death, but declined to awaken the secretary to communicate the news to him.

THE GENERAL'S SICKNESS

The illness which has just resulted in Gen. Sheridan's death commenced last May, immediately after his return from a tour of inspection out West. He complained of feeling unwell and worn out, but came down to the office each day for about a week. He was then forced to remain in-doors and on Tuesday, May 22, he had a severe attack of heart failure, which greatly alarmed his family and physicians.

On Friday, of the week end May 26, he had several attacks of heart failure and these increased in violence with each succeeding attack. Several times during his illness it seemed as if life had become extinct, but by the adoption of radical measures the action of the heart was stimulated and he was brought around again. His heart one time ceased to beat for a full second, but the extraordinary watchfulness and care of the attending physicians, brought him back to consciousness again. New complications set in and hope was well nigh abandoned several times, only to be renewed by the great vitality and determination shown by the stricken soldier. The history of these relapses and recoveries is familiar to the readers of the daily press. With the approach of warm weather it was decided by the physicians after several consultations that the patient must be removed, as he would be utterly unable in his weakened state to withstand a period of prolonged heat. Accordingly, on Saturday, June 30, he was, after several delays, placed on the United States steamer Swartara and taken to Nonquitt, Mass., which place he reached after several stops, caused by recurrences of the heart trouble. The general had made his will and all preparations for death and was ready to face it, though resolutely determined that life should not be given up without a severe struggle on his part. He leaves a wife, the daughter of Gen. Rucker, and four small children—three girls and one boy.

HIS LIFE.

Gen. Sheridan was born in Somerset, Ohio, March 6, 1831. His parents were poor and for a long time lived in a one-story frame building on South street in that town. John Sheridan, Phil's father, tried to make some money as a railroad contractor, but invariably met with ill luck. In 1856, after Phil had saved some money from his army pay, he bought eighteen acres of land near Somerset and gave his parents the money to build a home. John Sheridan died there in 1875, but Mrs. Sheridan died at the age of eighty-seven. Throughout all his career Gen. Sheridan paid his mother a yearly visit, except, of course, when prevented by his military duties.

At the age of twelve Phil had to go to work. He found employment in a hardware store in the village kept by John Talbot, with whom he remained four months. He then obtained a place as a clerk for Fink & Dittoe in the dry goods business, remaining with them until 1847. He seemed pretty well satisfied with mercantile pursuits until he read one day of a vacancy at West Point, which half the fathers of the district were begging Gen. Ritchie, the congressman, to fill with their boys. Phil sat right down and wrote Gen. Ritchie a straightforward application, without anybody's endorsement or even advice. The appointment was quickly made and widely announced.

Upon his graduation he was assigned to the infantry branch of the service, serving two years in Texas, and from 1855 to 1861 in Oregon. At the commencement of the civil war he was appointed quartermaster of the Army of Southwest Missouri, his rank being captain. May, 1862, the governor of Michigan appointed him colonel of the second Michigan cavalry, and July 1, 1862, he was commissioned as brigadier-general of volunteers, and was soon in command of a division of the Army of the Ohio. At the battle of Stone River, Dec. 31, 1862, he saved the army from rout by his stubborn resistance of the enemy's onslaughts. For this he made major general. In the march to Chattanooga under Rosecrans he was exceedingly active, and when any necessity seemed to demand it exposed himself with an abandon and recklessness that won the admiration of his soldiers and gained for him the soubriquet of "Fighting Phil." In the battle of Chickamauga, though swept off the field by the breaking of the lines, he recovered himself and returned with his command and some other troops to the support of Gen. Thomas. In subsequent actions about Chattanooga he distinguished himself and was regarded as among the most accomplished and successful soldiers of the West.

IN COMMAND OF THE CAVALRY.

In April, 1864, he was called by Gen. Grant to the Army of the Potomac and put in command of the cavalry. During the months of May, June and July, besides protecting the flanks of the army and reconnoitering the enemy's position, he was in eighteen distinct actions. The 4th of August he was put in command of the Army of Shenandoah, and soon after of the Middle Military division, where he succeeded in completely routing Gen. Early, for which he was made a brigadier general in the regular army, and in November a major general. The campaign against Early over, and in full possession of the Valley of Virginia, he destroyed the mills and rendered it impossible for Lee to longer draw supplies from this fertile region. He then made a detour around Richmond, joining Gen. Grant at City Point, whence he started, March 25, 1865, to strike the final blow for the overthrow of Lee's army. He fought the battle of Dinwiddie Court House March 31, Five Forks April 1, and compelled the surrender of Lee April 9, 1865.

The Red Lake Reservation.

There is a prospect that the Red Lake Indian reservation will soon be opened. The new bill now before congress provides.

As soon as the cession and relinquishment of said Indian title be obtained and approved, it shall be the duty of the commissioner of the general land office to cause the lands to be ceded to the United States to be surveyed. The secretary of the interior, upon notice of the completion of such surveys, shall appoint a sufficient number of competent examiners, in order that the work may be done within a reasonable time, who shall personally go upon said lands and make a complete and thorough examination for the purpose of ascertaining on what tracts there is standing or growing pine timber. Estimates of timber and reports of all such examinations shall be filed with the commissioner of the general land office, and thereupon that officer shall cause to be made a list of all such pine lands, with the actual cash value of each forty-acre lot, according to his best judgment and information; but such valuation shall not be less than $3 per 1,000 feet; and thereupon such lists of lands so approved shall be transmitted to the secretary of the interior for action. Such cession and relinquishment shall be deemed sufficient as to each of said reservations except as to the Red Lake reservation if made and assented to by two-thirds of the male adults of the band or tribe of Indians occupying such reservations, and as to the Red Lake reservation relinquishment shall be deemed sufficient if assented to by two-thirds of the male adults of all the Chippewa Indians in Minnesota.

The advertising is to be done at St. Paul, Crookston and Duluth, in one paper instead of two, in each place. The price of the land is raised from $1 to $1.25.

The execution of a young man named Millman at Charlottetown, P. E. I., early this spring for the murder of his sweetheart and his plea of innocence while on the scaffold, incited several of his friends who believed him not guilty, to take the matter up. The result of their labor has been laid before the minister of justice at Ottawa, and from what can be gathered they have not only, in the opinion of the government, established the fact that an innocent man was hanged, but have placed the crime on the man who committed it, and who swore away Millman's life to save himself from the gallows. It is expected that the murderer will be captured within a few days. The question arises, if his guilt is established, could two men be hanged for the one crime.

The president for the French Agricultural society has made a report regarding the losses caused by the recent rains. He says that the hay has been destroyed and that the peasants have been compelled to kill their animals, being unable to feed them. He also says that corn cannot ripen, that potatoes are rotting and that the vintage this year will be inferior. He estimates the loss to agriculture at half a milliard of francs, and says if the bad weather continues a month longer the crisis will extend to enormous dimensions.

Prof. Elisha Gray of Highland Park, Ill., has obtained letters patent, dated July 31, 1888, for a combination of instruments called the telaugraph, consisting of a transmitter and a receiver, and designed for transmitting messages by wire between different points. The sender sends in his own handwriting, thus doing away with skilled operators. The invention is based on the discovery of a new principle in controlling the electric current, which is produced by a pulsatory current, all previous attempts to transmit handwriting having been based on the use of a variable current.

Three more bodies were discovered in the ruins of the Bowery tenement building destroyed by fire in New York. Sarah Blum, another victim, died. This brings the list of dead up to twenty. It is believed that all the bodies have been recovered. Three more bodies have been identified; they are Jeanie Marks, Sarah Blum and Jacob Feniberg. Abraham Stern, the owner of the building, will bury the dead at his own expense.

Mrs. V. Dennison and Mrs. Moses, who live in Walcott, about five miles south of Faribault, Minn., met with a severe accident. They were on there way home from the city with five children. When they got opposite what is known as the Maj. Likes house their team became unmanageable and ran away, leaving the road. They struck a barbed wire fence and Mrs. Moses and Mrs. Dennison and two little girls were thrown out against the fence. Mrs. Moses had her left arm broken below the elbow, and the bone protruded through the flesh. Mrs Dennison escaped with slight bruises, but the daughter was badly cut about the hands and arms. The wagon was demolished and the horses badly lacerated.

Bush fires are devastating Canada in every direction and the loss will be terrible. What is known as Stewarton bush, adjoining Ottawa, is now on fire, and hundreds of citizens have gone out to prevent the flames from crossing the city limits. Eureka, a small village containing some fifty houses and stores and a large steam saw mill has been swept out of existence.

At a meeting of the Winona Bar association complimentary resolutions were adopted and presented to Gen. C. H. Berry, on the eve of his departure to assume his supreme court justiceship in Idaho. Gen. Berry was deeply affected and briefly expressed his appreciation. Gov. Yale, Maj. O. B. Gould and Judge William Mitchell made brief addresses. Gen. Berry has left for Idaho.

Bad and Bloody John.

Boston (Mass.) Cor. New York Herald:

Ringmaster John L. Sullivan, claimant to the championship of the world, arrived in town a few days ago, in company with his elephants and other trained curiosities. After visiting his father and taking dinner he went down town. At first he was reticent, but a few bottles of ale thawed out his English reserve and liberated his tongue. About 10 o'clock in the evening he was the same old John L. who used to make things merry for the boys.

"Just tell the New York people that I have not given up the prize ring," said he to the Herald correspondent. "Mitchell and Kilrain, two big flowers, are coming over August 1. I am talk, and want to fight. I mean it too! I will fight one or both of them, any way they wish, for $15,000 to $25,000 a side, and we'll fight to a finish. I don't care what rules are adopted. I had as lief fight London prize ring as Marquis of Queensburry, and it makes no odds whether I use two-ounce gloves or bare knuckles. I tell you John L. Sullivan is not dead. He weighs 219 pounds, and is clean grit and human nature all through. I am sick of fighting by newspaper and want to draw a little blood."

Convenient Dumbbells.

An Augusta boy who went regularly to the Young Men's Christian Association gymnasium last winter became much interested in developing his muscle. He had been told the best way to do this was to swing Indian clubs, beginning with a light pair and gradually increasing the weight as he become stronger. As this would necessitate the purchase of several pairs of clubs, which he could ill afford, he hit upon the following scheme. He was the owner of two pups which, though small in size, possessed to a remarkable degree that tenacity of grip for which the bulldog is so justly celebrated. He easily taught each of these to fix his teeth in the end of a short stick, and then, taking one of the sticks in each hand, he waved them about his head in some of the simple movements. As the dogs grew his strength increased, and now he may be seen in easy posture performing all the graceful gyrations of an expert club swinger, with too wooden handles to the ends of which a couple of fifteen-pound bulldogs hung by their teeth with a death-like grip.—Lewiston Journal.

"How doth the little busy bee?" Well if you meddle with him much you will be apt to find out how he doth.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

The new cheese factory at Perham uses over 2,000 pounds of milk per day and makes a superior grade of cheese.

Tramps have been infesting Duluth in large numbers for some time! The police are putting them in the chain gang as rapidly as possible.

James Stephens, age thirteen, was drowned in Detroit lake. He was in bathing with a deaf and dumb boy named Boss and got in too deep.

Congressman Lind succeeded in securing the passage of a bill for the relief of John Bush of St. Peter. He is one of the pioneers of Minnesota.

At an early day Faribault will have a new newspaper, to be known as the Faribault Herald. Messrs. O'Brien & Shields of Shakopee are the proprietors.

Archie Mason of Ottawa, Canada, fell under the cars at the depot at Alexandria and had his right foot crushed, necessitating amputation below the knee.

The picture of the hackman at Winona who found $400 in his hack and looked up the owner to return it is to be taken for use in the Sunday-school books.

Ole Iverson of Adams, confined to jail at Austin for abusing his wife, attempted suicide by cutting his throat with an old knife. He bled profusely, but will probably live.

The people of Winona have been taken in by a fakir who advertised a grand show and sold tickets to a large number of people in advance. At the time set for the show he skipped.

The new Winona directory, which will be out soon, will contain 7,672 names, indicating a population of 23,016. The last directory contained 6,715 names, indicating a population of about 20,000.

There is a kind of bug in lumber which is destroying a great amount of stock, says the St. Peter Tribune. It is about the size of a grasshopper, and chews its way through the plank, leaving a large hole.

Two boys stole some clothing, $2 in cash, a note for $30, and a shotgun at John Daly's in Langdon, and were arrested. They were aged twelve and fourteen, and will probably be sent to the reform school.

The coroner's jury that investigated the fatal accident on the Cannon branch of the Milwaukee road, caused by running over a cow, decided that the engineer was not to blame as he could not see the animal.

Two farmers at Pelican Rapids went to law over the damage to crops by stock getting in. The appraisers found the damage amounted to $1.75, and the cost run up to large figures. It was costly spite work.

Faribault has a sensation in an attempted elopement of a son and daughter of old and reputable families. Their steed was not rapid enough for the duty and they were overtaken and returned to their respective families.

As a party of young people, who had been camping at Robert lake, were preparing to return home, Miss Madge Parker, daughter of William Parker of Faribault, in attempting to get into a wagon, was thrown violently to the ground by the step breaking and sustained serious injuries. She is partially paralyzed, but it is believed she will fully recover.

While a Sunday school picnic was returning from Stewartville to Rochester a whiffletree broke on one of the 'buses, running the wagon into a ditch and throwing the driver, D. A. Fisk, over the dashboard and under the horses feet. One of the bones of the wrist was broken and he received a severe gash on the head, the result of a kick. No one else was injured.

W. S. Colburn, who for a year past has managed the Benson roller mills for Hill & Kinsey of Roberts, Wis., was arrested upon the affidafit of J. H. Kinsey, charging him with appropriating to his own use $700 and 6,000 bushels of wheat, the property of the firm. After an examination before Judge Eaton he was bound over in $800 to await the action of the grand jury. Colburn, who has many friends at Benson has borne an unblemished reputation, easily gave bail and seemed perfectly willing to meet the issue.

Newton Foster, living between Fair Haven and Clearwater, was brought to Benedict's Hospital at St. Cloud in a badly scalded and pounded condition. Foster says that he came home from Clearwater, and while his wife was getting dinner ready he lay down on the floor on his back, with his hands under his head. Suddenly his wife grabbed a kettle of boiling water and threw it into his face, blinding him and then proceeded to pound him with a potato masher. She then left and went to the neighbors and stayed until arrested—never mentioning anything about the affair. Foster was fearfully scalded—his face being one great blister, closing his eyes and ears; in which condition he remained for three days, without food or water. The burns and bruises are likely to prove fatal. Foster says his wife is crazy.

When the fast west-bound freight on the Burlington road reached Benkleman, Nebraska, the train men put four tramps off the train and pounded them badly, breaking one man's nose and nearly severing an ear from another. The tramps reported one of their number was thrown from the train at Parks' Station, ten miles west, when the train was running thirty miles an hour. The matter was investigated and the man's body was found in the weeds beside the track. The man lived a short time after being kicked off the cars. He said he begged the train not to throw him off, but that two of them kicked him until he fell. He gave his name as Jacob Luther. His parents reside near Yuma, Colo. There is intense feeling against the cruel brakemen, who are generally regarded as willful murders.

FIFTIETH CONGRESS.

SENATE.

In the senate the sundry civil service bill was taken up and several amendments proposed by the committee were adopted.

Senator Bowen offered an amendment to the bill heretofore introduced, appropriating $250,000 for the construction of reservoirs in the Arid regions for the purposes of irrigation and addressed the senate on the subject.

HOUSE.

On motion of Mr. Struble, of Iowa, the senate bill was passed for the erection of a public building at Sioux City, Iowa, at a cost of $150,000

A conference was ordered on the senate amendments to the navy appropriation bill.

Mr. Bacon, of New York, from the committee on manufacturers, submitted report, which was ordered printed.

The house then went into committee of the whole on the deficiency appropriation bill.

After much controversy an arrangement was arrived at under which the general debate on the bill (with the exception of the French spoliation claimss ection) was limited to one hour. The bill was then read by paragraphs for amendments.

SENATE.

The senate adopted Mr. Hoar's resolution for a select committee to investigate the commercial and business relations between United States and Canada.

While the sundry civil bill was up, Mr. Plumb offered an amendment providing that supplies the result of prison labor shall not be purchased for use at the national soldiers' home. Rejected without division.

Mr. Frye, from the select committee on the Pacific railroads, reported the Union Pacific funding bill, providing for a settlement o claims growing out of the issue of bonds to secure payment of all indebtedness.

HOUSE.

The public building combination has met with a signal defeat in both houses. The conference report upon the bill for the public building at Omaha, in which the house conferees yielded to the senate, was rejected by the house by a majority of eleven. The attitude of the house was the more significant from the fact that the vote was regarded as a test upon a number of similar pending measures.

SENATE.

The senate finance committee has been asked by members of the house to put upon the free list books printed exclusively in any foreign language.

The attempt to secure the passage of an appropriation to send another agent to England to search for the assets of the late Confederate states failed in the senate.

The senate passed the house bill to extend for five years from June, 1887, the provisions of an act to provide for the muster and pay of certain officers and enlisted men of the volunteer forces.

Mr. Evarts, from the committee on foreign relations, reported back the senate joint resolution authorizing the president to take measures to obtain indemnity promptly for the injuries, losses and damages suffered by the Venezuelan Steamship Company of New York by the wrongful seizure and detention of the company's three steamers in 1871.

The house bill to authorize the Winona & Southwestern Railway company to build a bridge across the Mississippi at Winona, Minn., passed the senate today.

HOUSE.

The house non-concurred in the senate amendments to the army bill for a gun factory at Watervliet (N. Y.) arsenal and appropriating $600,000 for the manufacture or purchase of steel for cannon. In the discussion much hostility to the so-called domineering tendency of the senate was shown.

The Republicans of the house and a considerable number of Democrats have voted in favor of Townsend's resolution to facilitate the transaction of business. The plan is that for the remainder of the session objections from individual members shall not be sufficient to prevent the consideration of measures, and that at least five members must unite to object to give effect to the objection.

The house passed the important Holman bill, which was supported by Representatives Lind and Nelson of Minnesota, relative to any excess there may be in lands granted to railroads in the indemnity limits after the grants shall be adjusted. In the progress of the adjustment of land grants, especially in Minnesota, it is discovered that there will be within indemnity limits a large excess beyond the amount to which the railroad companies will be entitled which can be restored to the public domain and be subject to pre-emption and homestead entry.

SENATE.

The following is the select committee under Mr. Hoar's resolutions of commerce and business between the United States and Canada, as follows: Senators Hoar, Allison, Hale, Dolph, Pugh, Eustis and Blodgett.

A conference committee was ordered on the naval appropriation bill, and Senators Hale, Farwell and Beck were appointed conferrees on the part of the senate.

Mr. Beck moved to proceed to the consideration of bills on the calendar in regular order.

Mr. Sherman moved to proceed to the consideration of the fisheries treaty in open executive session.

The latter motion was agreed to, yeas 24, nays 22 (a strict party vote) and the fisheries treaty was taken up—the question being on Mr. Morgan's motion to postpone its further consideration till December next.

HOUSE.

On motion of Mr. Dibble, of South Carolina, the senate joint resolution was passed authorizing the secretary of war to investigate and report the amount due to the state of South Carolina for the rent of the citadel of Charleston.

The house proceeded to the consideration of the senate amendments to the army appropriation bill, and they were non-concurred in, and a conference was ordered.

The house then went into committee of the whole (Mr. Springer, of Illinois, in the chair) on the deficiency appropriation bill.

SENATE.

Mr. Cullom offered a resolution instructing the committee on interstate commerce to ascertain and report whether any United States railroad lines are owned, operated or controlled by the Grand Trunk or the Canadian Pacific, also whether commerce originating in the United States is diverted from American to Canadian lines, to what extent and in what manner; also whether any discrimination is practiced in the charges for tolls against American vessels on the Welland and St. Lawrence canals; also to inquire into the question of the regulation of commerce carried on by railroad or waterways between the United States and Canada.

Mr. Cullom said that he had, some days ago, offered a resolution in the same tone, but that he had since then concluded that the investigation should have a wider scope than was therein proposed.

In addition to all that the British government or the Canadian government had recently subsidized a line of steamers to China and Japan for the purpose of securing the commerce between those countries and the United States and Europe.

Mr. Hoar inquired as to the fact of the subsidized steamers being convertible into ships of war.

Mr. Edmunds—The British government always require that.

Mr. Mitchell—I can give another item. This subsidized line of steamers is bringing in Chinese at the rate of 4,000 a month, and they are pouring down in a great variety of steams into the United Sates through British Columbia.

Mr. Cullom—That is a fact which I was not aware of.

Mr. Cullom proceeded to speak of discriminations against American commerce on the Canadian canals, and added that what he was saying today was said for the purpose of drawing the attention of the country to the situation, that the senate might get whatever light the people could furnish in the matter.

HOUSE.

The speaker laid before the house a letter from Gov. Green, of New Jersey, presenting to the congress, in the name of the state of New Jersey, statues of Richard Stockton and Philip Kearney, to be placed in statuary hall in the capitol.

A resolution was adopted assigning Aug. 21, for the consideration of a current resolution accepting the statues and returning thanks to the state of New Jersey therefor.

Private business being dispensed with, the house went into committee of the whole on the deficiency appropriation bill.

◆

The commissioner of the general land office patented to the State of Minnesota 44,182 acres of swamp land in the St. Cloud land district. March 10 last a patent for 65,531 acres was issued for lands in the Crookston district, making a total of 100,713 acres received by the state this year.

A TIGER OF THE SEA.

How the Sandwich Islanders Take the Man-eating Shark.

The doctor and I were enjoying a much needed rest in a little cottage at Waikiki, Honolulu's ideal watering place, says a writer in the San Francisco Chronicle. Strolling along the beach one day we came across a group of native fishermen repairing a safron-colored net, 100 feet long, perhaps, and ten feet wide.

After asking a few questions of the natives the doctor told me that they were going off to try to capture one of the huge sharks known as "niuhi," or man-eaters, and that they had offered to take us if we promised to sit still in the canoe.

Everything being in readiness, two or three of the lighter canoes were launched, and their occupants paddled out to sea to discover some signs of the wished-for man-eater, while we were directed to be ready to embark at any time. It came—it took us but a few moments to reach our canoe and jump in.

Though it did not take us long to reach the spot where the man-eater was known to be, yet night had fallen, and it was by the light of torches made of the baked kernels of candlenut, strung upon cocoa-leaf fiber, that we drew near the fleet. By the smoky, red light of the torches we could see men busily scattering about the baked meat they had brought, and also half chewed morsels of the awa root. As they did so there was the gleam of the fins and tails of hundreds of fish darting to and fro for food. Now and then a larger one than the rest, with sides glowing with phosphorescent light, would dart among the smaller fry, scattering them right and left.

"They are the 'manoa kanaka,'" whispered the doctor, "the shark god of the old Hawaiians. And, there! there! he added quickly, as a massive bulk rose from the depths below, "there is the 'mano keokeo,' the great white shark."

Just then the old fisherman stationed near us suddenly crouched down, and, touching the doctor with one lean, brown hand, pointed to the water near the stern of the canoe next to us. We there saw, gleaming in the opalescent depths, two bright spots that shone wiuh a malignant, greenish light. They were set in a monstrous, shadowy head, beyond which we could dimly see a huge brown body.

It was the niuhi, the fiercest of his tribe, and as he moved along the crowd of fish darted away in terror. Even the great white shark sullenly gave way to this tiger of the sea, who swam slowly about, swallowing the food the fishermen kept throwing to him. As he thus moved from place to place his whole body seemed to exhale a peculiar light that streamed from the tips of his fins and long, unevenly-lobed tail. By the gleam, of this peculiar phosphorescence his motion could be closely watched, and finally the experienced fishermen saw that he was becoming gorged. So intent had we been watching his movements that we had not noticed that while he was being fed the fleet of canoes had been silently moved in nearer the shore. Our progress had been very slow, and now for awhile the canoes halted, while hovering beneath them was the man-eater, evidently somewhat stupefied by the awa he had swallowed with the food so freely given him.

And then commenced a curious exhibition of skill and daring. A noose had been made in the end of a long, strong rope, and this was taken by an experienced old fisherman, who quietly slid overboard from his canoe and allowed himself to sink where the man-eater was resting, his body enveloped in that strange, weird light. This was the moment when, if the shark had been shaming sleep, he would, with one vigorous sweep of his tail and a snap of his jaws, have earned his name of "man-eater."

But no; he was, for the time being, powerless, and with infinite dexterity and skill the native succeeded in passing the noose over the brute's head and about his middle. He then quickly rose to the surface and clambered into his canoe, and the fleet was again set in motion. The canoe to which the line about the shark's body was attached moved very slowly and carefully, just enough strain being kept on the line to raise the captive's body clear of the bottom. Sometimes the shark would be a little restive, and then we all waited "until" as the doctor said, "he rolled over and went to sleep again."

At length we were close to the becabh, and all but two canoes were drawn up on the sands to wait for daylight. The two remaining ones lay over the sleeping niuhi, the end of the line to which he was secured being taken on the beach, and then all hands took turns in watching and sleeping. The job might have been completed then, but this the Kahuna forbade.

By daylight a crowd of people had assembled on the beach, and the signal was given from the canoes that the niuhi was awake and getting restive. So the long line was seized by a hundred hands; it straightened out, and then, amid the triumphant song of the Kahuna, and the yells and the laughter of the crowd tramping away with the rope, the enraged man-eater, thrashing and plunging about, was drawn out of the water and over the yellow sands. As his huge body plunged hither and thither he snapped savagely at everything, but in vain. A crowd of the fishermen were always about him, raining a shower of blows on his ugly head, until he lay, beaten to death on the shore.

Great was the rejoicing over the success of this hunt for the niuhi. Every portion of the body (which was over eighteen feet in length) was eaten—the bones and skin especially are supposed to endow the eater with high courage and great strength. As for the one who slipped the noose over the head of the man-eater, he was given an extra portion of the liver, was extravagantly praised for his skill, and would, the Kanuha said, be fortunate in everything he undertook thereafter.

Concerning Physical Beauty.

The old painter rambled along pleasantly until the scribe abruptly asked:

"What is beauty, professor?"

"Beauty?" he exclaimed, astonished as if the question had been the simplest one. "Why, the human figure is the most truly beautiful work of creation, just as the Grecian temple is the most scientific specimen of art. Beauty is the abstract? Uniformity and variety give rise to two distinct kinds of beauty, according to the predominance of one or the other of these principles in the object. There is a symmetrical and a picturesque beauty. The former may be taught according to what one may call geometrical rules. The latter class of beauty, while perceived by the generality of mankind and making its effect felt, can only be produced in works of art by men of genius. The highest degree of perfection is the result of an equal balance of both classes of beauty. Now, the nude human figure well developed is an example of this, because the symmetrical beauty bears to the picturesque beauty an apparently equal ratio. For instance, the lateral halves are perfectly uniform to the eye, and the principal divisions in a really beautiful form ought to have certain relations to each other.

"Thus, from the crown of the head to a line, which in the terrestrial globe would be called the equator, is one-half of the whole length. From the thigh joint to the knee joint, from the latter to the heel, and from the elbow joint to the longest finger is each one-fourth of the whole length. From the crown of the head to the chin is one-eight, and from the elbow joint to the shoulder joint is one-fifth of the whole length. The symmetrical beauty of the facial surface, when viewed in full front, shows similar kind of proportions; Upon the conjugal diameter of the oval form the eyes are horizontally placed. From the eyes to the end of the nose, from the latter to the chin, and from the top to the bottom of each ear should be one-forth of the whole length. The mouth should be placed at one-third of the length between nose and chin, and the mouth and each of the eyes should be horizontally one-fifth of the conjugal diameter.

"It is entirely different with the picturesque beauty of the human form; There are in the first place light, shade and color. Secondly, there are, the ever varying undulations of forms of the external muscles and the changes of these forms by the innumerable positions and motions of the members to which these muscles belong, and in the third place there is the expression of countenance depending upon the operations of the mind, and the correspondence between this expression and that of the attitude and motion of the whole figure. All these points from the picturesque beauty with which genius alone can deal, for they are subject to no rules that can be taught and belong exclusively to the imitative art."—Chicago Herald.

◆

Endurance of the Persian "Yaboo."

The Persian horse enjoyed a pre-eminent reputation in ancient times, and the poets and historians, both native and Creek, have loudly praised his fine build and fiery spirit. But today the Persian horse is a poor, much abused creature, of ungainly shape, knobby head, pot bellied, and rough of coat. The natives call him "yaboo," meaning a homely old critter.

The amount of work in these animals is simply astounding. For instance, in going from Teheran to Resht (a distance of 298 miles), I used chappar (post horses, the scrub and fag of the yaboo race. Taking one at Aghababa, a poor little fellow that had done already what would be thought to be a good day's work in other countries, he made the twenty three miles to the station on top of the Kharzan mountain (12,000 feet high), over a rough and rocky path, up and down, up and down, after climbing on steep mountain sides and down monstrous declivities, in three and and one-half hours. Next morning, up at 4 o'clock, after a luxurious breakfast of straw and a little barley, the plucky little beast carried me an even forty miles to Mendjeel, under a broiling sun and over an execrable path, arriving at our destination before noon. And then, while I sank exhausted on a rug in the chappar khane (post house), the little yaboo was still as lively as a cricket. Where else in this world are there horses to do this, and do it all the days of their lives?—Wolf Von Schierbrand in The Cosmopolitan.

◆

A Fatal Mistake.

From the New York Graphic.

Mrs. Jacob S., an estimable woman living in a small town in the West, discovered early in her matrimonial career that she had not been fortunate in her choice of a husband, for Jacob proved to be excessively lazy and shiftless, doing almost nothing for the support of his wife and the round faced little children.

Several years after her marriage Mrs. S. heard of the approaching marriage of Jennie Krale, the daughter of a neighbor, and meeting the girl one day she said:

"Vell, Shennie, I hear you vas tinkin' bout getting married. Vas dot so?"

The girl, with becoming blushes, admitted the truth of the rumor.

"Vell, Shennie," said Mrs. S., "it would be vell for you to dink dwice before you marrys anypody."

"Did you think twice about it when you married?", asked Jennie, rather resenting the intimation that she had made a wise choice.

"Vell, yes, I did," replied Mrs. S., after some little hesitation. "I did dink dwice, Shennie; but I made von grade meestake, von grade meestake, Shennie. I did not dink der second time until after I vas married."

ALMOST BURIED ALIVE.

"It was a cold January afternoon that I was taken sick, but hoping I would recover, no medical aid was summoned. The following night I grew very despondent, and I seemed to feel that something unusual was about to happen.

"The next morning, shortly after sunrise, I felt a curious sensation in my feet, which became heavy, as if they were 'sleeping.' This sensation came further upward, and I began to think that if it were to reach my heart my life's journey would soon be ended.

"Having called my family and friends about me I told them of the fears I entertained. As they lay by my bedside praying—oh! I never shall forget those prayers—I bade them all farewell, and I fell back paralyzed, unable to move even a finger or to open my eyes, and to every one but myself I was dead."

It was a silver-headed sage of my acquaintance who during the greater part of his life had lived in southern Pennsylvania, that was relating to me his experience of being about to be buried while apparently dead.

"The agony and torture I suffered for the next three days would fill volumes, yet the horor of my situation could not be expressed," he continued. "I heard the weeping and wailing of my dear wife and children, who were nearly frantic with grief. I felt the kisses of my darling little daughter as she clung to my bosom—implored me to speak and asked if I loved her. I heard my prattling child pray that life would return to papa for mamma's sake.

"The strength of every fibre in my system I summoned, but my mouth would not open, my tongue would not move. I was imprisoned in my own body—tied down even more than if I had been placed in chains.

"Then came the fears of being buried alive. I heard how the arrangements for my funeral were to be made, who should be my pallbearers and what minister should deliver my funeral sermon.

"The style of my coffin I heard discussed at length between my wife and a neighbor.

"This was the most terrible conference to which I ever listened," said the old man as he wiped the tears from his eyes and continued:

"I fell asleep and remained unconscious until the next day. When I awoke I was being placed in my coffin, that awe-inspiring, ghastly box in which it was intended I should forever rest, and yet I was unable to intimate that life still lingered in my bosom.

"Many friends came to look at me, and as they passed by the coffin I listened to such exclamations as: 'Isn't he natural?' 'Oh, doesn't he look life-like?' and the like, that are so plentiful on such occasions.

"On the third day I was yet in a trance. About 9 o'clock in the forenoon, so I am told, all was ready for the funeral. Into my house filed six of my friends, who transported my coffin into the hearse by the door. After a short time I was again taken out from the fatal carriage. This was at the church, where the benedictions were pronounced.

"The church had been crowded with people when the service began. The pine board of my coffin quivered as the deep tones of the organ and the voices of the choir echoed through the corridor of the sacred edifices. The dreadful music ceased and all was hushed save the heartrending sobs of my wife.

"A low voice from the pulpit, which increased in volume as it proceeded to review the good phases of my life and to advise the congregation to be prepared for death, intimated that the pastor had assumed the sacred duty of his office. For fully an hour, which to me seemed an age, he continued to paint in vivid colors the instability of fortunes and the shortness of life on earth. He closed with prayer, after which, as those who were present were passing to take a last look at me, a mournful march, every note of which pierced my heart like a pisoned arrow, shook the windows of the ancient church.

All the members of my family had passed me by. They were asked to take final view of the mortal remains of their beloved husband and father. Grant heaven that I never may survive another moment like that!

"As my beloved ones, who vainly tried to suppress their grief laden sobs, stood by my head, I felt a tear drop upon my cheek. Had it been liquid fire it would not have caused me such frightful pains.

"A vain yet desperate attempt to open my eyes I made and more hopelessly than ever my spirit sank into a deeper anguish of mortal grief. Once more I lay in the slowly moving hearse which was to convey me to the cemetery two miles distant, where an open grave was yawning to swallow me up.

"The fierce wind beat the snow against the panes of glass in my lonely couch. It is a wonder that I was not frozen to death. Mingled with the raging wind, the bells in yonder church tower tolled my funeral knell, sending shocks of indescribable grief into my wretched soul. Only the tortures of Prometheus, on whose vitals a raven continuously fed, can be compared with my suffering.

"Once at the cemetery I was soon hoisted into my grave, that dismal den of earth, and one, two, three shovels full of earth were thrown upon my coffin.

At this late moment I resumed my physical strength and voice. I told them to open the coffin, and I was saved.

"A hundred times would I rather die upon the rack or above a slow fire than once more experience such a terrible living death."

◆

J. P. Johnson Howard, a negro, whose reputed wealth gained for him the title of "the black prince," and who has for many years past been active in Brooklyn politics, was sentenced by Recorder Smyth, to imprisonment for seven years and six months. The man was convicted of perjury when examined in the supreme court as to his qualification as a bondsman.

The late James Freeman Clarke left an autographic will giving his entire estate to his wife, from whom he says he received it.

◆

"I am a merchant and planter," writes Mr. T. N. Humphrey, of Tenn., "and it gives me great pleasure to say that for severe coughs and colds Allen's Lung Balsam is the best remedy now offered for sale. I have induced many to try it, with the best of results." At Druggists, 25c., 20c., and $1.00 a bottle.

◆

A fearful storm has caused much destruction in Northwest France. Many fishermen have been drowned.

◆

Honey-moon.

"Say, Perkins, old boy, why don't we see you at the club any more? Has your mother-in-law shut down on you"? "No, Brown; the fact of the matter is, my home is so happy now that there is no inducement for me to leave it. You look incredulous, but it is a positive fact. You see, my wife used to suffer so much from functional derangements common to her sex, that her spirits and her temper were greatly affected. It was not her fault, of course, but it made home unpleasant all the same. But now, since she has begun to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, she has been so well and so happy that we are having our honey-moon all over again.

Jack Jennings, who is confined in jail at Sioux Falls, Dak., for the murder of his father in McCook county is resigned to his fate. He has expressed a determination to forego the assistance of a lawyer when his case is called for trial. He intends to make a full statement of the facts and abide the result. He expects to hang for his crime, and this, it seems, is what he desires at present.

◆

A Secret

of good health is found in the regular movement of the bowels and perfect action of the Liver. These organs were intended by nature to remove from the system all impurities. If you are constipated, you offer a "standing invitation" to a whole family of diseases and irregularities which will surely be "accepted," and you will have guests unwelcome and determined. All these unhappy conditions may be averted by the timely use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. Powerful for the effectual regulation of the bowels and Liver, establishing a healthy action of the entire wonderful organism with which we are created.

◆

The national Democratic committee has adopted as the campaign banner and badge the flag bandana," designed and patented by Capt. Joseph M. Jones of Paris, Ky. It is a typical bandana, and has the stars and stripes stamped in its center and in each corner.

◆

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria,

Lieut. Wissmann, the German, explorer went to Brussels from Berlin in response to a summons from King Leopold, who desired to obtain his opinion regarding the whereabout of Stanley. Lieut. Wissmann informed the king that he did not believe that Stanley was lost, and said that he hoped to hear good news from the the explorer at an early date.

◆

For Liver Complaints Take Allen's Iron Tonic Bitters. All genuine bear the signature of J. P. Allen, Druggist, St. Paul, Minn.

◆

Gov. Morehouse of Missouri received the following telegram from T. F. Bayard, secretary of state, relative to granting a respite to Hugh M. Brooks, alias Maxwell, of St. Louis: "I forwarded you by mail application of the British Government for respite in the Maxwell case." The governor possesses no information concerning the matter, and as yet he can give no idea as to what course he will pursue.

Vigor and Vitality

Are quickly given to every part of the body by Hood's Sarsaparilla. That tired feeling is entirely overcome. The blood is purified, enriched, and vitalized, and carries health instead of disease to every organ. The stomach is toned and strengthened, the appetite restored. The kidneys and liver are roused and invigorated. The brain is refreshed, the nerves strengthened. The whole system is built up by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"I was all run down and unfit for business. I was induced to take a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it built me right up so that I was soon able to resume work. I recommend it to all." D. W. Beate, 4 Martin Street, Albany, N. Y.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

IF ANY OF YOUR FAMILY

are troubled with Cholera, Cramps or Bowel Complaint, give them PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER.

DO NOT FORGET

Perry Davis' Pain Killer

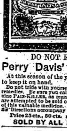
At this season of the year it is always well to keep it on hand.

Do not trifle with yourselves by testing untried remedies. Be sure you call for, and get the genuine Pain-Killer, as many worthless nostrums are attempted to be sold on the great reputation of this valuable medicine.

Directions accompany each bottle.

Price 25 cts., 50 cts. and $1 per bottle.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.



PIMPLES

Blackheads, Red, Rough and Oily Skin prevented and cured by that greatest of all Skin Beautifiers, the

CUTICURA SOAP

Incomparable as a Skin Soap, unequalled for the Toilet, Bath, and Nursery, and without a rival as an Infantile Skin Soap. Produces the loveliest, whitest, clearest skin, and softest hands. Absolutely pure, delicately medicated, exquisitely perfumed, surprisingly effective. Sale greater than that of all other medicated toilet soaps in the world combined. Sold throughout the civilized world.

Potter Drug & Chemical Co., Boston, U. S. A.
Send for "How to Purify and Beautify the Skin."

At the coal mines two miles west of Albia, Iowa, in a family alteration Michael Deal, an old miner, killed his son Deck with a shotgun. The son was twenty-seven years old. The old man is crazed with grief. He claims that the deed was done in self-defense. He has a good reputation.

◆

Use the surest remedy for catarrh—Dr. Sage's.

◆

The heat in Omaha has been intense. One day the thermometer registered 98. Six deaths of adults from heat and prostration have occurred in forty-eight hours.

◆

Moxie.

Old men use Moxie the year round to keep their nervous system strong enough to support the functions of their body, and mend up the break down of a long business life. The young city bloods to remove the effects from liquors and a night of dissipation. A tumbler full will break a recent intoxication in an hour, with no ill effects of stimulation.

Two children of Ever Peterson, a farmer living near Little Falls, Wis., aged six and eight years, were killed by lightning.

◆

The North Star Lung and Throat Balsam is a sure cure for Coughs and Colds.

Itching Piles.

Symptoms—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in many cases removes the tumors. It is equally efficacious in curing all Skin Diseases. DR. SWAYNE & SON, Proprietors, Philadelphia. Swayne's Ointment can be obtained of druggists. Sent by mail for 50 Cents.

INFANTILE Skin & Scalp DISEASES cured by CUTICURA Remedies.

For cleansing, purifying and beautifying the skin of children and infants and curing torturing, disfiguring, itching, scaly and pimply diseases of the skin, scalp and blood, with loss of hair, from infancy to old age, the Cuticura Remedies are infallible.

Cuticura, the great Skin Cure, and Cuticura Soap, an exquisite Skin Beautifier, externally, and Cuticura Resolvent, the new Blood Purifier, internally, cure every form of skin and blood diseases, from pimples to scrofula.

Sold everywhere. Price, Cuticura, 50c.; Soap, 25c.; Resolvent, $1. Prepared by the Potter Drug and Chemical Co., Boston, Mass.

Send for "How to Cure Skin Diseases."

Baby's Skin and Scalp preserved and beautified by Cuticura Soap.

Kidney Pains, Backache and Weakness cured by Cuticura Anti-Pain Plaster, an instantaneous pain-subduing plaster. 25c.

Tutt's Pills

stimulates the torpid liver, strengthens the digestive organs, regulates the bowels, and are unequaled as an ANTI-BILIOUS MEDICINE.

In malarial districts their virtues are widely recognized, as they possess peculiar properties in freeing the system from that poison. Elegantly sugar coated. Dose small. Price, 25cts.

Sold Everywhere.

Office, 44 Murray St., New York.

SICK HEADACHE

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills.

They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.

Price 25 Cents.

CARTER MEDICINE CO., NEW YORK.

Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price.

GOLD is worth $500 per lb. Pettit's Eye Salve is worth $1000, but is sold at 25 cents a box by dealers.

GUNS Fishing Tackle, Pocket Cutlery and General Sporting Goods. Send for Catalogue. CHAS. B. PROUTY & CO., 63-65 Washington St., Chicago.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION

$5 TO $8 A DAY. Samples worth $1.50 FREE. Lines not under the horse's feet. Write BREWSTER SAFETY REIN HOLDER CO., Holly, Mich.

PENSIONS Can be Increased

in many cases where deserved. Discharges procured. Bounty collected. Latest law and pamphlet free. PATRICK O'FARRELL, Attorney, Washington.

ASTHMA CURED

German Asthma Cure never fails to give immediate relief in the worst cases, insures comfortable sleep; effects cures where all others fail. A trial convinces the most skeptical. Price 50c. and $1.00, of Druggists or by mail. Sample FREE for stamp. DR. R. SCHIFFMAN, St. Paul, Minn.

It will be to your advantage when writing to advertisers to say you saw their advertisement in this paper.

N. W. N. U. 1888 No. 32.

Plump and Rosy Babies

"Had it not been for Lactated Food our little baby must have died. She has been using it for three months, and is a plump, healthy, rosy-cheeked baby."—Mrs. Mollie Loppin, Kokomo, Ind.

Sleep All Night, Happy All Day

"We tried other foods, but, finding none to agree with our little girl we used your Lactated Food. She began at once to gain flesh, and improved in health. To-day she is as bright, lively, and hearty as any child can be, sleeping twelve hours at a stretch, and waking up laughing every morning."—Wm. S. Travis, 127½ Sumach St., Toronto, Ont

Cutting Teeth Easily

"Lactated Food is an excellent food for teething children. My baby is using it, and is cutting her teeth this hot weather without any trouble."—Mrs. Minna O. Brand, Iantha, Mo.

Saved from Cholera Infantum

"Our baby had Cholera Infantum, and until we tried Lactated Food, we could find nothing to stay on its stomach. It retained your Food without any trouble, and soon recovered."—Mrs. E. W. Logan, West Monterey, Pa.

THE RESULT OF USING

LACTATED FOOD.

Most Nourishing and Economical of Foods. 150 Meals for an Infant for $1. Easily prepared. At Druggists—25 cts., 50 cts., $1.

A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," free on application. Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

DWIGHT'S SALERATUS

TO MAKE

A DELICIOUS BISCUIT

ASK YOUR GROCER FOR

COW-BRAND SODA OR SALERATUS

AND TAKE NO OTHER.

S. E. OLSON & CO.'S

MAMMOTH WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DRY GOODS HOUSE,

213 AND 215 NICOLLET AVENUE, MINNEAPOLIS.

THE CHIEF BARGAIN HOUSE OF THE NORTHWEST.

Mail Orders receive our best attention. Shopping done through this department as advantageously as in person. Send for samples.

TOWER'S FISH BRAND SLICKER The Best Waterproof Coat.

The FISH BRAND SLICKER is warranted waterproof, and will keep you dry in the hardest storm. The new POMMEL SLICKER is a perfect riding coat, and covers the entire saddle. Beware of imitations. None genuine without the "Fish Brand" trade-mark. Illustrated Catalogue free. A. J. Tower, Boston, Mass.

Bryant & Stratton Chicago Business College!

SHORT-HAND INSTITUTE and ENGLISH TRAINING SCHOOL. Is the STANDARD INSTITUTION and the LARGEST IN THE WORLD! Full information, Catalogue, terms, etc., sent FREE. Address H. B. BRYANT & SON, Proprietors, Chicago, Ill.

Dr WINCHELL'S TEETHING SYRUP.

Is the best medicine for all diseases incident to children. It regulates the bowels; assists dentition; cures diarrhœa and dysentery in the worst forms; cures canker sore mouth; is a certain preventative of dyptheria; quiets and soothes all pain; invigorates the stomach and bowels; corrects all acidity, and gives energy and tone to the entire system; will cure griping in the bowels and wind colic. Do not fatigue yourself or child with sleepless nights, when it is within your reach to cure your child and save your own strength. Prepared only by the Emmert Proprietary Co., Chicago, Ill.

Sold by all Druggists at 25 cts. Per Bottle.

O The BUYERS' GUIDE is issued March and Sept., each year. It is an encyclopedia of useful information for all who purchase the luxuries or the necessities of life. We can clothe you and furnish you with all the necessary and unnecessary appliances to ride, walk, dance, sleep, eat, fish, hunt, work, go to church, or stay at home, and in various sizes, styles and quantities. Just figure out what is required to do all these things COMFORTABLY, and you can make a fair estimate of the value of the BUYERS' GUIDE, which will be sent upon receipt of 10 cents to pay postage.

MONTGOMERY WARD & CO.
111-114 Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

BIG G Cures in 1 TO 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture. Mf'd only by the Evans Chemical Co. Cincinnati, Ohio. Trade Mark

I prescribe and fully endorse Big G as the only specific for the certain cure of this disease.
G. H. INGRAHAM, M. D., Amsterdam, N. Y.

We have sold Big G for many years, and it has given the best of satisfaction.
D. R. DYCHE & CO., Chicago, Ill.

$1.00. Sold by Druggists.

GLEK—HARMLESS. Positive Cure for failing Manhood. Gives solid health. $1 bottle, by drug's. Glek Co., 83 N. State st, Chicago

WEAK MEN and WOMEN can quickly cure themselves of Wasting Vitality, Lost Manhood from youthful errors, &c., quietly at home. 32 page Book on All Private Diseases sent free, (sealed.) Perfectly reliable. 30 years experience. Dr. D. H. LOWE, Winsted, Conn.

PENS USE THE BEST. Stationers keep them. Standard quality, all styles. Sample doz. 10 cents by mail. 26 John St., New York. ESTERBROOK.

THAYER'S Catarrh Cure! A New Departure.

This treatment for Catarrh introduces entirely a new system. The nasal passages are thoroughly cleansed, the living germs destroyed, the mucus membrane restored. If thoroughly used it will cure any case of Nasal, Throat or Bronchial Catarrh. Prepared by the U. S. DISPENSARY CO., Minneapolis, Minn.

JONES HE PAYS the FREIGHT

5 Ton Wagon Scales, Iron Levers, Steel Bearings, Brass Tare Beam and Beam Box for $60.

Every size Scale. For free price list mention this paper and address JONES OF BINGHAMTON, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

Insure your Horses and Cattle IN THE Sterling Live Stock Insurance Company

of Minneapolis, Minn. Capital, $100,000. Live stock insured against Death caused by Disease or Accident. Losses paid Promptly. Send for Circular. Agents wanted.

Principal Office, 308 Lumber Exchange, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

ST. PAUL SCHOOL FURNITURE CO., ST. PAUL, MINN.

School Furniture and School Supplies. Correspondence solicited from district officers, and those desiring an agency. Ask for Catalogue D.

The Good Old Times.

Farmer Blewitt was a little, dried up, irascible man, and he used to wear a red comforter around his neck and red flannel ear lappers on his plug hat when he went to meeting in the winter. He was always ready to argue that these modern times were awfully bad, and that the good old times of a hundred years ago were just right. He would decry invention and improvement and say that the world would be better without them. He took a newspaper on purpose to count the murders recorded in it and tell how bad the world had grown. He would stand for hours on a corner in the village and retail his deductions on the present and his regrets for the past.

One day he had whipped the minister in argument, and as he had had his dinner and the minister had gone away mad and the women were at work in the kitchen, he tipped back in his chair, drew a red silk handkerchief over his head to keep off the flies and went to sleep. He had not slept over five minutes before his son John came in and said:

"Come, father, we must get at that piece of wheat and cut it."

Blewitt got up and yawned and followed his son to the barnyard, where his two sons sat on a log filing a couple of sickles.

"What in the nation are you doing with those old sickles?" said Blewitt.

One of the boys looked astonished and said. "Doin'? Why, we are getting ready to cut the wheat."

Blewitt stared a moment and then said, "Why in thunder don't you hitch on to that reaper and stop foolin' with them sickles?"

The boys looked at each other in surprise, but said nothing. Blewitt ran to the shed, but there was no reaper there. He came back. The boys had got over the fence and were on their knees reaping the wheat and carrying it in gavels.

"Boys," said Blewitt, "what do you mean by this foolishness? Where is that reaper?"

Charley, the second boy, looked at his father pityingly, and then tapped his forhead and looked over to John, who nodded and looked sad.

"Why, darn it," said Blewitt, "you can never run them bundles through a threshin' machine."

"Threshin' machine," said Charley; "why, you know as well as I do that I shall have to flail this wheat out mornings and nights while going to school this winter. What ails you, father?"

Blewitt, as we said, got mad easily, and now he just hopped up and down and said.

"Frail it out! It must be threshed ready to ship on the cars next month."

"Cars, cars," said John, "don't know what ails you, father, or what you mean. I know I shall have to team this wheat down to Albany and sell it for what it will bring. Here you come out talkin' about reapers and cars and threshin' machines, and darned if I don't believe you are crazy, so now."

Blewitt pinched himself to see if he was awake and strode angrily to the house. As he approached it he heard a rumbling and roaring like wind, and he looked into the kitchen and there was his wife spinning. Who-o-o went the big wheel and Blewitt sank into a chair and yelled.

"Now, Maria, what under the canopy are you doin'?"

"Doin'?" said his wife; "why, spinnin', of course. I must get out forty yards of full cloth for you and the boys, and twenty yards of pressed flannel for me and the gals."

Blewitt looked down at his legs and saw them incased in full cloth of coarse texture, and the seat of his trousers he felt reached clear up to his shoulder blades, and the legs were as wide as two bushel sacks.

"Well, I'll bedarned," was all he said.

Dreamily he sauntered out again to the wheat field, and John hailed him.

"Father, if you ain't goin' to help cut the wheat, suppose you yoke the oxen and go up to the woods and draw a draft or two of logs for wood?"

Blewitt was composed, but he said: "I had intended to burn coal in the sitting room and parlor, and not cut much wood."

"Coal, coal!" said John, angrily; "now see here, father, I don't want any more of this foolish talk. I am goin' to git a doctor."

Blewitt began to think he needed one himself. Here his boys had never heard of a reaper or a threshing machine or cars. He felt of his full cloth pants and groaned. On the lounge at the house he laid himself down and tried to calmly think things over. When the doctor came he called for a pail and bared Blewitt's arm. He took out his lance, and then Blewitt groaned again.

"I must take a gallon of blood," said the doctor, "and then he will calm down and be all right."

"Don't you know bleedin' was played out fifty years ago?" said Blewitt.

"How he wanders." said the doctor, and plunged in his lancet. Blewitt fainted. When he came to himself he heard one of the girls talking about an artist down in the village who took profile pictures with a spirdle as natural as life.

"What do you want of such blamed pictures as that?" said Blewitt from the lounge. "Why don't you go down to Takem's at Albany and get photographs?"

"Photographs," said the whole family, "what funny names he gets off in his crazy fancy."

Blewitt was to weak to argue, and he seemed to be somehow out of sympathy or knowledge with all mankind, so he just lay still and watched the girls get supper. He noticed that the fireboard was down and that a fire was built in the fireplace. A kettle was on the hearth and was covered with live coals. Soon he saw the girls take out of the kettle some nice biscuits, and he weakly said: "Why don't you use the cookstove?" "Poor pa," said Angelina, "how he wanders. Cook stove. Wonder what he means?"

Blewitt closed his eyes and thought. Bayley, his new neighbor, was a man he could trust—that is, in anything but money matters. He knew Bayley was badly in debt, but he was a good fellow. He would send for him; so he called his wife and told her to send over for him.

"Why, you know," said Mrs. Blewitt, "Bayley has been in jail for debt for the last ten years."

"In—jail—for—debt," said Blewitt, "here we are again. I have been transplanted. I give up; but, say, here is two cents. You send a letter down to brother John and he will be up here in a day or two."

"Why, husband, the mail only goes once a week, and then he will be three days coming up on the stage, and furthermore, it will cost a shilling—twelve cents—to send a letter to Albany."

"Say," said Blewitt, "just bury me, will you? I don't belong to this century. Stage coaches, twelve cents postage! Telegraph him, then!"

"There goes another new word," said his wife in a solemn voice, and she wetted a cloth and laid it on his forehead, as she repeated to herself, "'Telegraph;' what a funny word!"

Blewitt was in despair. Could it be that all the common things of life were to him a dream? Had he ever ridden on the cars? Did he ever own a mowing machine? Was there ever a telegraph pole in the front of his house? He turned his eye and looked out. He only saw the tall post and long pole of the well sweep. Along the other side of the road ran a dense forest. He was willing to swear that he had once owned a nice meadow where that wood was. Backed up against the log fence was an ox cart with a heap as large as a young liberty pole. Down cellar he could hear the banging of an old fashioned churn. He looked up the road to the east and saw the road was full of great hemlock and pine stumps, and over it the doctor was coming on horseback, with saddle bags before him.

Blewitt was a man of determination, and he arose from the lounge and went to the door to consult with his wife.

"Maria," said he, "there has been enough of this foolishness. You stare at everything I talk about, and I can't locate myself, or seem to tay in with my surroundings. Now will you answer me just one question?"

"Certainly I will if I understand it," said she.

"Well, then, who is president of these 'ere United States?"

"Why, John Adams, of course," she said.

Blewitt sank down and whispered: "Then you never heard of Cleveland swingin' round the circle?"

"No, never," she answered.

"Then all right. Shoot me or put me in a bag and lay me away up garret. I have got through." said Blewitt, and he went back to the lounge and fell asleep.

When he awoke it was Sunday morning, and the whole family were stirring around, getting ready for meecing. His wife of whom he was somewhat proud, had put on a dress with waist about nine inches long and a skirt so tight she could hardly walk, and on her head such a bonnet! It made Blewitt hold his breath, but he had got through talking. The boys had on suits of full cloth and shirt collars seven inches wide. Blewitt smiled, and said nothing. At last Mrs. Blewitt came to him and asked him if he was going to church.

"Certainly, certainly," said he, "anything to accomodate. Tell one of the boys to hitch a horse on the carriage."

"Top carriage! There you go again."

"Well, then," roared Blewitt, "hitch on to the stone boat, hitch on the ox cart, hitch on to anything. Have it your own way."

"Why, we will go on horseback—you on the saddle, I on the pillion behind," said the wife.

"All right," said Blewitt, and away they went.

Blewitt made some adverse remarks about the singing at the church, which was led by a deacon with a fiddle. The sermon was too long too. It lasted two hours. On his way home from church his wife appeared to be in fear of something and urged him to hurry up. He asked her what ailed her, and she told him in a trembling voice that his queer talk had made the minister think him bewitched, and she feared he would be burned or drowned.

"What kind of a country is this, anyhow?" asked Blewitt.

Then Mrs. Blewitt reminded him that in New England several had thus died, and that everybody believes in it and the church was death on witchcraft.

"Then I guess we had better light out from here," said Blewitt, as he clapped spurs to his horse.

Away they went, rattle-te-bang, over stumps and logs and stones, and there was a rattle and roar behind and he knew they were after him. They came to a log bridge over a brook, and they struck it so hard that down it went, Blewitt and horse and wife, and with a yell of despair he awoke—yes, awoke; for the chair had tipped too far back, and he was in a heap on the floor, with his head in a pan of apples and his feet in Mrs. Blewitt's work basket. He heard the rattling yet, and he looked out of the window to discover its source, and saw that the boys had started the reaper in the field of wheat. One of the girls had just driven into the yard with the top carriage, and was just taking out his daily mail, and had offered him a telegraph dispatch about his hops. His wife was putting in a tenor to the racket with a sewing machine in the front room, and the hired girl was blacking the cooking range.

With a pleased smile Blewitt sauntered out to the wheat field, and, as the reaper stopped, he said: "Darn the good old times! These 'ere times is good enough for me."

"What's that father?" said John. "I thought you was in favor of the real, honest, reliable, good old fashioned times of a hundred years ago?"

"Never you mind, John," said the smiling father. "You can go down and buy that Thompson colt you've been wantin', and let Charley have your sidebar buggy; and—say, if the wheat ain't takin' no hurt you may go down to Barnum's circus tomorrow and cut the wheat next day."

He looked down at his diagonal pants and white Marseilles vest, and muttered as he went to the house: "Darn the good old times! These 'ere times will dew fur me!"—Prof. Gouge in Albany Journal.

About Rattlesnakes.

"The splitting of a live chicken and applying the warm flesh to a rattle snake bite," said a backwoods resident, who lives almost within gunshot of a rattlesnake den on the Upper Shohola creek, "is believed by nine out of ten of the old time dwellers among the mountains of northeastern Pennsylvania to be a never failing extractor of the venom of that reptile. I have never known personally of a case of fatal poisoning by rattlesnake bites in human beings. In fact, I cannot remember of a single person ever having been bitten within my knowledge, and I live within ten minutes' walk of a place where over 200 rattlesnakes were captured by one man in the spring of 1886, and where I can go any day and gather as many rattlers as a customer may desire. Within the past five years there has arisen a craze among city people who spend the summer in the Pike county and other North Pennsylvania mountains for specimens of rattlesnake skins and rattles, and I have myself driven a profitable business in supplying hides and buttons for that purpose for three summers. I know one summer boarding house keeper who buys these things on speculation to sell to his boarders. I furnished him more than fifty big skins and as many sets of rattles last summer and have now a contract for 100 of the same this season. I have known as much as $2.50 to be paid for one rattlesnake skin. Some fanciers have the skins stuffed and mounted, and others have belts, pocketbooks, card cases, cigar cases and even slippers made from the skins, after a careful process of tanning, by which the colors and luster of the skin are preserved as they are when the snake is alive and ready to sink his fangs in his æsthetic utilizer.

"The person who caught the 200 rattlesnakes two years ago was Elijah Pelton, a big, double fisted woodman. He kept them all alive without removing a fang, and was the only person I ever really knew to handle live, fang whole rattlesnakes with impunity. He did this daily nearly all summer at Shohola Glen before hundreds of New York people who visited that place, and I always thought the performance a singular one to be made an attraction of a summer sojourning place, especially as Pelton did not conceal the fact that the snakes were captured within an hour's journey of the resort. He had the snakes in a large cage, which he entered and handled there at will, to the accompaniment of an almost deafening chorus of rattling from his vicious looking pets, as they darted here and there about the cage, or coiled themselves in the position they always assume when about to strike. Pelton asserts that he was bitten time and time again, but that he simply sucked out the poison, and did not stint himself as to whisky.

"There was another rattlesnake king in Pike county named Sam Helms. He supplied himself with snakes from the same den that Pelton got his from, and was never known to be without his bosom and pockets filled with them. He died some years ago of consumption, and his death from that disease shook the faith of the old mountaineers in the efficacy of the rattlesnake as a curative power.

"The high value that is set on rattlesnake oil wherever that snake is found is widely known. I have known as much as $5 to be paid for an ounce of rattlesnake oil, so great was the purchaser's faith in it as a cure for rheumatism, and many believe that the oil is infallible as an internal remedy in all kinds of fever, and in some places it is regarded as a never failing cure for fits. It is on record that many years ago, over in Sullivan county, the settlers on the east branch of the Delaware got together one fall and killed over 1,200 rattlesnakes at their dens for the purpose of trying out the oil for bottling.

"But the uses of the live rattlesnake as a medicinal agent are not so well known. The father of one of my present neighbors suffered some years ago from an ulcer on his leg. He did not seem to receive any benefit from rattlesnake oil, so he took the advice of an old resident, now dead, and carried a live rattlesnake to bed with him and kept it there three days. The old gentleman always insisted that he was bitten by the snake, and that the poison simply counteracted the poison of the disease that was in his blood and drove it out. How true that may be I do not know, but it is certain that the man's ulcer disappeared, and he got well and lived for several years. I don't know whether the snake died or not, but very likely it die.

"Then there was, and to some extent is yet, a belief that if a consumptive should bite deep into the neck of a live rattlesnake at certain times the disease would be cured. When it was found that Sam Helms had the consumption the live rattlesnake treatment was tried on him. From all accounts he must have bitten the necks of a whole den of live rattlesnakes, but consumption's hand was not stayed, and Sam was gathered to his nonsnake biting fathers.

"Another popular superstition among the old residenters, and one that some of their descendants believe in yet, was to carry a set of rattles in their hats to prevent or cure headache and render sunstroke impossible. It was also once believed that if a person bitten by a rattlesnake should swallow a few drops of the poison itself the former would have no effect. Not a few woodsmen I have known always had a little vial of the poison, which they extracted from the sacs at the base of the fangs of rattlesnakes they killed for their oil, to be used internally in case they should have the misfortune to be inoculated by a snake bite in their tramps through the woods. But I never knew of any of them having occasion to use the alleged antidote, although if some of them are to be believed they have taken pints of the venom during their lives. The antidote they took, I guess, was carried in much larger bottles, and was purchased at the nearest tavern.

"There used to be a man named Geer who lived near Long Eddy, Sullivan county, and who claimed to have an infallible cure for rattlesnake bites that his grandfather obtained from the Indians. The composition of the cure was a secret, but Geer would go any distance to doctor persons who were snake bitten. He claimed to have saved the lives of many people suffering from rattlesnake poison. Geer died a year or two ago, but the secret of the rattlesnake cure is still in his family. It is a singular fact that none of the alleged antidotes for rattlesnake bites is effectual in case of poisoning by the copperhead or pilot.—Hawley (Pa.) Cor. New York Sun.

Post and Rail People.

Annie M. Libby, Wide Awake.

A friend of mine says there are two sorts of people in the world—"posts" and "rails;" and a good many more rails than posts. The meaning of this is that most people depend on somebody else—a father, a sister, a husband, wife or perhaps on a neighbor.

Whether it is right to divide the whole population of the earth quite so strictly, it is true that we know a good many rail-like people. Blanche Evans tells me one of the Rail-girls sits by her in school. Miss Rail never had a knife of her own, though she used a sort of pencil that continually needs sharpening; so Blanche's pretty penknife was borrowed until one day the Rail girl snapped the blade. Blanche was so tired of lending the knife that she was not very sorry.

Miss Rail's brother works beside Henry Brown in the office of the Daily Hurricane. They both set type, and Henry's patience is sorely tried by Master Rail. If Henry tells him to-day whether the l is double in model when ed is added, he will have forgotten to-morrow; and Henry has to tell him whether the semi-colon comes before or after viz. every time he "sets it up." The truth is the Rail boy doesn't try to remember these things; he has taken Henry for a post and expects to be held up by him.

I met two pretty young ladies traveling together last summer. One was always appealing to the other to know if they were to change cars at Osanto, or not until they reached Dunstable, or if they should not change at all. She asked her companion the time, though her own watch was in order; she "couldn't bother to remember" names of routes and hotels and people, but she found it very convenient for somebody to do all this for her, and she never concealed her surprise if her friend forgot or neglected anything.

Being a post is often unpleasant! but how much worse it is to be a rail! The post can stand by itself—but take it away and where is the rail? Boys and girls have this advantage over a wooden fence—if they fear that they are rails they can set about turning themselves into posts at once, and they will find the post business a far more delightful one.

A Cargo of Monkeys.

A French paper relates a good story about a merchant in Marseilles who wrote to a correspondent on the cost of Africa asking him to send him at his convenience two or three monkeys of the rarest and most valuable species. As chance would have it the merchant, in stating the number, wrote ou (or) between the figures two and three with a very small o and a diminutive u. How great events may issue from small causes will appear from the sequel. A few months passed over, when at last a messenger was sent from the harbor to inform the merchant that his menagerie had arrived. My "menagerie!" was the astonished reply. "Yes, a menagerie; in fact, a whole cargo of monkeys have come for you." The merchant could not believe the man until a letter was delivered to him from his friend in Africa, a person of the most scrupulous exactness, in which he gravely apologized for his having been unable, notwithstanding all his efforts, to procure more than 160 monkeys instead of 203 as ordered, but promised to forward the remainder as soon as possible. Imagine the feelings of the merchant on going down to the port to convince himself with his own eyes of the existence of his 160 monkeys, which were all comfortably housed and which grinned at him through the bars of their cages.

Expensive Ranching.

An Englishman who has been recently visiting American ranches owned by Englishmen, has this to say about one of these ranches in the London Economist: "I found on that ranch a manager drawing a salary of $25,000 a year and an assistant manager drawing a salary of $6,250. In addition to this they had spent thousands of pounds sterling in worth less improvements, so far at least as the cattle business is concerned. I found on that Western prairie ranch located many, many miles from a railroad, servants dressed in red livery, and—many other things fully as ridiculous: The men who should have devoted the greater part of their time to the management of the company's business spent most of their time hunting and fishing, a very pleasant pastime."

A Standard Oil Millionaire.

New York Letter.

Henry M. Flagler of the Standard oil company has rolled up his millions to such an extent that he has built a two-million hotel at St. Augustine, Fla., and has just returned from a trip of inspection. He is a sharp-eyed man, and improved every opportunity when stops were made to observe the country and its inhabitants. A passenger on the same train told me that at one place a tattered negro boy entered the car and exclaimed "I've got a tame rabbit to sell for a quarter." Flagler replied in his humorous way, "Boy what makes you dress up in your Sunday clothes on week days?" The darkey promptly retorted, "Boss, you ought not to make fun of a poor fellow like me." Flagler felt the power of the lesson, and said, "Boy, you are right; here's a quarter, and you may keep the rabbit." Flagler's new hotel will cover four acres or more, and one of its features will be an annex constructed specially for artists' studios, in which he expects to colonize the numerous artists who make professional visits to the South. The entire series of his hotel buildings will cover six acres, and the estalishment will bear the name of Ponce de Leon. This shows what oil can do. Only a few years ago Flagler was a poor man, and now he can put two millions into a hotel and not feel it. Flagler has not forgotten his former habits of hard labor, and when the recent fire at St. Augustine took place he was out in his shirt-sleeves working like an old fashioned fireman, and in this manner made a decided sensation. He now says he is determined to restore the old cathedral at his own expence, and in that case it certainly should bear the inscription: The fire-king destroyed, but Flagler restored.

Disappointed.

Honesty is the best policy, and honesty involves perfect consistency. A right action, as, for example, the keeping of a promise, may prove to be an injury to one if he does it with a view to deceive. A good story, and one that is right to this point, is told of Matthew Harvey, who was a prominent public man in New Hampshire fifty years ago. It is taken from the Granite Monthly:

An impecunious neighbor once called upon Matthew Harvey for a loan of five dollars. He was very particular to make it clear to Mr. Harvey that he should certainly return the money on a certain early day. His persistency in repeating this promise caused Mr. Harvey to hesitate. That a man of such a hopeless financial condition could have suddenly arrived at that point of perfection in business economy that would enable him certainly to pay five dollars at a near and specified time, was incredible to Matthew Harvey.

That was a suspicious phase of the request. Still Matthew Harvey did not reveal his suspicion. Neither did he directly refuse to lend the money, as many others would have done. Withdrawing from the room for a few moments, he marked a five-dollar note in such a way that he would know it again, and this money he lent to the man.

True to his word, in a few days the borrower called and paid his debt. The lender privately observed that it was the original five-dollar bill, but he said nothing. He saw clearly what he had before suspected, that the money had been borrowed and returned only to establish the credit of the borrower.

In a short time the same man appeared again, and solicited this time a loan of ten dollars.

"Mr. ——," said Matthew Harvey, "you and I are square now, and I think we had better remain so. You disappointed me once, and I don't wish you to do so again."

High-Toned Smugglers.

The New York Epoch speaks its mind very freely on all subjects that it treats. Here is an illustration of the vigorous way in which it handles a topic of considerable interest at present:

At this time of the year many wealthy Americans go to Europe, where they spend much money. In September or October they return with less money, but abundantly provided with personal apparel, household goods, presents for relatives and friends, etc. It is a well-known fact that a large proportion of these pleasure-seekers omit to pay duty when they come home. Their expenses abroad have been exceedingly heavy, so they think that Uncle Sam can go without his share. There is no doubt that the United States treasury is literally robbed of millions of dollars every year by these high-tones and luxurious travelers. The man who, on an order from his wife's cousin, brings from Paris a diamond worth $500 without declaring duty on it is just as dishonest as the importer who smuggles a bale of merchandise. Respectible retail dealers in this country are continually deprived of their legitimate profits because so many things are brought here by travelers free of duty. It is not an un-heard-of-thing for a custom-house inspector to accept a $10 dollar bill and thereupon pass trunks and boxes on which hundreds and perhaps thousands of dollars of duty should have been paid. We are not discussing the merits or the demerits of our complicated system of customs law, but merely advocating the enforcement of the law with a nearer approach to impartiality and honesty than is at present the rule.

A resident of Boston has been in the habit of giving his five-year-old boy a nickel every time he brought his slippers to him. The other day the boy struck for more pay on account of the near advent of a circus. The indulgent parent refused an advance, and for two days fetched his own slippers, and then the next older child, a little girl, undertook to do the work at the old price. But the scheme, after one trial, had to be abandoned, because she said she wasn't going to be called a "scab" by her own brother any longer.

A scandal in New York high life has been raised by Mrs. Grace Deems, who is the daughter of a rich Cincinnati banker, bringing suit for divorce against her husband, who is a physician and the son of Rev. Charles F. Deems, of New York. Each party charges the other with being a confirmed opium-eater.

EVERY-DAY MARTYRS.

That Was the Subject of Rev. Dr. Talmage's Sermon at a Chautauqua Assembly.

An important chautouqua assembly was held at Lakeside, Ohio, at which the leading professors, scholars and clergymen of this and other lands have addressed the audiences. The Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., of Brooklyn, has been there, and preached to an immense throng. The subject of his sermon was, "The Martyrs of Every Day Life." He took for his text, "Thou, therefore, endure hardness."—II. Timothy, ii., 3. Dr. Talmage said:

Historians are now slow to acknowledge the merits of great military chieftains. We have the full length portraits of the Cromwells, the Washingtons, the Napoleons and the Wellingtons of the world. History is not written in black ink, but in red ink of human blood. The gods of human ambition do not drink from bowls made out of silver, or gold, or precious stones, but out of the bleached skulls of the fallen. But I am now to unroll before you a scroll of heroes that the world has never acknowledged; those who faced no guns, blew no bugle blast, conquered no cities, chained no captives to their chariot wheels, and yet, in the great day of eternity, will stand higher than those whose names startled the nations; and seraph, and rapt spirit, and archangel will tell their deeds to a listening universe. I mean the heroes of common, every day life.

In this roll, in the first place, I find all the heroes of the sick room. When Satan had failed to overcome Job, he said to God: "Put forth thy hands and touch his bones and his flesh, and he will curse thee to thy face." Satan had found out what we have all found out, that sickness is the greatest test of one's character. A man who can stand that can stand anything. To be shut in a room as fast as though it was a bastile. To be so nervous you cannot endure the tap of a child's foot. To have luxuriant fruit, which tempts the appetite of the robust and healthy, excite our loathing and disgust when it first appears on the platter. To have the rapier of pain strike through the side, or across the temples, like a razor, or to put the foot into a vice, or throw the whole body into a blaze of fever. Yet there have been men and women, but more women than men, who have cheerfully endured this hardness. Through years of exhausting rheumatisms and excruciating neuralgias they have gone, and through bodily distresses that rasped the nerves, and tore the muscles, and paled the cheeks and stooped the shoulders. By the dim light of the sick room taper they saw on their wall the picture of that land where the inhabitants are very sick. Through the dead silence of the night they heard the chorus of the angels. The cancer ate a way her life from week to week and day to day, and she became weaker and weaker, and every "good night" was feebler than the "good night" before—yet never sad. The children looked up into her face and saw suffering transformed into a heavenly smile. Those who suffered on the battlefield, amid shot and shell, were not so much heroes and heroines as those who in the field hospital and in the asylum had fevers which no ice could cool and no surgery cure. No shout of a comrade to cheer them, but numbness, and aching, and homesickness—yet willing to suffer, confident in God, hopeful of heaven. Heroes of rheumatism. Heroes of neuralgia. Heroes of spinal complaint. Heroes of sick headache. Heroes of lifelong invalidism. Heroes and heroines. They shall reign for ever and ever.

Hark! I catch just one note of the eternal anthem: "There shall be no more pain." Bless God for that.

In this roll I also find the heroes of toil, who do their work uncomplainingly. It is comparatively easy to lead a regiment into battle when you know that the whole nation will applaud the victory; it is comparatively easy to doctor the sick when you know that your skill will be appreciated by a large company of friends and relatives: it is comparatively easy to address an audience when in the gleaming eyes and flushed cheeks you know that your sentiments are adopted; but to do sewing where you expect that the employer will come and thrust his thumb through the work to show how imperfect it is, or to have the whole garment thrown back on you to be done over again: to build a wall and know there will be no one to say you did it well, but only a swearing employer howling across the scaffold; to work until your eyes are dim and your back aches, and your heart faints, and to know that if you stop before night your children will starve. Ah! the sword has not slain so many as the needle. The great battlefields of our last war were not Gettysburg and Shiloh and South Mountain. The great battlefields of the last war were in the arsenals, and in the shops and in the attics, where women made army jackets for a sixpence. They toiled on until they died. They had no funeral eulogium, but in the name of God, this day, I enroll their names among those of whom the world was not worthy. Heroes of the sewing machine. Heroes and heroines. Bless God for them.

In this roll I also find the heroes who have uncomplainingly endured domestic injustices. There are men who for their toil and anxiety have no sympathy in their homes. Exhausting application to business gets them a livelihood, but an unfrugal wife scatters it. The exasperations of business life augmented by the exasperations of domestic life. Such men are laughed at but they have a heart breaking trouble, and they would long ago have gone into appalling dissapation but for the grace of God. Society to-day is strewn with the wrecks of men, who, under the northeast storm of domestic infelicity, have been driven on the rocks. There are tens of thousands of drunkards in this country today, made such by their wives. That is not poetry. That is prose. But the wrong is generally in the opposite direction. You would not have to go far to find a wife whose life is a perpetual martyrdom. Some times harder than a stroke of the fist: unkind words, stragglings home at midnight, and constant maltreatment which have left her only a wreck of what she was on that day when in the midst of a brilliant assemblage the vows were taken, and full organ played the wedding march, and the carriage rolled away with the benediction of the people. What was the burning of Latimer and Ridley at the stake compared with this? Those men soon became unconscious in the fire, but there is a 50 years' martyrdom, a 50 years' putting to death, yet uncomplaining. No bitter words when the rollicking companions at 2 o'clock in the morning pitch the husband dead drunk into the front entry. No bitter words when wiping from the swollen brow the blood struck out in a midnight carousal. Bending over the battered and bruised form of him, who, when he took her from her father's home, promised love, and kindness, and protection, yet nothing but sympathy, and prayers, and forgiveness before they are asked for. No bitter words when the family Bible goes for rum, and the pawnbroker's shop gets the last decent dress. Some day, desiring to evoke the story of her sorrows, you say: "Well, how are you getting along now?" and rallying her trembling voice, and quieting her quivering lip, she says: "Pretty well, I thank you, pretty well." She never will tell you. In the delirium of her last sickness, she may tell all the secrets of her lifetime, but she will not tell that. Not until the book of eternity are opened on the thrones of judgment will it ever be known what she has suffered. Oh! ye who are twisting a garland for the victor, put it on that pale brow. When she is dead the neighbors will beg linen to make her a shroud, and she will be carried out in a plain box with no silver plate to tell her years, for she has lived a thousand years of trial and anguish. The gamblers and swindlers who destroyed her husband will not come to the funeral. One carriage will be enough for that funeral—one carriage will carry the orphans and the two Christian women who presided over the obsequies. But there is a flash, and the opening of a celestial door, and a shout: "Lift up your head, ye everlasting gate, and let her come!" And Christ will step forth and say: "Come in! ye suffered with me on earth, be glorified with me in heaven." What is the highest throne in Heaven? You say: "The throne of the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb." No doubt about it. What is the next highest throne in heaven? While I speak it seems to me that it will be the throne of the drunkard's wife, if she with cheerful patience endured all her earthly torture. Heroes and heroines.

I find also in this roll the heroes of Christian charity. We all admire the George Peabodys and the James Lenoxes of the earth, who gave tens and hundreds of thousands of dollars to good objects.

But I am speaking this morning of those who, out of their pinched poverty, help others—of such men as those Christian missionaries at the West, who are living on $250 a year that they may proclaim Christ to the people, one of them, writing to the secretary in New York, saying: "I thank you for that $25. Until yesterday we have had no meat in our house for three months. We have suffered terribly. My children have no shoes this winter." And of those people who have only a half loaf of bread, but give a piece of it to others who are hungrier; and of those who have only a scuttle of coal, but help others to fuel; and of those who have only a dollar in their pocket, and give 25 cents to somebody else; and of that father who wears a shabby coat, and of that mother who wears a faded dress, that their children may be well apparelled. You call them paupers, or ragamuffins, or emigrants. I call them heroes and heroines. You and I may not know where they live, or what their name is. God knows, and they have more angel's hovering over them than you and I have, and they will have a higher seat in heaven.

They may have only a cup of cold water to give a poor traveler, or may have only picked a splinter from under the nail of a child's finger, or have put only two mites into the treasury, but the Lord knows them. Considering what they had, they did more than we have ever done, and their faded dress will become a white robe, and the small room will be an eternal mansion, and the old hat will be a coronet of victory, and all the applause of earth and all the shouting of heaven will be drowned out when God rises up to give his reward to these humble workers in his kingdom, and to say to them: "Well done, good and faithful servant." You have all seen or heard of the ruin of Melrose Abbey. I suppose in some respects it is the most exquisite ruin on earth. And yet, looking at it I was not so impressed—you may set it down to bad taste—but I was not so deeply stirred as I was at a tombstone at the foot of that abbey—the tombstone placed by Walter Scott over the grave of an old man who had served him for a good many years in his house—the inscription most significant, and I defy any man to stand there and read it without tears coming into his eyes—the epitaph: "Well done, good and faithful servant," Oh! when our work is over, will it be found that because of anything we have done for God, or the church, or suffering humanity, that such an inscription is appropriate for us? God grant it.

Who are those who are bravest and deserved the greatest monument—Lord Claverhouse and his burly soldiers, or John Brown, the Edinburgh carrier, and his wife? Mr. Atkins, the persecuted minister of Jesus Christ in Scotland, was secreted by John Brown and his wife, and Claverhouse rode up one day with his armed men and shouted in front of the house, John Brown's little girl came out. He said to her: "Well, is Mr. Atkins here?" She made no answer, for she could not betray the minister of the Gospel. "Ho!" Claverhouse said, "then you are a chip of the old block, are you? I have something in my pocket for you. It is a nosegay. Some people call it a thumbscrew, but I call it a nosegay." And he got off his horse, and he put it on the little girl's hand: and began to turn it until the bones cracked, and she cried. He said: "Don't cry, don't cry; this isn't a thumbscrew; this is a nosegay." And they heard the child's cry, and the father and mother came out, and Claverhouse said: "Ha! it seems that you three have laid your holy heads together determined to die like all the rest of your hypocritical, canting, snivelling crew; rather than give up good Mr. Atkins: pious Mr. Atkins, you would die. I have a telescope with me that will improve your vision," and he pulled out a pistol. "Now," he said, "you old pragmatical, lest you should catch cold in this cold morning of Scotland, and for the honor and safety of the king, to say nothing of the glory of God and the good of our soul, I will proceed simply and in the neatest and most expeditious style possible to blow your brains out." John Brown fell upon his knees and began to pray. "Ah!" said Claverhouse, "look out, if you are going to pray; steer clear of the king, the council, and Richard Cameron." "Oh! Lord," said John Brown, "since it seems to be Thy will that I should leave this world for a world where I can love Thee better and serve Thee more, I put this poor widow woman and these helpless, fatherless children into Thy hands. We have been together in peace a good while, but now we must look to a better meeting in heaven, as for these poor creatures, blindfolded and infatuated, that stand before me, convert me before it be too late, and may they who have sat in judgment in this lonely place on this blessed morning, upon me, a poor, defenseless fellow creature—may they in the Last Judgment find mercy which they have refused to me, Thy most unworthy, but faithful servant. Amen." He rose up and said, "Isabel the hour has come of which I spoke to you on on the morning when I promised hand and heart to you: and are you willing now, for the love of God, to let me die?" She put her arms around him and said: "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away. Blessed be the name of the Lord!" "Stop that snivelling," said Claverhouse. "I have had enough of it. Soldiers, do your work. Take him! Fire!" and the head of John Brown was scattered on the ground. While the wife was gathering up in her apron the fragments of her husband's head—gathering them up for burial—Claverhouse looked into her face and said: "Now, my good woman, how do you feel now about your bonnie man?" "Oh!" she said, "I always thought weel of him; he has been very good to me; I hae no reason for thinking but weel of him, and I think better of him now." O what a grand thing it will be in the last day to see God pick out his heroes and heroines. Who are those paupers of eternity trudging off from the gates of heaven? Who are they? The Lord Claverhouses and the Herods and those who had scepters, and crowns, and thrones, but they lived for their own aggrandizement, and they broke the hearts of nations. Heroes of earth, but paupers in eternity. I beat the drums of their eternal despair. Woe! woe! woe!

But there is great excitement in heaven. Why those long processions? Why the booming of that great bell in the tower? It is coronation day in heaven.

Who are those rising on the thrones with crowns of eternal royalty? They must have been great people on the earth, world-renowned people. No. They taught in a ragged school. Taught in a ragged school! Is that all? That is all. Who are those souls waving scepters of eternal dominion? Why, they are little children who waited on invalid mothers. That all? That is all. She was called "Little Mary" on earth. She is an empress now. Who is that great multitude on the highest thrones of heaven? Who are they? Why they fed the hungry, clothed the naked, they healed the sick, they comforted the heartbroken. They never found any rest until they put their heads down on the pillar of the sepulchre. God watched them. God laughed defiance at their enemies who put their heels hard down on these His dear children; and one day the Lord struck his hand so hard on His thigh that the omnipotent sword rattled in the buckler, as He said: "I am their God, and no weapon formed against them shall prosper." What harm can the world do you when the Lord Almighty with unsheathed sword fights for you?

I preach this sermon for comfort. Go home to the place just where God has put you, to play the hero or the heroine. Do not envy any man his money or his applause, or his social position. Do not envy any woman wardrobe, or her exquisite appearance. Be the hero or the heroine. If there be no flour in the house, and you do not know where your children are to get bread, listen, and you will hear something tapping against the window-pane. Go to the window and you will find it is the beak of a raven, and open the window, and there will fly in the messenger that fed Elijah. Do you think that the God who grows the cotton of the South will let you freeze for lack of clothing? Do you think that the God who allowed the disciples on Sunday morning to go into the grain-field, and then take the grain and rub it in their hands and eat—do you think God will let you starve? Did you hear the experience of that old man: "I have been young but now I am old, yet have I never seen the righteous forsaken, or his seed begging bread?" Get up out of your discouragement, O! troubled soul, O! sewing woman, O! man kicked and cuffed by unjust employers, O! ye who are hard beset in the battle of life and know not which way to turn, O! you bereft one, O! you sick one, with complaints you have told no one, come and get the comfort of this subject. Listen to our great Captain's cheer: "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the fruit of the tree of life which is in the midst of the paradise of God."

The jury at Mitchellstown, Ireland, was investigating the case of John Mandeville returned a verdict declaring the death was caused by the unjustifiable treatment to which he was subjected while confined in Tullamore prison.

One thousand dollars per head on every foreign working man who comes to America would provide a sufficient revenue, if they came as fast under that arrangement as before, but how would our citizens of foreign birth like that idea? Mr. Nash was here to represent the sentiment of the democratic party and he ought to know what he is talking about, when he outlines such a policy as the sentiment of his party.

No Democrats in Grand Forks.

When Grand Forks turned out 400 strong to the republican rally in Crookston, some of our Crookston democrats shook their heads and said: "That aint a patchin' to what will be seen when we have our rally! Wait till you see our rally and then you will see a Grand Forks democratic turnout." Well, we waited and when that grand event transpired, what did we see? Not one man from Grand Forks appeared upon the festive scene.

(Communicated.)

ED. JOURNAL; In your last issue I notice a communication from my friend, O. H. Lucken. As there are always two sides of a story of this kind, and as my name is mentioned, permit me through your valuable paper to state the facts so far as I am personally interested. On the day of the convention, two years ago, Mr. Lucken came to me and asked if I was a candidate for treasurer, to which I replied I was. The only proposition Mr. Lucken made was this, that if he had known two weeks before that I was a candidate he would have withdrawn in my favor. This was the only conversation I had with Mr. Lucken before the convention. What was alluded to sometime after the convention I may have misunderstood, as there are other parties in the same box. It is true that I am a candidate for county treasurer at the coming republican county convention, and shall be glad and very thankful if the convention will honor me with the nomination. I cannot offer any compensation other than this: If nominated and elected I will honestly and faithfully perform the duties of that important office.

Respectfully,

O. A. THORESON.

W. H. Alley was down from Hallock on Monday and Tuesday talking in favor of C. J. McCollom for representative. Mr. McCollom is one of the leading business men of Kittson County, one of the right sort. Among the many things he has done to build up the interests of this upper country was the establishment of a cheese factory. Recognizing the fact that the interests of the country demanded something besides all wheat, he put money into a cheese factory at a time when conservative business men doubted the wisdom of the investment from a business stand-point. But Mr. McCollom reasoned that something must be done and somebody must put up for it; that if successful, it would be a great help to the business interests of the country. So far the institution has been more beneficial to the farmers than to the man who started it, but Mr. McCollom is satisfied, hoping that it may, sometime, pay back its cost. He is a broad gauged, liberal-minded man, just the kind of a man the district needs to represent its large and varied interests, and will come into the convention as the unanimous choice of his county, whose claims for the place are ahead of all others, having never yet had a representative. It is true that Marshall County, also, has never had a representave, but not because she has never had a good chance to get one. Two years ago she could have named the man could she have united upon one, but her delegation would not unite. Kittson County stood back and allowed Marshall to try, and now, we think, Kittson should have the opportunity.

Sheridan is Gone!

The grand old soldier is at rest. The fell disease with which he has battled for many, weary weeks is victor and at last the grand, the noble warrior has surrendered to the King of Terrors whom he had so often faced on many a hotly contested field in the great war of the Rebellion. Among the noted names of history, Grant, Sherman, Logan, Custer, the name of Logan will live as one of the grandest soldiers of his times. Well does the writer remember, while serving under the grand old soldier in the Shenandoah Valley, the thrill that ran through the ranks when the bugle's shrill call of "boots and saddles" announced that "the old man has work for us to do," and every soldier sprang into the saddle—and we were never at fault, there always was work and hot work, wherever Sheridan led the way, and yet there never was a general more careful of his boys than was the gallant Phil. Every man could not be a great leader but to have served under Sheridan we consider a proud enough distinction for any honest soldier. But Sheridan has gone from earth never more to have part nor place with affairs of time, yet not gone from the heart of every old soldier, of every true patriot whose love of country is a deep, abiding principle. Not gone from the page of history is the grand old soldier whose name shall brighten its pages so long as the country shall have a history and future generations will revere that name, and emulate those deeds, even as we do now. Enshrined in the hearts of the grateful people whose government he fought so nobly to perpetuate, embalmed on history's brightest page, let him live still by the best right of man to live—a sacred duty faithfully and well performed.

De Year O' Jubilo.

Air: "Kingdom' Comin'."

Say, darkies, hab you seen old massa
Wid he hankchief round he t'roat,
Gwine long dis road some time dis mornin',
Like he gwine in town to vote?
He shibber jes' same like he used to shibber
When de Yankee army came—
An' I'll bet ten dollar de democratic party
Been a playin' a losin' game.

Chorus—De republicans laugh ha! ha!
De democrats run, ho! ho!
It must be now Ben Harrison's comin'
An' de year o' jubilo.

Ole massa wore he big revolver,
Like he gwine out for to shoot,
An' car'd he shotgun ober he shoulder,
An' he bowie-knife in he boot;
He say wo nigger better stay close home
An' nebber go near de polls;
But I'll bet ten dollar de democratic party
Am a-driftin' on de shoals.
Chorus:

I heerd old massa talk dis mornin',
He was clear troo bilin' mad;
I specs he 'fraid dat de Solid South
Gwine to get beat mighty bad.
He talk free trade, but as shoo's you born
Dere was sumpin on hes mind,
An' I'll bet ten dollar de democratic party
Am a-gwine to get lef' behind.
Chorus:

I don' like dis yere red bandana,
It 'minds me o' 'fore de war;
Gib me de flag dat freed de nigger,
Dat's de flag I'se prayin' for;
For de Stars an' Stripes an' Harrison
Dis nigger'll pray an' shout;
An' I'll bet ten dollar de democratic party
Am a-gwine to step down an' out.
Chorus:

The Free-Trade Bandanna.

(Air—"The Old Oaken Bucket."

How dear to my heart is the Democrat party,
When fond recollection presents it to view;
The Free Trade, the State's Rights, the Copperheads hearty,
And all the reform tricks the demagouges knew!
The wide-spreading Grover, the Mills that stood by him,
The mock "Civil Service," the broad-axe that fell;
The crack of the slave-whip when "war was a failure,"
And e'en the bandanna we all loved so well.
The snuff-stained bandanna,
The barred and starred banner,
Palmetto bandanna,
We all loved so well.

That snuff-covered noserag I hailed as a treasure.
As soldier and pension we drove from the field;
To sacrifice fishermen's rights was a pleasure,
To Free Trade and England our industries yield!
How ardent I seized it with hands that were glowing,
As quick on my big red proboscis it fell;
And soon with the emblem of snuff overflowing
And dripping with vetoes, I wielded it well!
The Free Trade bandanna,
Confederate banner,
The Cobden Club banner
We all loved so well.

How sweet from the brigadier clan to receive it,
As freemen disfranchised they sent to the grave!
Not the Star Spangled banner could tempt me to leave it,
Though bright with the glory that Washington gave.
And now, far removed from my high situation,
The tear of regret will intrusively swell,
As far up Salt River I take my sad station,
And ply the bandanna I once loved so well.
I hear the hosanna
From lost Indianna,
Oh! tear-stained bandanna
I once loved so well.

Democratic Ratification.

The Rev. B. F. Nash, rector of the Episcopal church at Fargo, D. T., preached to a large audience in the opera house on Tuesday taking the tariff as his text. The Rev. gentleman said that it was his great interest in the ignorant yahoos of the Northwest that caused him to go forth in the land to scatter a little information, to enlighten the heathen in his blindness upon the subject of the tariff. He did not inform his audience that he is an aspirant for congressional honors and that he hopes to be the nominee of the democratic party in the Fifth District. We have heard it said that the Rev. gentleman, having made the tariff subject a study for years is thoroughly informed, so we had a curiosity to hear him explain the theory of tariff revision from a democratic standpoint, and what that party proposes to do in the matter, and we must confess to a feeling of disappointment when we listened to the many inconsistencies jumbled together. One illustration answers to show the drift of the whole speech. The Rev. gentleman said it has been alleged that the democratic party is a free trade party. It is not a free trade party by any means. I am not a free trader but if we were living under absolute free trade to-day, with the internal revenue still retained on whisky and tobacco, as it should be, what would be

THE ONLY RESULT?

Why the tax would then be only two dollars apiece per capita, which would be, for me, eight dollars a year. Now I pay over ten times that amount under "protection." Thus, while saying that "me an" the democratic party are not in favor of free trade the Rev. gentleman labored to show that free trade was the best thing that could happen for the poor people especially. If we accept that statement as truth then, according to his own words the democratic party is not the friend of the people or else they would be for free trade. The Rev. gentleman thinks that Uncle Sam better put a $1,000 tariff on the poor emigrant, who seeks a home in free America than to put the same tariff on foreign manufactures seeking a market on our shores. Now he did not say that the democratic party will do this—in fact he did not say what they will do if anything, but as he pretends to represent the sentiment of that party we must take it for granted that his utterances are official, reflecting the sentiments of that party. He said that his poor washerwoman, whom he pays one dollar per day for washing, pays one dollar for sixty cents worth of sugar but he was very careful to conceal the attitude of the democratic party on that question—when the republicans in congress favored a reduction of that tariff one-half the democrats absolutely refused to have it so. Why? Because it is not policy for them to interfere with the great sugar trust and the interests of the Louisiana sugar manufacturer. If the democrats have no better speakers than this the more of them they bring out the worse off will they be when the judgment of the people is recorded in November.

Can any republican who may be dissatisfied with the republican party on the tariff question, tell us what consolation was afforded him by the Rev. B. F. Nash's speech? What assurance did he give that the democratic party will ever revise the tariff at all? Their action on the sugar clause in the Mills bill shows that they intend to do what they always have done—nothing at all.

LOST.

The drapery to a sateen black and white dress, Saturday evening last. Will finder be kind enough to leave at this office.

Alexandria Post: There is talk of a strong combination of forces in this district to defeat the high tariff railroad nominee of the republican party for congress.

Commenting upon the above the Verndale Journal very aptly says: "It will take a 'strong combination' to defeat Mr. Comstock. And if to be in favor of the protection of Amrican industries, is to be accounted a 'high tariff' man, we do not doubt that in the fifth district, the woods will be full of them about election time. Mr. Comstock is in favor of judicious tariff revision, as are many republicans, and is not a free trader; but he believes that a just revision will be more certainly obtained than by entrusting the task to the friends of the American working man than to the democratic party who are now posing before the country as the original 'tariff reform' party for the purpose of securing another four years' lease of power. The republican party has shown its wisdom in dealing with our revenues and the tariff, and can still be trusted to complete the work. The party which created the surplus knows best how to manage it, and when and in what manner to limit its increase. Neither is Mr. Comstock a railroad man in opposition to the wishes of the people. As a member of the railroad committee of the state senate he assisted materially in framing the bill which passed in 1885, and his record is before the people."

The Real Bosses.

We commend to our readers the following from the Farmington Tribune: "Upon the ticket to be nominated in St. Paul on the 5th prox. depends the success of the republican party in this state and the interests of the people as well as parties are at stake. It is a plain question of whether the people or the bosses shall rule. The great political bosses, who have made and unmade governors and senators, headed by boss Fletcher, of Minneapolis, have declared that A. R. McGill must be renominated for governor, and all the lesser bosses throughout the state, who are always ready to tumble over each other in their haste to obey the great ringsters, have set up the cry and are working their little machines for all they are worth. Those who are posted as to the public feeling throughout the state know that the renomination of Mr. McGill means inevitable defeat in November, but the bosses are of the rule or ruin order and would rather the party should suffer defeat than relax their hold upon the machine. In the present unsettled state of politics the party in this state needs a standard bearer who will prove an element of strength and not weakness, who is stronger rather than weaker than the majority of his associates. This cannot be said of the present incumbent, and it is not necessary to go further or say more. The people everywhere are interested in this matter, and owe it to themselves and the communities in which they live to take sufficient time from their work to attend the caucuses and see to it that representative men are sent as delegates, who will act in accordance with the real wishes of the people of their respective towns, rather than do the bidding of any boss, great or small. To your tents, oh Israel; this is a time for action. Let the people speak! Let the people rule! Let us have a full, free and fair expression of the wishes of the people, untrammeled by any political trickery from any one.

To Anti-Saloon Republicacans.

Important Assistance that Every Republican can Render by Prompt Action,

The Anti-Saloon Republican National Committee has removed its headquarters to No. 1 Broadway, New York City, and desires to hear from temperance republicans in every part of the country in reference to all matters of interest in their respective localities. It is especially anxious to know who are willing to do something to help the cause of temperance and republicanism. All such will oblige by writing at once, giving a short statment of the condition of sentiment in their respective localities, with suggestions as to what should be done to improve matters. Mere common scolds and pessimistic grumblers will oblige by not trespassing on our time.

ALBERT GRIFFIN,
Ch'n Anti-Saloon Rep. Nat'l Com.
No. 1 Broadway, N. Y. City. [16-tf]

PROHIBITION COUNTY CONVENTION.

A delegate Convention of the Prohibition voters of Polk County, Minnesota, is hereby called to meet at the Public Reading Rooms, in the city of Crookston, in said Polk County, Minnesota, on Thursday, August 23d, 1888, at one o'clock p. m., for the purpose of choosing delegates to the legislative convention to be hereafter called, and for the purpose of nominating the following county officers, to-wit: Auditor, Treasurer, Register of Deeds, County Superintendent of Schools, County Attorney, Sheriff, Court Commissioner, County Surveyor, County Commissioner for each district. The basis of representation will be as follows: Two delegates from each voting precinct in the county, one delegate from each W. C. T. U. organization in the county, one delegate from each prohibition club in the county, one delegate from each Scandinavian, Father Mathew, or other total abstinence society in the county.

There will be present to address the convention, one of Minnesota's pioneers in temperance work, Mr. W. W. Saterlee, of Minneapolis. "Come up and be counted."

[16-18] COUNTY COM.

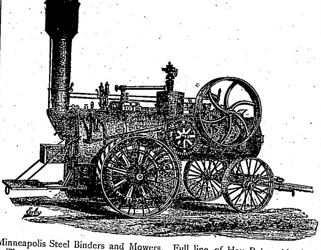
REMOVED.

HUGGARD, LARSEN & CO.

have removed their stock to their new building, opposite the New York store on, cor. Broadway and Robert. You can't miss it,

SIGN OF THE JAOKSON WAGON.

JUSTRECEIVED—A fresh car of Buggies, Carriages and Road Carts.



General Agents for
RUSSELL & CO'S "WORLD KNOWN"
Engines, Separators and Saw Mills.

Minneapolis Steel Binders and Mowers. Full line of Hay Rakes, Hand and Self Dumps. J. Thompson & Son's Cross Plows and Breakers, NEW MODEL Walking Gangs and Breakers, Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machines' Pumps, Full line of Extras. TWINE. Come and see us!

Pioneer Express, (Pembina, D. T.:) It is admitted that most of the prohibitionists come from the republican party; it is admitted that nearly all restrictive legislation on the liquor traffic has come from the republican party; it is admitted that Benjamin Harrison is a temperance man in precept and example—and yet many of the prohibitionists openly say by their actions and words that they prefer to see the democrats in power with Cleveland at their head. To put it in another form, they prefer to see a "wide open" policy rather than a restrictive policy. A doctrine which would mean, in case of punishment for murder, that if we cannot have capital punishment, let the murderer go free. If a man's house leaks, shall he knock a larger hole in the roof? If his house is cold, shall he set it on fire to warm himself in the blaze?

TO RENT.

My hotel and furniture, or will sell the furniture. Apply on premises at Carman. Z. DAOUST.

FOR SALE.

We have, placed in our hands for sale at a bargain, a half section of land near the city, on which is growing a fine crop of wheat, oats and barley. Here is a rare chance for somebody to drop into a ready made business right to hand. It will pay you to look into this bargain if you want a good farm in a good neighborhood, good water and good buildings. Address THE JOURNAL.

We refer to farmers to whom we have made loans as to our promptness in dealing with them. Our old customers always recommend their neighbor to us.

STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

STRAYED.

On Tuesday night, July 31st, from Crookston, a team of grey iron bronchoes, a mare and a gelding, hitched to a light buggy. They ran away from the driver and were last seen about 6 miles southwest of the city. A suitable reward will be paid for their return to C. Anderson, Crookston. [16-18]

For Sale.

Ten fresh milch cows with calves at their sides. These cows are all grade Jerseys and excellent for the dairy. Will sell cheap for cash or good paper till fall or will give one year's time on good security. For particulars see [16-tf] CHRIS. HOUSTON.

Hayland.

For the privilege of cutting grass on railroad lands, call on [12-15] F. O. SUSTAD, Crookston.

LOTS.

Lots in exchange for farming lands.

STEENERSON & MCMANUS

[First publication Aug. 9th, 1888.]

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk,—ss. In Probate Court. Special term, August 8th, 1888.

In the matter of the estate of Henry M Johnson (Highmore) deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of I. Tharaldsen administrator of the estate of Henry M. Johnson (Highmore) deceased, representing among other things, that he has fully administered said estate, and praying that a time and place be fixed for examining and allowing his account of his administration, and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to heirs.

It is ordered, That said account be examined, and petition heard by the Judge of this Court, on Friday the 31st day of August A. D. 1888, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Probate office in Crookston in said county.

And it is further ordered, That notice thereof be given to all persons interested, by publishing a copy of this order for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said county.

Dated at Crookston this 8th day of August A. D. 1888.

By the Court,
C. O. CHRISTIANSON,
Judge of Probate.

[16-18]

MORTGAGE SALE

[First publication August 9th, 1888.]

WHEREAS WILLIAM M. ROSS AND Ella Ross his wife as mortgagors did on the 16th day of April A. D. 1887, duly execute and deliver to John Cromb of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, as mortgagee their mortgage bearing date of April 16th, 1887 whereby they mortgaged to said mortgagee, his heirs, executors and assigns, the following described land situated in the County of Polk, State of Minnesota, to-wit: The northeast quarter (ne¼.) and the west half (w½.) of the southeast quarter (se¼.) of Section twenty-four (24.) Township one hundred and fifty (150) north, Range forty-seven (47) west, containing two hundred and forty acres, to secure the payment of the sum of five thousand eight hundred twenty and 67-100 dollars according to the conditions of one certain promissory note bearing even date with said mortgage and made and delivered by said mortgagor William M. Ross, to said mortgagee, and payable to said mortgagee or order. Which said mortgage was on the 16th day of April A. D. 1887, at 8:40 p. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk in book "22" of mortgages on page 131, and whereas the said John Cromb mortgagee, for value received, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1887, duly assigned the aforesaid note and mortgage and the debt secured thereby to the Merchants National Bank of Crookston, Minnesota, which said assignment was in writing under seal, duly witnessed and acknowledged and thereafter on the 16th day of September 1887 at 2 p. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said Polk County, in book "32" of mortgages on page 420, and whereas the said Merchants' National Bank of Crookston did for value received on the 16th day of September A. D. 1887, duly assign the aforesaid note and mortgage and the debt secured thereby to Joseph Kelso, of Belvue, Iowa, which said assignment was in writing under seal duly witnessed and acknowledged, and thereafter on the 17th day of September 1887 at 10 a. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, in book "32" of mortgages on page 425, and whereas for value received the said Joseph Kelso did on the 23d day of May A. D. 1888, duly assign the aforesaid note and mortgage and the debt secured thereby to the Merchants' National Bank of Crookston, Minnesota which said assignment was in writing under seal duly witnessed and acknowledged, and thereafter on the 1st day of June A. D. 1888, at 10 a. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, in book "36" of mortgages on page 191, and

Whereas default has been made in the payment of the sum of five hundred eighty-nine and 91-100 dollars which is claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the date of this notice and the further sum of four thousand five hundred sixty-six and 67-100 dollars with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent per annum from April 16th, 1888, yet to become due, and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the lands therein described which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Polk County, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Crookston, in said county, on the 8th day of October A. D. 1888, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt and interest and the taxes, if any, and fifty dollars attorney's fees therein stipulated to be paid in case of foreclosure and the disbursements allowed by law subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

Dated Aug. 1st A. D. 1888.

THE MERCHANTS' NATIONAL BANK of Crookston.
Assignee of Mortgagee.
Pierce & Cromb, Att'ys for
[16-23] Assignee of Mortgagee.

Report of the Board of Equalization.

The Board of County Commissioners and the County Auditor assembled at the auditors office on the 16th day of July A. D. 1888, and having each taken an oath to fairly and impartially equalize the returns of the county assessors, entered on their duties as the County Board of Equalization of said county. The board remained in session from day to day equalizing as follows:

The personal property of John Birkholtz, which had been assessed in the town of Sullivan and Grand Forks was ordered listed and taxed in Sullivan township.

The personal property of S. C. Bayley was listed in Rosebud township.

Item 18 page 11 village of Red Lake Falls was stricken from the roll as no such property existed.

On application the personal assessment of J. R. Clements, city of Crookston was reduced $100 on household furniture.

Bank stock in Red Lake Falls village reduced 40 per cent.

The personal assessment of Shoope Beok of Garfield was increased twelve hundred dollars for an elevator not listed by the assessor.

Lots 8 and 9 sec. 34, town 150, range 46, reduced one hundred dollars on application of owner.

The valuation of structures in Crookston township was reduced 25 per cent.

The assessment of structures on lots 7, 8, 9, 10 and 11 block 6, in Fletcher & Houston's addition to Crookston was reduced two thousand dollars on application of owners after comparison with other structures in said city.

The real estate assessment of Fairfax was reduced 20 per cent on account of improvements being entered by assessor in column for structures.

The north 100 feet of lot 2, block 32, original townsite of Crookston was reduced $100.

Farming lands in township 151, range 44 north of river, lowered 25 per cent and south of river raised 25 per cent.

The personal assessment of John Walter was stricken from the list.

The personal assessment of David Morrow and R. E. White of Nesbit was reduced $125 each.

The elevator and warehouse property was equalized as follows:

Minneapolis & Northern Co. at Fisher lowered	$ 1,000
At Crookston raised	500
At East Grand Forks lowered	750
FISHER VILLAGE.
Northwestern Elevator Co. lowered	$400
Thompson & Johnson lowered	500
Christian & Co. lowered	200
Red River Valley Co. at Huntsville raised	$ 200
At Reis lowered	200
North Dakota Elevator Co. at East Grand Forks raised	$ 200
At Red Lake Falls "	1200
At Huntsvill "	500
At Garfield lowered	100
Farmers Union Elevator Co. at Red Lake Falls raised	$ 900
At Angus "	500

The following items for wheat in transit were ordered stricken from the list:

Minneapolis & Northwestern Co. at East Grand Forks	$ 6,000
At Fisher	5,000
At Angus	500

The value of lands exclusive of structures was equalized as follows:

Andover,	lowered	8½	per cent.
Angus,	do	10	"
Black River,	raised	8½	"
Brandsvold,	do	60	"
Badger,	do	20	"
Bray,	do	30	"
Brislet,	do	5	"
Bygland,	lowered	8½	"
Crookston,	do	10	"
Columbia,	do	12½	"
Emardville,	raised	33⅓	"
Euclid,	do	5	"
Fairfax,	lowered	20	"
Farley,	raised	10	"
Fanny,	lowered	10	"
Fisher,	raised	25	"
Grand Forks,	lowered	15	"
Garden,	raised	25	"
Garfield,	do	45	"
Gervais,	do	5	"
Gentilly,	do	30	"
Godfrey,	do	12½	"
Grove Park,	do	25	"
Hammond,	do	5	"
Higdem,	do	10	"
Hill River,	do	60	"
Hubbard,	lowered	5	"
Huntsville,	do	10	"
Kertsonville,	raised	35	"
King,	do	10	"
Knute,	do	15	"
Lambert,	do	75	"
Lake Pleasant,	do	30	"
Lessor,	do	60	"
Louisville,	do	12½	"
Liberty,	do	5	"
Lowell,	do	10	"
Nesbit,	lowered	5	"
Northland,	raised	10	"
Onstad,	do	10	"
Parnell,	do	10	"
Poplar River,	do	75	"
Polk Centre,	do	35	"
Reis,	do	6	"
River Falls,	do	12½	"
Roome,	do	5	"
Rocksbury,	do	5	"
Rosebud,	do	10	"
Russia,	do	5	"
Sanders,	do	15	"
Sandsville,	do	25	"
Sletten,	do	5	"
Sullivan,	do	15	"
Terrebonne,	do	25	"
Tilden,	lowered	5	"
Tynsid,	do	12½	"
Vineland,	do	5	"
Winger,	raised	37½	"
Woodside,	do	15	"
Wyandotte,	do	25	"

ONE YEAR OLD HORSES.

Black River,	lowered	10	per cent.
Bygland,	raised	5	"
City of Crookston,	do	100	"
Fiser,	lowered	15	"
Fisher, village,	do	15	"
Garfield,	raised	30	"
Gervais,	do	30	"
Godfrey,	lowered	5	"
Grove Park,	raised	10	"
Higdem,	do	5	"
Hill River,	do	5	"
Hubbard,	lowered	10	"
Huntsville,	do	5	"
Keystone,	raised	35	"
Kertsonville,	do	5	"
Knute,	lowered	10	"
Lambert,	raised	100	"
Lake Pleasant,	do	5	"
Lessor,	lowered	12½	"
Louisville,	raised	10	"
Nesbit,	lowered	10	"
Onstad,	raised	12½	"
Polk Center,	do	10	"
Queen,	do	25	"
Rosebud,	do	12½	"
Sandsville,	lowered	12½	"
Sletten,	raised	5	"
Sullivan,	do	100	"
Tabor,	do	5	"
Tilden,	do	180	"
Tynsid,	do	60	"
Wyandotte,	do	25	"
City of East G. Forks	do	100	"
4th Assessment Dist	do	100	"

TWO YEARS OLD.

Black River,	lowered	25	"
Brandsvold,	raised	10	"
Bray,	lowered	25	"
City of Crookston,	raised,	30	"
Emardville,	do	10	"
Euclid,	lowered	10	"
Farley,	do	25	"
Fanny,	raised	10	"
Fisher,	lowered,	20	"
Fisher, village,	do	20	"
Garden,	raised	10	"
Garfield,	do	15	"
Gervais,	do	33⅓	"
Godfrey,	lowered	15	"
Hammond,	do	25	"
Higdem,	raised	10	"
Hill River,	do	20	"
Hubbard,	lowered	25	"
Keystone,	do	5	"
Kertsonville,	do	50	"
Lambert,	do	50	"
Lake Pleasant,	do	15	"
Lessor,	do	20	"
Louisville,	do	5	"
Nesbit,	lowered	10	"
North,	do	10	"
Norden,	do	15	"
Onstad,	raised	25	"
Poplar River,	do	30	"
Queen,	lowered	10	"
Roome,	raised	5	"
St. Hilaire, village,	do	5	"
Sandsville,	do	25	"
Sullivan,	do	65	"
Tabor,	do	10	"
Terrebonne,	do	10	"
Tynsid,	do	25	"
Vineland,	lowered	25	"
Woodside,	do	50	"
City of E. G. Forks,	raised	50	"
Columbia,	lowered	10	"
3d Assessment Dist.,	do	15	"

THREE YEAR OLD HORSES.

Andover,	raised	5	"
Angus,	do	25	"
City of Crookston,	do	10	"
Crookston,	do	25	"
Euclid	do	15	"
Fairfax,	do	15	"
Fanny,	do	25	"
Fisher,	do	5	"
Fisher, village	do	10	"
Garden,	do	10	"
Garfield,	do	25	"
Gervais,	do	10	"
Gentilly	do	50	"
Godfrey	do	12½	"
Grove Park,	do	25	"
Hammond,	do	25	"
Higdem	do	20	"
Huntsville,	do	10	"
Keystone,	do	10	"
Kertsonville,	do	50	"
Lake Pleasant,	do	10	"
Lessor,	do	10	"
Louisville,	do	40	"
Liberty,	do	20	"
Lowell,	do	10	"
Nesbit,	do	10	"
North,	do	10	"
Onstad,	do	25	"
Poplar River,	do	10	"
Polk Centre,	do	50	"
Red Lake Falls, vil.,	do	5	"
" " Tp.,	do	10	"
Reis,	do	5	"
Roome,	do	5	"
Rocksbury,	do	5	"
Sanders	do	10	"
Sullivan,	do	50	"
Tabor,	do	25	"
Terrebonne,	do	25	"
Tilden,	lowered	5	"
Tynsid,	raised	25	"
Wyandotte,	do	50	"
East Grand Forks,	do	do

Board adjourned to 1:30 o'clock p. m.

CATTLE ONE YEAR OLD.

Black River,	lowered	12½	"
City of Crookston,	raised	10	"
Fairfax,	do	10	"
Grove Park,	lowered	20	"
Keystone,	do	40	"
Kertsonville,	do	20	"
Liberty,	do	12½	"
Onstan,	do	33⅓	"
Queen,	do	12½	"
Reis,	do	20	"
St. Hilaire	do	20	"
Woodside,	do	12½	"
East Grand Forks,	do	12½	"
3d Assessment Dist,	do	33⅓

TWO YEARS OLD.

Angus,	raised	10	"
Black River,	lowered	10	"
Brislot,	do	15	"
Grand Gorks,	raised	10	"
Garfield	do	10	"
Gervais,	lowered	10	"
Hammond,	do	15	"
Keystone,	do	30	"
Lake Pleasant,	raised	10	"
Liberty,	lowered	10	"
Nesbit,	do	10	"
Onstad,	do	12½	"
Queen,	do	20	"
River Falls,	do	12½	"
Roome,	raised	10	"
Sullivan,	lowered	10	"
Tabor,	raised	5	"
Terrebonne,	do	10	"
Tilden,	do	25	"
City of E. G. Forks,	lowered	11⅓	"
3d Arsessment Dist.,	raised	33⅓	"

COWS.

Beigium,	lowered	5	"
Brislet,	do	5	"
Fanny,	do	5	"
Fisher, village,	do	5	"
Garfield,	raised	10	"
Gervais,	do	15	"
Godfrey,	lowered	15	"
Keystone,	do	33⅓	"
Kertsonville,	raised	10	"
Lambert,	lowered	5	"
Lessor,	do	5	"
Louisville,	raised	10	"
Liberty,	lowered,	22	"
Red Lake Falls, vil.,	do	15	"
St. Hilaire,	raised	5	"
Tabor,	do	5	"
Woodside,	lowered	10	"
Wyandoite,	raised	5	"
City of E. G. Forks,	lowered	20	"
4th Assessment Dist.,	do	5	"

WORKING OXEN.

Blac River,	raised	10	"
Bransdvold,	do	5	"
Badge,	do	10	"
Belgium,	lowered	20	"
Bygland,	raised	10	"
Crookston,	do	20	"
Emardville	lowered	10	"
Euclid	raised	5	"
Fairfax	do	25	"
Fisher	lowered	10	"
Fisher, village,	do	33⅓	"
Grand Forks	raised	25	"
Garden	do	5	"

[Continued next week.]

Polk County Journal.

W. G. COOKE, Publisher.

CROOKSTON, MINN., AUGUST 9.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

Weather Record for July.

CORRECTED MONTHLY BY JOHN ROSS, ESQ.

DATE.	WIND. S. E.	S.	S. W.	W.	N. W.	N.	N. E.	E.	THERM'R. 7 a. m.	12 m.	6 p. m.
July 1									71a	85a	87a
" 2			1						70	78	74
" 3			1						60	70	77
" 4			1						62	75	80
" 5	½	½							68	78	78
" 6					1				62	70	70
" 7	½							½	62	65	61
" 8						1			64	68	73
" 9			1						60	68	78
" 10	½		½				½		68	81	89
" 11								1	74	82	80
" 12							1		64	70	76
" 13								1	64	68	60
" 14									66	74	80
" 15	1								64	70	68
" 16			1						58	68	74
" 17			½		½				60	68	63
" 18					1				58	68	69
" 19									58	75	83
" 20	1								68	79	84
" 21					1				67	78	78
" 22					1				60	78	78
" 23			1						57	70	73
" 24	1								58	74	82
" 25	½				½				62	80	80
" 26							1		68	78	87
" 27	½							½	63	72	64
" 28	½							½	63	76	86
" 29	½		½					½	68	70	74
" 30			½		½				70	74	78
" 31					1				56	65	76

The prevailing winds during the month were from the southwest, southeast and northwest. The 1st, 14th and 19th were calm. The 1st was the warmest day, the thermometer indicating 85 above at 12 m. Rain fell on 8 days of the month, and there were 16 cloudy and 15 clear days. Average temperature during the month, 69 degrees.

Beltrami Telautographs.

BELTRAMI, July 28, 1888.

The heavy rain of yesterday did much good for crops in this vicinity.

The genial proprietor of the Beltrami House, Joe Gilsoul, took in the county seat and other drinks to-day.

Word reaches us through the daily papers that the town of Roslyn, W. T., is in ashes. Our former townsmen D. W. Haight and P. Dykeman are in business there, so we presume they have been burned out.

W. J. Nickle will teach the fall term of school which will begin August 13th.

EDNA.

Kittson County Enterprise: Wm. R. Merriam is conceded as the coming man who will do honor and credit to the state as its governor. We last week stated quite plainly the position that Albert Scheffer had taken but the last jump was his endorsement by the democrats of Ramsey county. In such a position, of Mr. Scheffer it can be said he has no politics. In the Pioneer on Sunday last, he was cartooned with one foot on the republican platform, the other on a plank of that of the democrats, while his right hand was clinging to a prohibition plank and his left with the labor class. Now, as the boys say, "name it, and you can have it." Nothing of that kind can be said of Mr. Merriam. He is a fearless advocate of republicanism, and is strong with his party. His public record is without tarnish. Those who have known him personally and have had business with him are his staunch friends, and no farmer legislator who remembers his firmness and good judgment as Speaker of the House of Representatives in March '87 will need to be told that he, (not Fletcher or any other monopolist) will be governor when elected.

California Wines and Brandies.

Max Ericsson is constantly receiving California Wines and Brandies, the choicest of liquors of all kinds at wholesale and retail, which he can supply at the shortest notice. No use to send below for such things, as Max can supply them as cheaply and of as good quality as you can get anywhere. Go and see what Max can do for you.

Money to Loan.

We have the cash always on hand to loan on good farm security. No second mortgage. No delay. No commission.
STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

A Snap.

M. R. Brown offers 100 lots, near the business portion of the city at figures that will give the purchaser a chance make a good thing. Look into this and be convinced.

For Sale.

A full blood Jersey bull calf. Will sell cheap for cash or trade for a colt, heifer calves, a few pigs or anything but dogs or cats. I have no use for the animal and he is too valuable to veal.
Address, M. E. BARTLETT, Fairfax.

For Cash or Trade.

A thoroughbred Holstein-Friesian bull, for cash, on time or trade for cows. For particulars address THE JOURNAL office.

Farm loans completed and money paid over the day application is made.
STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

For Sale.

A pure blood Polled Aberdeen Angus bull. Will sell cheap for cash or trade for colt. For terms see
THEODORE GREENHALGH.

Stewart & Laurence,

WHOLESALE AND RETTIL

HEAVY AND SHELF

HARDWARE,

BAKER STEEL BARBED WIRE.

JEWETT'S STOVES AND RANGES,

Plymouth Binding Twine

For Sale.

One Threshing rig complete; Minnesota Chief separator, and J. I. Case engine, strawburner, all in complete running order. For particulars call on
JAS. GREENHALGH, Jr., Crookston.
[16-tf.]

We are established in Crookston TO STAY. We do not do business here this year to go away the next. In loaning money, as in other business, we have a character for fair dealing to sustain Call on us before going elsewhere. Remember all interest on our loans is payable at our office.
STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk,—ss.
In Probate Court. Special term, held Aug. 2d, 1888.

In the matter of the guardianship of Roman Anderson, Julia Anderson, Peter Anderson and Aber Anderson, minors.

On reading and filing the petition of Martha Anderson guardian of said minors, representing among other things, that the said wards, are seized of certain real estate in the County of Polk, and State of Minnesota, and that it is necessary and desirable that a part of the same should be sold, and praying for license to sell the same; and it appearing to the court, from said petition, that it would be for the benefit and best interest of the said minors to sell said real estate at private sale.

It is ordered and directed, That the next of kin to said ward, and all persons interested in said estate, appear before the Judge of this court, on Thursday the 20th day of September A. D 1888, at 2 o'clock p. m., at the Probate office in Crookston, in said county, then and there show cause, (if any there shall be) why license should not be granted for the sale of said real estate, according to the prayer of said petition.

And it is further ordered, That a copy of this order shall be published for four successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, the last of which publications shall be at least fourteen days before said day of hearing, in THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said county.

Dated at Crookston, this 2d day of August A. D. 1888.

By the court,
C. O. CHRISTIANSON,
Judge of Probate.
[16-18

CHRISTIANSON BROTHERS,

(Correspondents Fargo Loan Agency.)

REAL ESTATE,

Farm Mortgage Loans and Insurance.

☞ Special Bargains in Choice Farm Lands, improved and unimproved. Low prices and easy terms.

—OFFICE ON ROBERT STREET.—
CROOKSTON, - - - - MINN.

NEW MEAT MARKET

At Steenerson Bros. Old Stand, on Main Street,

SANDS BROTHERS, Prop's.

Having purchased this stand we have put in a large and complete stock of Fresh and Salt Meats of all kinds, secured the services of a thoroughly competent butcher, and are now ready to supply the Choicest Roasts and Steaks of Beef, Pork, Mutton, and everything in our line. We invite your patronage. Orders delivered when desired.
SANDS BRO'S, MAIN STREET.

THE BEST OF ALL.

THE WEEKLY

PIONEER PRESS!

If you want all the news subscribe for the WEEKLY PIONEER PRESS.

Six Months for 40 Cts.

Remember, this is a Special Offer, and will not hold good only till Aug. 15th.

The Weekly Pioneer Press

Contains the most reliable

POLITICAL NEWS,

THE

BEST EDITORIALS,

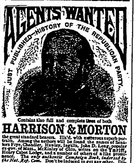
The greatest

G. A. R. DEPARTMENT,

And more attractive features for the old and young than any other weekly paper in the west.

Send 40 cents to the Pioneer Press Co., St. Paul, Minn., and receive this great weekly for six months.

One Dollar will secure the Weekly Pioneer Press for one year, together with a splendid History of the United States.



AGENTS WANTED
JUST PUBLISHED—HISTORY OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

Contains also full and complete lives of both

HARRISON & MORTON

the great standard bearers. Illu'd. with numerous superb portraits. Among the authors will be found the names of Senators Frye, Chandler, Hawley, Ingalls, John D. Long, popular ex-gov. of Mass., McKinley of Ohio, writes on the Tariff, Henry Cabot Lodge, and a number of others of a like prominence. The only authentic Campaign Book, indorsed by the Nat. Rep. Com. Don't be induced to get any other. Distance no hinderance as we pay all freight charges. Send 50 cents in 2c. stamps for outfit and be the first in the field, or write for full particulars and Special Terms sent free to all.
WINTER & CO., Pubs., Springfield, Mass.

JOHN CROMB,

Attorney-at-aw.

ECOND STREET, CROOKSTON,

DR. M. WATTS.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.

Office over Merchants' Bank,

☞ Professional calls by day or night promptly attended to.

SCANDI AMERICAN

BANK.

Authorized Capital....................$300,000
Paid in Capital....................50,000

COLLECTIONS A SPECIALTY.

OFFICERS:

C. Hendrickson, President.
G. M. Barber, Vice President.
C. O. Christianson, 2d Vice President.
A. G. Gallash, Cashier.
D. Ellington, Asst. Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

O. H. Lucken....................Crookston
L. K. Aaker.................... "
J. H. Locken.................... "
T. J. Thorsen.................... "
P. E. Sandager....................Grafton, D. T.
A. E. Johnson....................St. Paul, Minn.

NEW CIGAR STORE,

SIGN OF THE BIG INJUN.

H. F. BROWN, Proprietor

Second Street,

CROOKSTON, - - - - MINN.

Cigars of every known brand, from a cheroot ot a 25 center. Cigarettes, Chewing and Smoking Tobaccos of all kinds, Snuff, Pipes to suit the fancy of all, from a corn-cob pipe to a meerschaum.

Particular attention is invited to our line of Meerschaum Goods. NONE FINER IN THE NORTHWEST.

Drop In and See the New Store!

H. F. BROWN.

THE SECOND HAND STORE,

(Yvernault's Old Place,)

Main Street, - - Crookston, Minn.

KEEPS A FINE, LARGE STOCK OF

NEW FURNITURE,

At Prices Unrivalled in this market. Also a Large Stock of

SECOND HAND FURNITURE,

Little worn. Parties desiring to dispose of Old Furniture can exchange it with me for New Furniture at a Bargain, or I will Pay Cash for it. Call and see my stock and get prices

PETER GOTHIA.

DENTISTRY!

J. H. THOMAS, D. D. S.,

ROBERT STREET, CROOKSTON, MINN

Artificial Teeth from one to an entire set inserted. Gold, Silver or Artificial Filling used a desired. Regulating Children's Teeth a specialty. ALL WORK WARRANTED.

THE HERALD,

WEEKLY, $1.00 } Per Y'r in Advance.
DAILY, - $5.00 }

Daily contains LATEST TELEGRAPHIC NEWS; FULL ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCHES. Address

THE HERALD,

GRAND FORKS, DAK.

Verndale Journal: The democrat who is willing to run for congress against Hon. S. G. Comstock must be anxious for a good licking and he will not be disappointed.

CARLETON COLLEGE,

NORTHFIELD, MINN.

Fall Term Opens September 5, 1888,

THE COURSES ARE

CLASSICAL, LITERARY, SCIENTIFIC, ENGLISH-ACADEMY AND MUSICAL,

Besides Preparatory and Post-Graduate studies.
Instruction given in Drawing and Painting.
Special facilities for study in Pure Mathematics and Astronomy.
Extensive Chemical and Biological Laboratories.
Open to students of either sex.
Expenses very low.
For Catalogues and Circulars address,
[14-16] JAS. W. STRONG, President.

CROOKSTON

CREAMERY,

WALSH & BJOIN, Prop's.

The Crookston Creamery is now ready for business, and solicits the patronage of every progressive farmer. At the prices that we now pay, you can make more money out of your cream than you can to make it into butter yourself. It only needs a trial to convince you.

We invite the patronage of all who are interested in their own welfare, as well as that of the county to call and see us.

Crookston Nurseries

Established in 1879

Tree Claim Stock

A SPECIALTY.

I will furnish my customers and others, trees and seeds for Tree Claims at reduced figures in the spring of 1887. Also all the hardier varieties of small fruits, such as Currants, Gooseberries, and Raspberries. Also good thrifty Transcendent and Hislop Crab-Apple trees, Cottonwood and Box Elder trees. Box Elder and Ash seed, and Willow cuttings. Also garden seeds. The firm of Haseltine Bros. was dissolved in June, 1883. E. W Haseltine has no interest or share in the old Crookston Nurseries, nor is he successor to the old firm of Haseltine Bros. as ha, been advertised. I continue business on the old grounds in Crookston. Don't fail to send for catalogue of prices.
FRANK T. HASELTINE, Prop.
Crookston, Minn

TONSORIAL PARLORS,

PROF. THOMPSON, Prop.,

Robert Street, - - - Crookston, Minn

HOT AND COLD BATHS.

W. A. ROBERTSON,

D. D. S.

Graduate of Dental Department of the Univer sity of Maryland.

OPERATIVE AND MECHANICAL

DENTIST.

OFFICE, IN McKINNON BLOCK.

THE PERKINS WIND MILL.

BUY THE BEST AND SAVE MONEY

It has been in constant use for 19 years, with a record equaled by none. We give each purchaser a

WARRANTY

as follows: We warrant the Perkins Wind Mill sold this day, to out-last and do better work than any other make, and not blow down, unless the Tower goes with it, and against any wind that does not disable buildings in the vicinity.

We manufacture both Pumping and Geared Mills and carry a full line of Wind Mill Supplies.

☞ AGENTS WANTED. ☜

Send for Catalogue, Circulars and Prices.
Address PERKINS WIND MILL & AX CO.
Mishawaka, Ind.

THE OLD RELIABLE

CROOKSTON

LOAN AGENCY

STILL ON DECK.

MONEY

On Real Estae.

MONEY

On Approved Chattels.

Always on hand at the Lowest Rates.

Consult your best interests by giving me a call when you Want Money.

A. D. STEPHENS,
Second Street, Crookston, Minn.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston, Minn., July 24th, 1888.

Complaint having been entered at this office by Hans Christopherson against Louis St. John for abandoning his Homestead Entry No. 11,712, dated April 1st, 1886, upon the e½ sw¼ and lots 3 and 4, S. 18, T. 153 n. R. 46 w. in Polk County, Minn., with a view to the cancellation of said entry, the said parties are hereby summoned to appear at this office on the 14th day of Sept. 1888, at 10 o'clock a. m., to respond and furnish testimony concerning said alleged abandonment.
[14-19] L. K. AAKER, Receiver.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston, Minn., July 11th, 1888.

Complaint having been entered at this office by Peter O. Berggrew against John Scarborough for failure to comply with law as to timber culture entry No. 1259, dated June 17th, 1879, upon the southwest quarter S. 26, T. 154 n. R. 49 w., in Polk County, Minn., with a view to the cancellation of said entry, contestant alleging that the said John Scarborough did not break or plow nor caused to be broken or plowed any part of said land the first year after the date of said entry, that there has been no improvements of any kind made on said land since the date of said entry, the said parties are are hereby summoned to appear at this office on the 11th day of Sept. 1888, at 9 o'clock a. m., to respond and furnish testimony concerning said alleged failure.
[14-19] H. H. DICKMANN, Reg ister.

A. F. LAPLANT,

PLAIN AND ORNAMENTAL

PLASTERING

Done to Order. ☞ All Work Warranted. ☜

CROOKSTON, MINN.

S. L. COLLINS

—PROPRIETOR OF—

MAIN STREET

Livery, Feed and Sale Stables

CORNER MAIN AND FOURTH STS, WEST SIDE,

Crookston, - - - - Minnesota.

Horses bought and sold on commission.
Everything neat and nobby.
Feeding a specialty.

FINE HEARSE

in connection which I will attend to in person.

1878. 1888.

Fontaine & Anglim,

Have the largest and most complete stock of goods in the city, consisting, in part, of

CARPETS AND HOUSE FURNISHING GOODS, DRY GOODS, NOTIONS BOOTS AND SHOES, GENTS', YOUTH'S AND CHILDREN'S CLOTHING STAPLE AND FANCY GROCERIES.

Pries very Low. Farmers' Produce Taken in Exchange.

THE CROOKSTON

AUCTION AND COMMISSION STORE.

SECOND HAND GOODS of all kinds Bought and Sold. Also Sold on Commission. We are prepared to sell Stock and Machinery at our Yards in Crookston, or to attend Sales anywhere in Polk County at Reasonable Rates. Orders solicited. It will be to your interest to see our stock of

SECOND-HAND AND NEW GOODS

And get prices before purchasing elsewhere.

BERTHIAUM AND MICHAUD, Proprietors,
BROADWAY, - - CROOKSTON, MINN.,
Between Robert and Fletcher Streets.

THE BEE HIVE!

Established in 1879.

HACK & GALLASCH

Invite Your Attention to Their New

SPRING AND SUMMER STOCK

—OF EVERYTHING IN THE LINE OF—

DRY GOODS, NOTIONS, BOOTS AND SHOES.

HATS AND CAPS.

IN OUR GROCERY AND PROVISION DEPARTMENT

Will be found a Full and Complete Stock of Fresh and Reliable Goods which we can sell at the very Lowest Living rates. We point with pride to our CHINA DEPARTMENT and challenge any competitor to beat it. Goods delivered free to any part of the city. When in need of anything in our line. call and see

HACK & GALLASCH. COR. MAIN & SECOND STS.

D. H. BATES,

—DEALER IN—

Lumber, Building Paper,

PAINTS, OILS,

DOORS, WINDOWS, AND MOULDINGS

ALSO

FARM MACHINERY

AGENT FOR THE CELEBRATED

MILWAUKEE HARVESTER,

(FORMERLY THE DENNETT,)

AND THE CELEBRATED

WINONA PLOWS

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

☞ You will find it to your advantage to call when need of anything in my line.

D. H. BATES,
CARMAN, - - - MINN

MONTANA SHORT LINE.

When traveling every one should consider well the questions of economy, comfort, safety and speed, these questions being of the same importance in a journey of an hour as in one of several days' ride. An examination of the map will convince anyone that this is the most direct route to and from all the principal points in Central and Northern Minnesota,

ST. PAUL MINNEAPOLIS MANITOBA RAILWAY.

Dakota and Montana. Our epuipment and time are excellent. Our rates are the lowest, but this fact is something which speaks for itself. Definite figures and maps can be obtained by applying to any Agent of the Company, or the General Passenger Agent.

The following are a few of the Principal Points reached via this Line:

ST. CLOUD, SAUK CENTRE, FERGUS FALLS, CROOKSTON, ST. VINCENT, HUTCHINSON, PAYNESVILLE, MORRIS, APPLETON AND BRECKENRIDGE, MINN.; WATERTOWN, ABERDEEN, ELLENDALE, WAHPETON, FARGO, GRAND FORKS, GRAFTON, DEVILS LAKE, BOTTINEAU AND BUFORD, DAKOTA; GLASGOW, DAWES (FT. BELKNAP), ASSINNIBOINE, FT. BENTON, GREAT FALLS, HELENA AND BUTTE, MONTANA; WINNIPEG, MANITOBA, AND ALL PACIFIC COAST POINTS.

Parties seeking farms or business locations will find unusual opportunities for both on this line in Northern Dakota and Montana, also in Minnesota where the Company has for sale at low prices and on favorable terms 2,000,000 acres of excellent farming, grazing and timber lands. For maps and other information address,

J. BOOKWALTER, Land Commissioner.
C. H. WARREN, Gen'l Pass. Ag't.
ST. PAUL, MINN.
A. MANVEL, Gen'l Manager.
W. S. ALEXANDER, Gen'l Traffic Manager

FROM ST. PAUL No. 3 daily	Miles.	STATIONS.	TO ST. PAUL No 4 dl'y
8:03 p. m.	00	Lv...St. Paul...Ar	7:00 a. m.
9:10 p. m.	11	...Minneapolis...	6:25 "
10:15 a. m.	296	...Crookston...	5:35 p. m.

No. 3. Through sleeper to Fergus Falls, Crookston and Winnipeg.

No. 4. Through sleeper from Winnipeg, Crookston and Fergus Falls.

CROOKSTON AND MINOT—Trains leave Crookston daily, Sundays excepted at 10:20 a. m. and arrive at Crookston from Minot at 5:15 p. m., Sundays excepted.

ST. HILAIRE BRANCH—Trains leave Crookston Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 10:15 a. m. arriving in St. Hilaire at 12:45 p. m. Leave St. Hilaire same days at 2:00 p. m. arriving in Crookston at 4:00 p. m.

A. MANVEL, Gen'l Manager.
C. H. MIX, Agent
C. H. WARREN, Gen'l Pass. Agent.
W. S. ALEXANDER, Traffic Manager.

Northern Pacific RAILROAD.

The New Route Between

Grand Forks,

AND

St. Paul,

Minneapolis,

Duluth,

And all points East. The direct line to

Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, British Columbia, Puget Sound and Alaska.

EXPRESS TRAINS DAILY,

To which are attached Pullman Palace Sleepers and Elegant Dining Cars. On overland trains, Emigrant Sleepers Free. The only line

YELLOWSTONE PARK.

TIME SCHEDULE.

Depart West Bound.		Arrive East Bound.
4:50 p. m.	St. Paul	7:00 a. m.
4:50 "	Minneapolis	6:35 "
3:45 "	Duluth	7:45 "
8:40 "	Brainerd	1:15 a. m.
1:00 a. m.	Winnipeg Junction	8:50 p. m.
2:33 "	Twin Valley	7:25 "
3:37 "	Fertile	6:33 "
4:00 "	Tilden	6:05 "
4:35 "	Red Lake Falls, Depart	5:30 "
	Arrive	5:10 "
5:25 "	South Euclid	4:29 "
5:36 "	Bunington	4:20 "
5:44 "	Keystone	4:05 "
6:25 "	Ar. Grand Forks. De.	3:35 "
6:45 "	De. Ar.	7:20 "
7:12 "	Kelly's	3:05 "
7:27 "	Mekinock	2:50 "
7:42 "	Beans	2:37 "
7:31 "	Gilby	2:28 "
8:02 "	Johnstown	2:17 "
8:15 "	Forest River	2:05 "
8:35 "	Grafton	1.28 "
7:33 "	Drayton	12:50 "
10:15 "	Arrive....Pembina....Depart	11:35 a m

☞ Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars between Grand Forks and St. Paul. Dining Cars on west bound trains Coupon Tickets on sale to all points South, East and West. For full information as to time, rates, address

W. E. JERMAINE, Ticket Agent.
Grand Forks.
CHAS. S. FEE,
Gen. Pass. Agent.
St. Paul, Minn.

CLEVELAND HOUSE,

R. BURKHARDT, Prop.

Handy to Depot.
Handy to Post Office.
Handy to Land Office.
Handy to Stables.
Handy to Court House.

The most convenient Hotel to any business house and to deal with of any Hotel in the city. Give me a call. Terms $1. Yours truly,

RUDY BURKHARDT.

A. P. HOLAND

(Successor to S. S. Johnson,)

PHOTOGRAPHER

COPYING and ENLARGING

in all sizes and first-class work guaranteed.

PICTURE FRAMES

made to order, on short notice.

Any work in my line neatly and promptly executed at lowest living rates.

☞ GIVE ME A CALL. ☜

Studio opposite Post Office,
Robert Street, - - Crookston, Minn

The Polk County Journal.

H. E. COOKE, Editor and Proprietor.

DEVOTED TO THE WELFARE OF POLK COUNTY.

TERMS---$1.50 Per Annum

VOL. XII. CROOKSTON, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, AUGUST 16. 1888. NO. 17

Polk County Journal.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES,

One Dollar and Fifty Cents, if paid in advance, to any address inside of Polk County. If outside of Polk County 15 cents must be added for postage. If not paid in advence $2 per annum to any address.

ADVERTISING RATES.

SPACE.	1 w.	2 w.	3 w.	1 m.	3 m	6 m.	1 year
½ inch	$.50	$1 00	$1 25	$1 50	$3 00	4 50	$ 6 00
1 inch	75	1 25	1 75	2 00	4 50	6 00	10 00
2 inches	1 50	2 25	3 00	3 50	6 50	9 50	15 00
3 inches	1 75	2 75	3 75	4 50	9 50	13 50	20 00
4 inches	2 50	3 50	4 50	5 50	10 00	18 00	25 00
5 inches	3 00	4 00	5 00	6 00	12 50	20 00	30 00
¼ column	3 50	4 50	5 50	6 50	15 00	25 00	35 00
½ column	6 00	7 50	10 00	12 00	25 00	35 00	50 00
column	9 50	12 00	15 00	18 00	35 00	60 00	100 00

Entered at the Post Office in Crookston as Second Class matter.

MILLER, FOOTE & SWEATT,
ATTY'S-AT-LAW,
McKinnon Block, - - - Crookston, Minn.

THE PIONEER HARNESS SHOP,
M. RAUE BUEHLER, Proprietor.
A full supply of everything kept by the trade.
Cor of Broadway and Third Sts,
CROOKSTON, - - MINN

D. H. FISK,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND LOAN AGENT.
☞ Collections a Specialty. ☜
FERTILE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA.

P. C. SCHMIDT,
ATTORNEY AT LAW. | MONEY TO LOAN
Crookston - Minn

H. STENEERSON,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
Crookston. Minn.

FRANK IVES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
AND
Solicitor of Patents and Pensions,
CROOKSTON, MINN.

Having special arrangements with one of the most reputable and responsible firms of Patent Lawyers in Washington, I can offer better inducements to inventors than can be secured elsewhere, and absolute certainty against "leakage" of valuable facts pertaining to business entrusted to my care.

A. H. DUNLOP, M. D.,
Graduate McGill University, Montreal.
LICENSED COLLEGE PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON QUEBEC.
Office on Second Street, Crookston.

M. M. VAN DYKE,
Physician and Surgeon,
Office corner of Main and Second Streets,
CROOKSTON, - - - MINNESOTA

A. A. JUST, M. D.,
Homoeopathic Physician and Surgeon,
Office on Broadway, east side, opposite Wm. Anglim's residence.

A. C. WILKINSON,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
(Successor to H. A. Wilkinson,)
Room 5, Furnel Block } Crookston, Minn.

M. LeGUEE,
Veterinary Surgeon.
Residence and office on Jerome's Addition.
CROOKSTON, - - - - MINN.

G. G. HENAULT
Practical Dentist,
SECOND STREET,
CROOKSTON, - - - MINN

OFFICE IN DOBSON'S BLOCK,
Over Mrs. Bangs' Fashionable Millinery Store.
☞ All work in my line skilfully and promptly performed. Give me a call.
G. G. HENAULT.

MINNESOTA HOUSE,
(FORMERLY BOX HOUSE.)
ONE-HALF BLOCK FROM DEPOT.
WM. HEIDRICH, - - Proprietor.
Having rented this Popular House and thoroughly re-fitted and re-furnished it throughout, I am now prepared to meet the wants of all who want good and cheap accommodations.
☞ Farmers custom specially invited,
Terms $1.00 per Day.

Fall Stock
—OF—Men's,
Boys'
AND Children's CLOTHING
ARRIVING
DAILY!
Desirable
Styles!
Standard
Quality!
Lowest
Prices!
It Pays to Trade at the
C. O. D.
Clothing House.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For President,
BENJ. HARRISON
Of Indiana.

For Vice President,
LEVI P. MORTON,
Of New York.

For Member of Congress, 5th District,
SOLOMON G. COMSTOCK,
Of Clay and Polk Counties.

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

A Republican State Convention for the state of Minnesota will be held on Wednesday, September 5th, 1888, in Market Hall, in the city of St. Paul, at 12 o'clock, noon, for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following positions:

Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.
One Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.
Governor.
Lieutenant Governor.
Secretary of State.
State Treasurer.
Attorney General.

And for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the convention.

All citizens who believe in the principles of the Republican party: who desire its success, and who will support the candidates nominated by the National Republican Convention held in Chicago, June 19th, 1888, are invited to co-operate in the election of delegates.

The counties are entitled to the following number of delegates and an equal number of alternates.

Aitkin	4	Martin	4
Anoka	5	Meeker	6
Becker	5	Mille Lacs	3
Beltrami	2	Morrison	4
Benton	3	Mower	7
Big Stone	4	Murray	4
Blue Earth	9	Nicollet	5
Brown	5	Nobles	4
Carlton	3	Norman	4
Carver	4	Olmsted	7
Cass	7	Otter Tail	11
Chippewa	4	Pine	3
Chisago	6	Pipe Stone	4
Clay	5	Polk	9
Cook	2	Pope	5
Cottonwood	4	Ramsey	29
Crow Wing	5	Redwood	4
Dakota	6	Renville	6
Dodge	5	Rice	8
Douglas	6	Rock	4
Faribault	6	St. Louis	10
Fillmore	9	Scott	3
Freeborn	7	Sherburne	4
Goodhue	12	Sibley	4
Grant	4	Stearns	6
Hennepin	38	Steele	6
Houston	6	Stevens	4
Hubbard	2	Swift	4
Isanti	5	Todd	5
Itasca	2	Traverse	4
Jackson	5	Wabasha	6
Kandiyohi	7	Wadena	1
Kanabec	8	Waseca	5
Kittson	3	Washington	7
Lac qui Parle	6	Watonwan	4
Lake	3	Wilkin	3
Le Sueur	5	Winona	8
Lincoln	4	Wright	8
Lyon	5	Yellow Medicine	5
McLeod	4
Marshall	4	Total	150

St. Paul, July 20, 1888.

JOHN S. PILLSBURY, Chairman.
JOEL P. HEATWOLE, Secretary.

☞ The Chairman or Secretaries of the different county conventions will please report to the Secretary of the State Central Committee, the names and post office address of the delegates and alternates, and also the county committeemen. If this is done promptly it will be of great service to the party, and insure prompt and active work. The State Committee request this kind favor of each county convention.

The Die is Cast!

(Communicated.)

What many an earnest friend of temperance had hoped would not occur, has nevertheless taken place, as in your last issue appears a call for a prohibition county convention to assemble in this city, August 23d. It had been hoped that the friends of temperance in the county irrespective of politics, could have united on a nominee for the legislature that would advocate and vote for any measure tending to bring the temperance question in a form so as to let the voters of the state decide it forever. We have no doubt in the least, but that such an issue in a non-partisan shape, would sweep the state like it did our neighboring state of Iowa. We fail to see how the nomination of a county ticket, which even the most sanguine third partisan never for a moment hopes to elect, and by which movement they only can hope to elect the democratic nominees for the county offices this fall, knowing full well that they thereby help the acknowledged enemies of temperance legislation under any form. It seems to us, that by working the thing judiciously, an avowed temperance man might be united on and sent to the legislature, and the officers of county commissioners might be treated in the same way, and that it ought to be the duty of every earnest temperance man to see that good efficient men, favorable to the cause, might be elected to the local offices, irrespective of political creed. I wish to state, Mr. Editor, that I am a third party man in national and state politics, but cannot for the life of me see how it can otherwise than hurt our local temperance interest to put a third party county ticket in the field. It made me sick at heart to see how the St. Paul Globe, the very organ of the notorious Columbia Association, praised the state nominees and patted the makers of the third party ticket on the back, and not because the Globe or any of its hangers on wish the cause to succeed, but because the very foes of prohibition will get into power if the third party issue is pushed far enough. It seems to us, Mr. Editor, that our third party men do not show the political wisdom that the cause demands.

PROHIBITION.

To Anti-Saloon Republicacans.

Important Assistance that Every Republican can Render by Prompt Action.

The Anti-Saloon Republican National Committee has removed its headquarters to No. 1 Broadway, New York City, and desires to hear from temperance republicans in every part of the country in reference to all matters of interest in their respective localities. It is especially anxious to know who are willing to do something to help the cause of temperance and republicanism. All such will oblige by writing at once, giving a short statment of the condition of sentiment in their respective localities, with suggestions as to what should be done to improve matters. Mere common scolds and pessimistic grumblers will oblige by not trespassing on our time.

ALBERT GRIFFIN,
Ch'n Anti-Saloon Rep. Nat'l Com.
No. 1 Broadway, N. Y. City. [16-tf]

W. C. T. U. Work.

One feature of the W. C. T. U. work is the provision of pleasant and whole some entertainment for the people. Week after week the union meets, generally alone, though strangers are always cordially welcomed. They work silently and alone, doing whatever they find to do to forward, reform and remedy all the evils of society. The committee on Sabbath observance keep their eyes open, and the Sabbath breaker is gently admonished, or the boy fishing in the river is quietly reminded that his occupation is not appropriate to the day. The committee on press work look to the distribution of sound, healthy tracts and religious literature. The flower mission visits the sick and destitute, carrying food when necessary, bearing hope and good cheer and flowers with an appropriate scripture passage on some christian sentiment. In large towns especially much good is done that way. Flowers and a cheerful face warrant a helping hand and warm heart to the sick, unfortunate or wayward one. Thus the W. C. T. U. works in various ways not only to close the saloon, but all paths that do or may lead to it. It strives to supply a prevention and cure for all crime. Often the work done is of such nature that the real work accomplished is not at once apparent to the general public, but it is there, deep and abiding and it is then that a Union is known to be wide-awake and doing good work by often appearing with some pleasant entertainment and always presenting something new, fresh and attractive. Nothing deserves the sympathy and support of the public so much as the innocent pleasures and recreations as these entertainments always give. There should be no admission fee so that the poorest may attend and all the children have a chance to hear and see good things which may tend to offset the many evil influences which daily surround them. A floral entertainment, at this season of the year, when flowers are so plentiful, is a beautiful and instructive thing and a church or hall may be rendered exceedingly attractive. Entice the people in some way to come and you will be able to give them sound, practical temperance doctrine that they might not, perhaps, come especially to hear. Flowers and temperance match well together, and the two combined may furnish an entertaining and a beneficial program. After such an entertainment a Harvest Festival would be quite in order. Bundles of grain, ears of yellow corn and all of the fruits of the harvest would make very beautiful and practical decorations, while the sight would bring to mind our kind Father's blessing and watchful care. We might be surprised to find how much the Bible has about the harvest, and how much the poets have sung on the same subject. Then, again, how symbolic is the harvest of temperance, (which field we are all working in) and the fruits of which we expect to reap. Let us forward the work in every way we can. The call for reapers in this field is great and every helping hand should be gladly welcomed. To-day, at Ada, commences a two-days' convention, a program of the proceedings of which we append as follows:

PROGRAM.

THURSDAY MORNING.

10:30. Consecration Meeting. Appointment of Commitees. Evangelistic Work. Press Work.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

2:00. Devotional Exercises. The Tobacco Habit. Scientific Temperance Instruction. The Ideal Temperance Woman. Juvenile Work. Work in the South.

THURSDAY EVENING.

8:00. Opening Exercises. Address of Welcome. Response. Address by Mrs. Knox.

FRIDAY MORNING.

10:00. Devotional Exercises. Reports of Unions. Hygiene and Heredity. Work Among Lumbermen. Question Box.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

2:00. Work of the Y's—Miss Estey. Report of Committees. Fallacies of High License—Mr. C. R. Andrews. Sabbath Observance. District and County Work. Adjourn.

FRIDAY EVENING.

7:30. Grand Pro. Pro.!—Prohibition Program. Short Addresses by Miss Carrie Estey, Mrs. Julia B. Nelson, Rev. W. H. Medlar, Rev. S. H. King and Mr. F. L. Hampson.

All are invited.

The Tariff On wheat.

The Northwestern Agriculturist.

"We argue too much, when we point to a tariff of twenty cents a bushel on wheat as protection to Dakota," says the Pioneer-Press. It continues, "Dakota is not competing with India. Only a small fraction of India's wheat reaches England—about one-fifth of the quantity that reaches the same country from the United States. Even our own American soft wheat does not regulate the price of our hard Dakota berry." Concluding, the Pioneer-Press says: "The tariff on wheat does no harm and less good. It is an economic fiction that is as fruitless as it is innocent." Has the Pioneer-Press forgotten that at least one-fourth of the world's supply of No. 1 hard wheat is gown in Manitoba and the Northwest Territory? Does the duty of 20 cents a bushel, preventing this 30,000,000 bushels Canadian fife wheat coming in direct competition with American wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, afford no protection to Dakota and Minnesota farmers?

Pertinent Questions Honestly Answered.

The following correspondence explains itself.

STANDARDVILLE, N.Y. July 6 1888

Hon. ALBERT GRIFFIN.

Dear Sir: As you are at the head of the Anti-Saloon movement, and were a member of the Committe on Resolutions at the Chicago Convention, I ask—

(1) Why was not a plank put into the platform when first reported, like the supplementary resolution finaly adopted?

(2) How many of the delegates do you think were present and voted on the adoption of the resolution introduced by Mr. Boutelle?

(3) Do you think there is anything in the resolution offensive to the saloonists?

(4) Was it introduced because of the expressed disappointment of yourself and other prominent Anti-Saloonists, as well as the aroused indignation in the hope of holding the temperance vote?

(5) Does it mean anything?

By an early reply you will greatly oblige a minister of the Gospel, who is also a teacher in a Theological Seminary, and earnestly desirous of the overthrow of the saloons. Truly yours,

A. H. MORRILL.

July 18, 1888.

Rev. ALVH H. MORRILL.

Dear Sir: Yours of the 6th has been forwarded to me here, and I trust that the following brief reply to your questisons will be satisfactory:

1.—More than two-thirds of the Platform Committee had expressed themselves in favor of the adoption of Anti-Saloon plank, but the most of them were finally demoralized dy the alarming (and, in some cases, unfounded) statements of a few prominent men; and, as time was needed to prepare for a contest on the floor, those who remained firm desided that it would be better to introduce an independent proposition toward the close of the Convention than to present a minority report—and the result confirmed the wisdom of this court.

2.—Nearly all the delegates were present when the Boutelle plank was adopted, about 800 delegates rising to their feet in the affirmative, and only one in the negative. Even before the resolution was read it was evident to every one present that the sympathies of the mass of the delegates, and of the audience also, were with Mr. Boutelle. Nor was it "sprung upon the Convention," for Senator Hiscock, Ex-Senators Miller and Platt and Chauncey M. Depew, of New York, end equally prominent men from other States, had previously agreed to support a similar resolution.

3.—The demand of the liquor men was, that nothing should appear in the platform that even meant temperance, and they were and are very bitter over the final action of the Convention. The next day, one of their leading political representatives said to me, "I would rather have given $10,000 than had that resolution pass," and I overhead another of them in a heated discussion say, in response to a statement that the brewers had once adoped a resolution that was as strong as the Republican plank, "Yes, I am aware of that, but everybody knew they were not in earnest, while these d—n temperence Republicans mean every word they have said, and more." The language of the resolution may not be offensive to all saloon keepers, but the idea and aim is. The Illinois Staats Zeitung, the most influential German paper in the interior, and which is edited by Herman Raster, the author of the famous "Raster resolution," says:

"While the Republican National Convention in the beginning kept every declaration for temperance out of its platform, it adopted, immediately before separating, on motion of a member from Maine, and almost unanimously, a resolution which pledges the party to support all wise efforts for furthering temperance. Every child knows what such a declaration means from the mouth and interpreted by the mouth of the original prohibition State of Maine. The Republican party, as such, stands now as the temperance party."

It is doubtless true that, when trying to help the Third party draw radical temperance men out of the Republican ranks, some dramseller, who formerly were and may yet claim to be Republicans, pretend to be satisfied with the attitude of the Republica party, but no dispassionate man believes them.

4.—When we first heard that the Committee had decided not to report an Anti-Saloon plank, Mr. Bautelle was astonished and announced his willingness to present one at the proper time. Senator Hoar and other prominent members were equally emphatic in their declaration that "the mistake must be rectified," and the efforts of those of us who were especially looking after the matter, were daily aided by a multitude of letters and telegrams that poured in on members, until the feeling became so strong that it swept everything before it.

The Minnesota Loan and Trust Co.
HAVE ESTABLISHED AN AGENCY AT CROOKSTON.
☞ MONEY LOANED ON IMPROVED FARMS,
IN ANY PART OF THE RED RIVER VALLEY.
NO DELAY! NO BONUS!
Money Supplied the Moment Notes are Signed. Letters of inquiry promptly answered.
STEENERSON & McMANUS, Agents,
Two doors South of U. S. Land Office. CROOKSTON, MINN

ALWAYS ON THE WINGS OF TIME
And Ready for Business, to Serve Customers to the Best of their interest, at the Popular Jewelry Store of
C. H. SAAKE,
I am absolutely without a competitor; my store contains the Best Goods that can be obtained, and at prices that no other dealer can afford to sell at. My success is the best guarantee and the reward of good work, of good treatment, and the established fact that I have given full value for every dollar left with me. ☞ Be sure and call before buying elsewhere.
C. H. SAAKE,
The Jeweler, Main St., Opposite Merchants' Nat'l Bank.

5—It means all it says—and more. Herman Raster was right when he wrote: "The republican party, as such, stands now as the temperance party."

I deeply regretted the action of the Committee, and would have been glad if a more ringing resolution had been finally adopted; but I am not discouraged, and see no reason for supporting the saloon party, even by indiscretion. On the contrary, I rejoice that the republican party has at last set its face against the saloon and shall help it to press forward. It is no small matter to have committed the party everywhere against the whiskey ring protection tax, and in favor of "all wise and well directed efforts for the promotion of temperance and morality," and to have nominated such a man as Gen. Harrison. After this national endorsement of the resistless tread of republican sentiment, there can be no doubt of the fact that substantially, every man who cares more for the liquor business than he does for Republican principles will support the Democratic ticket next fall; and this concentration of the common enemy should cause a corresponding union of the opponets of that business in the ranks of the only party that is both able and willing to defeat it.

Respectfully,
ALBERT GRIFFIN.

Just Like All The Rest.

Minneapols Evening Journal.

Gen. Fisk's letter of acceptance is of a piece with all third party literature. It is simply down moral suasion, down all regard for public sentiment and practical measures, down reason and expediency and judgment, down all consideration of the existing condition of things and the circumstances under which the battle against the saloon must be fought; up all disregard for the means at hand, up all indifference to the prevailing sentiment of the community, up zeal, enthusiasm and reckless haste, up disregard for conditions and indifference to consequences; the law is the thing; the party makes the law; destroy everything that stands in the way of the party, whether friend or foe; ruin to rule and ruin any way, if unable to rule; the minority above the majority; the enthusiasm of the few against the wisdom of the many; the tyranny of the fanatic over the patience of the prudent; impulse against deliberation; zeal against experience; emotion against judgment.

That is all there is to the third party idea whether expressed in the well rounded periods of the party's candidate for President or governor of Minnesota. When the majority of the people of Minnesota feel that they are ready to fight the saloon with a prohibitory law and that they could enforce such a law if they had it, the Republican party will be found on the side of prohibition. There is no doubt about that.

NEW CIGAR STORE,
SIGN OF THE BIG INJUN.
H. F. BROWN, Proprietor
Second Street,
CROOKSTON, - - - MINN.
Cigars of every known brand, from a cheroot ot a 25 center. Cigarettes, Chewing and Smoking Tobaccos of all kinds, Snuff, Pipes to suit the fancy of all, from a corn-cob pipe to a meerschaum.
Particular attention is invited to our line of Meerschaum Goods. NONE FINER IN THE NORTHWEST.
Drop In and See the New Store!
H. F. BROWN. [16-18

MORTGAGE SALE

[First publication August 9th, 1888.]

WHEREAS WILLIAM M. ROSS AND Ella Ross his wife as mortgagors did on the 16th day of April A. D. 1887, duly execute and deliver to John Cromb of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, as mortgagee their mortgage bearing date of April 16th, 1887 whereby they mortgaged to said mortgagee, his heirs, executors and assigns, the following described land situated in the County of Polk, State of Minnesota, to-wit: The northeast quarter (ne¼,) and the west half (w½,) of the southeast quarter (se¼,) of Section twenty-four (24,) Township one hundred and fifty (150) north, Range forty-seven (47) west, containing two hundred and forty acres, to secure the payment of the sum of five thousand eight hundred twenty and 67-100 dollars according to the conditions of one certain promissory note bearing even date with said mortgage and made and delivered by said mortgagor William M. Ross, to said mortgagee, and payable to said mortgagee or order. Which said mortgage was on the 16th day of April A. D. 1887, at 3:40 p. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk in book "22" of mortgages on page 134, and whereas the said John Cromb mortgagee, for value received, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1887, duly assigned the aforesaid note and mortgage and the debt secured thereby to the Merchants National Bank of Crookston, Minnesota, which said assignment was in writing under seal, duly witnessed and acknowledged and thereafter on the 16th day of September 1887 at 2 p. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said Polk County, in book "33" of mortgages on page 420, and whereas the said Merchants' National Bank of Crookston did for value received on the 16th day of September A. D. 1887, duly assign the aforesaid note and mortgage and the debt secured thereby to Joseph Kelso, of Belvue, Iowa, which said assignment was in writing under seal duly witnessed and acknowledged, and thereafter on the 17th day of September 1887 at 10 a. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, in book "32" of mortgages on page 423, and whereas for value received the said Joseph Kelso did on the 23d day of May A. D. 1888, duly assign the aforesaid note and mortgage and the debt secured thereby to the Merchants' National Bank of Crookston, Minnesota which said assignment was in writing under seal duly witnessed and acknowledged, and thereafter on the 1st day of June A. D. 1888, at 10 a. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, in book "36" of mortgages on page 191, and

Whereas default has been made in the payment of the sum of five hundred eighty-nine and 91-100 dollars which is claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the date of this notice and the further sum of four thousand five hundred sixty-six and 67-100 dollars with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent per annum from April 16th, 1888, yet to become due, and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the lands therein described which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Polk County, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Crookston, in said county, on the 8th day of October A. D. 1888, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt and interest and the taxes, if any, and fifty dollars attorney's fees therein stipulated to be paid in case of foreclosure and the disbursements allowed by law subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

Dated Aug. 1st A. D. 1888.

THE MERCHANTS' NATIONAL BANK of Crookston.
Assignee of Mortgagee.
Pierce & Cromb, Att'ys for
[16-21] Assignee of Mortgagee.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk,—ss. In Probate Court. Special term, held Aug. 2d, 1888.

In the matter of the guardianship of Roman Anderson, Julia Anderson, Peter Anderson and Aber Anderson, minors.

On reading and filing the petition of Martha Anderson guardian of said minors, representing among other things, that the said wards, are seized of certain real estate in the County of Polk, and State of Minnesota, and that it is necessary and desirable that a part of the same should be sold, and praying for license to sell the same: and it appearing to the court, from said petition, that it would be for the benefit and best interest of the said minors to sell said real estate at private sale.

It is ordered and directed, That the next of kin to said ward, and all persons interested in said estate, appear before the Judge of this court, on Thursday the 20th day of September A. D 1888, at 2 o'clock p. m., at the Probate office in Crookston, in said county, then and there show cause, (if any there shall be) why license should not be granted for the sale of said real estate, according to the prayer of said petition.

And it is further ordered, That a copy of this order shall be published for four successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, the last of which publicatsons shall be at least fourteen days before said day of hearing, in THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said county.

Dated at Crookston, this 2d day of August A. D. 1888.

By the court,
C. O. CHRISTIANSON,
Judge of Probate.

[16-18

Polk County Journal.

W. G. COOKE, Publisher.

CROOKSTON, MINN., AUGUST 16.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

'Round Home.

Wheat, No. I Hard, 70 cents.

Col. Sheehen was in from White Earth on Tuesday.

The republican convention always draws a large crowd.

The great traveler and humorist, Col. J. P. Sanford' at the Opera House next Monday night.

Miss Ermine Fontaine departed on Sunday evening to attend a convent school at St. Paul.

W. B. Dawley, the genial traveling man, passed the night with his family, leaving on Wednesday for the north.

Overcoats for fall wear in Worsteds, Kerseys, Meltons. Look our line over while on your shopping tour.
C. O. D. Clothing House.

C. J. McCollam, our future representative in the legislature, passed through the city, en route for home, on Wednesday.

The Crookston nine went up to Red Lake Falls last week to play the Red Stockings of that place and got left, 11 to 15.

"See Florence and die!" Col. Sanford has seen Florence and numberless other cities. He will soon be here to tell you all about them.

Our assortment of French, Scotch and domestic flannel shirts never more complete styles and prices correct.
C. O. D. Clothing House.

The Southern Minnesota Fair Association will hold their 9th annual fair from September 3d to 9th inclusive. For catalogue address C. Van Campen, Rochester.

The new addition to the Commercial Hotel is nearly completed. Mr. Clements informs us that it will be all ready for occupancy by the time Mr. Bemis returns, who is expected next Saturday.

We have only one note and mortgage we make a loan the day applied for, charge no bonus, and make interest payable at our office in Crookston.
STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

The St. Paul Farmer has been sold to the veteran publisher of the American Agriculturist, Orange Judd, who, it is said, will take it to Chicago. Mr. Judd is one of the oldest and best agricultural editors living.

K. D. Chase informs THE JOURNAL that the spring wheat in the southern part of the state is an almost entire failure. They have some very fair winter wheat but that is nothing extra. He says that oats and barley will be light, also.

Full line of hosiery, gloves, underwear in endless variety.
C. O. D. Clothing House.

The Grand Forks Herald calls us to order in the statement that not one democrat came over from Grand Forks to the "big" rally, says there was JUST one. We accept the amendment, but must still insist that it was not much of a turnout.

R. A. Wilkinson came up on Sunday on business connected with the Brainerd line. He says that THE JOURNAL may announce officially that the line will be completed to the timber in time to handle the present crop, and that the line will be completed to Milacca as soon as the company can accomplish it. It would seem by this that Fosston will soon have communication with the outside world.

THE JOURNAL is informed that there is a young lady resident of Polk County ambitious to be County Supt. of Schools. What's the matter with Elliot? He's all right, and it has been suggested that perhaps the lady may be all right if she will pool with Elliot and accept "assistant" superintendent. She would thus save all of the annoyance incident to a political campaign and enjoy the benefits accruing therefrom.

Call at Mrs. E. E. Bangs' Millinery Parlors for Mrs. Ozias' Celebrated Orange Cream for the toilet. [14-tf]

The readers of THE JOURNAL will be pleased to know that Col. J. B. Sanford is coming to Crookston. This famous speaker will deliver his popular lecture, "Old Times and New," at the Opera House next Monday night. The Colonel is now at Fargo; Goes from there to Grand Forks and next week to Winnipeg. Crookston secures him for the 20th—one night only. Tickets 50 cents, admit to any part of the house. Do not fail to hear him.

We loan money to pay up railroad lands.
STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

Wm. Stuart has purchased an interest in a grocery house in Minneapolis and has gone to that city to live. Mr. S. is one of the founders of this city, being among the first to locate a claim here, and upon that claim a portion of the city now stands. He has been a prominent business man, a member of the city council for a good portion of the time since the organization of the city in whose welfare he has ever manifested a lively interest. He still retains his interest in the packing house and says that his interest in the prosperity of the city remains as great as ever. He expects to give his sole attention to the packing business here during the winter season until the time arrives when he will return for good. Mr. S. leaves hosts of friends who will unite with THE JOURNAL in wishes for his continued prosperity.

Rev. Mr. Currie was in the city this week.

Charlie Collins drove up to Euclid Sunday.

S. L. Collins has painted his barn-front a sky blue.

Six converts were baptised in the Baptist Church Sunday.

A number of our young people went out the Lake on Saturday.

Miss Breman, S. L. Collins' domestic, is sick with typhoid fever.

K. D. Chase arrived on Tuesday, bright and smiling as usual.

Prof. Moore has returned refreshed for his coming school duties.

There will be a Congregational sociable this evening at the residence of Harry Wyand.

Miss White, of Warren, was in the city on Monday, the guest of Miss Millie Phillips.

Al. Kaiser was down from Fosston this week. Al. always bobs up serenely about convention time.

Ernie Childs took a trip to Warren this week for a visit with one of his old class-mates of Hamline University.

Last week, while taking a spin on his bicycle, Mr. Galland took a header, seriously bruising his face and spraining both wrists.

Miss Nelson, formerly a teacher of negroes in the South, addressed a large audience in the Baptist Church last Sunday evening.

F. M. Bronson, a son of Dr. B. F. Bronson, for the past year one of the faculty of Brown University, goes to Cornell, this year, as instructor.

It is reported that James Miller of Hammond has engaged his services as foreman, to a big Dakota farmer, and will leave for the Territory this fall.

Col. Geo. H. Johnstone, of Minneapolis, came up on Tuesday to talk Merriam and one thing and another. The Col. begins to show grey hairs numerously.

Elsewhere in this issue will be seen a communication from Samuel Garborg, a teacher from Warren, Minn., who has been teaching in Trail County, D. T., for the past summer.

Red Lake Falls again walked away with our boys, last week, with a score of 15 to 11, in spite of a most promising opening by the Crookston nine. They are to play on the Crookston grounds next week.

Wm. Anglim went to St. Paul on Monday evening to represent the democracy of Polk County in the democratic State convention. Mrs. A. and the children accompanied him, en route to La Crosse for a visit to her mother.

A river driver stepped into one of our city stores and handed the manager a $100 bill, asking him to keep it for him, saying he did not want to throw it all away. If more of them would do likewise there would be less waste of hard-earned wages.

The Marshalltown Times says: "As a humorous lecturer on travel he stands easily at the head and has pleased more people than any man living, combining instruction and humor, uniting in himself the qualities of a close observer, a master of graphic description and real wit."

W. W. Mitchell was down from Sletten on Monday. He reports grain looking splendid and prospects excellent for the dwellers in the Thirteen. He says all they need now is the road to make them perfectly happy and is rejoiced that the prospects for getting it are so brilliant.

A. A. Glenn stepped into our sanctum on Tuesday morning and mysteriously wrote upon a slip of paper the following magical sentence: "It is a girl." Pursuing the subject, we learned that the girl was his new daughter who arrived on Monday to gladden the hearts of her happy parents. Mother and infant doing well and A. A, says he is "jest tolable, thankee."

E. C. Elwood was over from Grand Forks last week to arrange for Col. Sanford's lecture here on Monday evening, August 20th. The Colonel lectures three nights in Grand Forks and is highly endorsed by all of the best people of that city and will, no doubt, give the best of satisfaction. The price of admission has been fixed at a very reasonable figure—50 cents, which will permit all so inclined to hear him.

On Tuesday of last week, an accident happened to Mr. Fred Fox, who lives about four miles east of the city, by which he was seriously if not fatally injured. In some way, as he was going home, his team ran into the ditch near Barretto's landing, overturning the wagon and catching Mr. Fox beneath it. He was found in an insensible condition some time later, taken home and Dr. Van Dyke called who gave him every possible attention.

On Saturday p. m., a gigantic farmer from Black River country, got on a glorious drunk and was having a splendid time, pushing pedestrians off the sidewalk, kicking a tin pail round the street, sporting a Cleveland hat three sizes too small for him, and finally disputing the right of a lady with a baby carriage to pass quietly along the sidewalk, kicking the front of the carriage, and when the lady declined the honor of a hand-shake, shaking her rudely by the arm. A prominent citizen summoned Hayes, who took Dan McDonald and went after him and by that means brought him in. After a short time in the cooler for reflection, he plead guilty, paid his fine and was set at liberty.

Died.

At the residence of his brother, in this city, on Wednesday morning at 7 o'clock, Mr. Samuel Huggard died of consumption, aged 55 years. Mr. Huggard was born in Ireland, came to this county in July, 1879, and has always been one of the most respected and energetic farmers of Polk County. In the fall of 1886, he was married to Alice Fetzer, and has lived upon his farm in the town of Tabor until last April, when he was forced by sickness to give up his farming business and he come to Crookston and has since been living with his brother and sister. He was one of a family of 12, and is the second one to die. The funeral ceremonies will be held on Friday at 2 o'clock.

George Edward Holt, oldest son of George H. and Clara A. Holt, died on Friday evening, August 10th, 1888. He was born on Nov. 10th, 1886, in Prescott, Wis., and came to this city with his parents and family about eight years ago. When the Northern Tier was established he accepted a sit in that office continuing until the decease of that paper, when he went into the Chronicle office, then conducted by W. R. Dunn. Since then he has worked upon the Times and THE JOURNAL, and wherever he has found employment he has made many friends by his faithful attention to his business, by his kind and genial disposition and gentlemanly demeanor. At the time his last sickness commenced he was in charge of the Fisher Bulletin and did not give up until absolutely obliged to. On Friday evening, August 3d, he came home, hoping that a few days rest would bring him out again all right, but such was not destined to be the case. He was not able to rise Saturday morning, gradually grew worse, until on Wednesday morning, August 8th, so critical was his condition considered that his father, who was at Hammond, Wis., was telegraphed to come at once if he would see his son alive. His brother wanted to telegraph his father sooner, but Ed. said, no, it was a pity to interrupt his father's pleasant visit with his aged mother, whom he had not seen before in many years, but on Wednesday Ed. felt so much worse that he said to his brother: "I wish father was home." His brother then told him that he had telegraphed him to come. Mr. Holt arrived on Thursday's train just in time to see Ed. conscious and be recognized. In a short time after his father's arrival Ed. lost consciousness and never regained it. On Sunday Col. Cobham Post united with Geo. H. Thomas Camp, Sons of Veterans, and with the band proceeded to the residence and escorted the remains to the church, when Rev. W. H. Medlar delivered a very touching discourse. The church was filled to overflowing and a train of forty carriages followed all that was mortal of Ed. to their last resting place. Some friends had provided a liberal supply of flowers for the occasion and the casket was wrapped in the folds of his country's flag, and the pall-bearers, Fred Mix, A. A. Glenn, E. C. Carruth, Horace Lucken, Ernie Childs and Horrie Jennings were his brothers in the Camp. On Monday evening the camp met and unanimously adopted the following RESOLUTIONS.

WHEREAS, It has pleased God in His infinite wisdom to call from our ranks and from a world of suffering to a heaven of happiness, our esteemed friend and brother; therefore

RESOLVED, That while we humbly bow to Him who doeth all things well, and though he will meet with us here no more, his influenc will always be felt.

RESOLVED, That as a Camp we desire to bear testimony to the faithfulness of our departed brother, of his devotion to his sacred office, and commend to the Good Shepherd the stricken family who so tenderly watched over him in his last hours.

RESOLVED, That we will devote ourselves anew to the work of our order, in which he took such an active part, hoping that some day we may receive a reward for so doing.

RESOLVED, That as death has visited and broken our ranks for the first time, we should be admonished that we have "only one life to live, one, only one, eternity forevermore."

RESOLVED, That this action be entered on the records of the Camp and furnished for publication in our local papers, and also that a copy of the same be sent to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That we tender the bereaved father, brother and sister, our heartfelt sympathy in this hour of affliction.

SONS OF VETERANS,
Per Committee.

Our boys and childrens department omplete with all the novelties of the season. Parents will do well to look us over before purchasing.
C. O. D. Clothing House.

A. P. Holand wishes to remind the public that he is doing first class work in all lines of photography at reasonable rates. He is making a specialty of frames which he makes to order.

Prof. J. E. Troll, a noted chemist of Boston, was in the city on Friday. He is taking an extended trip throughout the Northwest in quest of health and pleasure.

Mrs. I. U Jennings will sell Millinery at less than cost for the next twenty days. [13-tf]

Francis is again on deck with something new. He has just purchased an outfit for taking landscape views, and judging from specimens of work already done, he has a valuable instrument. He intends to make use of it, both in the city and the surrounding country and the public should take advantage of the enterprise to secure some good work.

Concession.

Free Press: It is no extravagant praise to concede Col. Sanford the power of entertaining an audience beyond that of any modern lecturer who has visited Detroit.

Attempted Suicide.

Arthur Howard, porter at the St. Louis hotel, got tired of living any more and attempted suicide on Sunday evening by swallowing the contents of a bottle of laudanum. His intentions were discovered in time to save his life by a vigorous use of the stomach pump and vigorous and continuous exercise for an hour or so. It is thought by some that he is insane at times.

Do your trading at the C. O. D. Clothing House and save money.

Mr. Chas. Dunsmore, of Clarksvalle, Mo., is visiting his cousin, Mr. S. L. Collins.

We' refer to farmers to whom we have made loans as to our promptness in dealing with them. Our old customers always recommend their neighbor to us.
STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

Bishop Gilbert will hold a Confirmation in Christ Church, Tuesday evening October 2d 1888, at 7 o'clock.

The Rev. I. C. Fortin will preach on "Confirmation" or "The Laying on of Hands," next Sunday morning.

M. P. Schmidt, of Wisconsin, arrived on Wednesday, to visit his brother, the good looking attorney, for a week or so.

There will be service as usual in Christ Church on Sunday evening—The union service for this month will not be held.

M. G. Jenson, who was up as delegate from Garden, says much damage has been done to wheat from rust or some other cause.

Dr. A. Nelson was up to attend the republican county convention on Wednesday. He reports business good in his neighborhood this summer.

Those who had the pleasure of listening to Miss Carrie Estey last March will be glad to learn that she will speak in the Congregational church next Tuesday evening, Aug. 21st, at eight o'clock. Admission free.

John B. Carlo was down from Red Lake Falls last week renewing old acquaintances. John B., has recently had a windfall in the shape of a pension of $10 per month since 1881, increased to $24 per month since Dec. last.

We can loan money on better terms than anyone else in the valley. Money paid over the moment securities are executed. STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

Arno Higdem was over from the west side this week as a delegate from his town. He put in his best efforts to secure a temperance sentiment in the deliberations and to secure a good plank on the subject. Arno is now doing a good work in the cause.

Bishop Gilbert will lecture in the opera house, Monday evening, October 18th, on "Personal Reminiscences of Montana in Stage Coach Days." This a most interesting and amusing lecture, and has been delivered with great success both in St. Paul and Minneapolis. The proceeds of the lecture will go towards paying the debt on Christ Church.

The Central Minnesota Fair Association, St. Cloud, Minn., Sept. 18th, 19th, 20th and 21st is open to the world for competition this year, and indications are that it will excel anything of the kind ever held in Northern Minnesota. E. G. Mills is Secretary, and invites everybody to write for particulars.

St. Paul Dispatch: There now seems little doubt of the construction of the Duluth & Winnipeg railroad. About $500,000 has already been subscribed to the capital stock and another $100,000 will be subscrided by Duluth citizens before they will let the scheme fall through. It is expected that the work of building will soon be under way.

We satisfy all our customers, we ask no bonus, and we pay over money on loans the moment notes are signed.
STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

About seven o'clock Saturday evening as C. L. Westburg and family were at supper, a smell as of something burning was noticed and a search instituted. They had but just taken possession of the Hartshorn house on the hill and had hardly got things straightened 'round yet. Up stairs in the main building near an open window, was a pile of bedding and when the little girl, who had been sent on a voyage of discovery reached the room she discovered that the bedding was all on fire. She at once gave the alarm and her father came with a pail of water but the fire had gained such headway that it was deemed prudent to call out the department. In about 15 minutes after the bell sounded the boys were on deck with two streams which soon settled the question. Aside from ruining the paper and plastering but little damage was done. The building was fully insured with Paterson & Lilly agents. The only theory of the origin of the fire that has been advanced is that it must have caught from sparks from the kitchen stove blowing in at the open window as there was no stove in the main part of the building nor any other way by which it could have caught.

We are established in Crookston TO STAY. We do not do business here this year to go away the next. In loaning money, as in other business, we have a character for fair dealing to sustain Call on us before going elsewhere. Remember all interest on our loans is payable at our office.
STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

100 100
CHOICE RESIDENCE LOTS
IN JEROME'S ADDITION!
Nearer the Business Center than any other Lots now for sale over there.
Above High Water Mark. Good Cellars and Good Wells
Easily Obtained. If you want a Building Lot, or if you desire a chance for investment where you can double your money inside of a year. It will pay you to look into this chance to BUY AT YOUR OWN FIGURES, PRACTICALLY!
M. R. BROWN.

IT PAYS
TO TRADE WITH BARNES & SLOCUM,
CASH DEALERS IN
Groceries and Crockery.
Get their prices and you will say so.
McKinnon Block, Robert St., Crookston.

Stewart & Laurence,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL
HEAVY AND SHELF
HARDWARE,
BAKER STEEL BARBED WIRE.
JEWETT'S STOVES AND RANGES,
Plymouth Binding Twine

The Big Fair Booming,

The Finest Exhibition of Live Stock ever Shown in the State.

Secretary H. R. Denny, of the State Fair, says he has more applications now for space in every department for the coming exhibition, September 10th to 15th, than were ever known before so early in the season. Applicatione have been received which will fill every stall in the horse and cattle barns, and the only thing to be feared is that additional barns will have to be built for some of the late comers. Stockmen from ever Western State and many from the South and East will bring their horses and cattle to the fair. Already entries are being made in every department, something never known before so early. One of the features of the fair will be an aucti sale of fine cattle. Already the owners of two splendid herds of Holsteins, viz: John W. Meyers & Co., of Wells, Minn., and J. C. Wade, of Jamestown, D. T. will put up a large portion of their fine herds including the very best animals on their farms. The sale will be conducted by Col. F. M. Wood, of Lincoln, Neb., the famous live stock auctioneer, and the animals will be sold without reserve on the second bid. In addition to the above cerds it is expectel that portrons of three other herds will be offered at auction, making something over 150 head to be offered.

Special Excursion Rates.

Minneapolis Exposition and Minnesota State Fair Via Northern Pacific R. R.

Excursion tickets will be sold to Minneapolis and return for the exposition on the following dates at one fare for the round trip. Tickets good to return to destination until Monday following date of sale, viz:

Aug. 21st, 23d, 25th, 28th and 30th, Sept. 1st, 4th, 6th, 18th, 20th, 22d, 25th, 27th and 29th, every day from Sept. 8th to the 15th, inclusive, tickets will be sold to either St. Paul or Minneapolis, at one fare for the round trip, good to return to return to destination one day after being stamped at St. Paul or Minneapolis, but not later than Sept. 17th.

On account of the Minnesota State Fair, tickets will be sold to either St. Paul or Minneapolis and return every day on Sept. 8th to 15th, inclusive, good to return one day after being stamped at St. Paul or Minneapolis, but not later than Sept. 17th.

All Expostion and State Fair tickets will include admission coupons at twenty-five cents each for the Exposition and fifty cents for the State Fair which will be added to the railroad rates.

For rates inquire of ticket agents, N. P. R. R.

LOTS.

Lots in exchange for farming lands.
STEENERSON & MCMANUS

W. H. Alley was down from Hallock on Monday and Tuesday talking in favor of C. J. McCollom for represnetative. Mr. McCollom is one of the leading business men of Kittson County, one of the right sort. Among the many things he has done to build up the interests of this upper country was the establishment of a cheese factory. Recognizing the fact that the interests of the country demanded something besides all wheat, he put money into a cheese factory at a time when conservative business men doubted the wisdom of the investment from a business stand-point. But Mr. McCollom reasoned that something must be done and somebody must put up for it; that if successful it would be a great help to the business interests of the country. So far the institution has been more beneficial to the farmers than to the man who started it, but Mr. McCollom is satisfied, hoping that it may, sometime, pay back its cost. He is a broad gauged, liberal-minded man, just the kind of a man the district needs to represent its large and varied interests, and will come into the convention as the unanimous choice of his county, whose claims for the place are ahead of all others, having never yet had a representative. It is true that Marshall County, also, has never had a representative, but not because she has never had a good chance to get one. Two years ago she could have named the man could she have united upon one, but her delegation would not unite. Kittson County stood back and allowed Marshall to try, and now, we think, Kittson should have the opportunity.

PROHIBITION COUNTY CONVENTION.

A delegate Convention of the Prohibition voters of Polk County, Minnesota, is hereby called to meet at the Public Reading Rooms, in the city of Crookston, in said Polk County, Minnesota, on Thursday, August 23d, 1888, at one o'clock p. m, for the purpose of choosing delegates to the legislative convention to be hereafter called, and for the purpose of nominating the following county officers, to-wit: Auditor, Treasurer, Register of Deeds, County Superintendent of Schools, County Attorney, Sheriff, Court Commissioner, County Surveyor, County Commissioner for each district. The basis of representation will be as follows: Two delegates from each voting precinct in the county, one delegate from each W. C. T. U. organization in the county, one delegate from each prohibition club in the county, one delegate from each Scandinavian, Father Mathew, or other total abstinence society in the county.

There will be present to address the convention, one of Minnesota's pioneers in temperance work, Mr. W. W. Satergee, of Minneapolis. "Come up and be counted."

[16-18] COUNTY COM.

A Snap.

M. R. Brown offers 100 lots, near the business portion of the city at figures that will give the purchaser a chance make a good thing. Look into this and be convinced.

Old Times and New.

Albany, N. Y., Post: The lecture abounds in wit, humor and interesting historical facts. What the Colonel has seen in his travels he has boiled down to a lecture of one hour and a half in length, so that every one who hears it can easily remember it without getting an enlargement of the brain.

Lawrence, Mass., Daily Eagle: The lecture last evening was a running narrative of travel in all parts of the world. He showed most of the things we call new, were in reality old, that is, some of the finest things in art which we suppose are new, are in reality the reproduction of artists who lived 4,000 years ago.

The republican city caucusses were held on Monday evening and the following delegates selected to represent the city in the republican county convention on the 15th:

First ward—	O. O. Christianson. E. J. Locken. John Alderman.
Second ward—	S. L. Collins. M. Rauenbuehler. Wm. Marin.
Third ward—	Geo. G. McManus. J. G. McGrew.
Fourth ward—	John Cromb. D. Jacobus. H. Robertson. L. Berthiaume.
Fifth ward—	E. D. Childs.

A Card of Thanks.

We desire to extend our sincere thanks to the many friends who so kindly aided us in the last illness and during the last sad rites toward our loved one, extending toward us the many little acts of kindness which they did, and especially would we remember those who contributed so liberal a supply of beautiful flowers.

GEO. H. HOLT AND CHILDREN.

Teachers' Examinations.

The semi-annual examination of teachers for the County of Polk will be held as follows:

At the Central School Bulding, Crookston, Friday and Saturday, August 24th and 25th.

At the School House in Red Lake Falls, Monday, August 27th,

At the School House in Fosston, Wednesday, August 29th.

All examinations to begin promptly at 9 a. m.

No candidate under sixteen years of age will be admitted to examination.

EZRA F. ELLIOT,
County Superintendent.
Crookston, August 13, 1888.

Big School Picnic Held in Trail Co., Dakota.

(Communicated.)

Some of the teachers of Belmont, Buxton and Caledonia townships united their efforts in a grand school picnic, held Sunday afternoon, the 12th of August, near the village of Belmont, in the woods near the Red. The teachers who led this movement were Messrs. Garborg, Hemmy and Grafton, and Misses Hemmy and Gordon. The program consisted of about sixty-four short exercises—declamations, dialogues and songs, but many exercises had to be omitted for lack of time.

The weather was beautiful, and everybody had a good time. Dr. J. Christianson, of Belmont, gave the opening address, speaking principally to the children and teachers. Commencing at about 1:30 the exercises lasted till 5. The teachers acquitted themselves well, rendering the declamations and a dialogue excellently. So, relatively speaking, did the children. The singing by the pupils of district No. 5, township of Belmont, and also two quartettes by the teachers, were well received. At the close three stump speeches were made in which the republican, prohibition and democratic parts were represented. It was not the intention of the picnic managers to bring politics into the entertainment, but it was a natural outburst. Every one was in good humor and everything went off nicely. The picnic was pronounced a great success. To the Buxton Cornet Band are due our thanks for their excellent service.

SAMUEL GARBORG.

Sealed Bids.

CROOKSTON, Minn., Aug. 14, 1888.

Sealed bids will be received by the City Council of the City of Crookston until Aug. 31st, at 6 p. m., for plans, specifications and bids for building a hose and bell tower 25x130 feet at base, adjoining the City Hall of the City of Crookston.

By order of City Council,
JOHN PATERSON,
City Clerk.

On all loans we make, interest payable at our office in Crookston.
STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

For Sale.

Ten fresh milch cows with calves at their sides. These cows are all grade Jerseys and excellent for the dairy. Will sell cheap for cash or good paper till fall or will give one year's time on good security. For particulars see [16-tf] CHRIS. HOUSTON.

For Sale.

One Threshing rig complete; Minnesota Chief separator, and J. I. Case engine, strawburner, all in complete running order. For particulars call on
JAS. GREENHAGH, Jr., Crookston.
[16-tf.]

For Sale.

A pure blood Polled Aberdeen Angu bull. Will sell cheap for cash or trade for colt. For terms see
THEODORE GREENHALGH.

SHERIDAN'S FUNERAL.

In Compliance With his Request the Last Rites Were Unostentatious.

The funeral of Gen. Sheridan took place at Washington. The sentry had paced up and down in front of the catafalque and the dimly lighted church all night; the guard of honor of the Loyal Legion had been sitting in the front pew at his side. When the light of the early morning drove the dark shadows from the chancel and revealed the somber drapery that hung in festoons about the church the frequenters of early mass came, and with them a great number of working people to take one look at the casket for the last time. Twice only had the casket been opened—once to permit the brother John, who had just arrived from the plains, to see the remains for the first and last time; again to permit Mrs. Sheridan to have one more look at the soldier's face, and then all withdrew.

After early mass the church was closed for a time, and when it was reopened those provided with tickets began to arrive.

The invitations had requested that those who held the cards should be in their seats a little before 10, and the suggestion of the military officers was a command. None disregarded it except the president and Mrs. Cleveland and Secretary Baynard. They came after the family had entered. The civilians for the most part were dressed in black, and the army and navy officers were in full uniform.

The congregation, of persons of mixed religious belief, or none, was not very familiar with the ceremonial of the Catholic high mass. And some reared in Calvinistic faith made poor work of it when they undertook to participate. The incense burning, the jingle of bells, the genuflections, the clapping of the master of ceremonies, the intonations of the Dominican priests were the features of a religious ceremony which were new to many who were present, and the religious attitudes which some of them attempted were not characterized by military precision. A few minutes before 10 o'clock, as the muffled voices of the officers in command of the troops forming outside could be heard through the open windows, the altar boys lighted the high candles about the altar, and the low strains of funeral music from the organ mingled with the chanting of the priests. A procession of sanctuary boys issued from the sacristy, the clergy entered in solemn procession, a chorus of Dominican priests began the intonation of the "Miserere" and the wailing notes of the dirge music broke forth from the organs as the cardinal in his red robe of office knelt before the altar and ascended the cardinal's throne. The mass ended and the cardinal delivered an address.

After the sermon, the ceremony of absolution was begun. The cardinal was arrayed by his assistants in a black cap decorated with gold. On his head was a tall white hat. Thus, preceded by the altar boys and the clergy, he left the place at the altar and proceeded to the casket of the dead. The cardinal knelt, the choir of Dominicans chanted "Libera me Domine," the cardinal rose and sprinkled the casket with holy water and incensed it with burning incense and pronounced the absolution. The cardinal returned to his throne, the Dominicans chanted "Benedictus," the priests, as they finished their parts, silently disappeared into the sacristy, and the high requiem mass was at an end. While the services were in progress the caisson was placed in a position to receive the casket, and the general's horse was led to a place immediately behind. The horse is a dark bay, and was bought by general Sheridan in Chicago about four years ago. It was bridled and saddled just as when last ridden by the general. The general's military boots were in the stirrups, with the toes pointing backwards. The animal was led by a tall sergeant in full uniform.

In accordance with the wishes of Mrs. Sheridan the funeral was a strictly military affair, and the escort was formed precisely as prescribed by the army regulations for an officer of the rank of the deceased. Just before the close of the services Gen. Schofield and his aides arranged themselves in front of the troops and prepared to receive the funeral party. The clanking of sabers and the steady tramp of artillery sergeants coming up the aisle succeeded the final notes of the "Benedictus," and the strong arms of the sergeants bore the casket to the caisson at the door. Then the long hot march to Arlington commenced. Gen. Schofield, mounted upon a splendid horse, gave the word of command. That word was echoed down the line. The bugle sounded and the procession moved. Two score of mounted police reached Arlington half an hour before the procession, and proceeded at once to clear the space about the grave. Not only was sitting room cleared for the family and official mourners, but several acres were vacated, so that the hundreds of worthy citizens were unable to get even a glimpse of the ceremony of the interment. This was needless, and could serve no other purpose than to permit some one clothed in brief authority to exercise his power. A young staff officer gave the order. It excluded from the line a man who had made many campaigns with Sheridan, and another who recounted from behind the sacred boundary experiences he had had in the battles of his country years before the gilded young lieutenant was born. The earth had been removed twenty feet from the grave and placed under an adjacent tulip tree, and the sward so carefully cleaned that there were no traces of earth upon it. The grave itself was in fact a soldier's grave. It was simply an excavation in the earth. There was no brickwork and no cementing or sheathing—nothing to keep the earth or water from closing in about the casket. The man in charge said that that was Sheridan's wish. He desired to be buried as a soldier. A more appropriate spot could not have been selected for the grave of the general of the army. Philip Sheridan living was always at the head of his army: Phil Sheridan dead also at the head of his army, but it is a vast silent army—16,460 strong. Their graves lie behind him, marked by long lines of white head stones; line after line, column after column; like regiments and brigades at rest. In this enclosure there are 1,100 acres, and room, it is estimated, for 100,000 graves, and every soldier of the army or old soldier of the war who desires, has the right of sepulture there.

A Carnival of Crime.

The city of Shenandoah, Iowa, has been in an uproar of excitement. On Friday night Frank Phillips, a drayman, who had assaulted the six-year-old daughter of E. J. Pine, a prominent merchant, was taken from the jail by a mob of masked men, who battered the door down. The prisoner struggled desperately, but his clothes were soon stripped off, and he was thoroughly tarred and feathered. He fell senseless to the ground, in which condition he was found by the sheriff, whose appearance with a posse put the mob to flight. The man was carried back to the jail and physicians summoned. While they were engaged in removing the tar the jail was again surrounded. The sheriff surrendered Phillips without a struggle. The mob dragged him to the street, his hands and feet were pinioned to a lamp post and the lash applied until the blood came. He uttered fearful cries. When the mob got tired of whipping the prisoner they threw a rope around his neck, dragged him to a telegraph pole and hauled him into the air several times He was then in a half dead condition, and upon his promise to leave town was released.

The next night Mr. Pine was shot and instantly killed by Frank Gallop, a desperado. Gallop escaped to his house in the outskirts of the city where he was surrounded by officers. The house was dark. The windows were all closed and securely fastened and the doors were strongly barricaded. While the officers were attempting to effect an entrance Gallop opened fire on the crowd from an upper window. Two of the officers were killed and several wounded. Gallop used a Winchester and was plentifully supplied with ammunition. The militia were called out, but before they arrived the mob succeeded in capturing Gallop and lynching him by hanging him to a tree.

The dispatches show that three men were killed, and half a dozen wounded, and that the first victim was T. J. Pine, father of the little girl who was assaulted, although his death did not grow out of the trouble with Phillips, but from entirely different causes. The bloody author of to-day's tragedy, and who paid the penalty of his devilishness, having been strung up by the frenzied citizens, was Frank Gallop, a desperate young character, whose misdeeds had made him notorious in Southwestern Iowa. Gallop and his father had quarrelled and the young man assaulted the old man.

A brother came to the young man's rescue and the father was receiving a severe beating at the hands of his sons when the cries attracted the neighbors. Pine and half a dozen other men came to the Gallop house and interfered. Gallop whipped out a gun and fired at the crowd. At the first shot Pine fell dead, and before his horrified companions were scarcely aware of the tragedy Gallop had fled from the scene.

Frenzied as the people tills were with the remembrance of the violence, of the day before the news, which spread like wild fire, was enough to collect a mob of larger proportions and for greater determination than had thronged the streets the previous day. Pine was a highly respected merchant and one of the foremost citizens of Shenandoah and leaves a wife and two children. Searching parties, three or four persons in each group, ran up and down the streets without a leader, but with the one thought uppermost in the minds of every one—to find the hiding place of the miscreant and wreak summary vengeance upon him.

Suddenly a shout went up. Gallop had been found concealed in a house just back of the telegraph office. A rush was made for his hiding place, but the young desperado stood at the window and emptied shot after shot into the advancing crowd. Two were killed and two wounded. "Fire the house," some yelled. The cry was taken up by hundreds of voices. Gallop still stood at the window, the smoking revolver still in his hand. He yelled defiantly at the crowd and then disappeared.

The door was finally burst open, Gallop captured, and strung up on Main street, but not until four more men had been shot.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

At the home of the Gallop family, consisting of old Samuel Gallop, his wife, Frank and Charlie, their two sons, Frank's wife and some small children, a family row was in progress. Frank and Charlie were beating the old man when F. J. Pine, a hardware merchant of this place, Wm. Reining, a drug clerk, and Mr. Patterson, a traveling man, went to the Gallop house to see what the trouble was and assist in restoring peace.

Frank Gallop without any provocation or warning, advanced from the house and drawing a revolver said: "What do you want here? Take that, d—n you." He fired a shot which entered Pine's breast above the heart, killing him almost instantly. Those with Pine at once gave the alarm and in a very few minutes at least 500 angry and excited citizens were at the scene of the murder. The excitement grew intense and dire threats of vengeance were made against the murderer. Frank Gallop was known to be a desperate man when aroused, and it was deemed best to call out Company E of the 5th regiment, state militia, to assist in capturing him. On the arrival of the militia at the scene a line was formed around the Gallop place, which included a garden containing some trees and shrubbery, and in a short time Frank Gallop was heard by one of the guards in the rear of the house calling from the shrubbery in the garden to his wife in the house. At the same time old man Gallop and his wife were assuring those in front of the house that their son Frank was not there, but had fled, and invited them to enter and search the house and satisfy themselves of the truth of their statements. Having no suspicion of treachery, Bert Rice, Dave Campbell, T. E. Patterson (a Chicago traveling man), T. H. Winfrey and others of the militia company and citizens went to the house. They had searched the cellar and were coming out of it when Frank Gallop appeared armed with two revolvers. Dave Campbell, who was unarmed, grappled with him at the door and received a probably fatal wound in the neck from the desperado's revolver. Standing over the prostrate form of Campbell the desperado reloaded his revolver with cartridges handed him by one of the women from within the house and commenced an indiscriminate fire upon those in sight. His next shot took effect on T. H. Winfrey, wounding him in the leg slightly. He then started to run toward the rear of the house and encountered militia-man Bert Rice. Both fired almost at the same instant. Rice's shot, it seems, did not take effect, but the shot from Gallop's pistol entered Rice's breast and he died in a few moments. Gallop then encountered Moris Fletcher, another militiaman who raised his gun in his arms, he being too close to bring it to his shoulder. With the muzzle almost touching Gallop's back he fired. The ball passed through Gallop's body.

It was not yet known that Gallop was dead, and preparations were continued for a closer investigation and to prevent any further loss of life by the treachery of the other members of the family. In a short time Frank Gallop's wife appeared and stated that her husband was dead, but fearing further treachery a rope was passed to her with instructions to put it around her husband's neck. She complied, and in this manner the body of the dead desperado was hauled from where it lay at the rear of the house. Such was the fury of the mob that the corpse was dragged through the streets at the end of the rope. Old man Gallop and his wife have been arrested and sent to Clarinda to stand trial as accomplices in the night's terrible deeds.

Japanese Earthquake.

The steamer City of Sydney, which arrived at San Francisco, from Hong Kong and Yokohama, brings, through Japanese journals, particulars of a volcanic eruption of Bandai San on the 15th of July. The details of the catastrophe come in somewhat disjointed form. The Choya Shimbun dispatched a special reporter to the scene. According to his account the villages around Bandai San heard strange rumbling sounds and felt shocks of earthquake from the 13th. These phenomena continued intermittently for two days and nights, but not being attended by any serious result, no great disquietude was felt. On the morning of the 15th, at about 8 o'clock, the smaller Bandia San trembled and roared violently. Almost immediately afterwards ashes began to fall, the sky suddenly grew dark, and the rumbling sounds continued, accompanied by a violent earthquake and flare of dazzling flame. The crest of the smaller Bandia San appeared to be lifted bodily upwards and then to fall again with a tremendous noise. Then followed showers of red mud, mingled with large stones, spreading havoc around. Above the mud fell a few inches of ashes. In the five villages of Iwase, Yosan, Wakamiya, Misato and Hibara the greater part of the houses were buried to a depth of from seven to twenty feet. The state of the bodies recovered is terrible. Some are literally cut to pieces; others are parboiled so that it is scarcely possible to distinguish between men and women. A few corpses were found suspended in the branches of trees. Up to the 17th the number of bodies recovered was 476. It is believed that sixty-one are still entombed. The wounded number forty-one. Eighty-seven houses have been destroyed. The inhabitants of Inawashiro and adjacent villages fled to Wakutsu and other places when the eruptions occurred. The report of the local official of Wakamatsu says the inhabitants of Inawashiro and adjacent districts escaped with their furniture. The wounded are receiving treatment at the school house in Inawashiro. Their condition is shocking. Some have fractured skulls, others broken limbs, and the faces of a few are battered so as to be unrecognizable. There are about a thousand people in need of help.

Gov. Hill of New York has granted Daniel Lyons, the murderer, a respite until Tuesday, Aug. 21. The document from the governor, accompanying this respite, says that he disapproves of the custom which has so long been in vogue, of having all executions upon Friday.

J. Harmon Reed and Miss Milliken took a cruise out and around Bar Harbor. The night was intensely dark and, becoming alarmed at their absence, searchers were sent out. At an early hour next morning the wharves in the vicinity were crowded with anxious friends, who hoped and waited until noon, when a gun from the steam yacht Norsia, belonging to Montgomery Sears, announced that she bore tidings. She had picked up the boat, bottom up, off Egg rock, a distance of three miles from Bar Harbor. Miss Milliken was a guest at the St. Saureur, and was chaperoned by Mrs. Van Voorhees. Her parents are residents of New Orleans. Mr. Reed was a son of Joel Harmon Reed, one of the wealthy iron foundry men of Albany N. Y. The age of each of the supposed victims was about twenty-five years.

While Gen. Boulanger was driving in open carriage at Saint Jean d'Angely Prof. Perrin, of the Lycee, fired five shots at him from a revolver. M. Ratapan, a friend of the general, rushed in and managed to turn the weapon aside. The result was that Ratapan himself received a bullet in the head, but the wound is not serious. The peasants were also wounded. Gen. Boulanger was not touched. Prof. Perrin is a friend of Mayor Lair, the candidate nominated by the Opportunists in opposition to Gen. Boulanger. The affair occurred at the height of a pitched battle between the rival political parties. When the gendarmes charged Count Dillon received a blow on the head from a stick and other Boulangerists were roughly handled. It is not certain that Perrin intended to aim at Boulanger.

AS TO ORTHODOXY.

Dr. Talmage Inquires Whether Orthodoxy Is Stale and Unreasonable.

The Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., of Brooklyn, is present for the twelfth time at the national meeting of religious educators and students at Chautauqua. His sermon which was delivered to an audience imposing in numbers and intelligence, was from the following text, in the book of Jeremiah, ch. vi., v. 16: "Ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls," and answered the question: "Is Orthodoxy Stale and Unreasonable?" Following is a verbatim report of it:

A great London fog has come down upon some of the ministers and some of the churches in the shape of what is called "advanced thought" in Biblical interpretation. All of them, and without any exception, deny the full inspiration of the Bible. Genesis is an allegory, and there are many myths in the Bible, and they philosophize and guess the reason and evolute until they land in a great continent of mud, from which, I fear, for all eternity they will not be able to extricate themselves.

The Bible is not only divinely inspired but it is divinely protected in its present shape. You could as easily, without detection, take from the writings of Shakespeare "Hamlet," and institute in place thereof Alexander Smith's drama as at any time during the last 1,500 years a man could have made any important changes in the Bible without immediate detection. If there had been an element of weakness, or of deception, or of disintegration, the Bible would long ago have fallen to pieces. If there had been one loose brick or cracked casement in this castelated truth, surely the bombardment of eight centuries would have discovered and broken through that imperfection. The fact that the Bible stands intact, notwithstanding all the furious assault on all sides upon it, is proof to me that it is a miracle, and every miracle is of God.

"But," says some one, "while we admit the Bible is of God, it has not been understood until our time." My answer is, that if the Bible be a letter from God, our Father, to man, His child, is it not strange that that letter should have been written in such a way that it should allow seventy generations to pass away and be buried before the letter could be understood? That would be a very bright father who should write a letter for the guidance and intelligence of his children not understandable until a thousand years after they were buried and forgotten. While as the years roll on other beauties and excellencies will unfold from the scriptures, that the Bible is such a dead failure that all the Christian scholars for 1,800 years were deceived in regard to vast reaches of its meaning, is a demand upon my credulity so great that if I found myself at all disposed to yield to it I should tomorrow morning apply at some insane asylum as unfit to go alone.

Who make up this precious group of advanced thinkers to whom God has made especial revelation in our time of that which He tried to make known thousands of years ago and failed to make intelligible? Are they so distinguished for unworldliness, piety, and scholarship that it is to be expected that they would have been chosen to fill up the defective work of Moses and Isaiah and Paul and Christ? Is it at all possible? I wonder on what mountain these modern exegetes were transfigured? I wonder what star pointed down to their birthplace? Was it the North star, or the evening star, or the Dipper? As they came through and descended to our world did Mars blush or Saturn loose one of his rings? When I find out of these wiseacres attempting to improve upon the work of the Almighty and to interlard it with their wisdom and to suggest prophetic and apostolic errata, I am filled with a disgust insufferable. Advanced thought, which proposes to tell the Lord what He ought to have said thousands of years ago, and would have said if He had been as wise as His nineteenth century critics! All this comes of living away back in the eternities instead of 1888. I have two wonders in regard to these men. The first one is how the Lord got along without them before they were born. The second wonder is how the Lord will get along without them after they are dead.

"But," say some, "do you really think the scriptures are inspired throughout?" Yes, either as history or as guidance. Gibbon and Josephus and Prescott record in their history a great many things they did not approve of. When George Bancroft puts upon his brilliant historical page the account of an Indian massacre, does he approve of that massacre? There are scores of things in the Bible which neither God nor inspired men sanctioned. Either as history or as guidance the entire Bible was inspired of God.

"But," says some one, "don't you think that the copyists might have made mistakes in transferring the divine words from one manuscript to another?" Yes, no doubt there were such mistakes; but they no more affect the meaning of the scriptures than the misspelling of a word or the ungramatical structure of a sentence in the last will and testament affect the validity or the meaning of that will. All the mistakes made by the copyists in the scriptures do not amount to any more importance than the difference between your spelling in a document the word forty, forty or fourty. This book is the last will and testament of God to our lost world, and it bequeaths everything in the right way, although human hands may have damaged the grammar or made unjustifiable interpolation.

These men who pride themselves in our day on being advanced thinkers in Biblical interpretation will all of them end in atheism, if they live long enough, and I declare here today they are doing more in the different denominations of Christians, and throughout the world, for damaging Christianity and hindering the cause of the world's betterment than 6,000 Robert Ingersolls could do. That man who stands inside a castle is far more dangerous, if he be an enemy, than 5,000 enemies outside the castle. Robert G. Ingersoll assails the castle from the outside. These men who pretend to be advanced thinkers in all the denominations are fighting the truth from the inside, and trying to shove back the bolts and swing open the gates.

Now, I am in favor of the greatest freedom of religious thought and discussion. I would have as much liberty for heterodoxy as for orthodoxy. If I should change my theories of religion I should preach them out and out, but not in the building where I am accustomed to preach, for that was built by a people who believe in an entire Bible, and it would be dishonest in me to promulgate sentiments different from those for which the building was put up. When we enter any denomination as ministers of religion we take a solemn vow that we will preach the sentiments of that denomination. If we change our theories, as we have a right to change them, then there is a world several thousand miles in circumference, and there are hundreds of halls and hundreds of academies of music where we can ventilate our sentiments.

I remember that in all our cities, n time of political agitation there are the Republican headquarters and the Democratic headquarters. Suppose I should go into one of these headquarters pretending to be in sympathy with their work, at the same time electioneering for the opposite party. I would soon find that the centrifugal force was greater than the centripetal! Now, if a man enters a denomination of Christians, taking a solemn oath, as we all do, that we will promulgate the theories of that denomination, and then the man shall proclaim some other theory, he has broken his oath, and he is an out-and-out perjurer. Nevertheless, I declare for largest liberty in religious discussion. I would no more have the attempt to rear a monument to Thomas Paine interfered with than I would have interfered with the lifting of the splendid monument to Washington. Largest liberty for the body, largest liberty for the mind, largest liberty for the soul.

Now I want to show you, as a matter, of advocacy for what I believe to be right, the splendors of orthodoxy. Many have supposed that the disciples are people of flat skulls, and no reading, and behind the age, and the victims of gullibility. I shall show you that the word orthodoxy stands for the greatest splendors outside of heaven. Behold the splendors of its achievements. All the missionaries of the gospel the world round are men who believe in an entire Bible. Call the roll of all the missionaries who are today enduring sacrifices in the ends of the earth for the cause of religion and the world's betterment, and they all beleive in an entire Bible. Just as soon as a missionary begins to doubt whether there ever was a garden of Eden, or whether there is any such a thing as future punishment, he comes right home from Beyrout or Madras! All the missionary societies this day are officered by orthodox men, and are supported by orthodox churches.

Orthodoxy, beginning with the Sandwich islands, has captured vast regions of barbarism for civilization, while heterodoxy has to capture the first square inch. Blatant for many years in Great Britian and the United States, and strutting about with a peacockian braggadocio, it has yet to capture the first continent, the first state, the first township, first ward, the first space of ground as big as you could cover with the small end of a sharp pin. Ninety-nine out of every hundred of the Protestant churches of America were built by people who believed in an entire Bible. The pulpit now may preach some other gospel, but it is a heterodox gun or an orthodox carriage. The foundation of all the churches that are of very great use in this world today were laid by men who believed the Bible from lid to lid, and if I cannot take it in that way I will not take it at all; just as if I received a letter that pretended to come from a friend, and part of it was his and part somebody else's, and the other part somebody else's, and it was a sort of literary mongrelism, I would throw the garbled sheet into the waste basket.

No church of very great influence today but was built by those who believed in an entire Bible. Neither will a church last long built on a part of the Bible. You have noticed, I suppose, that as soon as a man begins to give up the Bible he is apt to preach in some hall, and he has an audience while he lives, and when he dies the church dies. If I thought that my church in Brooklyn was built on a quarter of a Bible, or a half a Bible, or three-quarters of a Bible, or 99-100 of a Bible, I would expect it to die when I die; but when I know it is built on the entire word of God, I know it will last 200 years after you and I sleep the last sleep. Oh, the splendors of an orthodoxy, which with 10,000 hands and 10,000 pulpits and 10,000 Christain churches, is trying to save the world.

In Music Hall, Boston, for many years stood Theodore Parker battling orthodoxy, giving it, as some supposed at that time, its death wound. He was the most fascinating man I ever heard or ever expect to hear, and I came out from hearing him thinking, in my boyhood way, "Well, that's the death of the church." On that same street and not far from being opposite, stood Park Congregational Church, called by its enemies, "Hell fire Corner." Theodore Parker died and his church died with him; or, if it is in existence, it is so small you cannot see it with the naked eye. Park Congregational Church still stands on "Hell-fire corner," thundering away the magnificent truths of this glorious orthodoxy just as though Toedore Parker had never lived. All that Boston, or Brooklyn, or New York, or the world ever got that is worth having came through the wide aqueduct of orthodoxy from the throne of God.

Behold the splendors of character built up by orthodoxy. Who had the greatest human intellect the world ever knew? Paul. In physical stature insignificant; in mind, head and shoulders above all the giants of the age. Orthodox from scalp to heel. Who was the greatest poet that ages ever saw, acknowledged to be so both by infidels and Christians? John Milton, seeing more without eyes than anybody else ever saw with eyes. Orthodox from scalp to heel. Who was the greatest reformer the world has ever seen? so acknowledged by infidels as well as by Christians. Martin Luther. Orthodox from scalp to heel.

Then look at the certitudes. O man, believing in an entire Bible, where did you come from? Answer: "I descended from a perfect parentage in Paradise, and Jehovah breathed into my nostrils the breath of life. I am a son of God." O man, believing in a half-and-half Bible, believing in a Bible in spots where did you come from? Answer: "It is all uncertain; in my ancestral line away back there was an orang-outang and a tadpole and a polywog, and it took millions of years to get me evoluted." O man, believing in a Bible in spots, where are you going to when you quit this world? Answer: "Going into a great to be, so on to a great somewhere, and then I shall pass on through to the great anywhere, and I shall probably arrive in the nowhere." That is where I thought you would fetch up. O man, believing in an entire Bible, and believing with all your heart, where are you going to when you quit this world? Answer: "I am going to my Father's house; I am going into the companionship of my loved ones who have gone before; I am going to leave all my sins, and I am going to be with God and like God for ever and forever." Oh, the glorious certitudes of orthodoxy!

Behold the splendors of orthodoxy in its announcement of two destinies. Palace and penitentiary. Palace with gates on all sides through which all may enter and live on celestial luxuries world without end, and all for the knocking and the asking. A palace grander than if all the Alhambras and the Versailles and the Windsor Castles and the Winter Gardens and the imperial abodes of all the earth were heaved up in one architectural glory. At the other end of the universe a penitentiary where men who want their sins can have them. Would it be fair that you and I should have our choice of Christ and the palace, and other men be denied their choice of sin and degredation? Palace and penitentiary. The first of no use unless you have the last. Brooklyn and New York would be better places to live in with Raymond street jail and the Tombs and Sing Sing and all the small pox hospitals emptied on them than heaven would be if there were no hell. Palace and pentientiary. If I see a man with a full bowl of sin, and he thirsts for it, and his whole nature craves it, and he takes hold with both hands and presses that browl to his lips, and then presses it hard between his teeth, and the draught begins to pour its sweetness down his throat, while we snatch away the bowl and jerk the man up to the gate of heaven and sit down and sing psalms forever? No. God has made you and me so completely free that we need not go to heaven unless we prefer it. Nor more free to soar than free to sink.

Nearly all the heterodox people I know believe all are coming out at the same destiny; without regard to faith or character we are coming out at the shining gate. There they are, all in glory together. Thomas Paine and George Whitefield, Jezebel and Mary Lyon, Nero and James A. Garfield, John Wilkes Booth and Abraham Lincoln—all in glory together! All the innocent men, women and children who were massacred, side by side with their murderers. If we are all coming out at the same destiny, without regard to character, then it is true. I turn away from such a debauched heaven. Against the cauldron of piety and blasphemy, philanthropy and assassination, self-sacrifice and beastliness. I place the two destinies of the Bible forever and forever and forever apart.

Behold also the splendors of the Christian orthodox death-beds.

Those who deny the Bible, or deny any part of it, never die well. They either go out in darkness or they go out in silence protentions. You may gather up all the biographies that have come forth since the art of printing was invented, and I challenge you to show me a triumphal death of a man who rejected the scriptures or rejected any part of them. Here I make a great wide avenue. On the one I put the death-beds of those who rejected part of the Bible or rejected all of the Bible. Now, take my arm and let us pass through this dividing avenue. Look off upon the right side. Here are the deathbeds on the right side of this avenue. "Victory through our Lord Jesus Christ!" "Free grace!" "Glory, glory!" "I am sweeping through the gates washed in the blood of the Lamb!" "The chariots are coming!, "I mount, I fly!" "Wings, wings!" "They are coming for me!" "Peace, be still!" Alfred Cookman's death-bed, Richard Cecil's death-bed, Commodore Foote's death-bed, your father's death-bed, your mother's death-bed, your sister's death-bed, your child's death-bed. Ten thousand radiant, songful death-beds of those who believed an entire Bible.

Now, take my arm and let us go through that avenue and look off upon the other side. No smile of hope. No shout of triumph. No face supernaturally illumined. Those who reject any part of the Bible never die well. No beckoning for angels to come. No listening for the celestial escort. Without any exception they go out of the world because they are pushed out; while on the other hand the list of those who believed in an entire Bible and gone out of the world in triumph is a list so long that it seems interminable. Oh, is not that a splendid influence, this orthodoxy, which makes that which must otherwise be the most dreadful hour of life—the last hour—positively paradisical?

Young men, old men, middle-aged men, take sides in this contest between orthodoxy and heterodoxy. "Ask for the old paths, walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your soul." But you follow this crusade against any part of the Bible—first of all you will give up Genesis, which is as true as Matthew; then you will give up all the historical parts of the Bible; then after a while you will give up the miracles; then you will find it convenient to give up the Ten Commandments; and then after a while you will wake up in a fountainless, rockless, treeless desert swept of everlasting sirocco. If you are laughed at you can afford to be laughed at for standing by the Bible just as God has given it to you and miraculously preserved it.

Do not jump overboard from the staunch old Great Eastern of old-fashioned orthodoxy until there is something ready to take you up stronger than the fantastic yawl which has painted on the side "Advanced Thought," and which leaks at the prow and leaks at the stern, and has a steel pen for one oar and a glib tongue for the other oar, and now tips over this way and then tips over that way, untill you do not know whether the passengers will land in the breakers of despair or on the sinking sand of infidelity and atheism.

I am in full sympathy with the advancements of our time, but this world will never advance a single inch beyond this old Bible. God was just as capable of dictating the truth to the prophets and apostles as He is capable of dictating the truth to these modern apostles and prophets. God has not learned anything in a thousand years. He knew just as much when He gave the first dictation as He does now, giving the last dictation, if he is giving any dictation at all. So I will stick to the old paths. Naturally a skeptic and preferring new things to old, I never so much as today felt the truth of the entire Bible, especially as I see into what spectacular imbecility men rush when they try to chop up the scriptures with the meat-ax of their own preferences, now calling upon philosophy, now calling on the church, now calling on God, now calling on the devil. I prefer the thick, warm robe of the old religion—old as God—the robe which has kept so many warm amid the cold pilgrimage of this life amid the chills of death. The old robe rather than the thin, uncertain gauze offered us by these wiseacres who believe the Bible in spots.

On July 27, 1814, at 72 years of age, expired Isabella Graham. She was the most useful woman of her day amid the poor and sick, at the head of the orphan asylums and Magdalen asylums, and an angel of mercy in hospital and reformatory. Dr. Mason, one of the mightiest men of his day, said at her funeral that she was mentally and spiritually the most wonderfully endowed person he had ever met. She was impersonation of the most orthodox orthodoxy. Her last word was peace. As a sublime preroration to my sermon, I will give an extract from her last will and testament, showing how one who believes in an entire Bible may make a glorious exit:

All extract from a will.

"My children and my Grandchildren I leave to my covenant God, the God who hath fed me all my life with the bread that perisheth, who has been a father to my fatherless children and a husband to their widowed mother thus far. And now, receiving my redeemer's testimony, I set to my seal that God is true; and believing the record of John that God hath given to me eternal life, and this life is in his son, who, through the eternal spirit, overcomes without spot unto God, and being consecrated a priest forever hath his own blood entered into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for me. I also believe that he will perfect what concerns me, support and carry me safely through death, and present me to his father, complete in his own righteousness, without spot or wrinkle. Into the hands of this redeeming God, father, son and holy ghost, I commit my redeemed spirit.—Isabella Graham.

Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like hers. "Glory be to the father, and to the son, and to the holy ghost; as it was in the beginning, is now and ever shall be, world without end. Amen and amen!"

Causes of Premature Age.

Do women grow old naturally, or is premature age forced upon them by too intense living? We pour life too full and wear out the measure. A quart pot will not hold three pints, neither will forty years hold the concerns of seventy. More than two-thirds of the average woman's time is spent in worry over her sewing or in preparing food. As though our backs and our stomachs were the immortal part of us! What would you think of a gardener who should give no thought or time to anything but the pots his slips were rooted in? Or of a musician who should spend all his time polishing his violin and never once sweep the bow across the strings until the air is full of nightingales and heaven? Take one quarter the time, my dear, that you devote to fussing over the cut and make of your various suits, tearing around after bargains (as though the saving of two cents on a yard would compensate you for the wear and tear of the beautiful fabric of life!) icing cakes, or preparing fancy dishes, and devote it to recreation or a walk in the woods, and at 40 you won't look like a lost leaf of Pharaoh's parchment.

Nature never intended that we should live as we do. If she had meant that we should eat puff paste, she would have grown it on some of her trees; if she had intended we should twist and drape and ruffle and distort twenty-five yards of goods to make a dress she never would have started us out with a fig leaf. The first thing she did with man, and woman, too, was to turn them loose in a garden with the birds. The wily inventions of the devil finally stranded these free children of nature in fourteen room furnace heated houses, with servants to wear the patience and the thousand and one non-essential of domestic torment to precipitate old age before its time. A closer adherence to nature's primal laws as to diet and outdoor living would fill the world in time with a handsomer and hardier race.—"Amber" in Chicago Journal.

When Blood Flows.

Some persons have a tendency to bleed no matter how slight the cause. A small cut, scratch or the extraction of a tooth will cause profuse bleeding and sometimes endanger life. When from the latter cause, take a little powdered chalk, roll it up in lint in the form of a cork or plug, dip it in spirits of turpentine and press it firmly into the cavity. Change it every ten or fifteen minutes until the bleeding is stopped. Let the last plug remain over night, and then do not pull it out, but wash the mouth in tepid water until it is loosened, using cold water after the first few mouthfuls. Bleeding from the nose is seldom serious, except in old persons. It is often good for children if not too copious. If symptoms of faintness ensues, let the person sit uprighe, bathe the face and neck with cold water; or dash cold water on the face, or better still, take a cloth or towel, fold, dip in cold water and bandage the forehead, and raise the arms as high as possible over the head or cross them firmly behind the back. This action has the effect of contracting the muscles of the neck and diminishing the rush of blood to the head. In very obstinate cases pinches of very finely powdered alum may be inhaled or alum water snuffed up the nostrils. Plugging the nostrils should not be resorted to unless by a physician, for, if not properly done, the blood, instead of being stopped, finds its way to the top of the throat and is swallowed.

Banished by Her Mother.

New York Star.

The settlement of the estate of the late Colonel Mackaye, the father of James Steele Mackaye, has brought to light a strange story in real life. The colonel had lived for twenty years in Paris and his business manager in this country was William Mackaye, his eldest son, who was also left executor of his father's will.

When the news of the colonel's death came, Mr. William Mackaye cabled $3,000 to meet the expenses of the funeral in Paris and bring the body to America. Accompanied by his wife, he selected a beautiful spot in Woodlawn for a family burial plot, saying to her, "Father will lie here, and you and I there," indicating the respective places as he spoke. On the following day he arranged with Dr. Lloyd of the Central Congregational church, to take charge of the funeral.

The death of his father seemed to be a great blow to Mr. Mackaye, and perhaps with a premonition of what was to follow he made his will in sole favor of his wife and settled his own business as if closing it forever. Scarcely was this done when he fell dead by an apopletic stroke. His funeral was attended by Dr. Lloyd, and he was buried in Woodlawn while his father's body was still upon the ocean. His wife, who did not seem more than 35 or 38 years old, was an extremely handsome woman and apparently in good health. So absorbed was she in grief for her husband that she declared that she only wished to live long enough to see the colonel buried. "When that is over," she said, "I pray God to come quickly."

"If you only had children you would have something to live for," suggested a sympathizing friend.

"Thank God, I never had a child," she cried, clasping her hands, in the intense and tragic manner that seemed natural to her. The funeral of the colonel over, Mrs. Mackaye broke up her home and went to reside with a friend. Almost immediately after she took to her bed apparently resolved to die. Physicians who were called could find no real cause of illness, but in the brief period of eight weeks the desired release came. The tragedy of death had been three times enacted in thrice two weeks, and now comes the strange history.

Upon the morning of Mrs. Mackaye's funeral a lady in heaviest mourning robes appeared, a daughter of the dead woman, 31 years of age, who bore such a resemblance to her mother that the relationship, had it not been well attested, would scarcely have been questioned. And then it came to light that there had been a former marriage and a divorce soon after. Mr. William Mackaye and his wife's own family were aware of all the facts, but not one of the friends she had made in the twenty-one years of the second marriage ever dreamed there had been another.

The daughter and her three children lived in the vicinity of New York, and yet for some unexplained reason Mrs. Mackaye would not see them. Her own sister was intimate with the daughter, and constantly urged the mother to relent. It seemed as if all the aversion she had felt toward her first husband had been transferred to his daughter and her children.

"I know no reason why my mother should have ignored my existence, and while she lived I had always believed she would become reconciled to me," said the woman, who seemed now crushed with grief because this hope was never to be realized.

It is a source of gratification to those who know the circumstances that the daughter who was refused her mother's money, though it is in no wise an agreeable thing to the heirs of the Mackeye estate to pay out $75,000 to a person of whom they had never heard before.

Nuptial Arrangements--A New Fashion.

Cincinnati Enquirer.

It is fashionable now for husbands and wives to keep separate bedrooms. Kings and queens have set the example, and the newly coupled folks in our fashionable world are following it. No secret is made of the custom. The richest of our output of June brides will calmly show you her own dainty boudoir, and then exhibit the bedroom to her husband. And the Duke of Marlborough and his bride, the beautiful widow Hamersley, sailed away on their honeymoon voyage in two staterooms.

More than that, I have it from a positively trustworthy source that on the evening of the wedding after the Clews dinner at Delmonico's, which was concluded at 10:45 p. m., the chaperone, Mrs. Cruger, and the Duchess were driven in a carriage unattended to the Hamersley mansion, on Fifth avenue, and the Duke after passing some time with his friends in ordinary post prandial entertainment sought his quarters at the Albemarle Hotel. This was construed as ducal politeness.

The idea is that the bride must not be intruded upon, and that she must be left to invite her husband to call sooner or later, as the fancy suits her. In one instance the wedded couple went right away on diverse tours, to meet at the end of a week in some distant place, the locality being kept a secret from their acquaintances.

Didn't Know His Own Son.

One of the lecturers at the university of D——, who is the happy father of seventeen children, was out walking one evening when he was accosted by a little fellow who was sobbing and crying bitterly.

"Come, my lad come; I will take you home with me," said the professor, tenderly.

The child offered no resistance, and on reaching the house our philanthropist remarked to his wife:

"My dear, I have brought you this little fellow whom I have picked up in the street."

"But the lady rather sharply retorted:

"I wonder, Frank, when you are going to give up your dreamy ways. Why, it's our own child!" Toronto News.

Waiting for his Ship to Come in.

"Old Man" Kellar, a well known character in San Diego, Cal., was found by a policeman late the other night, roaming around the water front hopelessly insane. He was conveyed to the County Jail, says the Bee, and given something to eat and a change of raiment, for when taken his clothes were ragged and all he had to eat was a bit of raw salt pork, wrapped up in a cake of raw flour, mixed with water. The poor old fellow, although insane, knew that he was being taken into custody, and by his protestations, couched in really elegant English, showed that he was a man of education—and such he is if the stories told of him are true. It is said that he was once a wealthy man, and that he came overland to San Diego 18 years ago from the East, having sent his goods, and all he had in the world in a ship which was to sail around the Horn and bring his goods here. The ship was wrecked, and with its loss, carrying all his property with it, the old man suffered another loss—that of his reason. So for 18 years not a day has gone by but what the old man has gone down to the water front to see if his ship had come in, and he had become one of the characters of San Diego. As far as known he has no friends or relatives, and the authorities think it will be best to send him to a hospital for the insane.

Warning to the Fair Sex.

Although we have not the elixirs of youth and beauty which were sold in bottles of rock crystal, stopped with gold, the scalpel and electricity erase the worst foes of comeliness with a surer touch. The ugliest moles, wens and warts are removable with safety either by the knife or galvanic current. The "mothers' marks" and "port wine stains" resume healthy vascularity and color under steady treatment by the battery, and care of the general health. There is a risk, however, of sympathetic injury to the nerves of other parts of the face if these operations are not very delicately and intelligently done. I knew a lady who had a delicate shading of hair on her upper lip removed by the usual electric process of piercing the root of each hair with a very fine needle through which the current was given, killing the bulb in the skin. The operation was painful, so that it could only be completed in several sittings. It removed the hair perfectly, but the effect on the fine facial nerves nearly cost the lady her eyes, and she lost the use of them for over a year. Always avoid painful processes if possible. Pain means injury to the nerves, and directly or indirectly to the whole system, and is far from being the insignificant or necessary factor in our lives that amazonian souls make it.—Shirley Dare's Letter.

Tracking Indians on New Bowery.

New York World.

When two of Buffalo Bills simple red men from Erastina came striding down New Bowery recently with their bright red woolen blankets wrapped tightly about their persons, 500 rascally urchins scented blood and started on the trail. A lank, lean boy, with a piece of suspender holding up his tattered trousers, knelt down upon the walk, smelt the tracks, sniffed the air, and jumping up with a screech, announced that "Dere in yon kanyeon. Bloody Billy's on de trail, and Smilin' Sue will be in de arms of her lovyer before de settin' sun has reached de double peaks." The embryo scout then started on after the two reds, followed by 500 other boys, all dying to be scouts and killers. The boys gathered around the two lone Indians, all yellin, "Ho-Ho-le-lo-Ho-Ho-le-holy-ho," an Indian war dance learned from "Bill, the Texas Terror," or some such imaginary history. They tried to swipe the gaudy blankets, and the red men had all they could do to keep from being stripped to the skin. When the Indians reached the Franklin Square Station of the elevated road they were about as scared as if each urchin was a sure-enough avenger, with slathers of pistols and bowie-knives, seeking for their scalps.

They Made Co-operation Pay.

As pretty a bit of co-operation as ever deserved to succeed is succeeding very creditably just now. The co-operators are three girls and three sewing-machines. The girls are shirt-makers, and they were thrown out of places in a strike. Things looked black for them till more girls, luckier than they, gave a typical example of that unselfish fellowship which seems never wanting among the poor. The three workless and penniless shirt-makers were provided with sewing-machines, and proceeded to make honest shirts on their own account. It paid. It offered a shining illustration of the remedy which many tenement workers, if they only chose to take it, have in their hands. The shirts got along at first in a tiny room; then they demanded a shop, and now they are going to call for a factory. The three girls are now a company with a long name. They call themselves the Solidarity Co-operative Shirt Company, and some of the retail stores are going to sell their brand. The girls have a boom. They have exhibited business sense and their sagacity has its reward. Here is trade evolution and in feminine hands.—Mail and Express.

A man applied for a pension at the Maine State Agency in Augusta the other day, and being asked on what ground he thought himself entitled to a pension, answered: "Drunkenness." The astonished pension agent told him that pensions are only granted for disability contracted in the army. "I know that," said the applicant. "Drunkenness is my disability, and I contracted it in the army."—Lewiston Journal.

Polk County Journal.

W. G. COOKE, Publisher.

CROOKSTON, · MINNESOTA.

The first eclipse upon record was a lunar one, and was observed at Babylon 721 B. C.

Business is brisk in the Philadelphia mint. Last month it turned out 100,000 double eagles, 1,800,000 silver dollars, 500,000 dimes and 3,000,000 pennies.

Not long since a stray carrier pigeon with owner's name and address was found in a yard at Petersburg, Va., and, after rest and communication with the master, was set free again, and this time got safely home to Hansom place, Brooklyn.

Mrs. Cain, of Tyler, Tex., seeing a burglar break into the cabin occupied by her absent cook, telephoned her husband to come home, and when he got there it was to find the robber helpless and cowering at the muzzle of a pistol in the hands of his intrepid wife.

It would appear that the days of the voluble and ubiquitous "lightning rod man" are numbered. Science is against him and his ingenious arguments, and the number of rods manufactured are diminishing year by year. The Electric Review prophesies that the day will come when a lightning-rod on a house will be regarded in the same light as a horseshoe over a man's door.

Mr. J. J. Van Alen, who is the son-in-law of William B. Astor, but who, being wealthy in his own right, has no need of the Astor money, has just completed a wall seven feet high and 3,500 feet long around his grounds at Newport. Mr. Van Alen is a great admirer of English customs, and his house is built in English style and furnished throughout with English furniture. The house and wall are said to have cost him $500,000.

At Grand Rapids, Mich., the other day, an applicant for a marriage license, misunderstanding the questions put to him, gave the name of his deceased wife as that of the lady he was about to marry. When he showed the license to his prospective bride her consternation was unmistakable, and the crestfallen groom-elect soon reappeared at the county building and had the mistake rectified.

In a German chart, published in 1870 by Dr. Gleuns, a line dividing places keeping Sunday and Monday respectively, passes through Behring Straits, leaving the Aleutian Isles on the east, curves sharply in between the Philippines on the west and the Carolines on the east, then curves again sharply, sweeping north of New Guinea, and leaving the Chatham Isles on the west. At all places west of the line it is Monday while it is Sunday on the east.

A florist of Montgomery, Ala., named James Caldwell, who has been suffering for twenty years past from a supposed pulmonary complaint, has coughed up a pin from his right lung. He has now a distinct recollection of swallowing a pin forty-seven years ago in Glasgow, Scotland, when seven years of age. He remembers the anxiety of his family at the time and that his sister was dressing in front of the mirror. The pin is an inch long.

An exchange says: "The earth's heat is being used in a practical way at Pesth, where an artesian well of great depth is being sunk to supply hot water for public baths and other purposes. An article in a foreign journal says that a depth of 8,120 feet has been reached, which seems almost incredible, the deepest well heretofore having been that at Sperenburg, near Berlin, 4,194 feet. We give the depth stated, therefore, with some reservation, as possibly erroneous, but the well now supplies daily 176,000 gallons of water, heated to 150 degrees Fahr."

Bennettsville, Ind., holds within its confines a remarkable freak. The wonder is Henry Luegeman. Three years ago, during a storm, he was engaged in gathering tan-bark, when the tree from which he was taking it was struck by lightning. Luegeman received a severe shock. It transformed him into a genuine electric man. Any one who shakes hands with Luegeman now receives a severe shock. By passing the blade of a knife between his thumb and finger during the progress of a storm he charges the metal so strongly that heavy weights can be lifted. When flies alight upon him they drop dead, and when he is in a dark room sparks flash from his flesh and his eyes shine like incandescent lights. Whenever a storm approaches Luegeman becomes highly charged with electricity, and it is dangerous to touch him. He claims to feel no inconvenience, except that he will go near no moving locomotive, for fear of being drawn against it and killed.

NEWS IN BRIEF.

News From all Parts of the World in a Condensed Form.

Washington Briefiets.

The Washington Capital says: "The police record shows that during the year ending June 30, 1888, ninety-six dead infants were picked up within the boundary of the city. Sixteen of these were white. These figures do not by any means measure the number of infants murdered in Washington in twelve months. The police say that many are doubtless buried at night upon open lots and back yards, and perhaps the sewers swept away to the river more than all that are reported. No effort seems to be made to investigate these murders."

The secret service department has just captured two gross of bogus money, which was intended for children's playthings. It was imported by D. Chr Lauer, Nuremburg, Germany, and consigned to Schweizer & Beer of Chicago. They are all bogus silver and gold coins, about the size of a good dollar, and while not so heavy, are very good imitations. They run in ostensible denominations from $2 to $20. To test them Capt. Porter passed the coins on two different places and would have got the change for them had he so desired. The coins are figured to represent all told, about $31,280. There is no probability of Schweitzer & Beer suffering anything except the confication of the goods.

A terrific storm struck Washington city on Wednesday afternoon, and for nearly ten minutes suspended business in the house of representatives; heavy winds in this city, owing to the smooth pavements, are generally accompanied by great clouds of dust. This and the dark clouds which came up suddenly after an intensely hot day turned the house suddenly into a pit of impenetrable darkness. Doors and windows being open, the dust, in thick clouds, blew in and hung in clouds over the few devoted patriots who had been wrangling all day over French spoliation claims. Out of the Egyptian darkness came the voice of the indomitable Springer crying, "We shall have to stop until the gas is lit," and everybody felt reassured. It was several minutes before the gas man could get around, however, and meantime the house could do nothing. Cox was trying to pass a bill, and during the darkness he would occasionally cry out to ascertain if he still held the floor. The lighting of the gas dissipated the gloom, but did not remove the choking dust nor sand which settled all over the desks and papers.

Sinful Siftings.

A. F. Parker, who was serving three years in the penitentiary at Deer Lodge, Montana, for counterfeiting at Butte, was released on a pardon by the president. He was a good and trusty prisoner in the penitentiary and was overwhelmed by the pardon.

George Harrymon, aged thirty-five, gave himself up to the police at Buffalo, N. Y. He said in November, 1881, he embezzled over $1,000 from a Detroit firm and went to Canada. He was locked up and the authorities at Detroit communicated with, but up to this hour no reply has been received.

Two boys, O'Brien, aged seventeen, and Murphy, aged fifteen, are in jail at Osage, in Mitchell county, Iowa, for the murder of Henry Slocum. A few nights ago Slocum was assaulted and terribly beaten, from the effects of which he died. Before dying he said that he recognized O'Brien and Murphy as his assailants.

In Septembtr, 1887, George Gerber of Missoula county, Montana, was murdered. Shortly afterward Daniel Cavanaugh was arrested for the crime, convicted and sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary. Now Gov. Leslie received a letter from James Hensley, dated Osceola, Neb., July 28, announcing that he had caught the murderer of George Gerber and that the prisoner was in jail at Lincoln, Neb. The matter will be investigated.

A young German named Thadet, who is comparatively unknown in St. Paul, committed suicide by cutting his throat with a large clasp knife. He was occupying a room at the house of a well known business man in this city, having been charitably given shelter there until he could find work. The residents of the house were alarmed by hearing groans and other sounds issuing from the man's room, and on entering found him seated on the edge of his bed with a gash in his throat, inflicted with a large pocket knife which he held open in his hand. He was immediately taken to St. Joseph's hospital, but nothing could be done for him and he died within an hour afterwards. Thadet was a stranger in St. Paul, and it is not known where his relatives live. He was in destitute circumstances, which probably induced melancholy, leading him to take his life.

The now famous Brown poisoning case which has attracted so much attention, was brought to a climax at Mason City, Iowa, by the arrest of Mrs. H. E. Brown, charged with attempting to poison her husband, Hiram E. Brown. Mrs. Brown was found at the residence of her uncle, Judge George Vermilyea, a prominent citizen. A detective has been shadowing her and her mail has been intercepted. In a letter written to Bessie Lake about the time of the coroner's inquest she said she meant to "put it onto Hiram" and end the miserable life she was leading. While Mrs. Brown was at Monticello she was confronted with the evidence against her and charged with the murder of her son Jesse and her father-in-law, Hiram L. Brown, and the attempted murder of her husband and her son Henry. She broke down, saying: "There was no eye-witness, and you can't prove it.

Accidents and Casualties.

Toby Smith, head sawyer in Vigars Bros.' saw mill at Port Arthur, Manitoba, was torn to pieces, being caught in the machinery and pushed against the saw.

During a storm the barn on the farm of Henry Widger of Viola, Minn., was struck by lightning and consumed with its contents, including some thirty tons of hay and seven horses.

Crookston, Minn., had a narrow escape from the accidental poisoning of a whole family. Rat poison was mistaken for baking powder by the servant of M. Mossefen and pancakes were prepared for breakfast. A prompt administering of emetics prevented any fatal results, and all are entirely recovered.

Bernhardt Johnson, a Norwegian boy, sixteen years of age, was drowned near Canton, Dak., while bathing in the Sioux river. He went in bathing with some younger boys and attempted to swim over a deep hole, but soon sank out of sight and was helpless. His comrades were too small to save him.

A party of men who had been searching the woods all night near Wausau, Wis., in quest of Hattie McCrossen, who left her home to go berrying the previous morning and had not returned, found her lifeless body two miles from that place, pinned to the ground by a large pine tree which had blown down by the heavy winds.

W. H. Hott, traveling salesman for Rathbun, Sard & Co. of Chicago, was found at Sioux Falls, D. T., in an unconscious condition in his room at the Commercial hotel. Upon retiring he blew out the gas. It is not known whether he did so intentionally or owing to a rattled mental condition, as he has not yet recovered sufficiently to throw any light upon this point.

During a heavy blow the sloop Flora B. of Pennsville capsized near Newcastle, Del. She had on board Mrs. Elijah Wheaton, Mr. Jonathan Turner, Mrs. Samuel Wheaton and daughter about nine years old, and Mrs. Thomas Finnegan, all of whom were in the cabin at the time and were drowned. The bodies have been recovered and sent to their homes in Pennsville.

John E. Elder, of Atlantic City, N. J., who has for some time been separated from his wife, was shot and fatally wounded in Hammonton by his son Robert, eighteen years old. It is alleged that the father had been living with another woman and also that he had badly abused his wife in other ways. The shooting seems to have been the result of a quarrel between the boy and his father. The boy escaped.

The family of Mr. Schleissenger, a fisherman of Winona, Minn., had a narrow escape from drowning. They live in a flat boat which is moored at the levee. During the furious gale, the boat was torn from its moorings and driven down stream. The fisherman was absent; his wife and two children were in the boat. The boat was driven with tremendous force against the Laird Morton boom and then against the Empire Lumber company's pier, where it narrowly escaped wreck. At Hamilton's, a line was got out to the boat and the helpless passengers rescued.

Fire broke out in the immense planing mill of C. E. Lee at Saginaw, Mich., and rapidly spread until nearly half a mile of the solid mill plants and lumber piles along the east side of the river was one mass of flames. The fire also spread toward the city, consuming sixteen houses, including the fine residence of Hon. E. P. Ripley. Lee's expensive plant is a total loss, without a dollar of insurance. The total loss so far as estimated at half a million dollars. A strong effort is being made to save other lumber by pulling it into the river with tugs.

Martin Olson Ofstead, residing on Jere Allis' farm, three miles west of Lanesboro, Minn., was killed by lightning with two of his children. As the wind blew hard when the storm struck his home he started into the cellar with his family. He had just closed the door behind him when lightning struck the house immediately over them, knocking the family into the cellar. When Mrs. Olmstead recovered consciousness she discovered her husband's clothing on fire, and she extinguished the fire and called "help," but only to find her husband and two children dead. The lightning passed down through a room in which Olmstead's father was sleeping, exploding a lamp and a powder horn, and shattering the ceiling, but the old man escaped with his life.

News about People.

There is no longer any doubt that Mr. Robert Garrett is a very sick man. His people in Baltimore admit that he is worse, and that the baths at Richfield Springs, N. Y., seemed to aggravate his nervous troubles. He is expected to return to Baltimore in charge of his physician, Prof. A. P. Smith.

It has become clear to the friends of Robert Garrett during the past week that he is really insane and that there is but a faint hope of his ultimate recovery. In his wakeful moments he is constantly guarded by tried men for fear he may do something dangerous. When Mr. Garrett talks he becomes quite excited, and then Jay Gould is the person who seems to appear before him as a menacing spectre.

The Indiana Republican State convention, amid much enthusiasm nominated Gen. A. P. Hovey for Governor. The first and only ballot resulted as follows: Necessary to choice, 581; total number of votes cast, 1,109, of which Gen. Hovey received 563, Col. Robertson 221, Maj. Steele 118½, Private Chase 120; William Cumback 103½, Gov. Porter 30, scattering 3. Before the ballot was announced several counties changed to Hovey, swelling his vote to 595, and in the midst of the clamor for additional changes, Chairman Calkins announced that Gen. Hovey was the nominee of the convention, which brought the 6,000 people present to their feet in a burst of prolonged cheers and applause.

Nuggets of Foreign News.

New Zealand advices received by the steamer Alemeda say the ship Star of Greece went ashore near Adelaide harbor July 13. Of the twenty-seven persons on the vessel, the captain and all others were drowned, excepting the first and third officers, four men and four apprentices.

Private advices received from Edmonton, N. W. T. state that James Hyslop and E. Nagle, who wintered at Athabasca river, about thirty miles south of Chipewyan, arrived at Landing July 13. Lord Lonsdale was at Chipewyan on May 22 going north. Last winter was very severe at Athabasca; stormy and cold, and at times 40 deg. below with a hurricane blowing. On account of the severe weather the Indians were unable to hunt, and as rabbits were remarkably scarce they suffered greatly from hunger. Nineteen out of a camp of twenty-three Indians died of starvation at a point of about four days travel northeast of Chipewyan. The Hudson Bay company sent out provisions to the camp and brought in the survivors. About fifty Indians, so far as heard, starved to death in that district last winter.

News in General.

George C. Huebener, fishing near New Chicago, Wis., found the body of a four-year-old boy in a creek. It was identified as that of the son of John Rooney, a farmer. The child had been missing several days.

The Jacksonville (Florida) board of health announce that the developments which have occurred in the last twenty-four hours assure them of the prevalence in that town of yellow fever tending to assume an epidemic form.

Montgomery has declared quarantine against Jacksonville, Orlando, Manatee, Plant City and Tampa, Fla., and all other points infected with yellow fever in that state. A crowd of 32 refugees from Jacksonville arrived in Montgomery, but the city authorities refused to allow them to leave the train, although it lay over at the union depot several hours, and no one was allowed to converse with them. Every train coming to the city from the south is now closely watched and carefully guarded for yellow fever refugees.

A car load of Italians boarded the east-bound express on the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic at Nestoria, Michigan. Some of them insisted on entering the ladies' coach, but Brakeman Jones objected and they jumped upon him in a body. His head was driven through the glass door and he was badly handled. He secured an iron stove shaker and waded into the mob, doing big execution. The fight lasted some time. The passengers took a hand and finally the dagos were downed. The brakeman's pluck saved him from being torn to pieces.

The papers in the Maxwell case were received at Jefferson City, Mo., from Washington. They consist of a communication from Secretary Bayard enclosing a letter from L. Sackville West, stating that Lord Salisbury had requested a stay of proceedings in the case of Maxwell, alias Brooks. Secretary Bayard states that he understands the request is made on the ground that new evidence has been discovered favorable to the prisoner. Gov. Morehouse is absent in Clinton county, and the application will be forwarded to him.

The Burlington strike still prevails. The object of the meeting now being held in St. Louis can be stated clearly in a very few words. Those who are present are there by invitation for a conference to ascertain if they have anything to offer in solution of the Burlington strike, or in the interest of the brotherhood generally. The Burlington strike is still on, and no proposition for a compromise is now being considered. The Burlington did not offer a compromise but the brotherhood rejected it unanimously. There will be no compromise save upon the basis of $3.50 and $4 per day, and the reinstating of all the old engineers.

Gov. Morehouse returned to Jefferson City and gave a hearing to Messrs. Martin and Fauntleroy, attorneys for Hugh M. Brooks, alias Maxwell, on request that a further respite be granted Brooks as asked by the British minister. The governor announced that he was ready to pass upon the application asked for by Minister West, and stated that if there was no other reason than that in the papers received from Secretary Bayard he would not interfere with the sentence. Brooks' attorneys replied that they had papers bearing upon the subject which they had been unable to prepare and bring with them. The governor, therefore, granted a postponement of the hearing for two days, when the attorneys for the condemned man will make their final effort in behalf of their client.

Another Tenement House Horror.

A four-story tenement house at No. 1,020 Avenue A caught fire at New York. The family of Gustave Berg, who lived on the top floor, were burned to death. They were Gustave Berg, his wife, mother-in-law and twelve-year-old daughter. The other occupants of the building escaped. The building was owned by Peter Block. Damage, $2,000; insured. It was not until all the people living in the house, except the Berg family, had gotten safely out that a fire engine arrived. A second alarm was now sent out, although at this time it was believed that all had escaped from the building. After the flames were all out somebody suddenly remembered that in looking at the burning building from the opposite side of the street he had seen the face and form of a woman at one of the front windows on the top floor, and that she had suddenly disappeared with a despairing gesture. A detachment of firemen at once made their way to the top floor and there saw a sight which proved the truth of the man's story. On the front floor, within a few feet of the window, lay Mr. Berg dead from suffocation and burns. In another room, sitting upright in a chair, was the burned body of Mrs. Laura Berg. Upon a bed in another room lay the daughter Lizzie and the grandmother. The child had died from suffocation, while the grandmother's dead body was horribly burned. The origin of the fire is unknown.

THE POW-WOW ENDS.

The Standing Rock Indians Absolutely Refuse to Sign the Treaty.

News from Standing Rock Agency says the council with the Indians upon the treaty for opening the Sioux reservation has broken up and adjourned.

Each of the commissioners, in well considered and earnest addresses, warned the Indians of the bad results likely to occur in the case of their refusal to accept the offer of the government. Before the meeting of the council the commissioners knew that it had been determined by the Indians to go home. In the open council John Grass reiterated the determination of the Indians to refuse to sign either paper. They started to leave, when Agent McLaughlin arose and ordered them to remain, which they did. The commissioners finally adjourned the council and told the Indians to go home and attend to their crops and the commissioners would proceed to other agencies; when the Standing Rock people were wanted again notice would be given them. Then they dispersed quietly and set out for their homes. Every possible argument has been made to induce the Indians to consent. It is certain that they had determined in their councils long before the arrival of the commissioners to reject the offer. Reports from the lower agencies are very conflicting. The next agency visited will be the Cheyenne River.

Another dispatch says: The language of Chairman Pratt to the haughty chiefs of the tribes intensified the opposition of the Indians, and instead of making a break in the ranks, solidified the opposition and cemented the friendship of the factions. The matter was virtually settled when John Grass arose in conference, and informed the commission that the Indians would sign neither papers, and that they would now return to their farms regardless of what the commissioners might say. As soon as Grass closed the circle was broken and the Indians started for home. All the efforts of Chairman Pratt to control the Indians were futile, but Agent McLaughlin succeeded in restoring quiet and have the conference adjourn with a semblance of order. It was a most humiliating scene. The representatives of the government of the United States sent to confer with the Indians were left standing helpless and hopeless while the Indians who had repeatedly rendered their decision not to sign left the conference with contempt depicted upon their countenances. When John Gross, after his brief speech, called for those to sign "No," not an Indian arose. When he called for those who sign "Yes," every man remained motionless on the ground. But when he requested those who would sign neither paper to arise, every man rose with cheers and yells.

H. Dunbar, issue clerk at the Rosebud agency, Dak., and J. A. Nebzer, chief of police, say that they have asked the opinions of over a thousand Indians during the past month with regard to the opening of their reservation, and not one of them was in favor of it. Last week the Indians at Rosebud had a big council composed of over sixty chiefs and head men, in which all the agencies were represented, and they unanimously pledged themselves not to sign and to use all their influence to prevent other Indians from doing so.

The failure of the Sioux commission to secure the consent of the Indians to any of the agreements is very mortifying to the interior department officials, for Secretary Vilas has taken a greater interest in the success of the proposed opening of the reservation than in anything else coming under his administration. He selected his commission with a special reference to their ability to deal with the Indians, but such was his anxiety to secure an army officer that after Crook and Ruger declined to serve he selected Capt. Pratt of the Carlisle school, for the place. It seems to have been an unfortunate selection, and officers of the interior department are inclined to place upon Pratt's shoulders the larger share of the responsibility for the present attitude of the Indians. "Pratt plunged right in there and attempted to bulldoze the Indians," said one angry official "and he has not succeeded. He is a martinet and can do nothing except in a brutal way. He was captain in a negro regiment before he went to the school and could knock his men around as he saw fit. Then he got control of a large number of Indian children at Carlisle, and there he could bulldoze and boss things. He used to treat people in this department much the same until he got a setback a while ago. Now he has gone at this work of delicate diplomacy like a bull in a china shop, and, of course, he'll fail."

This opinion of Pratt exceeds to several other government departments that have dealings with him. The other members of the commission could, it is thought, secure the consent of the Indians if it were not for Pratt.

FISK AND BROOKS.

The Prohibition Candidates for President and Vice President Write Letters of Acceptance.

The following is a synopsis of Gen. Fisks letter of acceptance:

Within a few years the temperance reform has altogether changed front. Temperance forces no longer face human appetite and habit alone; they oppose legislation, law, the purpose of political parties, the policy of state and nation. What law creates law alone can kill. The creatures of law, the saloon, the liquor traffic, can die only at the law's executor. It is not enough that we reform the individual; we must reform the state. The policy of great commonwealths of a whole people must be remade and put in harmony with sound economic principles. So broad a demand as this can be met in but one way. "A political reform can become a fact in government only through a political party that administers government. A reform so vast as this we advocate, involving such radical changes in state and national policy; is utterly dependent for its agitation and consummation on some party agent or force to give it shape. The national Democratic party in its platform utters no word in condemnation of the greatest foe in the republic—the liquor traffic. In Michigan, in Texas, in Tennessee and in Oregon so-called nonpartisan efforts to establish prohibition have failed through partisan necessity. "The first concern of good government," says the recent national convention at Chicago, "is the virtue and sobriety of the people and the purity of the home." Revenue, then, is not the government's chief concern, whether coming from internal taxation or from a tariff on importations, and any source of revenue which discounts "the virtue and sobriety of the people" and begets impurity in the home' should be the first object assailed by every party professing to seek good government. The Republican party knows to-day, and knew at Chicago in June, that the public surplus, which in 1884 it declared dangerous, and then proposed to reduce, comes—about 90 per cent of it—from a source more dangerous than the surplus—the liquor traffic. The Prohibition party's "chief concern" is for the purity of the home, and the virtue and sobriety of the people. I shall bear with glad and reverent hands the only party standard on which is inscribed, "For God and Home and Native Land." We can and do assert that prohibition is "the dominant issue in national politics," and we can and do "invite to full party fellowship all who on this one dominant issue are with us agreed."

John A. Brooks' letter accepting the vice presidential nomination on the Prohibition ticket is as follows:

After acknowledging the honor conferred upon him, he denounces in the strongest terms monopolies and trusts, which he says are against a wholesome revision of the tariff. He says the country will hold each of the three great political parties to its platform and that the platform of the prohibition party is the wisest of the three. He does not hesitate to declare that the surplus in the treasury is a constant menace to the business interests of the country. The prospect of removing the tax from whisky must depend altogether upon the purpose intended to be accomplished by such removal. The tariff itself pleads a right to existence on the grounds of its recognition by the government and the revenue it pays into the public treasury. Strike down this defense and an outraged public would not long suffer its continuance. The Prohibition party would strike off the tax that it may the sooner destroy the traffic. The purpose of the Republican party in its repeal of the tax is to reduce the revenues that they may not have "to surrender any part of our protective system." The Prohibitionists would take this arch criminal out of prison to hang him; Republicans to set him at liberty. Every Christian will approve the motive prompting one and denounce the other as consummation of human selfishness and infamy. A proper protection of American labor and the industries of the country commends itself to a majority of the people, but of infinitely more importance is protection to our homes. He closes with a glowing tribute to the women who have so long upheld the cause of prohibition.

Republican Hot Shot.

John Bull to North American.

Vote, lads, with Democracee,
They're for Free Trade, and so are we,
Free Trade to us, O children dear,
Is worth five million pun a year.
—From the New York Tribune.

Win!—You Bet.

Four years ago the Republicans faced a majority of 198,000 given to Cleveland two years before. To-day they are facing a majority of less than 1,200 given Mr. Cleveland four years ago, in New York. Win! You bet.

Will Make Him President.

It was you, Fighting Joe Hooker, who said at Resaca, "Ben. Harrison, I will make you a brigadier general for this day's work." If Joe Hooker comes close to Heaven's border, looks down upon the Yankee Nation and primes his ears he will hear America say, next November: "Ben. Harrison, for your bravery, manliness, statesmanship and good citizenship, we have made you President."

The Only Hope.

It is well enough to express sympathy with home rule in Ireland, but, as Gen. Harrison suggests, is it not still more important that we demand home rule in Dakota, where tens of thousands of American citizens are practically disfranchised and denied a just share in the management of political affairs solely because a large majority of them are republicans? This outrage has been prolonged for years, and the only hope of putting an end to it lies in the defeat of Cleveland and the election of a republican president and congress.—St. Louis Globe Dem.

They Seem to Appreciate Cleveland.

The South American wool growers have made a collection of Argentine wools and delivered the same to Hon. Bayless Hanna, our minister to the Argentine Republic for transmission to President Cleveland, "who will see in the gift," says the Buenos Ayres standard, "a compliment to his policy of tariff reform and a gentle reminder to persevere in it." As it is a part of this policy of tariff reform to destroy wool growing in the United States and surrender the American market to foreign control, the American wool growers can well afford to indorse it Talking One Way and Acting Another.

When Grover Cleveland spoke against a second term, referring to the fact that "a horde of officeholders, with a zeal born of benefits received and fostered by the hope of favors yet to come, stand ready to aid with money and trained political service," he was probably even then outlining his plans for a re-election. No man but an accomplished hypocrite could utter such words and then immediately proceed to contradict them by his conduct. The man who thus openly talks one way and acts the other must believe that the people are fools or that they love knavery and duplicity.—Cleveland Leader.

An English Workman on the Tariff.

This talk is given by a workingman of New York city:

I am a printer, or rather a pressman. I served seven years to learn my trade in London. When I became a journeyman, my wages when on piece work averaged not more than £1, or $5 per week, and when I was lucky enough to get work by the week, my wages were thirty-three shillings, or $8 per week.

"I was obliged to leave England to come to this country to look for a living, and I thank God that I came here. I arrived here in 1867 and at once obtained work at $18 per week, nearly four times as much as I could make in free trade England.

"In England I could not afford to get a decent piece of meat for my dinner except on Sunday. My family was obliged to live most of the time on a bullock heart, like thousands of other poor workingmen in England. Four years ago I visited England. I found that the wages were still as low as they were twenty years ago, and living much dearer than here. Meat is twice as dear there as here; other living in proportion. So you can imagine how the poor workingmen have to suffer in a free trade country.—New York Press.

Simply an Anti-Republican Movement.

The prohibition candidates for the presidency and vice-presidency in their letters of acceptance devote the greater part of their attention to abuse of the republican party and the republican platform.

If they are not playing into the hands of the democracy they should take down their signs. Gen. Fisk, we are sorry to say, is carried away either by unreasonable prejudice or insane fanaticism. Naturally a good man, with a military record that he can afford to be proud of, he has become imbued with the idea that the republican party is the deadly enemy of the temperance cause, when, in fact, it has been its mainstay and total dependence for years.

The other party, Brooks, confesses that he he has been a rebel at heart; that he was a traitor to his country; that while pretending to be in sympathy with the union cause his wishes and his hopes were with the south, but thanks God that he has never been a republican.

This is a pleasant statement coming from a candidate for the vice-presidency of the United States. How do the loyal and patriotic prohibitionists of Iowa and Kansas like it? How do the temperence people of the north in general like it?—Chicago Mail.

A Shameful Act.

Sometime ago our democratic-English administration contracted with a British manufacturer for a consignment of army blankets, the excuse being that a few dollars was saved over the price for which the lot could have been purchased in the United states. This was bad enough, but a deal has just been consummated by the war department even more humiliating to those who believe in the people and the institutions of this country. Congress made a large appropriation to dredge New York harbor, and the contract has been awarded to an English syndicate which owns and operates a large dredge now in the New York docks, called the "State of Alabama." The principle on which the dredge operates is to sink the sand and mud from the bottom through a pipe, and transfer it to a vessel which carries it to the sea and dumps it. Both the dredge and the dumping vessel thus to be employed are owned by Englishmen who live in England, and they fly at their mast-heads the British flag.

Why! and Wherefore.

If free trade is a good thing for the wool industry, why did the Montana Wool Growers' Association condemn the Democratic wool policy?

Why did the Democratic House last week refuse to retain the tariff on lead?

Why did Cleveland recommend the discontinuance of silver coinage and why has silver dropped 15 cents per ounce since he did so?

Why has he persisted in appointing carpet-baggers to Territorial offices in plain violation of his personal and party pledges?

Why was the subject of Territorial admission ignored in the Democratic platform?

Why did Cleveland retain Sparks in office three years in opposition to the wishes and and interest of every man west of the Mississippi river?

Why did he attempt to return the rebel battle flags captured in the war for the preservation of the Union?

Why did he appoint rebel brigadiers and secession sympathizers and copperheads to most of the foreign and home offices within his gift?

Why does he favor a fisheries treaty which is altogether in the interest of the Canadian fishermen?

Why did he express horror at the eligibility of a president to a second term and lay wires and pull them for a renomination?

Why did he promise civil service reform and then contemptuously refuse to fulfill the promise and appoint 70,000 incompetent and inexperienced men to office?

Why did he refuse to sign the bill prohibiting the employment of convict labor on public works at the same time claim to be a friend of honest labor?

Why does he advocate free trade in the interest of Great Britain when he knows that its adoption would pauperize the American people and degrade the American workingman to the level of a machine?

If he opposes Chinese immigration why does he not also oppose the free importation of the products of Chinese cheap labor?—Butte Inter-Mountain.

FIFTIETH CONGRESS.

Tuesday, August 7.

SENATE.—The feature of to-day's senate proceedings was an earnest and forcible speech by Sherman in opposition to the ratification of the fisheries treaty.

The senate sub-committee on finance continues its investigation of the tariff question and is still unable to report a measure to the committee. It is said however, that the sub-committee will complete its work so as to report to the full committee next week.

HOUSE—Discussion of the bill making an appropriation to enable the executive departments to participate in the Ohio Centennial exposition next September and October took up the entire time of the house to-day.

The house appropriation committee has shirked responsibility as to many of the important amendments to the sundry civil bill. It has decided to recommend non-concurrence in bulk, and to throw the whole responsibility for them on a conference committee.

For the moment the house committee on military affairs has gained the victory in the contest on the subject of appropriations for fortifications on the appropriations committee. Mr. Townshend, of the committee on military affairs, who has favored substantially the plan proposed by the senate in its amendment to the army appropriation committee as set forth in the fortifications bill, has been appointed by Speaker Carlisle chairman of the committee on conference.

Wednesday, Aug. 8.

SENATE.—There will be a Republican tariff bill, and although there may be an apparent unanimity in supporting it in the senate, there is reason to believe that it will not be accepted by all of the Republican senators with hearty unanimity.

Immediately after the morning hour the Chinese immigrant restriction bill was taken up and passed.

Mr Sherman reported from the finance committee the concurrent resolution to print, 100,000 copies of the tariff bill of 1883 and of the Mills tariff bill, with a comparative statement to be prepared by the house committee of ways and means of the difference between the two bills. The resolution was adopted.

HOUSE.—Mr. Shaw of Maryland presented a resolution to appropriate $5,000 to meet expenses to the committee on manufactures in investigating trusts. This led to quite a long discussion of trusts, but the resolution was finally adopted.

Mr. Allen of Mississippi, raising a question of personal privilege, said that, according to a report in a Philadelphia newspaper, his frank had been used to send out patent medicine advertisements. He knew nothing about it, and would be obliged to the committee on postoffices if it would make an inquiry into fraudulent use of his frank.

The house then went into committee of the whole on the general deficiency bill, and the debate on the French spoliation claims section was resumed. Mr. Breckenridge of Kentucky spoke in support of the claims, arguing that they were just and honest. Mr. Cobb of Alabama argued against the validity of the claims, and Mr. Russell of Massachusetts favored the payment of the claims; but, pending further debate, the committee rose and the house adjourned.

The senate then took up the fisheries treaty, and Mr. Evarts took the floor in oppsition to it.

Thursday, August 9.

SENATE.—Mr. Mitchell offered a resolution calling on the secretary of the interior for information concerning his recent decision in the Guilford Miller land case, affecting the title to the Northern Pacific lands. Agreed to.

The senate proceeded to business on the calendar, and the following bills were passed:

The senate bill to pay A. W. Tabor $3,869 for necessary additional expenses incurred by him as postmaster at Leadville, Col.

Also a bill to pay Royal M. Hubbard $600 for additional rent of postoffice at Long Mount, Col.

The senate then proceeded to the consideration of the fisheries treaty in open executive session and Mr. Evarts resumed his speech (begun yesterday) against his ratification.

HOUSE.—Mr. Morrow, of California, asked unanimous consent for the present consideration of the senate bill to carry into effect the provisions of the treaty between the United States and China. It was exceedingly important that this bill should be considered at once and should become a law as soon as possible.

Mr. Breckinridge, of Arkansas, thought Mr. Morrow would act more wisely not to spring the bill upon the house suddenly, but to allow some date fixed for its consideration. But Mr. Morrow insisted on his request for immediate consideration, and Mr. Springer, of Illinois, declaring that some future day should be fixed for its discussion, objected, and the measure was referred to the committee on foreign affairs.

On motion of Mr. McMillan of Tennessee, the committee was granted leave to report the bill back at any time.

Mr. Nelson, of Minnesota, from the committee on Indian affairs, reported the bill for the disposal of the agricultural lands embraced within the limits of the Pipestone Indian reservation. Committee of the whole.

The house then went into committee of the whole (Mr. Springer in the chair) on the deficiency appropriation bill.

Friday, August 10.

SENATE—The Republican senators have determined upon their programme so far as the order of public business is concerned without resorting to caucus.

The starting point is that the fishery treaty shall be disposed of at all hazards, to the exclusion of any other business; the next in order will be the bills for the admission of Washington Territory, and the admission of South Dakota as a state.

The bill ratifying the agreement with the Indians in the Fort Berthold reservation was passed by the senate with a slight amendment. The agreement is one made by the Northwestern commission with the Gros Ventres Arickarees and Mandans, and provides for the relinquishment to the United States of all that portion of the reservation lying north of the 48th parallel, and west of a north and south line six miles west of the most westerly point of the big bend of the Missouri river. The Indians, for this concession, are to have $80,000 annually for ten years.

Senator Sabin secured the passage of a bill to improve and encourage the cultivation and manufacture of hemp and flax. The bill provides that $25,000 is appropriated to aid in making improvements in the cultivation and manufacture of flax and hemp to be made by and under the direction of the commissioner of agriculture.

HOUSE.—In the house the conference report on the bill granting aid to state homes for disabled volunteers was agreed to. Mr. Springer, of Illinois, gave notice that he would ask further consideration of the Oklahoma bill on Tuesday next. The private calendar was then taken up. Most of the afternoon was passed in the discussion of a war claim bill, without reaching the point of action.

The senate joint resolution was passed authorizing the president to present a gold medal to Francis Josephs in recognition of his eminent services in the construction of life-saving appliances. Several private bills were then passed.

Saturday August 11.

SENATE.—Senator Ingalls is of the opinion that congress will adjourn about Sept. 15. He said that he thought the senate would report its substitute bill about Sept. 1, and that debate would be limited to two weeks. At the end of that time the bill will pass, go to the house into the pigeon holes of the ways and means committee, and congress will be ready to adjourn.

The bill passed by the senate to grant to certain states a portion of the proceeds of the sale of certain lands, grants 5 per cent upon the sale of all public lands to the State of Minnesota, Oregon, Kansas, Nebraska, Nevada and Colorado, and construes the law to embrace all lands within former and present Indian reservations within such states.

Those who have charge of the fishery treaty expect that some definite action will be taken with regard to it this week.

HOUSE.—The president did not sign the river and harbor bill. It becomes a law without his signature. No memorandum is written, but the president stated this afternoon that while the bill contained items to which he could not sign his approval, the great bulk of the work provided for is so important to the best interests of the country that he was unwilling to obstruct it by a veto.

Nicholas Murphy a watchman at a Boston wharf for five years past, has during that time saved the lives of 100 persons who have fallen overboard and his employers presented him with a gold-headed cane. He had previously received a silver medal from the Massachusetts Humane society.

DOINGS IN MINNESOTA.

An old citizen of Polk county, John O'Brien, a farmer living near Mallory, was kicked in the stomach by a horse and died almost instantly.

James Rogers, aged seventeen, was killed by a bull on a farm near Eagle lake. The bull crushed in Rogers' breast and broke his arm.

Frederick Tonebohn had his wife arrested on a charge of stealing $800 from him. The case was tried at Henderson and dismissed for lack of sufficient evidence to convict.

Six cattle belonging to Calvin Black of Oak Center, Wabasha county, were killed by a stroke of lightning. They were standing by a barbed wire fence, and were stretched dead in a row.

The sale of the Bank of Tower took place and has changed hands. The Union National of Duluth were the purchasers. The future title will be First National Bank of Tower; capital, $50,000.

Col. A. S. Everest of Atchison, Kan., formerly a resident of Austin has offered the city of Austin his forty acres of land within the city limits for a public park on condition that it be laid out and extensively beautified.

Levi Glosby was brought to Red Wing from Pine Island and lodged in jail to await the action of the grand jury. He is charged with breaking into Grace church and defacing the furniture, besides doing other damage.

The machinery for the addition to the Red River paper mill has arrived at Fergus Falls and is being put in place. The consumption of straw has increased to such an extent that it is being pressed and shipped in from Dakota.

The mere rumors which got out at Brainerd regarding Judge Sleeper's indemnity land decision in advance of its full completion did not correctly state the court's findings. The injunctions against the settlers are sustained instead of being dissolved.

The farmers of Lyon county have been suffering from the wiles of gypsy horse traders that are traveling through the country. Their plan is to get into a house under the pretense of selling laces, it is said, and if they can get the housekeeper out of the room they steal whatever they can get their hands on.

In the town of Montana, across the river from Winona, in Wisconsin, a bolt of lightning struck the house of John Kerditzki and set it on fire. Mr. and Mrs. Kerditzki escaped from the burning house, but their six-year-old son was struck by the lightning and burned to death in the house.

Cargill Bros., of La Crosse, received samples of wheat from Albert Lea which, in their opinion, show damage of one-third or more by blight, the tops of the heads being entirely empty. From information received, they say the crop in Southern Minnesota and Dakota shows an average injury of 25 per cent.

A hail storm about a mile wide passed over the townships of Chester, Mount Pleasant and Lake in Wabasha county, doing considerable damage to crops, but the full extent has not been learned. Hailstones three in diameter were found. Limbs were broken from trees and some fields of grain were beaten into the ground. The storm crossed the lake into Wisconsin a short distance below Lake City.

The heaviest rainfall known since 1859 was that reported in Stearns county. The storm began at about 10 o'clock and the rain poured down until daybreak. Lightning struck eight places in St. Cloud. The only houses considerably damaged are those of B. Muller, H. Bowers, Mrs. Durup and a tenement belonging to W. B. Mitchel. Every culvert in the city was damaged, that on Fifth avenue losing a half of a heavy stone retaining wall.

Considerable surprise was created at Hutchinson, by the announcement of the sale of the Bank of Hutchinson to the Citizens' bank of which Congressman MacDonald is president. Joseph Dean, was president of the Bank of Hutchinson, which has been under the management of his sons, Fred and George Dean, and doing a paying business since starting about two years ago. The Messrs. Dean will remain until fall to close business matters.

The Brainerd Street Railway company, in which Mr. Kindred owns a controlling interest, offers to sell all its possessions, including the well built line, which was put in new last fall, cars, franchises, etc., and including barn and real estate where it stands, for the naked cost of the rails and cars. This is on account of the difficulty between the city council and Mr. Kindred. The line is said to have been doing quite well, until cars were stopped, when the council annulled Mr. Kindred's electric light franchise. Since then they have not run more than a trip a day, just to hold the franchise.

First workingman—Why didn't Mr. Saphead keep his ingagement ter lecture fer us tonight on "The wrongs of Capital" an' "The Laborer Bein' Worthy o' His Hire," like he does every Saturday? Second workingman—Mr. Saphead is dead. First workingman—Ah, its the good die young! What happened him? Second workingman—Me an' Jim was fixin a water pipe what runs under Mr. Saphead's back steps, an' we moved the steps away ter git at it, an', as we weren't paid for movin' steps, but only for fixin' pipes, we didn't put 'em back. When Mr. Saphead came out, he broke his neck.

THE MAN FROM MAINE.

The Welcome to James G. Blaine Fully as Wildly Enthusiastic as Anticipated.

James G. Blaine arrived in New York on Friday last. Such a demonstration was never before seen upon the waters of the bay. Crowds, to be sure, of greater magnitude, have gathered in honor of illustrious heroes and have sounded bravos, with a lustier voice. But the scene was exceptional. The spectacle of 2,000 people, drawn from every one of nearly forty states extending across an entire continent, cruising for three days about the entrance to a harbor, waiting for the homecoming of such a man, and for no other purpose than to bid him "Welcome back," and for no other reward than a grasp of his hand and a smile of thanks—this is a spectacle as solitary as it is remarkable. As the steamer City of New York came in sight, in response to a score of repeated calls. "There she is," a mighty shout went up like the discharge of such a battery as frowned down upon the water from Fort Wadsworth. Again and again it broke upon the air, each time louder than before. Hats, flags and handkerchiefs were waved furiously, and cheer after cheer was given for the "man from Maine." All the passengers seemed to be as interested as the welcoming party. They cheered away for dear life and fluttered their cambric, linen and silk with great enthusiasm. Upon the quarter deck stood a crowd of young men shouting over the water that old-time cry, "Blaine, Blaine, James G. Blaine."

The whistles of steamers, the whistles of tugs, ferry boats, near and afar shrieked a wild welcome home. Crowds of people on either side of the steamer, and waved handkerchiefs and flags and shouted frantically. On board the excursion steamer the uproar was unbounded. If for a second it seemed to die away, some throat more capable than the rest would sound forth an awakening cry, and the thunder would break out again. In the midst of the din a plank was thrown connecting the decks of the two vessels, and the health officer crossed. He was followed by William Walter Phelps, Whitelaw Reid, Walker Blaine, Chairman Pool and President Bartlett and they all hurried to to greet Mr. Blaine. Mr. Blaine looked in perfect health. His eyes were clear and as bright as diamonds. His largely framed figure stood easily erect, and he walked with all the sprightliness of ten years ago. "What is the matter with James G. Blaine?" cried one of those useful fellows who have voices like fog horns. For a single instant this crowd was still, and all eyes were fixed upon Mr. Blaine's ruddy face. And then in complete unison a thousand votes called back, "Oh—oh—oh—he's all right." It was so spontaneous an answer to the question that everybody had on his tongue's end as to the real state of Mr. Blaine's health that everybody roared with laughter. The people who have been telling stories so evidently preposterous about him will require no further answer. As soon as possible, which was not as soon as it might have been, Mr. Blaine was taken to the aft cabin and speech-making began. There was not too much of Mr. Bartlett's speech, and it was entirely successful in conveying to the club's guest the true spirit of the occasion. Mr. Blaine was evidently most profoundly stirred. His voice was not free from huskiness as he told his thanks and assured his friends about him of his appreciation, of his good will. In the reception that followed the speech-making Mr. Blaine shook hands with everybody in that charming cordial way of his, recognizing at once all he had ever seen before, and talking cheerily a moment as he grasped each proffered hand. Meantime, the Starin, the excursion steamer, had reached the pier, where Mr. Blaine was again taken away from his family, and with Messrs. Bartlett and Pool he took his seat in the coach. All along the route the crowds collected and bade him welcome home. The windows of every house were crowded. Laborers along the street, cartmen, carpenters, plasterers and even the toilers who were cleaning the streets cheered him affectionately, and when he arrived at the hotel, a crowd had gathered that blocked the wide thoroughfare, all animated with the spirit of welcome. It was a triumphal homecoming, an exhibition of popular love that was extraordinary, impressive, profound.

THE EVENING SERENADE.

As many people as could be packed between the reviewing stand near the Worth monument and Madison square opposite the Fifth Avenue hotel gathered at night to do honor to James G. Blaine. They were for the most part members of various trades and labor organizations of New York City and its vicinity assembled to welcome the statesman home. At 8:30 Chairman Austin E. Ford called the labor meeting to order from the grand stand, and after a few words of tribute to Mr. Blaine, he sent Cappa's band to the hotel balcony to serenade the distinguished statesman. The band played "Marching Through Georgia," the crowd adding their voices. "Home, Sweet Home" was then rendered, and in a few moments a storm of applause arose as the hero of the occasion made his appearance. Mr Blaine came from the hotel leaning on the arm of Hon. L. P. Morton and followed by ex-Senator Platt, Gen. Alger, Walker and Emmons Blaine and a committee of escort. They were aided through the crowd by the police to the stand. When Mr. Blaine appeared on the stand Mr. Ford again called the meeting to order and called on Mr. David Healy to read an address on behalf of the workingmen of New York to Mr. Blaine. The address was a strong endorsement of protectionism. Mr. Blaine was then introduced and after the applause had subsided said:

TO HIS FRIENDS.

It would be egotism to make this magnificent demonstration as personal to myself. It rather signifies the great popular interest in the question upon which I am supposed to have a consistent record and an earnest zeal [applause], and you have before you a contest in which that great issue is to be settled by the American people for perhaps an indefinite period, one way or the other. The year 1887 was prosperous, and the president at the close proposed a radical change in the industrial system which had produced that prosperity, and since that day there has been reversal and confusion in the commerce and manufactories of the United States. The question before the American people is whether he and his administration shall be sustained in that movement. [Voices "no, no."] Against him the Republican party has nominated the best of tickets. It has given you for president a man of experience, of heroic war record, of great purity of character, a man of great firmness, who can give this country an administration worthy of its best days [cheers], and you have associated with him a man whom I need not further describe to citizens of New York than to say his name is Levi P. Morton [cheers]—a man of most generous character, of the widest and most statesmanlike views on the great question. Of the gentlemen against them I would say nothing, but of the candidate for vice president I would say that in him I have a friend of many years standing, and I am a personal admirer of Judge Thurman. But I beg you to observe that in a critical period of this country George M. Dallas destroyed the protective tariff of 1842. When the senate convenes on the 4th of March next it will have thirty-two senators from the solid South, and unless you make a change, six Democratic senators from the North, and Mr. Thurman will be in a position to re-enact the roll of George M. Dallas forty-two years ago. The more able and amiable the man is, the worse will be his influence before the American people. I have been in England for several months, and have discovered a great diversity of opinion upon almost every subject. They are divided upon what you are pleased to call the Irish question, upon the continuance of the house of lords, and they are not absolutely unanimous in the support of the monarchy. But from one end of the kingdom to the other there is one unanimous concord of opinion, be they Tories, Whigs, Liberals, Conservatives or Radicals, and that is that the Hon. Grover Cleveland embodies in his person the free rrade for thirty-eight United States which they like. Now, I have no objection to their tight of opinion, and if I had it would amount to nothing. Nor do I intend to speak with disrespect of the English, for I have received at their hands courtesies which I would be but surly not to acknowledge before an American audience. But there is here a question of policy which is the prime one. I am glad this meeting is called in the name of the laboring people, because this question is from beginning to end a question of labor. If you will agree to live in a poor house and eat poor food and receive as your wages as little as the operatives in England receive we can produce as cheap goods as a Democratic administration wants to see. But it will be otherwise if you wish to better your condition, and if you want the industrial system of protected interests that prevail in this country now to be maintained. The savings of the wage-workers of England, Scotland and Ireland, as I said today to a Massachusetts gentleman, are not near as great as lie to-night in the savings banks of Massachusetts to the credit of the wageworkers of that small state, and if you turn the administration of this republic today into a free trade channel, you need not expect those great savings, for you will put our laboring men throughout the country into competition with the laboring man of Great Britain, and in the course of five or ten years you will make them as poor upon this side of the water as they are upon the other. I will not in this campaign stop to argue the question upon any other basis. I have no personality to indulge in; I have no sores to heal. I would rather have your cordial and heartfelt and sympathetic welcome than any office you care to bestow upon me, but in this canvass, in which I shall take greater or less part, I shall hold this question from the beginning to the end as a question that interests every man, woman and child in this country that depends upon daily labor for daily bread. [Applause] There is no need to make any laws to protect capital. Capital always takes care of itself and gets a full share, but there are laws that can degrade them, and the Republican party has stood for twenty-five years and it will stand, I believe, with the blessing of God and the will of the American people, twenty-five years more, upholding and maintaining the laboring man, for the government which takes care of the bone and sinew and working muscle of the land is taking care of the men who created the wealth in the country and who are, therefore, entitled to the patronage and protection of the government. [Applause.]

The crowd broke into a wild and tumultuous cheer as Mr. Blaine concluded, and taking the arm of Mr. Morton he walked back to the hotel. After the speech Mr. Blaine returned to the hotel, where an informal reception was held in his apartments. Among those present were Messrs. Elkins, Manley, Charles Emory Smith, Congressman McKinley and Gail Hamilton and other members of Mr. Blaine's family.

HUNG AFTER THREE YEARS.

Maxwell, the Murderer of Preller, Pays the Extreme Penalty of the Law. Incidents of a Double Execution.

Friday morning, August 10, dawned clear and cool, and as the first light of Maxwell's last day on earth entered his narrow cell it heightened the sickly pallor of his face, which had increased during the night. Shortly after day-break Maxwell turned to one of the deputies and said: "I wish that telegram would come."

"Do you expect a telegram?" was the response.

"I do, and I know it will bring me good news."

He lighted a fresh cigarette and sat down at the table, making a poor attempt to read. He was plainly ill at ease, and occasionally glanced furtively out through the gratings of the narrow window of the cell into the inner yard of the jail. A few minutes before 5 Maxwell performed his morning ablution and which are new from the skin out, the outer garments being of plain black with a neatly fitting Prince Albert coat. At 5:18 Father Tihan arrived and entered the cell, when he administered communion to the condemned. At the conclusion of the religious services in Maxwell's cell, like offices were accorded Henry Landgraf. Landgraf occupied biscot the greater portion of the night after 11:30, and appeared cool and collected. He was neatly attired, but his apparel was of coarser texture than that of the principal actor in the double execution. At 5:50 Maxwell and Landgraf sat down to their final meal. Each was served fried oysters, fried eggs, hot biscuits and pancakes, with jelly, bread, butter and coffee. Landgraf ate heartily, while Maxwell partook of the repast quite sparingly. All of his assumed indifference had departed, and his face was blanched, while a troubled, hunted look had taken possession of his keen eyes. He was evidently growing weaker and had lost all hope of staying the executioner's hand. Landgraf maintained the same old stolid look.

DONNED HIS FUNERAL CLOTHES,

MAXWELL'S LETTERS.

This morning Maxwell gave to the press the following address to the people of England:

To the People of England: My English countrymen will doubtless remember the great boasts that have now and at all times been made by the American people in regard to the fair and just way in which they treat all people. Satisfied that you are not acquainted with the unlawful, unjust and unfair way in which I have been treated, since you are accustomed in England to see justice administered impartially in courts, an examination of the records in my case will show that the prosecution resorted to every unfair means in their power, even to crime itself; for they procured a check to be forged, had the man arrested who presented it and placed him in jail. Afterward the prosecution placed him on the witness stand to testify. His evidence was a tissue of lies from one end to the other; in fact upon the witness stand he said he would lie as far as he considered necessary, and the prosecution said in open court that he had paid $50 for said services. This is one specimen of the boasted American justice. This is only one of the means used by the prosecution; and had I time I could give you numbers of them. The trial has been denounced as a travesty on and a miscarriage of justice by leading lawyers here. Proof that one of the jurors said he was going on the jury to convict was presented to the governor. The British government interfered and requested an inquiry, but was refused by Gov. Moorhouse on the ground that he had no right to do so, and as to the prejudiced juror the governor said the fact did not amount to anything. So I am made to suffer the penalty of the law without having a fair trial as guaranteed to every one by the state constitution. The prosecution stated in the papers that the governor ought to disregard the request of the British government on the ground that I was an Englishman and that the British government had not taken any notice of the United States' interference in the O'Donnell case tried at the C. C. C."

THE DEATH WARRANTS.

At 8:47 Sheriff Harrington entered Maxwell's cell, where he and Landgraf had been placed together, and announced that the final moment had arrived. Maxwell paled and pulled his fingers nervously. His was the first death warrant read, and he stood up and heard his doom calmly, though he was plainly growing weaker all the time. While his arms were being pinioned Maxwell bit his lower lip several times.

THE EXECUTION.

On reaching the scaffold the condemned ascended without assistance. Maxwell was placed under the noose next to the west. Father Tihan read prayers. Maxwell was then asked if he had anything to say, and in an almost inaudible tone responded, "No." Landgraf merely shook his head. The black caps were being drawn when Landgraf slipped backward, but promptly recovered. There was an awful look of despair on Maxwell's face as the cap hid it from view, and his knees showed weakness. The nooses were adjusted quickly, and at 8:56 the drop fell. Landgraf never moved nor did a muscle twitch. Not so with Maxwell. When he fell his breast heaved convulsively and his limbs were drawn upward, while the spectators were shocked by a stream of blood pouring down the right breast of his coat, which was afterward found to have been caused by a cut on the nose inflicted by the rope in some mysterious way. Landgraf was pronounced dead in eleven and one-half minutes. Maxwell's struggles continued for fourteen minutes, when he, too, was pronounced dead by the attending physicians.

HIS DYING STATEMENT.

Maxwell furnished a document which he called his dying statement, in which he reasserts his innocence of the willful killing of Charles Aurthur Preller, and then gives an epstome of the statement of the case published, closing with a bitter denunciation of those whom he asserts to have been instrumental in dragging him out of the highways of justice in the bypaths of mob law, and making his execution an infamy and a disgrace to the United States.

MAXWELL'S MURDER OF PRELLER.

The crime for which Hugh M. Brooks, alias Maxwell, paid the extreme penalty of the law was the murder of Charles Arthur Preller at the Southern hotel in St. Louis April 6, 1885. The acquaintance between the two men began in Liverpool, England, both being on their way to this country, and the two men became fast friends. Preller was last seen alive Sunday afternoon, April 6, in Maxwell's room, by a bell boy. Twice that day Maxwell purchased a large quantity of chloroform at a drug store near by, telling the druggist he was using it in an experiment. The next day Maxwell made a number of purchases at various places, spending money very freely, although before he had not appeared to have an abundance of cash. Among his purchases was a ticket to San Francisco. For several days prior to April 14 chambermaids in the hotel noticed an unpleasant odor coming from Room 144, and connected it with Maxwell's trunks, which had been left in the room securely locked and corded. On April 14 the smell became so pronounced that they were opened. Crammed into the larger trunk was a putrid body, shrunken and distorted, not a feature recognizable. Not until after the body had been taken to the morgue and several days of treatment given could it be decided whether it was the body of Maxwell or Preller. Finally, however, the remains were identified as those of the latter. On the breast of the body was a cross cut, and on the inside of the trunk a card bore the inscription, "So perish all traitors to the great cause." It was an easy matter to trace Maxwell. He sailed for New Zealand in the steamer Sydney as a steerage passenger. Detectives were close on his track, and when the steamer arrived in Auckland he was arrested and returned to St. Louis. His defense made at the trial was that the death of Preller was accidental, he having administered the chloroform preliminary to an operation he was about to perform. He had fled because he presumed he would not be permitted to testify in his own behalf. The most damaging testimony was that of the detective, Dingfelder, who had been a cell mate of Maxwell's, and had secured a confession of the crime.

LANDGRAF'S CRIME.

The crime for which Henry Landgraf suffered the death penalty was committed on the night of March 5, 1885. The victim was his sweetheart, Annie Tisch, a beautiful girl of less than eighteen years of age. Jealousy prompted the deed. On the day of the murder he took the girl out walking, with the revolver with which he killed her in his pocket. He suddenly turned and upraided her for keeping company with other men. She merely laughed, but with an oath he pulled out his revolver and shot her through the head. He was convicted and sentenced to be hanged April 29, 1887, but was respited until Aug. 20, 1888.

MINNESOTA EDITORS.

The Programme for the Annual Meeting This Year. The Excursion Over the Soo.

The programme of the twenty-first annual meeting of the Editors and Publishers' Association of Minnesota has been prepared by Joel P. Heatwole, the president, and given to H. P. Hall, chairman of the executive committee, who is having it printed for distribution to the members of the association. The programme contains the annoucement of the change of date from Aug. 29 to Sept. 6, on account of the fact that many county conventions would be held about the former date, which was only a week prior to the Republican state convention. The business session of the association with he held in Harmonia hall at 11:30 a. m., when the following subjects will be presented:

"Foreign Advertising and Advertising Agents," C. P. Carpenter, Farmington Tribune; "Home Advertising," H. J. Miller, Rock County Herald; "Ready Prints," E. F. Barrett, Stillwater Democrat; "Job Printing," D. Ramaley, St. Paul employing printer; "Cash and go-as-you-please subscriptions," H. P. Hall; "Gratuitious Advertising and Free Puffs," W. C. Whitman, Ortonville Herald-Star; "Editorial Excursions," James G. Hamlin, Blue Earth City Post; "Legal Advertising and County Printing," L. P. Hunt, Mankato Free Press; "Ethics," George N. Lamphere, Moorhead News; "Editorial Conventions," Elmer E. Adams, Fergus Falls Journal.

These subjects will be merely introduced by the persons named, and a general discussion is expected. Every member is expected to say something. In the evening the editors will assemble at the Exposition building, where a social session ending with a banquet will occur. There will be addresses by Bill Nye and others.

The committee on excursion report that they have secured a train of four elegant sleepers, with a dining car attached, on the Soo line, which will leave Minneapolis in the early afternoon of Sept. 7, for Sault Ste. Marie, where it will arrive in the afternoon of the next day, Sept. 8. After reception at Sault Ste. Marie the train will leave on the morning following for St. Paul and Minneapolis, reaching these points the succeeding day, Sep. 10, in time to take the afternoon and evening trains out into the state. Through the royal hospitality of the officials of the Soo road, the expense will be very reasonable. T. M. Newson should be immediately notified by those who intend to make the trip, as to the number going and whether with ladies.

O'Donavan Rossa was a witness before the immigration investigation committed at New York. He told what he knew about the sending of ex-convicts from British prisons. He was sentenced to prison for life in 1865, but upon his promising to go to America he was pardoned. He served six years. He said that the worst thieves and convicts of England were anxious to come to America. The governors of the prisons persuaded them to go. Only the worst are sent here.

A conspiracy to defeat the Greenway government has been unearthed in Manitoba. It is learned that letters have been sent to country members elected to support the government asking them to join the conspiracy and overthrow the government. It is claimed that Greenway and Martin had secured gigantic boodle out of the Northern Pacific deal, and other dirty things were said. It is the conviction that the Hudson Bay Railway company "pushers" are at the bottom of it. They have been openly declaring for some time that if the guarantee act were put in force things would be all right, but if not, then it was fight, and for this they were prepared.

The loss of life at the Chattanooga, Tenn., fire has been very great. In the excitement of the conflagration hundreds of citizens rushed into the buildings and endeavored to save the threatened goods. It seems that there was criminal carelessness in erecting the four-story structures, because they collapsed solely from the heat. One building fell in when fifty persons were inside. Three dead bodies had been recovered and it is feared the loss of life is considerably greater. The total loss is estimated at ten and four badly wounded.

The president has approved the act for two additional associate justices of the supreme court of Dakota; the act in regard to terms of the United States court at Salina, Kan., the act in regard to school and university lands in Wyoming; the act to restore the homestead of M. F. Vance of Colorado; the act in regard to marriages between white men and Indian women; the acts authorizing bridges as follows: Across the Tennessee river near Knoxville, Tenn.; across the Missouri river near Plattsmouth, Neb.; across the Oconee river in Laurens county, Georgia.

Advices from Rosebud Indian agency report a split among the reds at that place. The moral effect of the failure of Standing Rock will be to strengthen the Indians in their opposition to the treaty, but the break in the Rosebud Indians will offset Standing Rock, so that it is thought that Cheyenne, the next agency to be visited, will be readily secured. It is safe to say that the effectiveness of the Indian vigilance committee at Rosebud, appointed to kill the first Indian who signed the treaty, has been impaired by the recent action of the Indians at that place.

The trains from the south are heavily loaded with persons from the vicinity of the fever-stricken localities. Atlanta, Georgia, is full of refugees from Jacksonville and other points, but no evidences of fever has been found among them. The citizens of Jacksonville say there must at least be twenty cases in the hospital there. Atlanta is considered exempt from danger. Although there have been cases of fever there at different times it has been demonstrated that it will not spread, and hence there is no feeling of excitement.

Floyd Whiting, one of the Montana detectives, attempted to shoot Fred Fuller, proprietor of the Nicollet saloon, at Helena, while under the influence of liquor. Whiting was crazy drunk and went to the saloon to settle an old score with the bartender. Not finding him, he accused the proprietor of hiding him. He then asked for a glass of beer, and while Fuller was drawing it Whiting pulled his revolver and shot. Fuller knocked the weapon aside in the nick of time and the bullet buried itself in the bar.

Women Dentists.

Woman are becoming dentists, and the operator's chair is robbed of its terrors. Says a writer in the New York Mail and Express: "I had the pleasure of having a tooth filled by a girl dentist the other day. The word pleasure is used to some extent advisedly, for there were pleasant things about it. She was very pleasant to look at, with bown eyes and brown hair, for one thing. She was very pleasant spoken and she had small fingers that went easily in the mouth. She was a sympathetic creature, too, and had all manner of ingenious contrivances for making unpleasant processes as little unpleasant as possible. She had very tastfully furnished parlors for receiving unfortunates, and she didn't leave Puck or Judge or anything else oppressively funny about to remind them of their doom. There were fine pictures on the wall and some new books, there were art portieres and there was the girl dentist herself. She used to be a clerk for an importing house, I believe, writing the French and German letters for the firm. She clerked it till she satisfied herself there was no future in that, then she went to a dental college and now she is establishing herself in the city. She says she likes her business, and feels thoroughly at home in it, and her business, so far, seems to like her. It is her testimony that even in a dentist's chair a man can't resist the temptation to try to flirt, and that she has had big eyes enough made at her from over a big white napkin to shake any nerves not thoroughly steady. "And what do you do in such cases?" was the query. "Let him proceed till I get well started at work, and then he usually has something else to think of. A man can't flirt with a drill getting in its fine work in a sensitive cavity. But most of my patients are women and children," she concluded.

"There are not more than two or three women dentist in New York. There was only one year ago."

MARKETS.

CHICAGO.

No. 2 spring wheat, 82¼c.; No. 2 red, 86¼c; No. 2 corn, 45⅛c; No. 2 oats 25¼c.; No. 2 rye, 45½@46¼c; No. 2 barley, 55c; No. 1 flax seed, $1.11; prime timothy seed, $2. mess pork, per bbl., $13.90@13.95 lard per 100 lbs., $8.72½; short rib sides (loose), $8.15@8.20; dry-salted shoulders (boxed), $7.40@7.50; short clear sides (boxed), $8.90@9.25; sugars, cut, loaf, 8¾c; butter, creamery, 13½@17c; dairy, 13½@16c; eggs, 13½@14½c.

MINNEAPOLIS.

Wheat: No. 1 hard 85¼c; No. 1, Northern 83¼c; No. 2, Northern, 80¼c; Corn 40@43c. Oats, No. 2, white, 33¼c; No. 2, mixed, 31c; No. 3, white, 32c; rejected 27@30c. Barley 38@48c; Flax, $1.03@1.05 Mixed feed $16@18 per ton. Hay $6.50. Eggs, fresh 15c; Mutton, dressed 7@8½c. Potatoes, 40 per bu.; spring chickens per doz. $1.75@200; Wool, medium, 21 @ 27; coarse unwashed 17@19; Butter, creamery, 10@18c; dairy, 12@14c; grease butter 4@5c.

ST. PAUL.

Wheat, No. 1 hard, 86c; No. 1 Northern, 85c; No. 2 Northern. 82c. Corn, No. 2, 48c. Oats, No. 2, mixed, 30c No. 1, white, 32c No. 2, white, 31¼c, No. 3, 31½c. Millstuffs, Ground feed, $17; corn meal, unbolted, $17.25; Hay, No; 1, $6.50; No. 1 upland prairie $6.00@$6.50 timothy, $9.50; Flax Seed—$1.02; potatoes; per bu. 45c; eggs, 15½c.

MILWAUKEE.

Flour steady. Wheat closed firm; September, 81c; October, 81⅜c. Corn quiet; No. 3, 45¼c. Oats firm; No. 2, white, 37½c. Rye dull; No. 1, 48c. Barley lower; No. 2, 66c for old. Provisions lower. Pork—Cash and August, $13.95. Lard—Cash, $8.75; September, $8.77½. Butter—Choice firm; poor weak; dairy, 15@16c. Eggs, fresh, 14c. Cheese quiet; cheddars, 8@8½c. Receipts—Flour, 6,600bbls; wheat, 7,000 bu.; barley, 700 bu. Shipments—Flour, 21,500 bbls; wheat, 86,000 bu.

DULUTH.

Wheat, Cash 84¼c; August, 84c., September, 84⅝c.; October 84¼c; December, 84⅞c.

A subscriber sends us a goat in payment for a year's subscription. He will hereafter take charge of the rejected manuscripts, having a fondness for poems on spring and obituary notices exceeding ten miles. He has already devoured a long letter on the Mills bill, and is looking wistfully toward a poem entitled "To My Love."—Smithville (Ga.) News.

Moxie.

Old men use Moxie the year round to keep their nervous system strong enough to support the functions of their body, and mend up the break down of a long business life. The young city bloods to remove the effects from liquors and a night of dissipation. A tumbler full will break a recent intoxication in an hour, with no ill effects of stimulation.

"Yes," said the General, "our Indian allies were helpful, although their lack of knowledge of the English language frequently gave rise to embarrassing situations. I remember particularly at the battle of Tippo-Tibati an alarm was sounded, and I gave the order, 'To arms,' and every mother's son of them mistook my meaning and took to their legs."

A Modest, Sensitive Woman

often shrinks from consulting a physician about functional derangement, and prefers to suffer in silence. This may be a mistaken feeling, but it is one which is largely prevalent. To all such women we would say that one of the most skillful physicians of the day, who has had a vast experience in curing diseases peculiar to women, has prepared a remedy which is of inestimable aid to them. We refer to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This is the only remedy for woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case or money refunded. See guarantee printed on bottle wrapper.

Time.—"If your tooth aches so badly, dear," said a young wife, "why don't you have it pulled?"

"Yah—wow!"—shrieked the sufferer.

"John," putting her arms fondly around his neck, "if you are not willing to have it pulled out for your own sake, please have it pulled for mine."

Don't hawk, hawk, blow, spit, and disgust everybody with your offensive breath, but use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy and end it.

Duluth, Minn., is in the throes of a laborer's strike, and business is more or less paralyzed in consequences of the cessation of work on public improvement and the boisterous demonstrations that are daily taking place.

A sparrow, which bids fair to become famous if the glare of notoriety does not frighten it away, has built a nest on one of the trucks of a Delaware, Lackawanna and Western passenger car, and makes regular trips to points in New York State. At last accounts the bird was sitting on two eggs, and seemed to be undisturbed by the noise and confusion.

With groans and sighs, and dizzied eyes,
He seeks the couch and down he lies;
Nausea and faintness in him rise,
Brow-racking pains assail him.
Sick headache! But ere long comes ease,
His stomach settles into peace,
Within his head the throbbings cease—
Pierce's Pellets never fail him!

Nor will they fail anyone in such a dire predicament. To the dyspeptic, the billious, and the constipated, they are alike "a friend in need and a friend indeed."

Thomas Stanley, a gypsy, lies in the Greenbush (N. Y.) look-up for having sold his wife to his cousin, in West Troy, recently, for one dollar. It is stated the wife cheerfully acquiesced in the transaction, and that an agreement was signed by all the parties.

It is of interest to those contemplating a musical education, that the conservatory of music of Minneapolis, offers so many advantages to them as is set forth in their advertisement in another column.

Lexington, Miss., has three feminine residents who play an important part in keeping the town in communication with the rest of the world. One of the ladies aforesaid is postmistress, another express agent, and the third has charge of the telegraph office.

It is so Everywhere

E. B. Rail, druggist at Hiattsville, Kan., has this to write about Allen's Lung Balsam: "It is the best selling throat and lung remedy, and gives general satisfaction. I cheerfully recommend it." Buy the large $1.00 bottle for Lung Diseases.

Toby Smith, head sawyer in Vigars Bros.' saw mill at Port Arthur, Manitoba, was torn to pieces, being caught in the machinery and pushed against the saw.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria,

During a storm the barn on the farm of Henry Widger of Violn, Minn., was struck by lightning and consumed with its contents, including some thirty tons of hay and seven horses.

All Run Down

From the weakening effects of warm weather, by hard work, or from a longilliness, you need a good tonic and blood purifier. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives a good appetite, strengthens the whole system, purifies the blood, regulates the digestion.

It affords me much pleasure to recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. "My health two years ago was very poor. My friends thought I was going with consumption. I commenced using Hood's Sarsaparilla, took five bottles of it, and to-day I can do as hard a day's work as I ever could. It saved me from the grave and put me on my feet a sound, healthy man." WILL R. D. TRIBBEY, 144 East Main Street, Wiggonsville, Ohio.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.
100 Doses One Dollar.

SICK HEADACHE
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.
Positively cured by these Little Pills. They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side. TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.
Price 25 Cents.
CARTER MEDICINE CO., NEW YORK.
Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price.

IF ANY OF YOUR FAMILY are troubled with Cholera, Cramps or Bowel Complaint, give them PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER.
DO NOT FORGET
Perry Davis' Pain Killer
At this season of the year it is always well to keep it on hand.
Do not trifle with yourselves by testing untried remedies. Be sure you call for, and get the genuine PAIN-KILLER, as many worthless nostrums are attempted to be sold on the great reputation of this valuable medicine.
Directions accompany each bottle.
Price 25 cts., 50 cts. and $1 per bottle.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

For Baby's Skin.
THE LOVELIEST, WHITEST, CLEAREST, SOFTEST, purest skin, free from pimple, spot, or blemish, is produced by
CUTICURA SOAP.
It is absolutely pure, delicately medicated, exquisitely perfumed, and simply incomparable as an Infantile Skin Soap. If used from moment of birth, is sure to prevent every species of skin and scalp diseases. Sale greater than that of all other infantile skin soaps in the world combined. Sold throughout the civilized world.
POTTER DRUG & CHEMICAL CO., BOSTON, U. S. A.
Send for "How to Purify and Beautify the Skin."

The North Star Lung and Throat Balsam is a sure cure for Coughs and Colds.

Itching Piles.
SYMPTOMS—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in many cases removes the tumors. It is equally efficacious in curing all Skin Diseases. DR. SWAYNE & SON, Proprietors, Philadelphia. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT can be obtained of druggists. Sent by mail for 50 Cents.

CARBOLISALVE cures itchings and irritations of the Skin and Scalp, Poisons, Piles and Ulcers. Cures Burns and Scalds without a Scar. 25 and 50 cts. at Druggists.

How to Cure Skin & Scalp DISEASES with the CUTICURA REMEDIES.
THE MOST DISTRESSING FORMS OF SKIN and scalp diseases, with loss of hair, from infancy to old age, are speedily, economically and permanently cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES, when all other remedies and methods fail.
CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, and CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Beautifier, prepared from it, externally, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood Purifier, internally, cure every form of skin and blood disease, from pimples to scrofula.
Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c; SOAP, 25c; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by the POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CO., BOSTON, MASS.
Send for "How to Cure Skin Diseases."
Pimples, blackheads, chapped and oily skin prevented by CUTICURA SOAP.
Relief in one minute, for all pains and weakness, in CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER, the only pain-killing plaster. 25c.

Dyspepsia is the bane of the present generation. It is for its cure and its attendants, Sick Headache, Constipation and Piles, that have become so famous. They act speedily and gently on the digestive organs, giving them tone and vigor to assimilate food. No griping or nausea.
Tutt's Pills
Sold Everywhere.
Office, 44 Murray St., New York.

GOLD is worth $500 per lb. Pettit's Eye Salve is worth $1000, but is sold at 25 cents a box by dealers.

GUNS Fishing Tackle, Pocket Cutlery and General Sporting Goods. Send for Catalogue. CHAS. E. PROUTY & CO., 63-65 Washington St., Chicago.

$5 TO $8 A DAY. Samples worth $1.50 FREE. Lines not under the horse' feet. Write BREWSTER SAFETY REINHOLDER CO., Holly, Mich.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION

ST. PAUL SCHOOL FURNITURE CO., ST. PAUL, MINN.
School Furniture and School Supplies. Correspondence solicited from district officers, and those desiring an agency. Ask for Catalogue D.

PANTS Are worn just the same as ever the Big Boston, Minneapolis, is making a clearance sale of these useful articles, Cotton Worsteds, 60c.; best Jeans, $1; guaranteed all wools, $1.50; stylish Cassameres, $2.50, $3, $3.50 and $4. Fine all-wool Black Worsteds, $4.75. Send an order for a piece.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND
THE CELEBRATED NERVE TONIC.
A Word to the Nervous You are painfully aware that you have nerves? Then you are sick. A healthy boy has as many as you, but he doesn't know it. That is the difference between "sick" and "well."
Why don't you cure yourself? It is easy. Don't wait. Paine's Celery Compound will do it. Pay your druggist a dollar, and enjoy life once more. Thousands have. Why not you?
WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Proprietors, Burlington, Vt.

DWIGHT'S SALERATUS
TO MAKE
A DELICIOUS BISCUIT
ASK YOUR GROCER FOR
COW-BRAND SODA OR SALERATUS
AND TAKE NO OTHER.

S. E. OLSON & CO.'S
MAMMOTH WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DRY GOODS HOUSE,
213 AND 215 NICOLLET AVENUE, MINNEAPOLIS.
THE CHIEF BARGAIN HOUSE OF THE NORTHWEST.
Mail Orders receive our best attention. Shopping done through this department as advantageously as in person. Send for samples.

TOWER'S FISH BRAND TRADE MARK
None genuine unless stamped with the above TRADE MARK.
SLICKER Is The Best Waterproof Coat Ever Made.
Don't waste your money on a gum or rubber coat. The FISH BRAND SLICKER is absolutely water and wind proof, and will keep you dry in the hardest storm. Ask for the "FISH BRAND" SLICKER and take no other. If your storekeeper does not have the "FISH BRAND", send for descriptive catalogue to A. J. TOWER, 20 Simmons St., Boston, Mass.

NORTHWESTERN CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC,
608 1-2 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.
Fall term opens Sept. 3-4-5, 1888. The only first-class music school in the Northwest. The best teachers for all in every branch of musical study. Free classes of the greatest value. Pupils from 16 states and territories. Send for calendar. CHAS. H. MORSE, Director.

MARLIN REPEATING RIFLE New Model 1888 Just Out.
Uses 38 & 44 cal. Winchester cartridge. Works easier, is simpler, stronger, lighter, than any other. DON'T BUY TILL YOU SEE IT.
BALLARD GALLERY, HUNTING AND TARGET RIFLES. Send for Illustrated Catalogue.
MARLIN FIRE ARMS CO., Box 20 D, NEW HAVEN, CT.

This is "TIFFIN" the WELL BORING MACHINE!
Known as the best in use for boring wells from 5 to 44 inches in diameter.
It also drills rock.
THIS IS THE GREAT "OHIO!"
Tubular Well and Prospecting Machine, famous for succeeding where others have failed! Self cleaning! Drill drops 60 to 90 times a minute!
The "OHIO."
Catalogue FREE.
LOOMIS & NYMAN
TIFFIN, OHIO.

HUDSON CLOTHIER.
The finest, largest and only thoroughly complete stock of Clothing for Men, Boys and Youths' wear in the Northwest. No trash. Good, honest goods, and at figures beyond competition. Send to us for anything you need in Clothing, Furnishings, or Hats or Caps, and you will be astounded. We came to do the Clothing business of the Northwest, are doing it, and always will.
SO DEAL WITH US.
Rules for self-measurement furnished on application. Satisfaction guaranteed.
HEAD AND SHOULDERS OVER ALL!
J. L. HUDSON
CLOTHIER,
Corner Seventh and Robert Sts.,
Hotel Ryan Block, St. Paul, Minn.

Loans made on Life Insurance policies, D. C. McCoun 408 Lumber Exchange, Minneapolis, Minn.

GLEK—HARMLESS. Positive Cure for failing Manhood. Gives solid health. $1 bottle, by drug's. Glek Co., 33 N. State st, Chicago.

ALLEN'S IRON TONIC BITTERS
The most Elegant Blood Purifier, Liver Invigorator, Tonic and Appetizer known. The first Bitters containing Iron ever advertised in America. J. P. ALLEN, Druggist & Chemist, St. Paul, Minn.

DRAKE UNIVERSITY AND CALLANAN COLLEGE
Open next Session Sept 11th. Literary, Normal, Commercial, Musical, Art, Bible, Law and Medical Departments. 50 able Instructors; Facilities Superior; Expenses Low; Surroundings Pleasant. Address G. T. Carpenter, Chancellor, Des Moines, Ia.

BIG G
Cures in 1 TO 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture.
Mf'd only by the Evans Chemical Co. Cincinnati, Ohio.
I prescribe and fully endorse Big G as the only specific for the certain cure of this disease.
G. H. INGRAHAM, M. D., Amsterdam, N. Y.
We have sold Big G for many years, and it has given the best of satisfaction.
D. R. DYCHE & CO., Chicago, Ill.
Trade Mark $1.00. Sold by Druggists.

JONES HE PAYS the FREIGHT
5 Ton Wagon Scales, Iron Levers, Steel Bearings, Brass Tare Beam and Beam Box for $60.
Every size Scale. For free price list mention this paper and address JONES OF BINGHAMTON, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

RUSSIA SALVE
FOR POISONOUS ERUPTIONS
SORE JOINTS, CORNS.

The BUYERS' GUIDE is issued March and Sept., each year. It is an encyclopedia of useful information for all who purchase the luxuries or the necessities of life. We can clothe you and furnish you with all the necessary and unnecessary appliances to ride, walk, dance, sleep, eat, fish, hunt, work, go to church, or stay at home, and in various sizes, styles and quantities. Just figure out what is required to do all these things COMFORTABLY, and you can make a fair estimate of the value of the BUYERS' GUIDE, which will be sent upon receipt of 10 cents to pay postage.
MONTGOMERY WARD & CO.
111-114 Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

WITH THEE.

If I could know that after all
These heavy bonds have ceased to thrall,
We whom in life the fates divide—
Should sweetly slumber side by side—
That one green spray would drop its dew
Softly alike above us two,
All would be well; for I should be
At last, dear loving heart with thee!

How sweet to know this dust of ours,
Mingling, with feed the self-same flowers—
The scent of leaves, the song bird's tone
At once across our rest be blown,—
One breadth of sun, one sheet of rain
Make green the earth above us twain;
Ah, sweet and strange, for I should be,
At last, dear tender heart, with thee.

But half the earth may intervene
Thy place of rest and mine between—
And leagues of land and wastes of waves
May stretch and toss between our graves.
Thy bed with summer light be warm,
While snow drifts heap, in wind and storm,
My pillow, whose one thorn will be,
Beloved, that I am not with thee.

But if there be a blissful sphere
Where homesick souls, divided here,
And wandering wide in useless quest,
Shall find their longed for haven of rest,
If in that higher, happier birth
We meet the joys we missed on earth,
All will be well, for I shall be,
At last, dear loving heart, with thee.

ELIZABETH AKERS ALLEN.

A STORY OF THE WAR.

Coffee had just been served and the room was filled with smoke and that genial afterglow of pleasant, reminiscent talk that always follows a good dinner, and especially a dinner where old friends have met, old friendships been revived and old stories told. These men had been comrades in war and served under the same flag, held the same political opinions and suffered the same losses. All but one had told his story, when our host turned towards him and said:

"Well, Harrison, we are waiting for your story."

Harrison smiled deprecatingly, gazed into the fire, and then began the following in his soft, Southern drawl:

Well, my story happened when we were in Georgia, just outside of Marietta, and our mess consisted of six men—two Georgians, one Alabamian, a Virginian, myself and a Creole with a beautiful face and a tenor voice that would charm the birds from the trees, named, singularly enough, Orphee. We became a very tuneful set under his inspiration, and exchanged musical information with much generosity. Our favorite air was that famous camp song, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground." You should have heard us sing it. Orphee's tenor, my baritone, and the three other fellows chiming in softly, until the very pine trees stopped whispering to listen, and the fire burned softly in admiration, and war somehow did not seem so hard and cruel. Well, one dark night we were sitting around the fire, discussing with unwearied enthusiasm the prospects of the cause, when we heard irregular footsteps outside, and paused in our talk to listen.

"You can turn in here until further orders," said our Lieutenant's cheery voice, and a minute afterwards a short thick-set man entered. He made an apologetic little bow, shook himself like a dog, and, taking off his large wideawake, disclosed a dark, square face, with shy, dark eyes, blue-black hair, and a wide, firm mouth. He smiled tenderly, giving an air of great sweetness to an otherwise sombre face. He sat down on a blanket, Turkish fashion, quietly hoped he was not disturbing us, and then dropped his eyes meditatively on the ground. Silence reigned. We were too disconsolate to be polite, and so listened uneasily to the slow, indefinite stirrings of the wind through the trees, when suddenly a new sound arose, as of stealthy, uncertain footsteps coming nearer and nearer. The newcomer pricked up his ears, and his face wore an expression almost approaching guilt. "A spy," was my first illogical conclusion, as I rose to my feet and waited expectantly.

The flap of the tent stirred slightly, cautiously; the wind rose and swept the darkened landscape; the rain poured down with a rush, as if to give a tragic significance to what was about to happen, for—something did happen—the flap was suddenly pushed aside, and a goat walked in and went straight to the stranger, who received her with an indescribable tenderness of look and gesture. "A rum go," said the Virginian under his breath.

We all agreed, but contented ourselves with staring at the strange spectacle of a man and a goat fondling each other with uncouth marks of affection. After a while we resumed our old lazy positions and silently awaited further developments. The little man signed the goat to a remote spot, where she lay down, and then, turning towards us, said as if taking up an unrepressed thought: "You see, boys, I could not help it if Nannie would follow me. I have been good to her, and she remembers it. I had to leave home secretly to escape her, and all through the journey I felt like a scoundrel, and now—well, here she is."

He stopped abruptly without waiting for comment, and lay down with a short good night. I lay awake several hours after the others, wondering idly as to the probably tie which bound the new-comer to the goat, but arrived at no solution. From that night Parsons and his goat became a subject of never ending speculation to the mess. He was very quiet and unobtrusive, never resenting, although contriving to evade, impertinent questions, and bearing everything with a good nature amounting to stupidity. As for the goat, she became the hapless butt of the whole division. We called her derisively "Miss Anna," treating her with an amount of mock consideration that made Parsons' eyes fairly glisten with appreciation. The second night after their arrival we began to sing, as usual, when the Virginian rose, and in a speech, the delicate humor of which I shall not attempt to reproduce, begged that "Miss Anna's rest should not be broken by our rude chanting

I shall never forget the broken, tender, deprecating little reply that came from Parsons, and how we consented at last to sing. His face was so rapt as he sat beating time with his forefinger and occasionally quavering out an effective "Dying To-night, Dying To-night," we sang as if our very life blood was ebbing away, that I began to realize the absolute cowardice of ridiculing a perfectly innocent, unconscious man. I began to try and shield him from the funmakers, and was finally joined by Orphee, who became and eloquent partisan. As for Parsons, he grew almost to worship the handsome, sweet-voiced ad.

One luckless afternoon, Parsons, Orphee and I strolled off together, leaving "Miss Anna" to the mercies of our mess; but tormented by some vague presentment of evil, I induced my companions to return a little earlier than they intended. As we neared the tent my ear caught the sound of derision that came first from our Virginian, and were then finally caught up by the others and then ended in peal after peal of laughter. We pushed eagerly in. Alas! "Miss Anna," decked out in the most ridiculous toggery, had been tied between four stakes driven into the ground and the men were engaged in pricking her with pine burrs until the poor animal fairly writhed with agony. In a minute we had freed her and Parsons held the poor bleeding creature close to his breast. His small, square figure seemed to rise and dilate with a certain sense of superior power, as he turned his blanched face and blazing eyes upon the crowd.

"You call yourselves gentlemen," he said harshly, "you who have tortured a poor, dumb, defenseless creature left in your care. Thank God, my meaning of the word is different! You have no excuse. You are all supposed to be men and honorable men, men who are fighting for the rights of their country, and yet you can amuse yourself with such senseless cruelty as you have practiced this afternoon. You have branded yourselves as cowards and liars, for"—and here his voice broke suddenly—"I trusted you."

There was an ominous, threatening stir in the little tent, and several men stepped out towards the speaker, picturesque in his very unpicturesqueness, whose grotesque figure stood out sharply against the bit of landscape showing through the opening in the tent. But his face awed them back. The goat turned and moaned pitifully, rubbing his nose against Parson's coat with mute insistence. His face softened wonderfully, he seemed to forget the men, his anger, everything, and he whispered to her in soft, caressing tones.

"You have followed me through thick and thin, Miss Anna. When the overflow came and we were starving, it was you who struggled back to us through the water, and it was your milk that kept us alive. Everything then depended on your strength. We called our baby after you and when the poor little one died it cut me cruelly, cruelly. I cannot forgive this day's work. Be brave, Miss Anna, be brave," and putting his cheek on Miss Anna's head the tears fairly rolled out of his eyes.

He stopped a minute, drawing in his breath in short, quick little sobs and threw out both hands with a forlorn gesture of abandonment.

"Oh! great God! I was so lonely when wife and babies all were dead, and I loved Miss Anna then; I love her now as the one relic left me of that beautiful, vanished past. Then the war came and I tried to leave you, thinking it would be best, but you followed me to be ridiculed, despised and even tortured. All the conduct of the past week breaks over me and I see what a blind fool I have been."

"Parsons, you're to go on picket duty to-night, and you had better start now," called in the voice of our lieutenant. The men, now thoroughly ashamed of themselves, came nearer and were about to offer some heartfelt words of apology, but Parsons turned away, and delivering "Miss Anna" over to Orphee, said pleadingly:

"If anything should happen to me, you will take care of her?"

Orphee's eyes filled with tears as he pressed the extended hand.

Without another word or look Parsons strode out into the dark.

"We're brutes, cowardly brutes!" said our Virginian, disgustedly.

"I would rather face a million Yankees than hear that man's story told in that voice again," said another.

That night was a weary one. We could not forget the solemn figure, the dark, patient face, the broken, harsh, tender voice, and the pines above the river far away seemed to mingle their grief at our cowardice and brutality. Meanwhile "Miss Anna" slept peacefully on the best blanket of the mess, while we lay there sleepless, thoughtful, unhappy, even the greater issue of the war momentarily forgotten.

With the dawn came action. The Yankees were upon us, and we fought like wildcats. As evening came on the fight was suspended, and when our mess met everybody was there, "Miss Anna" included, except Parsons. We had made up a scheme to beg his forgiveness and to swear to be gentlemen, at least. Each of us had a separate speech of apology to make expressive of shame and contrition. When night settled down and Parsons did not appear we grew anxious, and sat silently around, not daring to breathe the great fear uppermost in our minds. "Miss Anna," too, walked up and down uneasily, sniffing the air and rubbing her nose against any convenient shoulder. As we sat thus our lieutenant called in to me:

"Harrison, step here a minute."

I arose and went out a little unsteadily.

"Parsons was hurt last night on guard, and has asked to see you. Go now; there isn't much time I'm afraid."

He turned to lead the way.

"I may tell them?" I said.

"No use,' he answered shortly, as Orphee's stricken face appeared in the doorway.

Well, I followed him to the rude hut selected for our hospital. It was lighted by torches, and the surgeons were busy with the men who had fallen in the day's fight. In the farthest corner of the room lay Parsons. I knelt down by him and took his hand. He smiled faintly, reassuringly and whispered:

"It's not so hard—it was so quick, you know—just a flash, a burn, and then a dull pain. Only I lay there so long, Harrison, that I thought everything very clearly out, and I'm sorry. How could those fellows know! I am afraid I lost my temper. I'm such a devil of a fellow when I lose my temper," he said pathetically, "and Harrison, I beg pardon, old fellow—but, Miss Anna!"

His eyes apologized amply for this inquiry, and I went in search of the men and their charge.

They followed me eagerly, and we unconsciously fell into a procession and moved through the door with "Miss Anna" in our midst. It must have been a strange sight, a half-dozen men and a goat marching solemnly up the aisle of the rude cabin, but to the credit of human nature, be it said, nobody laughed or seemed to observe the humorous side of the situation.

"Miss Anna!"

The voice broke like a sob across the stillness, and the faithful friend pressed close to her master's side. The strong men who had faced death so unflinchingly all day quivered and shrank before this new phrase. Orphee looked longingly into the dying face as the white lips murmured of bygone days, of baby hands and tender, wifely kisses.

"Miss Anna," the voice began again, weakly, "the boys all know and love her," and then suddenly recollecting, he turned his eyes on the manly bearded face around him, and noted their moist eyes, then with the old frank smile of appreciation he muttered: "Dying to-night, dying to-night. Sing it, Orphee."

The river rushed and sang, the wind sighed airily through the sorrowful pines, but distinct and clear rose the voice of Orphee, that sweet high tenor, thrilling with tears and pathos. It quivered and fell as it reached the chorus, and the "dying to-night" was sobbed out on his knees as he held the poor, cold hands close to his breast. The wounded men turned on the rough floor, the surgeons desisted from their work, and one little fellow, his breast shot to pieces, crossed himself involuntarily, stirred by the sorrowful sweetness.

Again Parsons spoke:

"Be good, boys, to 'Miss Anna.' No better, truer sweetheart could you find. Say with me now, God bless 'Miss Anna.'"

And we said it with him.

"Amen," he answered solemnly, and with a spasm of pain he was lying there quite still, smiling tenderly as of old, with "Miss Anna" close to his breast.

"And 'Miss Anna?'" asked the host.

"Was shot down the next morning in the first charge."

There was silence for a few minutes, and then Harrison raised his glass and looked wistfully around. In an instant the glasses were refilled, and with reverently bowed heads and hushed tones the whole room drank to the memory of "Miss Anna."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Fan's History in Brief.

Kan Si was the first lady who carried a fan. She lived in ages which are past and for the most part forgotten, and she was the daughter of a Chinese mandarin. Whoever saw a mandarin, even on a tea chest, without his fan? In China and Japan to this day every one has a fan; and there are fans of all sorts for everybody. The Japanese waves his fan at you when he meets you by way of greeting, and the beggar who solicits for alms has the exceedingly small coin "made on purpose" for charity presented to him on the tip of the fan. In ancient times, among Greeks and Romans, fans seem to have been enormous; they were generally made of feathers, and carried by slaves over the heads of their masters and mistresses, to protect them from the sun, or wave about before them to stir the air.

Catherine de Medici carried the first folding fan ever seen in France, and in the time of Louis XIV the fan was a gorgeous thing, often covered with jewels, and worth a small fortune. In England they were the fashion in the time of Henry VIII. A fan set in diamonds was once given to Queen Elizabeth upon New Year's day. The Mexican feather fans which Cortez had from Montezuma were marvels of beauty; and in Spain a large black fan is the favorite. It is said that the use of a fan is as carefully taught in that country as any other branch of education, and that by a well know code of signal a Spanish lady can carry on a long conversation with anyone, especially an admirer. The Japanese criminal of rank is politely executed by means of a fan. On being sentenced to death he is presented with a fan, which he must receive with a low bow, and, as he bows, presto! the executioneer draws his sword and cuts his head off. In fact, there is a fan for every occasion in Japan.

American and German Universities.

The average age of American college students at graduation is certainly not greater than that of the German student in leaving his university. The American student is, however, not only a better educated man, in the best sense of the word, than the German student at a corresponding age, but the average American college graduate, who has not yet entered upon any professional study whatever, either in law, medicine, theology or science, but has spent three years at an academy of the grade of Andover, Exeter or Easthampton, and four years at any of the leading colleges of New England, is, by any fair test to be instituted by a committee of British or European educational experts, a better educated man than the average German student who has completed both his gymnasium and university studies.—Rev. Henry Loomis in American Magazine.

BETTY'S MISTAKE.

Miss Campion was a little restless. She had dressed for dinner some time previously and now moved backwards and forwards from her post of observation to consult the little Swiss clock hanging over the writing table—for her eyes were not as good as they had been.

There were few people living who were dear to her, and of these she was expecting this evening the two whom she loved best in the world—her goddaughter and namesake, Betty Carew, and Colin Campion, her nephew.

She had a definite object in view in bringing these young people together. A few weeks before she had an attack of bronchitis, and this illness had suggested to her the advisability of making her will. When she began to consider how she should divide her property between Betty and Colin her heart seemed torn asunder. She could not calmly contemplate her old lace and china and all her favorite personal possessions going out of the family, for she wanted Betty to have them. Colin must of course have the little estate, but then too he must have the money to keep it up, for she did not wish Forde to be neglected after her death.

At length an idea occurred to her which, if carried out, would obviate all difficulties. Why should not Colin and Betty marry and share her fortune equally, without any troublesome division of it? With this thought in her mind Miss Campion had invited them to Forde, and was now awaiting Betty's arrival with some nervousness.

Her nervousness increased when she had welcomed her goddaughter and brought her into the drawing room—for it was necessary that she should make Betty understand how desirable a husband Colin would be without raising any suspicion in her mind.

"You are very tired, dear," she said, hastening to pour out a cup of tea with trembling fingers. "I shall never become reconciled to trains—they are noisy and dusty. It is a pity we are in such a hurry always, nowadays. They managed better in the last century, when journeys were made in a leisurely manner by coach."

"If we were eighteen century ladies, god-mother, I should be at the rectory at this moment—for the journey from Dovenshire would have been impossible by coach. So I am glad that we were not born a hundred years ago."

"If you put it that way, dear, so am I. I hope this visit will be pleasanter than usual," she added, nervously. "My nephew, Colin, is coming to-night; he is going to stay for some time."

"He is a doctor in London, isn't he?" I have heard you speak of him."

"I dare say. He has bought a practice there," answered Miss Campion. "He is very clever in his profession, and so tender and so kind! It is quite beautiful to see him with children. But he ought to marry; there is always a prejudice in favor of married doctors."

"You had better tell him so," said Betty, with a smile.

"I mean to do so; and I think he will be settled before long; said the old lady nodding her head mysteriously.

"Oh, if he is already in love, he will not need your advice, godmother!"

"But he is not in love, my dear," returned Miss Campion hastily. "You must not think Colin is a foolish, sentimental young man. Indeed he is considered rather cold in society; and he is as proud as you are, Betty."

"Will he marry if he is not in love?" asked Betty, raising her eyebrows slightly.

"Oh, no, my dear, of course not!"

"Then you think he will obediently fall in love when you tell him that he ought to marry? He must have his emotions under admirable control!"

"He would not fall in love with anyone," said Miss Campion, with only a vague understanding of Betty's sarcasm; "but he cannot fail to see what a sweet girl—"

"I see," interrupted Betty quietly—"you are saving him a great deal of unnecessary trouble in suggesting whom as well as when he should marry."

"Colin would not marry any girl whom he could not like and respect,' said Miss Campion, a little anxiously.

"Oh, no? But he is not sentimental," suggested Betty. "The girl he marries will be a happy woman!"

"She will, indeed," agreed her godmother. "I am so glad that you appreciate Colin."

Soon after Betty had left the drawing room to dress for dinner Mr. Campion arrived. When the first greeting were over, his aunt remarked, tentatively:

"I have asked Betty Carew to stay with me while you are here, Colin. Colin. You don't know Betty?"

"No," said Colin.

"She is a very sweet girl," said Miss Campion, nervously.

"Is she?"

"A very sweet girl. Do you know, Colin, I have thought lately that you ought to marry? Married doctors are always the most successful."

"And you think Miss Betty would make a good doctor's wife?" suppressing a smile at his aunt's transparent plot.

"She is very dear to me, Colin; I should like Betty to be mistress here when I die," she returned wistfully.

Colin kissed her and said gently.

"I should like to please you in all things, Aunt Betty, but I must reserve the right of choosing my own wife. I hold so antiquated views about marriage—among the rest, that a man should love his wife. Moreover, there is the chance that Miss Carew would not be overcome by my many and undoubted charms. But we will let that pass."

"I won't say any more about it," said Miss Campion, with a sigh; "but when you know her you will understand how happy she will make some one some day."

At dinner Colin sat opposite to Betty, and, as he watched her beautiful, tender face, he was quite prepared to endorse his aunt's opinion of her goddaughter, though Betty was anything but kind to him.

"Don't you think Colin is very much like the painting of my grandfather in the drawing room, Betty?" asked Miss Campion.

"Do you mean that very handsome soldier hanging between the windows?" asked Betty, regarding Colin critically. "Oh, no, godmother; I cannot see the faintest resemblance."

Miss Campion hastily changed the subject, to spare her nephew's feeling's, though Conlin was inwardly delighted at Betty's frankness—the more so because he was undoubtedly good-looking.

Presently another appeal was made to Betty by the fond aunt.

"Do you know, dear, Colin was placed first in every examination he went in for when he was walking the hospitals?"

"Really?" said Betty incredulously, raising to Colin the frankest, most innocent of eyes. "I thought clever people became doctors sometimes?"

For a moment Colin suspected that she was trying to snub him, but Miss Campion attributed Betty's rudeness to fatigue, and sent her off to bed very soon after dinner.

* * * * * * * *

During the next few days Betty found numberless opportunities of slighting Colin, but she was so gentle and affectionate to her godmother that he retained his first opinion as to her sweetness of character. He accepted her slights with so much good temper and received his aunt's praises with such genuine amusement that Betty was at last compelled to confess to herself that her estimate of him had been altogether wrong. She felt that she could not respect him very much, for a man who would marry any girl for expediency's sake was not worthy of much honor; but she would be more polite to him, as his conduct would not in any way affect her.

Colin was very grateful for this change in her attitude towards him, and a friendship sprung up between them which on his side deepened into love. Of her feelings he could guess little. She was invarably sweet and frank; but the fear of losing her friendship by attempting to gain her love for some time prevented him from putting his fate into her hands. On the last day of her visit the longing of his heart overcame this fear, and he poured out all his soul to her, not noticing that her face was hardening at his words.

"Tell me, Betty! Give me one word of hope! Have I any chance?" he pleaded.

She turned towards him then, her face white and stern, her mouth wearing a faint, bitter smile.

"How well you do it!" she said in a harsh voice.

"Do it? What do you mean?" he asked, his voice changing too. "Don't you understand? I love you, Betty!"

"Hush!" she interrupted, harshly. "That is quite enough. No, I can give you no hope; you have no chance. Never speak to me of this again!"—and, rising from her garden chair, she went into the house and up to her own room.

This was what it all meant then! How blind she had been! She was the "sweet girl" whom Miss Campion thought a suitable wife for Colin. She had been invited here in order that Colin might see if she would "do." How grateful she ought to feel!

She went down stairs presently, feeling glad that this was her last day at Forde. She found Miss Campion sitting alone in the drawing room, looking a little displeased.

"I am so cross, my dear," said the old lady, drawing Betty to a seat by her side. "Colin has ridden over to the Ladbrokes for dinner. It was very thoughtless of him not to remember that this was your last evening."

"It does not matter, godmother," said Betty, with gentle coldness. "I would rather spend it alone with you."

"Would you dear? I thought you and Colin had got on more comfortably lately."

"It was only a surface agreement," answered Betty rather proudly. "We are too entirely opposed in character to be really friends."

"You will hardly believe it, Betty, but I had planned a match between you two. I thought you were so well suited to each other; and it would have been so nice for me to think of your living here together after my death!"

"And you spoke to him about it?" questioned Betty, without raising her eyes.

"Yes; on the evening you came; told him what I wished. But I was to meet the fate of all match-makers, you see," she added, sighing. "Colin said he would never marry unless he were in love—that he must reserve to himself the right of choosing his wife. And, as you say, dear, you and he were very far from falling in love."

"Did he say that?" asked Betty, eagerly. "Wouldn't he agree to what you wished? Then I have wronged him terribly; he is ever so much nicer than I thought!"

"You thought?" questioned Miss Campion, slowly. "Ah, I remember now I told you that I was going to speak to him, and you belied that he would marry anyone I suggested! How foolish and wrong I have been! You might have liked him if you had not been so prejudiced beforehand, and everything might have been different!"

"Do not grieve, godmother," said Betty, gently. "If we have not been friends, it is quite my own fault. I had no right to judge him before I knew him."

But in spite of her brave words, her heart sank strangely. She knew that she would have accepted Colin's love had she understood what he was offering her—for her belief in his unworthiness, though it had destroyed her trust in him, had not been strong enough to kill her love.

And now her life would be one long sorrow for that mistake. Colin would never speak to her of his love again—had she not peremptorily forbidden him? He had gone away now to avoid her, and after to-morrow she would never see him again. But at any rate she would see him once more, and then—Oh, surely he would see that she was sorry for having misjudged him so!

But Colin remained at the Ladbrokes for the night, and had not returned to Forde when she left it the next morning for home.

Betty had been right when she assumed that Colin had gone away on the previous afternoon to avoid her Her harsh rejection of his proposal had roused his anger, and he felt too hurt to bid her good-bye. But on his return to London his anger grew less as time passed on, though his love for Betty did not diminish. As his thoughts dwelt on her so constantly he began to seek for some reason for her unkindness; and the more he considered the matter the more inexplicable did her conduct appear. Her harshness and anger the day that he proposed to her were so at variance with her character that he at last concluded that some misunderstanding must exist in her mind which he ought to explain away.

This idea led him to make a journey to Devonshire a few days later, though his hopes of winning Betty's love were small.

He walked over to the rectory on the morning after his arrival; and was shown into the drawing room by a neat maid servant, who told him that Betty would be there in a few minutes, as she said she could be easily sent for to the church, whither she had gone to practice. Colin, however, decided to go himself, and had no difficulty in finding the sacred edifice, which was close at hand.

He seated himself just inside the door, struck by the beauty of the picture before him. The old church was cool and dim and still, the chancel alone glorified by the sunlight, which glinted through colored windows, while the whole building was filled with the low, plaintive notes of the organ.

Colin sat down near the door and waited patiently till Betty should come. He heard her dismiss the little boy with a kind word of thanks for his services—saw her shut and lock the organ, and then he waited in almost trembling expectancy while she came slowly down the centre aisle.

"Betty!" he said softly, rising as he spoke.

"Dr. Campion!"

"You are surprised to see me here." he said gently, walking out by her side.

The sun shone down hotly on her as she leaned against the stonework of the doorway, revealing to Colin how thin and pale she had become, and how sad were her eyes and lips.

"You have been ill!" he said, looking down at her anxiously.

"Oh, no; I am perfectly well—unusually well, indeed!" she answered hastily, nervously fingering the flowers in her belt.

"You are surprised to see me here, seeing how we parted," he said, eyeing her intently. "We did not even say good-bye."

"Have you come to wish me good-bye now?" she asked, trying to smile.

"No, I have come to ask you why you were so angry that afternoon. You treated my proposal as if I had intended it as insult; you spoke to me as if I were acting a part! I don't think I quite deserved it, Betty—from you!"

"I—it was a mistake," she faltered. "I thought you were acting; I did not believe in your love. I—I am very sorry."

"Betty," he said, taking her hands gently in his, "if you had believed in my love would your answer have been different?"

"I—I think it might have been:"

"Dear, do you believe in it now? Can you trust me now?"

"Yes!" she said, looking up at him for the first time.

Dogs for the Red Men.

The Indians at Buffalo Bill's Wild West are eating more dogs since their return from England than before. As they become more civilized they grow fonder of dog, apparently. It was the custom previously to have dog feasts only upon special occasions, but it is noticed that their appetite for canine delicacy has increased enormously since they were brought into contact with royalty on the other side, and Col. Cody and Nate Salsbury find it exceedingly difficult to corral enough material on Staten Island to satisfy the demand of their red brothers. Red Shirt, the fighting Warrior of the Sioux, is particularly voracious. He insists on devouring a dainty poodle all by himself, at which some of his braves are inclined to complain. The squaws knock out the brains of the animals, cook the food and furnish the concomitants, receiving for reward the liver, which they fry and eat with astonishing satisfaction. Buffalo Bill has sent out some of his scouts to capture all the dogs they can find, regardless of breed, or previous condition of servitude, and as they can purchase them more economically than beef, it makes a considerable saving to the show. During the past ten days the crowds at Erastina have been enormous.—N. Y. World.

A Case of Magnetic Power.

A physican writing for The Medical Reporter gives an account of a peculiar case of magnete power—if it may be thus termed—which came under his notice. The phenomenon is a pretty little girl 3½ years old, who amused herself by hanging spoons to the tips of her fingers, where they "stick" as if glued; and she can carry them around the room thus suspended. The child is called a "human magnet" by believers in magnetic rubbing, and a "medium" by the spiritualists. She is a delicate, sickly child, and her singular power is probably owing to some morbid state as yet unexplained by physical science.—Demorest's Monthly.

John Morgan's Slayer.

Cincinnati Special to Pittsburg Commercial.

On the banks of the Licking River, just south of the outskirts of Newport, in a little red shantyboat, live Robert Fry and his wife. For more than two years they have dwelt in this river-home in the most squalid poverty. Their only companion is a little black pup with four white feet. They manage to subsist upon table scraps gathered during the day by Mrs. Fry. The latter is a horrible-looking creature, with short, shaggy, black hair, which hangs in masses around her neck and shoulders. Little black eyes, set far back in her head, and a sharp, protruding chin and toothless mouth, give her the appearance of one of the witches in Shakespeare's "Macbeth."

Nine months out of twelve she runs barefooted, and she is never without a pipe in her mouth. In personal appearance the man is much more attractive than his wife. His hair is white as snow and stands in a dishevelled mass all over his head, ears and neck. It is kept back from his ears by a red bandanna kerchief. Under his chin and around his neck is a heavy muffler of coarse white hair.

And this man is none other than the slayer of Gen. John A Morgan, the great Confederate cavalryman. At Greenville, Tenn., on the 4th of September, 1864, he fired the shot that ended the career of the famous rebel guerilla—the man who, on his Northern raid, terrorized the residents of Southern Ohio and Indiana. The story of Morgan's death is best told in old man Fry's own words:

"I was worth almost $75,000 when the war broke out," he said. "Born and raised in the North, my heart was with the Union and I joined Capt. Fiegle's company of sharpshooters. We were camped fifteen miles from Greenville, when one night shortly after 12 o'clock a young lady, mounted on a thoroughbred horse, dashed into camp and revealed to us the hiding place of Gen. John Morgan. She said that he was at the mansion of Mrs. Williams, where he was entertained in royal style. The young lady turned out to be Mrs. William's daughter-in-law. She was a stanch Union Woman. She volunteered to lead us to the place, and lead us she did. A company of picked men was made up and it was still dark when we left for Greenville. Arriving in sight of the house where Morgan was stopping, the young lady pointed it out to us and then for safety's sake she started back to our camp, for she knew she never would be received at the Williams house again. We surrounded the Williams mansion. Morgan got words that we had discovered his whereabouts and endeavored to make his escape through a little garden in the rear of the premises. 'That's a woman, said the Lieutenant, 'don't shoot.' 'Damn the woman,' said I, and I raised my rifle and banged away. The object fell dead, and when we got up close to it we found it to be Gen. Morgan. He was in his shirt sleeves. My bullet had passed through his heart. One of the men picked up the body tossed it across his saddle and carried it to our camp. It was afterwards turned over to the Confederates."

A Bit of Revenge.

From the Mobile Register.

A story comes from Brewton, Ala., which may be read with interest and profit. A gentleman seeking a residence, found one just suited to his taste in all but the inside ornamentation of the house, but being a gentleman of means as well as taste, he accepted the house and turned it over to the upholsterer for renovation. The most elaborate inside decorations were soon made by the skillful painters, the walls papered in the highest style of art, and in perfect unison with the furnishings. The papering was a subject of pleasant congratulations from the gentleman's guests, and the landlord, hearing of the improvements, concluded it would be a good time to exact "rack rent." He had several offers to rent the house, so he pulled down on the tenant for a big raise of money. The tenant could not stand that. He concluded to leave, but kick as he left. He desired revenge—deep, solid and lasting. So a happy thought struck him. It was a dark and villainous thought, but perhaps justifiable under the circumstances.

He hired him again to the wall-papering man, and with a grin on his countenance, looked over the samples of paper, and finding one, a horror in bad figures of the black and mud color, contracted for it to be put up, so as to completely hide the beautiful blue and gold paper of the first addition. The papering was scarcely completed before the landlord dropped in to see whether the tenant had not relented a little. He was shown into the parlor. Hardly had he touched the soft cushions of the chair than he sprang to his feet and with the yell of a Comanche fled the house. He had seen the paper on the wall. It was a perfect nightmare.

The Emperor's Left Arm.

London Truth: Among the many different accounts of the new emperor's physical blemish that I have seen it is curious that there is not one which is correct. The left arm is not deformed, but withered or rather dwarfed. The nerves which vitalize it were subjected to great and prolonged pressure during birth, so that their conducting power (nerves are like telegraph wires) was destroyed. Hence the muscles of the arm were paralyzed and became wasted from want of use, and the limb did not grow with the rest of the body. The responsibility of this rests with the German doctors who officiated on the occasion, a fact which partially explains the Empress Victoria's distrust of native talent. She insisted on Dr. Gream presiding in all subsequent ceremonies of the same kind, and outraged Teutons have never forgiven her for this affront to German science.

Republican County Convention.

The convention was called to order at 10 a. m. by the chairman of the county central committee. Temporary organization John Cromb chairman and C. M. Ohl, secretary.

The chair appointed the following committees:

ON CREDENTIALS:

C. U. Webster, Fisher; I. I. Hillestad, Rosebud; E. Lanctot, Crookston; Knute Ophelm, Garfield; Hugh Robertson, city of Crookston.

ON RESOLUTIONS.

H. Steenerson, city of Crookston.
E. D. Childs, Carman.
Arne Higdem, East Grand Forks.
H. Laukester, Fisher
A. Kaiser, Rosebud.

ON PERMANENT ORGANIZATION.

H. Thompson, Fisher.
Frank Hunt, Red Lake Falls.
Dr. A. Nelson, Garfield.
H. E. Ives, St. Hilaire.
J. G. McGrew, Crookston.

The convention then adjourned to meet at 1 p. m.

Met pursuant to adjournment, and at 2:45 the committee on credentials brought in the following report of delegates entitled to seats, viz:

ANDOVER—E. Jorgenson, A. Peterson.
ANGUS—W. L. Davies.
BLACK RIVER—A. Sture, A. Swanson.
BYGLAND—T. Benson, H. Grundeson.
BELGIUM—Marvin Losey.
BRISLOT—George Janette.
BRAY—C. P. Swanson.
BADGER—H. T. Gilbertson, O. F. Berg.
BRANSVOLD—Ole Nelson, E. A. Barnaas.
CITY OF CROOKSTON
1ST WARD—O. O. Christianson,
E. J. Loken.
John Alderman.
2D WARD—Wm. Marin.
S. L. Collins.
M. Rauenbuehler.
3D WARD—J. G. McGrew,
J. G. McManus.
H. Steenerson proxy for J. G. McManus.
4TH WARD—John Cromb.
L. Berthiaume.
D. Jacobus.
Hugh Robertson.
5TH WARD—E. D. Childs.
CROOKSTON T'P—Edward Lanctot.
COLUMBIA—A. Kaiser.
EUCLID—H. C. Misner, M. P. Losey.
EAST GRAND FORKS—W. H. Teare.
FAIRFAX—John Amundson, C. Houston.
FANNY—J. G. Tenny.
FERTILE VILLAGE—Andrew Ophfem.
FISHER—A. G. Anderson, proxy for H. Thompson.
A. G. Kingston.
FISHER VILLAGE—H. Thompson.
H. Laukester.
C. U. Webster.
GENTILLY—E. Filiatrault.
GODFREY—I. J. Lee, Jens Rude.
GRAND FORKS—Arne Higdem.
GARDEN—O. P. Renne.
M. W. Jenson.
I. Kroken.
GERVAIS—Frank E. Hunt.
GROVE PARK—John E. Van Tuyl.
C. U. Benson.
GARFIELD—Knud Ophelm.
P. H. Nesset.
Dr. A. Nelson.
HUNTSVILLE—O. Amundson.
R. Goulter.
HAMMOND—J. O. Sargeant.
HUBBARD—S. A. Kolden.
Elling J. Ellingson.
HIGDEM—Ole H. Bang, Mathias Anderson.
KING—Ole E. Qualley, Truman West.
KEYSTONE—Samuel Leeson.
LAKE PLEASANT—Wm. C. L. Demann.
LESSOR—H. Helgeson, Evan Olson.
LOWELL—E. E. Lommen, A. Daniels.
LOUISVILLE—B. Dalbec.
LIBERTY—Eugene Winslow.
NUMEDAL—Rasmus Stone.
NORDEN—Nic Nelson, 2 votes.
NORTH—J. H. Sanders.
NORTHLAND—Daniel Johnson, 2 votes.
OSLTAD—Ole P. Oustad, K. H. Berg
POPLAR RIVER—Edward Wichterman.
POLK CENTER—N. J. Highberg, K. I. Sandberg.
PARNELL—Wm. G. Cooke.
QUEEN—Ivan Jacobs, N. V. Hostetter.
RED LAKE FALLS—J. M. Bourden.
RED LAKE FALLS VILLAGE—Frank E. Hunt.
Dr. John Watson.
ROCKSBURY—Henry Norland, A. Norander.
ROOME—Peter Boukine, J. J. Ide.
RUSSIA—O Simmons.
REIS—H. B. Budd, C. Ohl.
RIVER FALLS—K. O. Gigstad.
ROSEBUD—Louis Loken, I. F. Hillestad.
SLETTEN—Ole E. Sonstlie, Arne Grundyson.
SANDERS—John J. Johnson, O. G. Sandberg.
SULLIVAN—Fred Hall, T. A. Sullivan, Martin Sands.
ST. HILAIRE VILLAGE—H. E. Ives, C. G. Rapp.
TABOR—Peter Johnson.
TILDEN—T. J. Farden.
TERREBONNE—Jacobus Nelson.
TYNSID—Ole Larson, Thomas Logan.
VINELAND—Levi S. Myers, A. Steenerson.
WINGER—I. K. Messelt, Ole K. Lokness.
WYANDOTTE—Stephen Torgerson.
WOODSIDE—Earl Foster, Joseph Tagley.
HILL RIVER—John Petterson, L. A. Amundson.
KNUTE—J. P. Johnson.
Knute H. Rollag.

The committee on permanent organization reported in favor of making the temporary organization permanent.

The committee on resolutions introduced the following resolution, viz:

WHEREAS, The republican party of Polk County in Convention assembled, recognizing the propriety of that time-honored custom which leads political parties, when presenting their candidates for the support of the people, to at the same time proclaim the line of policy in governmental affairs which they seek to establish or perpetuate, do

RESOLVE, That, ascribing all praise to the Infinite Being who has honored us in the past as His instrument in advancing the prosperity and welfare of the people, we point with pride to our record in former years as a guarantee of the faithful discharge in the future of every public trust committed to our care. That in local affairs, we stand for the enforcement of all laws, and especially those tending to promote temperance and morality and to suppress vice and crime, a liberal expenditure for our public schools, the conscientious care of all public property, a wise economy in the expenditure of public moneys; an impartial valuation and assessment of all property; that each, whether rich or poor, may bear their just burden of taxation.

IN MATTERS OF STATE

we hold ourselves to be the only temperance party. We declare ourselves to be in hearty sympathy with, and to be working for PRACTICAL PROHIBITION of the manufacture, sale and use of intoxicating liquors, but believe our end can only be accomplished by educating public opinion and moral sentiment to the level which we strive to attain; and recognizing the fact that the term "license" as we apply it in its relations to the liquor traffic, is not (as some claim) permissive, but restrictive; we declare, in the words of the Hon. Wm. Windom, that "as between low license or no license we are in favor of low license; as between low license or high license, we are in favor of high license, and as between high license or prohibition, we favor prohibition."

We recognize our present high license law as a great stride in the right direction and give our Governor and the friends who labored so faithfully for its passage, all honor for their courage, discretion and zeal. But we would not rest satisfied at what has been accomplished, but earnestly appeal to the coming legislature to submit the question of prohibition to a vote of the people, and demand of our representatives from this district that they labor for this end.

We demand a new apportionment for the State at the coming session of the legislature, in which this district shall be secured her just proportion of representation of which she has been so long denied. The fact that several districts in this state casting nearly 1000 votes less than this single county of Polk have three representatives in the legislature, while others, casting scarcely more votes than this district have five votes in that boby, whereas we are barely allowed one vote in each branch, gives point to the justice of this demand.

We recognize in our railway system the most potent factor of the 19th century in the material development of our country; wisely managed they become a source of invaluable benefit to each and every citizen, or in the hands of selfish and corrupt management, a mighty engine of oppression to the many for the benefit of the few. We therefore approve the exercise, by the State, of a conservative control over their affairs, but believing as we do that the people themselves are capable of self government, we favor the selection of railroad commissioners by the people rather than by executive appointment, which often becomes reward for party service.

We hail with delight the promise of a line of iron steamboats, of the most modern construction to run in connection with the Manitoba R'y system, between Duluth and Buffalo, as promising a radical reduction in freight rates of our great staple product from our fields to the markets of the world.

We demand legislation which shall reduce the maximum charges exacted by our express and telegraph lines or which shall secure to their patrons a service more nearly commensurate with the charges enforced.

We demand a revision of the laws governing our public warehouses and elevators reducing their maximum charges, and the rates of inspections at the terminal points. The justice of this demand becoming apparent when it is known that these companys have received nearly if not ¼ as much for buying and storing the farmers crop during the first year as the R'y have charged to haul it 800 miles to its nearest market. And that at the coming session of the Legislature there will be nearly if not quite $25000 of surplus in the treasury of the Warehouse Commission, which has been received for inspection fees, and is in excess of the expenses of the service, and which is a direct tax upon the productions.

We demand "State Aid" in the opening of our natural drainage channels that the work of draining sub-disticts may be made possible, and within the financial reach of county, municipal and individual enterprise.

Any sum so expended would, within a few years flow back into the State Treasure i the form of taxes upon enhanced values and increased production.

We demand the retension of the present tax upon intoxicants in the interest of temperance and morality either by state or national government.

We demond a thorough revision of the tariff, and a simplification of its classifications based upon the principle of protecting such of our industries as will by so doing build up out home markets and protect American labor; and we believe that such a revision can only be had at the hands of the Grand Old Republican Party, which by its wise and patriotic action in the past has saved this nation and brought it to its present state of liberty and prosperity.

Contests appeared in Lowell, Columbia, Queen, Lessor and North, which were all decided in committee except Columbia, which was submitted to the convention. Upon motion to accept and adopt the report, objection being made, the report was adopted except as to the contested towns. Upon a hearing the decision of committee was ratified in every case.

O. P. Renne moved to change the order outlined by the call and proceed to the nomination of county officers. Carried without objection.

The chair appointed Hugh Robertson, Chas. Rapp and Dr. A. Nelson as tellers. Dr. Watson presented the name of P. J. McGuire and moved suspension of the rules, the secretary to cast the ballot. Carried with enthusiasm, and P. J. was vociferously called upon to "stand and deliver" a speech. He took his medicine in his usual modest manner, with grace and dignity.

For treasurer the names of O. H. Lucken and O. A. Thoreson being presented, a formal ballot was ordered resulting in 75 for Lucken and 52 for Thoreson. Mr. Lucken was declared the nominee, thanked the convention briefly but earnestly. Mr Thoreson's name was presented by the leading citizens of the west side who highly endorse him for an honest, upright and capable man, in every way worthy of the position, and there is no doubt but that the next time he will be the unanimous choice. He has many warm friends here who would have liked to support him now did they not feel that Mr. Lucken's claim was paramount.

For Register of Deeds, J. G. McGrew presented the name of Andrew Elken, moving suspension of the rules and that the secretary cast the ballot for him. Carried, and Mr. Elken responded to a call for a speech by expressing his heartfelt gratitude for this hearty endorsement of his official career. The office of Judge of Probate was filled in the same way, and Judge Christianson did himself proud in his speech in response.

For County Superintendent of Schools a contestent appeared in the person of A. D. Wishard, to contest the nomination with our handsome and efficient superintendent, E. F. Elliot. In naming Wishard's qualifications and claims, one enthusiastic admirer of that gentleman remarked that as Wishard had spent some time in the culture of the aborigines on the reservation, and had had his salary up there added to by private contribution, that he was now ready to be promoted to the supervision of the school system of the great county of Polk. The convention did not see it in that light and it did not take long to settle the aspirations of Mr. Wishard's friends as the first ballot was: Elliot 78, Wishard 45. Mr. Elliot responded to the call for a speech in a few feeling remarks expressive of his gratitude, not for the nomination simply, but for the endorsement of his official career evident by his handsome vote in spite of the personal fight made against him.

For County Attorney the names of Judge F. Ives, H. Steenerson and D. D. Williams were presented.

First Ballot—Williams 48, Steenerson 46, Ives 30. No choice.

Second Ballot—Williams 55, Steenerson 41, Ives 27, Holston 1.

At this juncture Mr. Steenerson thanked his friends for their complimentary vote, and withdrew in favor of A. R. Holston, of Red Lake Falls. 3d ballot, Williams 68, Ives 32, Holston 16, Steenerson 3. Mr. Williams, having received a majority of the votes cast, was declared the nominee. He took the floor in response to call, and made a neat little speech of acknowledgement. Adjourned to meet at 7.

Upon reassembling at 7:30 Dr. Lankester presented the following resolution, which was adopted namely:

That inasmuch as in the past more than one republican candidate has presented himself for the suffrage of the beople other than the nominee of the republican convention, now be it hereby

Resolved—That each nominee, before being voted for in the convention, shall publicly pledge himself to accept the regular nominee of the convention, and under no circumstances be a candidate for the office of sheriff at the following election.

The following names were then presented: N. O. Paulsrud, Geo. M. Swift, Edward Carey, J. J. Ide, James Bain, and C. W. Kimberly.

The aspirants all publicly endorsed the sentiment of the resolution and the first ballot resulted as follows: Paulsrud 57, Carey 11, Ide 8, Kimberly 12, Swift 18, Bain 13, Vettleson 1.

Mr. Carey here withdrew his name in favor of James Bain.

2d ballot, Paulsrud 64; Kimberly 12; Ide 5; Bain 31; Swift 10; Cary 1. Mr. Paulsrud was declared the nominee and expressed his thanks orally and in cigar boxes, which added more materially to the warmth of the sentiment.

For court commissioner, the secretary was instructed to cast the ballot fo D. E. Hattlestad, the present incumbent who replied in a touching speech of acknowledgment.

For county surveyer, the names of W. F. Arnold, Geo. A. Rolph and O. L. Hammery were presented.

The first ballot resulted: Arnold 78; Rolph 35; Hammery 4; Mr. Arnold was declared the nominee who said that his future action in the office must attest his gratitude to the party for the honor conferred upon him.

The secretary was instructed to cast the ballot for Henry Shepard for coroner. Henry was loudly called for, but did not show up and a friend reported that Henry was busy—had a case on hand—was holding an inquest upon the body of the democratic party found dead on our streets, and, therefore must be excused from a speech.

The several districts here withdrew to nominate delegates and county commissioners for the 1st 3d and 5th districts. They reported as follows:

1st district, for commissioner, John P. Johnson, for State convention, I. I. Hillestad with A. Kaiser, alternate. For legislative convention, A. Kaiser with C. D. Barnaas as alternate.

2d. district, for State convention, H. Thompson with Gunder Krostue as alternate; for Legislative, Levi S. Myers with H. Gunderson as alternate.

Third District. S. F. Markham, commissioner, J. G. McGrew, state, with Geo. J. McManus as alternate; legislative H. Z. Cooke with Geo. H. Palmer as alternate.

Fourth District. For State, Chas. G. Rapp, Harry Ives, alternate; legislative, H. B. Davis, with H. A. McClatchie alternate.

Fifth District. Robt. Anderson, commissioner, State, A. Higdem, O. H. Baug alternate; O. Osmundson, with John Colter as alternate.

Moved that John Cromb be elected by acclamation as delegate at large to the State Convention, carried. The following names were then proposed to be balloted for, C. O. Christianson, H. Steenerson, E. D. Childs, A. R. Aolston, Mads Jenson, E. E. Lomen, Andrew Sture, Henry Wight and Geo. H. Palmer. Moved and carried that the three having the highest number of votes be declared the nominees. The ballot resulted as follows: Steenerson 73, Childs 58, Christianson 54, Wight 46, Holston 42, Lommen 29, Jenson 20; Sture 11; Palmer, 9.

Steenerson, Childs and Christianson were declared elected.

For the legislative convention, I. K. Messelt, of Winger, A. N. Hixon, Crookston, Felix Fournet, Crookston and W. L. Davies, of Angus were elected as delegates at large; alternates, J. H. Sanders, C. U. Webster, E. D. Childs, and E. Lanctot. State alternates large, A. R. Holston, L. Berthiaume, E. B. Lommen, Lewis Lohn.

Moved by H. Lankester that the chair appoint a Co. Central Committee of seven, one from each district and two at large. Chair announcee that the list would be published later. With three rousing cheers for the national ticket and the state ticket, the convention adjourned without date, at 10:30.

A Republican Legislative Convention for the 45th Legislative District will be held at the Court House, in the City of Crookston, County of Polk, and State of Minnesota, on Tuesday September 25th, A. D. 1888, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon for the purpose of placing in nomination a representative for said district in the State Legislature and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the convention.

The committee have adopted the basis of representation as fixed by the Republican State Convention under which the counties are entitled to the following number of delegates:

Beltrami	2
Kittson	3
Marshall	4
Norman	4
Polk	9

By order of Committee.
Dated at Crookston Aug. 16th, 1888.
H. E. IVES, Secretary,
JOHN CROMB, Chairman.

FOR SALE.

We have, placed in our hands for sale at a bargain, a half section of land near the city, on which is growing a fine crop of wheat, oats and barloy. Here is a rare chance for somebody to drop into a ready made business right to hand. It will pay you to look into this bargain if you want a good farm in a good neighborhood, good water and good buildings. Address THE JOURNAL.

Duluth Herald: It is very reasonable to predict that Charles Canning will be the nominee of the Democrats of the Fifth district to oppose Hon. S. G. Comstock for congress. Mr. Canning is a free trader and is known as a brilliant stump speaker. He has the confidence of the farmers, and already a number of prominent Republicans in the Red River valley have declared that they will bolt Comstock and support Canning if the latter is nominated. Undoubtedly Mr. Canning will cut down the Republican vote in the west, and with a vigorous canvass he might give the Republican nominee a close fight in all that part of the congressional district outside of the Forty-sixth senatorial district. In that event Mr. Comstock will have to depend largely upon St Louis county to carry him through. It may be fortunate for him and that county is to be depended upon for a majority of two or three thousand at least, and it is very important that the Republicans should turn in and give him such a lift that he would feel that to this county he owes his election. With a reduced Republican vote in the west and a largely increased vote at this end of the district St. Louis county would be entitled in the next congressional convention to a representation which would be greater than that of any other two counties the district and which would force the convention to give Duluth the next congressman. Not a single vote should be wasted on any outside issue. Duluth people should rally to the support of Mr. Comstock just as they would if he was a Duluth man, for every ballot for him this year is a ballot for a Duluth man two years hence. The Herald believes that St. Louis county Republicans generally understand this and we predict that, no matter who the nominee of the Democrats may be, Mr. Comstock will be given a larger majority than was ever before given any man at an election here. The time is gone by when Duluth Republicans will be noted only for their local dissensions and factional fights. From this time out they will work for Duluth and force that recognition which has heretofore been denied them."

From this stand point it does not look as though Mr. Canning would be the nominee as the democracy on the west side appear to be dead struck after the Rev. B. F. Nash, of Fargo D. T. The Herald seems to be a little mixed on that matter as Mr. Canning is not considered to be near as brilliant a stump speaker as Mr. Nash—in fact that is about the only reason we have heard advanced why Mr. Nash, of Fargo, should be the man to lead the forlorn hope against Mr. Comstock. Mr. Canning does not profess to be an orator but depends upon other means to secure the nomination, In either event the result would not be so much a matter of doubt as the Herald suggests, as republicans in this Northwest are not to be taken by taffy. Very few if any prominent republicans will bolt their ticket to vote for either of these gentlemen. We can see no combinations that could be made with a possibility of success against Mr. Comstock.

"Peterson" for September is on hand. We always feel that there is a lack in the month till this old favorite reaches us. It invariably keeps up to the mark, year after year; for first-class writers and artists furnish the literary matter and the illustrations. No pains or expense is ever spared in any department; there is only one cheap thing about "Peterson"—that is the price. It never fails to catch hold of any salient point in which people are interested; John Bunyan's bi-centennial is just attracting attention, and "Peterson" opens with a beautiful illustrated article on the famous man, written in charming style and giving numerous details of his life which will be new to American readers. The whole number is exactly what a September magazine ought to be—breezy, fresh, and altogether delightful. No lady who wants the best stories, newest items in regard to dress and society-doings, as well as ample information in matters connected with the beautifying and elevating of of home-life, can afford to do without "Peterson." Scores of thousands have long known the fact, and each year adds to the list of those who find this unique periodical an absolute necessity. Terms: Two dollars a year. Address Peterson's Magazine, 306 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

The State Fair Carnival.

St. Paul and Minneapolis will give their visitors to the State Fair a royal welcome. The principal streets of both cities will be brilliantly illuminated every night. The finest bands and orchestras will discourse music in the parks and public streets, and the cities will put on their holidy garb and ever body will turn out to make the week a grand carnival of pleasure. Six theaters, the magnificent panorama of "Jerusaalem on the day of the Crucifixion," and other places of amusement will be open every night during the fair, and visitors will have the opportunity of the year to thoroughly enjoy themselves in any manner they choose. One fare for the round trip will be charged on all railroads. You can not afford to stay away.

Reference has been made to the fact that on August 30th, the Minneapolis Industrial Exhibition is to be enlivened by a Children's Chorus of 800 voices. The school children have been practicing for some time and show remarkable talent. The solos and choruses to be presented on the day named will constitute a rich musical treat, away above and beyond the ordinary school chorus of a commencement day and clearly demonstrate the fact that the youth of America possesses as much musical talent as those of the nations beyond the sea.

For Cash or Trade.

A thoroughbred Holstein-Friesian bull, for cash, on time or trade for cows. For particulars address THE JOURNAL office.

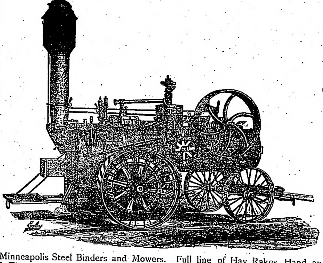
REMOVED.

HUGGARD, LARSEN & CO.

have removed their stock to their new building, opposite the New York store on, cor. Broadway and Robert. You can't miss it,

SIGN OF THE JACKSON WAGON.

JUST RECEIVED—A fresh car of Buggies, Carriages and Road Carts.



General Agents for RUSSELL & CO'S WORLD KNOWN Engines, Separators and Saw Mills.

Minneapolis Steel Binders and Mowers. Full line of Hay Rakes, Hand and Self Dumps. J. Thompson & Son's Cross Plows and Breakers, NEW MODEL Walking Gangs and Breakers, Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machines' Pumps, Full line of Extras. TWINE. Come and see us!

TO RENT.

My hotel and furniture, or will sell the furniture. Apply on premises at Carman. Z. DAOUST.

Best residence lots in the city and on your own terms; mind, ON YOUR OWN TERMS.

STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston, Minn., July 24th, 1888.

Complaint having been entered at this office by Hans Christopherson against Louis St. John for abandoning his Homestead Entry No. 11,712, dated April 1st, 1886, upon the e½ sw¼ and lots 3 and 4, S. 18, T. 153 n. R. 46 w. in Polk County, Minn., with a view to the cancellation of said entry, the said parties are hereby summoned to appear at this office on the 14th day of Sept. 1888, at 10 o'clock a. m., to respond and furnish testimony concerning said alleged abandonment.

[14-19] L. K. AAKER, Receiver.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston, Minn., July 11th, 1888.

Complaint having been entered at this office by Peter O. Berggrew against John Scarborough for failure to comply with law as to timber culture entry No. 1259, dated June 17th, 1879, upon the southwest quarter S. 26. T. 151 n. R. 49 w., in Polk County, Minn., with a view to the cancellation of said entry, contestant alleging that the said John Scarborough did not break or plow nor caused to be broken or plowed any part of said land the first year after the date of said entry, that there has been no improvements of any kind made on said land since the date of said entry, the said parties are are hereby summoned to appear at this office on the 11th day of Sept. 1888, at 9 o'clock a. m., to respond and furnish testimony concerning said alleged failure.

[14-19] H. H. DICKMANN, Register.

[First publication Aug. 9th, 1888.]

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk,—ss. In Probate Court. Special term, August 8th, 1888.

In the matter of the estate of Henry M Johnson (Highmore) deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of I. Tharaldsen administrator of the estate of Henry M. Johnson (Highmore) deceased, representing among other things, that he has fully administered said estate, and praying that a time and place be fixed for examining and allowing his account of his administration, and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to heirs.

It is ordered, That said account be examined, and petition heard by the Judge of this Court, on Friday the 31st day of August A. D. 1888, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Probate office in Crookston in said county.

And it is further ordered, That notice thereof be given to all persons interested, by publishing a copy of this order for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said county.

Dated at Crookston this 8th day of August A. D. 1888.

By the Court.
C. O. CHRISTIANSON,
[16-18] Judge of Probate.

THE PERKINS WIND MILL.

BUY THE BEST AND SAVE MONEY

It has been in constant use for 19 years, with a record equaled by none. We give each purchaser a

WARRANTY

as follows: We warrant the Perkins Wind Mill, sold this day, to out-last and do better work than any other make, and not blow down, unless the Tower goes with it, and against any wind that does not disable buildings in the vicinity.

We manufacture both Pumping and Geared Mills and carry a full line of Wind Mill Supplies.

AGENTS WANTED.

Send for Catalogue, Circulars and Prices.
Address PERKINS WIND MILL & AX CO.
Mishawaka, Ind.

A. F. LAPLANT.

PLAIN AND ORNAMENTAL

PLASTERING

Done to Order. All Work Warranted.
CROOKSTON, MINN.

THE OFFICE OF
COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS
WIL BE OPEN
EVERY SATURDAY.
RESIDENCE—With D. N. Taylor, Esq., Broadway.

W. A. ROBERTSON,

D. D. S.

Graduate of Dental Department of the Univer-sity of Maryland.

OPERATIVE AND MECHANICAL

DENTIST.

OFFICE, IN McKINNON BLOCK.

HARMLESS SPUR WIRE

FENCING.

Cannot injure or tear stock. Comparatively cheapest fencing made. Is endorsed by every one who uses it, Strongest, most visible and only safe fence.

SEND FOR CIRCULARS AND PRICES.

IN USE IN MANY OF THE STATES AND TERRITORIES.

Manufactured by the

LARM MANUFACTURING CO.,
Cor. Clinton and Van Buren Sts., Chicago, Ill.

For Sale by G. M. Barber, Second Street.

JUST RECEIVED, ONE CARLOAD

Wagons and Buggies

FROM RACINE WAGON AND BUGGY COMPANY.

We venture to say without fear of contradiction that this is the finest car of goods, in the Buggy line, ever brought into Crookston.

NO SNIDE OR BANKRUPT STOCK,
The real Simon Pure Racine Manufacture.

WE can please the most fastidious in style and finish, and we guarantee every Buggy sold. We ask our customers, and the public generally, to give us a call, if they want a first-class Buggy or Wagon at bottom prices. Our Platform, Spring and Delivery Wagons are Real Beauties.

A FULL STOCK OF
Farm Machinery and Implements
CONSTANTLY ON HAND.

McKINON BRO'S,

McKinnon' Block, - - - - - - - - - - - Main Street.

JOHN CROMB,
Attorney-at-aw.
ECOND STREET, CROOKSTON,

DR. M. WATTS.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Office over Merchants' Bank,
Professional calls by day or night promptly attended to.

SCANDI AMERICAN
BANK.

Authorized Capital	$300,000
Paid in Capital	50,000

COLLECTIONS A SPECIALTY.

OFFICERS:
C. Hendrickson, President.
G. M. Barber, Vice President.
C. O. Christianson, 2d Vice President.
A. G. Gallash, Cashier.
D. Ellington, Asst. Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

O. H. Lucken	Crookston
L. K. Aaker	"
J. H. Locken	"
T. J. Thorsen	"
P. E. Sandager	Grafton, D. T.
A. E. Johnson	St. Paul, Minn.

First National Bank

OF CROOKSTON

PAID IN CAPITAL, - $100,000
SURPLUS, - - - $11,000

Money to loan on long or short time on approved security

Interest on time deposits. Faithful attention to Collections and prompt remittance.

GEO. Q. ERSKINE, President.
WM. ANGLIM, Vice President.
CHAS. E. SAWYER, Cashier

DIRECTORS:

Wm. Anglim, K. D. Chase, F. D. Childs
Geo. Q. Erskine, S. F. Markham, A. A. Miller.
E. M. Walsh. John Moore. W. H. Crosby.
Chas. E. Sawyer.

CROOKSTON

CREAMERY,

WALSH & BJOIN, Prop's.

The Crookston Creamery is now ready for business, and solicits the patronage of every progressive farmer. At the prices that we now pay, you can make more money out of your cream than you can to make it into butter yourself. It only needs a trial to convince you.

We invite the patronage of all who are interested in their own welfare, as well as that of the county to call and see us.

THE OLD RELIABLE

CROOKSTON

LOAN AGENCY

STILL ON DECK.

MONEY
On Real Estae.

MONEY
On Approved Chattels.

Always on hand at the Lowest Rates.

Consult your best interests by giving me a call when you Want Money.

A. D. STEPHENS,
Second Street, Crookston, Minn.

CHRISTIANSON BROTHERS,
(Correspondents Fargo Loan Agency.)

REAL ESTATE,
Farm Mortgage Loans and Insurance.

Special Bargains in Choice Farm Lands, improved and unimproved. Low prices and easy terms.

—OFFICE ON ROBERT STREET.—
CROOKSTON, - - - MINN.

NEW MEAT MARKET

At Steenerson Bros. Old Stand, on Main Street,

SANDS BROTHERS, Prop's.

Having purchased this stand we have put in a large and complete stock of Fresh and Salt Meats of all kinds, secured the services of a thoroughly competent butcher, and are now ready to supply the Choicest Roasts and Steaks of Beef, Pork, Mutton, and everything in our line. We invite your patronage. Orders delivered when desired.

SANDS BRO'S, MAIN STREET.

THE SECOND HAND STORE,
(Yvernault's Old Place,)
Main Street, - - - Crookston, Minn,
KEEPS A FINE, LARGE STOCK OF

NEW FURNITURE,

At Prices Unrivalled in this market. Also a Large Stock of

SECOND HAND FURNITURE,

Little worn. Parties desiring to dispose of Old Furniture can exchange it with me for New Furniture at a Bargain, or I will Pay Cash for it. Call and see my stock and get prices

PETER GOTHIA.

DENTISTRY!

J. H. THOMAS, D. D. S.,
ROBERT STREET, - CROOKSTON, MINN

Artificial Teeth from one to an entire set inserted. Gold, Silver or Artificial Filling used a desired. Regulating Children's Teeth a specialty. ALL WORK WARRANTED

Crookston Nurseries

Established in 1879

Tree Claim Stock

A SPECIALTY.

I will furnish my customers and others, trees and seeds for Tree Claims at reduced figures in the spring of 1887. Also all the hardier varieties of small fruits, such as Currants, Gooseberries, and Raspberries. Also good thrifty Transcendent and Hislop Crab-Apple trees, Cottonwood and Box Elder trees. Box Elder and Ash seed, and Willow cuttings. Also garden seeds. The firm of Haseltine Bros. was dissolved in June, 1883. E. W Haseltine has no interest or share in the old Crookston Nurseries, nor is he successor to the old firm of Haseltine Bros. as he, been advertised. I continue business on the old grounds in Crookston. Don't fail to send for catalogue of prices

FRANK T. HASELTINE, Prop.
Crookston, Minn.

Polk County Journal.

W. G. COOKE, Publisher.

CROOKSTON, MINN., AUGUST 16.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

Report of the Board of Equalization.

(Concluded from last Week.)

Garfield	do	10	"
Gervais	do	45	"
Gentilly	do	20	"
Godfrey	do	10	"
Grove Pork	do	20	"
Higdem	do	15	"
Hill River,	do	10	"
Hubbard	do	12½	"
Huntsville,	do	33⅓	"
Kertsonville	do	23	"
King	do	6	"
Lambert	do	5	"
Lake Pleasant	lowered	10	"
Lessor	raised	10	"
Louisville	do	33⅓	"
Liberty	do	10	"
Numedal	do	25	"
Onstad	do	15	"
Parnell	lowered	10	"
Polk Centre	raised	25	"
Reis	do	40	"
River Falls	do	10	"
Roome	do	5	"
Rosebud	do	5	"
Sanders	do	10	"
Sandsville	do	20	"
Sletten	do	5	"
Sullivan	do	33⅓	"
Tabor	do	5	"
Terrebonne	do	10	"
Tynsid	lowered	25	"
Vineland	raised	15	"
Woodside	do	15	"
Wyandotte	do	15	"
Columbia	do	5	"
3d Assm't Dist.,	do	40	"

Item all other cattle 3 years old and over has been passed.

SHEEP.

Angus,	lowered	20	per cent.
Black River,	do	20	"
Bray,	do	12½	"
Belgium,	do	25	"
Brislot,	raised	15	"
Bygland,	do	10	"
Crookston city	do	50	"
Grand Forks,	lowered	20	"
Garden,	do	20	"
Gervais,	raised	20	"
Gentilly,	do	50	"
Godfrey,	lowered	25	"
Hill River,	raised	50	"
Keyston,	lowered	25	"
Kertsonville,	raised	45	"
Lambert,	lowered	25	"
Lessor,	raised	10	"
Liberty,	lowered	5	"
Numedal,	raised	25	"
Onstad,	lowered	20	"
Parnell,	lowered	5	"
Poplar River,	do	25	"
Red Lake Falls vil.	do	25	"
St. Hilaire,	raised	25	"
Sletten,	do	5	"
Sullivan,	do	5	"
Tobor,	do	25	"
Terrebonne,	lowered	25	"
Tilden,	do	25	"
Tynsid,	do	5	"
Woodside,	do	15	"
Wyandotte,	raised	10	"
4th Assessm't dist	lowered	25	"

HOGS.

Andover,	lowered	25	per cent.
Badger,	raised	15	"
Bray,	do	33⅓	"
Brislot,	lowered	15	"
Bygland,	raised	5	"
Crookston,	do	12½	"
Fisher,	lowered	33⅓	"
Fisher, vil.	do	50	"
Grand Forks,	raised	10	"
Gervais,	do	33⅓	"
Gentilly,	do	100	"
Godfrey,	do	80	"
Hammond,	lowered	15	"
Higdem,	do	12½	"
Hill River,	raised	10	"
Hubbard,	do	15	"
Huntsville,	lowered	30	"
Keystone,	do	33⅓	"
King,	raised	33⅓	"
Knute,	lowered	20	"
Lake Pleasant	raised	10	"
Lessor,	lowered	15	"
North,	do	30	"
Numedal,	do	12½	"
Queen,	do	60	"
Red Lake Falls, vil.	do	50	"
Red Lake Falls,	raised	100	"
Rosebud,	do	33⅓	"
River Falls,	do	33⅓	"
St. Hilaire, vil.	lowered	10	"
Sandsville,	do	10	"
Sletten,	raised	10	"
Sullivan,	do	33⅓	"
Tabor,	do	40	"
Tynsid,	lowered	30	"
Winger,	raised	10	"
Woodside,	lowered	12½	"
3d Assessm't dist	do	12½	"

WAGONS.

Black River,	raised	25	per cent.
Angus,	do	5	"
Brandsvold,	do	25	"
Badger,	do	25	"
Bray,	do	15	"
Belgum,	do	25	"
Brislot,	lowered	20	"
Bygland,	raised	50	"
Crookston, city	do	10	"
Crookston,	do	50	"
Emardville,	do	50	"
Fanny	lowered	20	"
Grand Forks,	raised	33⅓	"
Garden,	do	15	"
Garfield,	lowered	33⅓	"
Gervais,	raised	33⅓	"
Godfrey,	do	30	"
Grove Park,	do	40	"
Hammond,	do	20	"
Higdem,	do	20	"
Hill River,	do	30	"
Huntsville,	do	100	"
Keystone,	lowered	20	"
King,	raised	25	"
Knute,	do	25	"
Lambert,	do	50	"
Lake Pleasant,	do	75	"
Lowell,	do	20	"
Nesbit,	do	20	"
Northland,	do	25	"
Norden,	do	20	"
Numedal,	do	50	"
Poplar River,	lowered	20	"
Polk Centre,	raised	25	"
Red Lake Falls	do	10	"
Reis,	lowered	33⅓	"
River Falls,	raised	50	"
Roome,	do	20	"
Rosebud,	do	50	"
St Hilaire, vill.	lowered	20	"
Sullivan,	raised	20	"
Terrebonne,	do	25	"
Tilden,	do	50	"
Tynsid,	do	20	"
Nineland,	do	10	"
Winger,	do	25	"
Woodside,	lowered	20	"
Wyandotte,	raised	83⅓	"
Columbia,	lowered	20	"
4th assess't dist	raised	50	"
3d " "	lowered	20	"

SEWING AND KNITTING MACHINES.

Black River,	raised	10	per cent.
Brandsvold,	raised	25	"
Badger,	raised	10	"
Bygland,	do	75	"
Crookston,	do	75	"
Emardville,	lowered	50	"
Fanny,	raised	75	"
Fisher,	do	50	"
Fisher, village	do	50	"
Crookston, city	lowered	20	"
Garden,	raised	80	"
Gervais,	do	30	"
Gentilly,	do	50	"
Godfrey,	do	20	"
Grove Park,	do	75	"
Hammond,	lowered	20	"
Higdem,	do	25	"
Hill River,	raised	45	"
Hubbard,	do	200	"
Huntsville,	do	150	"
Kertsonville,	do	25	"
King,	do	45	"
Lessor,	lowered	15	"
Louisville,	raised	10	"
Liberty,	do	20	"
Lowell,	do	25	"
North,	do	20	"
Northland,	do	25	"
Norden,	do	10	"
Parnell,	do	25	"
Poplar River,	lowered.	40	"
Polk Centre,	raised	100	"
Queen,	do	50	"
R. L. Falls vill.	lowered	25	"
Red Lake Falls,	raised	15	"
Reis,	lowered	25	"
River Falls,	raised	40	"
Roome,	do	75	"
Rocksbury,	do	50	"
Rosebud,	do	150	"
Russia,	do	40	"
St. Hilaire vill.	lowered	20	"
Sanders,	raised	20	"
Sandsville,	lowered	20	"
Sullivan,	raised	20	"
Tabor,	do	33⅓	"
Terrebonne,	do	50	"
Tynsid,	do	20	"
Vineland,	do	20	"
Winger,	do	20	"
Wyandotte,	do	20	"
East Grand Forks,	do	10	"
Columbia,	do	25	"
3d Assess. dis't	do	200	"

WATCHES AND CLOCKS.

Black River,	raised	75	per cent.
Brandsvold,	do	75	"
Badger,	do	75	"
Bray,	do	50	"
Bygland,	do	35	"
Crookston,	do	25	"
Fairfax,	do	25	"
Farley,	do	10	"
Fanny,	do	100	"
Fisher,	do	150	"
Fisher village,	do	50	"
Grand Forks,	do	40	"
Garden,	do	75	"
Garfield,	do	25	"
Gervais,	do	100	"
Gentilly,	do	100	"
Godfrey,	do	25	"
Grove Park,	do	100	"
Hammond,	do	50	"
Hill River,	do	25	"
Hubbard,	do	50	"
Keystone,	do	125	"
Kertsonville,	do	50	"
King,	do	50	"
Lambert,	do	20	"
Lake Pleasant,	do	100	"
Louisville,	do	70	"
Liberty,	do	125	"
Lowell,	do	10	"
Nesbit,	do	100	"
North,	do	100	"
Northland,	do	33⅓	"
Numedal,	do	125	"
Onstad,	do	100	"
Parnell,	do	25	"
Polk Centre,	do	125	"
Queen,	do	25	"
River Falls,	do	70	"
Roome,	do	25	"
Rosebud,	do	33⅓	"
Russia,	do	25	"
Sandsville,	do	50	"
Sletten,	do	15	"
Tabor,	do	125	"
Terrebonne,	do	30	"
Tilden,	do	10	"
Tynsid,	do	50	"
Nineland,	do	80	"
Wyandotte,	do	30	"
Winger,	do	75	"
Woodside,	do	25	"
Columbia,	do	100	"

Board adjourned until 10 o'clock a. m. Tuesday.

MELODIANS AND ORGANS.

Crookston,	raised	25	per cent.
Euclid,	do	100	"
Fanny,	do	25	"
Fisher,	do	50	"
Fisher village,	do	25	"
Grand Forks,	do	50	"
Garden,	do	50	"
Garfield,	do	50	"
Godfrey,	do	15	"
Grove Park,	do	10	"
Hammond,	do	50	"
Higdem,	do	25	"
Huntsville,	do	25	"
King,	do	25	"
Lowell,	do	50	"
Polk Centre,	do	25	"
Red Lake Falls,	do	100	"
Reis,	lowered	20	"
Rocksbury.	raised	50	"
St Hilaire village	do	25	"
Tabor,	lowered	15	"
Terrebonne,	raised	50	"
Vineland.	do	25	"

PIANOFORTES.

Crookston, city	raised	25	per cent.
Fisher,	lowered	33⅓	"
Huntsville,	raised	50	"
Red Lake Falls,	do	100	"
Reis,	do	50	"
E. G. Forks, city	do	200	"

HOUSEHOLD AND OFFICE FURNITURE.

Angus,	raised	25	per cent.
Black River,	do	15	"
Brandsvold,	do	100	"
Bray,	do	20	"
Belgium,	do	25	"
Bygland,	do	10	"
Crookston, city	do	12½	"
Crookston,	do	10	"
Euclid,	lowered	15	"
Farley,	raised	75	"
Fisher, village	lowered	25	"
Grand Forks,	raised	100	"
Garden,	do	300	"
Gervais,	do	10	"
Hammond,	do	100	"
Hubbard,	do	50	"
Keystone,	do	50	"
King,	lowered	30	"
Lambert,	raised	25	"
Liberty,	do	50	"
Lowell,	do	25	"
Nesbit,	lowered	50	"

Board adjourned till 2 o'clock p. m.

Polk Centre,	raised	50	"
Red Lake Falls,	do	50	"
Roome,	do	20	"
Rosebud,	do	100	"
St Hilaire, village	do	75	"
Tynsid,	do	25	"
Vineland,	do	50	"
E. G. Forks, city	do	100	"

AGRICULTURAL TOOLS IMPLEMENTS AND MACHINERY.

Black River,	raised	25	per cent.
Badger,	lowered	30	"
Bygland,	raised	10	"
Euclid,	lowered	10	"
Huntsville,	raised	25	"
Lambert,	do	100	"
Lake Pleasant,	do	50	"
Poplar River,	do	30	"
Red Lake Falls,	do	25	"
Rosebud,	do	50	"
Sullivan,	do	25	"
Terrebonne,	do	20	"
Tilden,	do	25	"
Tynsid,	do	75	"
Vineland,	do	50	"
E. G. Forks, city	do	30	"

Board adjourned to 10 o'clock a. m.

Item 18 page 11 Red Lake Falls was stricken out.

Proceedings of Board of County Commissioners Crookston July 23d, 1888.

On application of citizens of Garden township the sum of ten dollars was allowed Tollef Nelson for board and care of a minor pauper.

The petition of Ole P. Oastead and others, asking that certain territory be attached to school district No. 10, was presented and granted, and Sec. 4, 9, 16, 21, 22, 23, 25, 26, 27, 28, 33, 34, 35 and 36, in Tp. 148, R. 45, were attached.

Sec's 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 6, Tp. 149, R. 43, were attached to school district No. 60.

The chair appointed Commissioners Thompson, Hunt and Kirsch, a finance committee.

In the matter of the school petition of Hans E. Bjorge and others from Vineland, a hearing was set at the October session.

The se¼ of Poplar River Tp. was organized into a new school district.

The sw¼ of Poplar River Tp. was organized into a new school district.

The individual school petitions from Knute Tp. were received, and a hearing set at the October session of the Board.

The following county physicians were appointed: Dr. Carmanton, of Fosston, at $200 per annum, Dr. Harriman, of Grand Forks, at $225 per annum, Dr. Denniston, of Crookston, at $199 per annum, Dr. Lemieux, of Red Lake Falls was retained at same salary as in 1887, subject to the approval of the Commissioner of the 4th district.

The sum of $300 was appropriated out of the 2d district road and bridge fund to Nesbit Tp. for road and bridge purposes on the town line between Fisher and Roome Tps.

The sum of $75 was appropriated out of the 4th district road and bridge fund to Poplar River Tp.

A retail liquor license was granted K. K. Austin, of Rosebud Tp., and his bond approved.

The sum of $50 was appropriated out of the 4th district road and bridge fund to Sanders Tp. Nels K. Anderson, of said town, was appointed a committee of one to attend to the work.

The Auditor was authorized and directed to issue refunding order for amount of Norman County tax certificates, which have been cancelled, and to request the Auditor of Norman County to collect the amount found due Polk County on account of such refunding.

Com'r Kirsch presented report on appropriation for range line between Lowell and Crookston Tps., which was approved. The amounts as verified were ordered paid out of the 3d dist. road and bridge fund.

The sum of $200 was appropriated out of the 3d district road and bridge fund to Angus Tp.

The committee on repairs of county bridge 5 miles east of Crookston, presented report, which was approved.

The sum of $150 was appropriated out of the 3d district road and bridge fund to Parnell Tp.

The sum of $50 was appropriated to Fairfax Tp. out of the 3d district road and bridge fund, to be expended under the direction of the chairman of supervisors of said town.

In the matter of the school petition of O. O. Bergland and Joseph LaFramboise, a hearing was set at the October session of the Board.

A petition from Gordon Tp. for poor aid was referred to Com'r Berghahl with power to act.

The committee on petition for county road to Gentilly was accepted.

The road petition of Remi Fortier and others was presented and referred to a committee of the whole, to meet at the Gentilly house, on the 8th day of August, at 2 o'clock p. m., preparatory to entering on their duties as such committee.

The following appropriations were made out of the 1st district road and bridge fund, to-wit: Reis Tp. $150; Tilden Tp. $100; Godfrey Tp. $75.

The appropriations heretofore made to Brandszold, Rosebud, Sletten and Fanny Tps. were ordered paid.

The taxes levied for the years 1883-4-5 on nw¼ 26-152-50 were cancelled.

The claims of Dr. A. Nelson, Ole Wrad and J. C. Johnson were referred to Com'r Bergdahl.

The committee reported on the road petition of John Anderson and others, and report accepted and petition denied.

The sum of $66 was ordered refunded the Minneapolis and Northern Elevator Co. on account of erroneous assessment for 1887.

The sum of $1.50 was ordered refunded B. Garrisch, on account of excessive valuation for the year 1887.

The following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the sum of $100 be allowed from the 4th District Road and Bridge fund, payable to the treasurer of the town of Polk Centre, to be used by the supervisors of said town for the purpose of building a bridge across the Black River at the crossing by Chas. Kindler's.

Be it further resolved, That the sum of five hundred dollars, or so much of said amount as may be necessary, be appropriated out of the 4th District Road and Bridge fund, for the purpose of building a bridge across the cooley on the county road between E. Rouk and Wm. Cyr, in the town of Louisville. The commissioner of the 4th District is hereby authorized to advertise for bids and contract for same.

The sum of ten dollars per month for the months of July and August was allowed out of the poor fund to Minnie Erickson of the 4th Dist.

Com. Kirsch was appointed a committee of one to ascertain the cost of repairs on the county jail.

The bids for building of a vault were presented as follows:

Charles Jefferson	$1227 00
W. Erdman	939 00

On motion the contract was awarded the lowest bidder, and the auditor was directed to prepare contract and $2,000 bond, to be properly executed.

The uncollected personal property tax list of was revised according to law.

The sum of ten dollars per month, from July 1st 1888, was allowed B. Supernault, a 3d Dist. pauper.

Com. Kirsch was appointed a committee of one to superintend the erection of the vault.

The sum of $175 was ordered paid Peter Cornelius, being balance of appropriation for road work on the town line between Fairfax and Crookston Tps.

The following estimate of expenditures for the current year was made to wit:

For salaries and fees of county officers	$16,850 00
District court	3,900 00
Justice court	675 00
Light, fuel and repairs of Co. buildings	2,000 00
Books, stationery, printing and advertising	2,500 00
Insanity	750 00
Town clerks' fees	400 00
County Jail	500 00
County poor	5,000 00
County bridges	5,000 00
Interest on bonds	7,000 00

The county auditor was directed to levy said amounts upon the taxable valuation for the year 1888.

Finance committee reported the following claims for allowance:

Wm Welsh, juror at coroners inquest	$ 62
Hostetter Bros., bridge planks and spikes, 1st district	9 57
Pioneer Press Co.	1 10
J A Bemis, board and lodgings for jury and officers	100 00
Johnson, Olson & Co, 6 lbs Chloride lime	1 50
Dr M Watts, examination of Emelia Wohl	5 00
D F McDonald, services at coroners inquest witness fees etc	5 40
Wm Kelly, services at coroners inquest	1 20
Welsh & Creighton, conveying dead body to Oakdale cemetery	3 00
E A Brown, deputy sheriff at coroners' inquest	5 20
W E McKenzie, printing and stationery	255 00
J Freeborn, witness at coroners inquest	1 20
Jas Simpson, " " "	1 12
A Courtright, " " "	1 84
E O Flanders, juror " "	1 12
Geo H Pollard, " " "	1 20
Wm F Arnold, services on county road	41 00
G H Barlow, juror at coroners inquest	1 20
A Kaiser, printing	13 50
F J Duffy "	13 59
E F Elliot, visiting schools and disbursements for express and postage	33 05
H Shepard, fees of county coroner	20 65
A Generoux, water for court house	2 40
J S Chapin, assessing 3d district	78 00
H Shepard, coroners fees	15 40
O H Bjoin, team for county surveyor	10 00
G D Barnard, books & blanks for county	160 15
Nelson & Opheim, medicines for county paupers	8 75
T Murray, juror at coroners' inquest	1 20
H E Stansbury "	1 20
G H Holt, constable fees	1 45
T C Shapleigh, justice fees	4 45
"	2 20
L A Blanchard, care and board for sick pauper 1st district	3 57
Andrew Starmoen, care and board for sick pauper	18 00
H R Nolan, work on and material for bridge 3d district	37 71
N O Paulsrud, sheriff fees	17 35
John Freeborn, assistant coroner	5 00
Geo Bunzy, constable fees	18 80
" "	15 75
D Welsh, witness in justice court	1 12
Grand Forks Furniture Co., coffin and digging grave for James Clark, 5th district	25 00
N O Paulsrud, sheriff fees	100 00
Peter Becker, ice for court house	22 55
P J McGuire, member county board of equalization $18, and postage and express $7.37	25 35
O H Bergdahl, attendance on county board of equalization, 6 days and mileage	27 00
H Thompson, attendance on county board and county board of equalization	37 86
T Sullivan, commissioners fese $62.40 attendance on paupers $6	68 40
F E Hunt, commissioners fees $62.30 attendance on paupers $9	71 30
M E Kirsch, commissioners fees, committee work and attendance on paupers	121 00
O H Bergdahl, commissioners fees, committee work and attendance on paupers	101 00
P Pearce, juror at coroners inquest	1 20
Nels M Olson, witness at "	1 84
John M Olson, " "	1 84
E J Regan, " "	1 84
A Wentzel, juror "	1 20
Joseph Jarvis, witness "	1 12
C S Spendley, drawing grand and petite jurors	3 50
C S Spendley, justice fees	9 95
O H Lucken, postage	35 31
Xavier Lambert, team hire and telegram to county coroner	4 70
Krostue & Torrisen, poor aid for Rhoda Anderson	12 00
Ezra F. Elliot, postage, expense, drayage, etc., and deputy hire	71 50
A. Brandenberg, board for Annie Maxwell at Fergus Falls	15 28
N O Paulsrud, sheriff fees	23 30
S L Collins, rig for Wm. Marin and Co. surveyor	6 50
Ed Schroeder, team hire for Kirsch, 3d district road and bridge fund	2 00
S B Curtis, marshall fees	3 46
M B Hayes, taking Annie Maxwell to jail at Fergus Falls	34 50
John Walters, witness fees in justice court	1 00
J C O'Brien, 346 feet plank	6 92
N O Paulsrud, sheriff fees	11 70
James W Kelly, witness fees in Justice Court	1 60
R Huntley, digging graves for paupers	6 00
S L Collins, a rig at a pauper's funeral (2d district)	2 00
Elie Archambeault, coffin for a pauper of 3d district	10 80
Mrs W H Stewart, board for a sick pauper	12 00
F J Duffy, juror at coroner's inquest	1 20
Sylvian Bergevin, 7¼ days assessing 4th district	15 80
Ira Hutchins, witness at coroner's inquest	1 12
Mike Palen, juror at coroner's inquest	1 28
Pioneer Press company, blanks for Co	20 20
Crookston Furniture Co., coffins for paupers, poor fund, 3d district	25 00
Oluf N Paulsrud, assisting janitor during twelve days June term of court	24 00
A C Schmidt, merchandise (glass)	19 25
Grand Forks Plaindealer, mortgage and deed records and blanks	56 00
A R Holston, bal. of bill for justice fees	3 00
Rapp & Holmes, merchandise for pauper	10 00
Antoine Lizotte, lumber for culvert and work on county road 4th dist	12 00
A. D Kelly, justice fees	4 60
do do	6 15
Nels O Paulsrud, sheriff fees	80 70
do do	15 60
do do	3 98
do do	24 40
do do	19 00
do do	25 00
do do	72 14
A Brandenburg, committing Lindblour	4 42
A Stone, juror at coroner's inquest	1 20
Pioneer Press Co., 1 book notice of explanation of redemption	7 50
Wm Marin, assisting a surveyor 2d dist. R & B	6 50
H O Bygland, taking a pauper from Fertile to Fosston	3 00
W F Arnold, services on Co road and expenses	41 00

The board of auditors presented the following report which was approved.

To the Hon. Board of Com. of Polk County, Minnesota.

The undersigned, the board of auditors of said county, respectfully report that we have this day visited the office of the county treasurer of said county, without any previous notice to County treasurer, and have counted and ascertained the funds in said treasury, and found the following correct, to wit,

Cash deposited in the First Nat. Bank Crookston	$ 7650 60
Cash deposit in Mer. Nat. Crookston	5571 59
do Scandia do	6610 97
do Bank of Fisher	6237 58
Currency, silver, pennies and nickels	15 46
Town and school orders	31 56
	$26426 71
Less excess	3 85
Net Cash	$26,422 86

Respectfully submitted,

TIM SULLIVAN, Ch. Bd. Co. Com.
PETER J. McGUIRE, Co. Auditor. } Bd. Auditors Polk Co Minn

The claims of H L Gaylord and Knute I. Sanberg were returned for correction

The claim of S. A. Wallace was rejected.

The claim of N O Paulsrud amounting to four hundred and sixty-three and 50-100 dollars was rejected.

The sum of $12 was allowed Rhoda Anderson of Fisher out of the poor fund in addition to monthly aid, order payable to Krosine & Torison.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

STATE OF MINNESOTA, } ss
County of Polk

The board of county commisioners of the county of Polk, do hereby order and determine that the said county be and the same is hereby organized into a drainage district under and by virtue of the provisions of chapter ninety-eight [98], of the general laws of 1887.

TIM SULLIVAN,
Chairman.

Dated Crookston, Polk Co. Minn. July 25, 1888.

Attest:
P. J. McGUIRE,
County Auditor.

The school petitions of E H Nesbit, Joseph Cline and Nels Knudsen were approved

The S½ of Sec 16, 17 and 18 in Tp 151, R 43, were attached to school district No 129.

A hearing was set at the October session of the board in the matter of the school petition of John A. Henry, August Nelson and Bernard Rodrique.

On motion board adjourned to Aug. 9th, at 10 a. m.

P. J. McGUIRE.
Clerk of Co. Board.

alifornia Wines and Brandies.

Max Ericsson is constantly receiving California Wines and Brandies, the choicest of liquors of all kinds at wholesale and retail, which he can supply at the shortest notice. No use to send below for such things, as Max can supply them as cheaply and of as good quality as you can get anywhere. Go and see what Max can do for you.

For Sale.

A full blood Jersey bull calf. Will sell cheap for cash or trade for a colt, heifer calves, a few pigs or anything but dogs or cats. I have no use for the animal, and he is too valuable to veal. Address, M. E. BARTLETT, Fairfax.

S. L. COLLINS

PROPRIETOR OF

MAIN STREET

Livery, Feed and Sale Stables

CORNER MAIN AND FOURTH STS, WEST SIDE,

Crookston, - - - Minnesota.

Horses bought and sold on commission.
Everything neat and nobby.
Feeding a specialty.

FINE HEARSE

in connection which I will attend to in person.

1878. 1888.

Fontaine & Anglim,

Have the largest and most complete stock of goods in the city, consisting, in part, of

CARPETS AND HOUSE FURNISHING GOODS, DRY GOODS, NOTIONS BOOTS AND SHOES, GENTS', YOUTH'S AND CHILDREN'S CLOTHING STAPLE AND FANCY GROCERIES.

Pries very Low. Farmers' Produce Taken in Exchange.

THE CROOKSTON AUCTION AND COMMISSION STORE.

SECOND HAND GOODS of all kinds Bought and Sold. Also Sold on Commission. We are prepared to sell Stock and Machinery at our Yards in Crookston, or to attend Sales anywhere in Polk County at Reasonable Rates. Orders solicited. It will be to your interest to see our stock of

SECOND-HAND AND NEW GOODS

And get prices before purchasing elsewhere.

BERTHIAUM AND MICHAUD, Proprietors,
BROADWAY, - - - CROOKSTON, MINN.,
Between Robert and Fletcher Streets.

THE BEE HIVE!

Established in 1879.

HACK & GALLASCH

Invite Your Attention to Their New

SPRING AND SUMMER STOCK

OF EVERYTHING IN THE LINE OF

DRY GOODS, NOTIONS, BOOTS AND SHOES, HATS AND CAPS.

IN OUR GROCERY AND PROVISION DEPARTMENT

Will be found a Full and Complete Stock of Fresh and Reliable Goods which we can sell at the very Lowest Living rates. We point with pride to our CHINA DEPARTMENT and challenge any competitor to beat it. Goods delivered free to any part of the city. When in need of anything in our line, call and see

HACK & GALLASCH. COR. MAIN & SECOND STS.

D. H. BATES,

DEALER IN

Lumber, Building Paper,

PAINTS, OILS,

DOORS, WINDOWS, AND MOULDINGS

A O

FARM MACHINERY

AGENT FOR THE CELEBRATED

MILWAUKEE HARVESTER,

(FORMERLY THE DENNETT,)

AND THE CELEBRATED

WINONA PLOWS

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

☞ You will find it to your advantage to call when need of anything in my line.

D. H. BATES,
CARMAN. - - - MINN

MONTANA SHORT LINE.

When traveling every one should consider well the questions of economy, comfort, safety and speed, these questions being of the same importance in a journey of an hour as in one of several days' ride. An examination of the map will convince anyone that this is the most direct route to and from all the principal points in Central and Northern Minnesota, Dakota and Montana. Our epuipment and time are excellent. Our rates are the lowest, but this fact is something which speaks for itself. Definite figures and maps can be obtained by applying to any Agent of the Company, or the General Passenger Agent.

The following are a few of the Principal Points reached via this Line:

ST. CLOUD, SAUK CENTRE, FERGUS FALLS, CROOKSTON, ST. VINCENT, HUTCHINSON, PAYNESVILLE, MORRIS, APPLETON AND BRECKENRIDGE, MINN.; WATERTOWN, ABERDEEN, ELLENDALE, WAHPETON, FARGO, GRAND FORKS, GRAFTON, DEVILS LAKE, BOTTINEAU AND BUFORD, DAKOTA; GLASGOW, DAWES (FT. BELKNAP), ASSINNIBOINE, FT. BENTON, GREAT FALLS, HELENA AND BUTTE, MONTANA; WINNIPEG, MANITOBA, AND ALL PACIFIC COAST POINTS.

Parties seeking farms or business locations will find unusual opportunities for both on this line in Northern Dakota and Montana, also in Minnesota where the Company has for sale at low prices and on favorable terms 2,000,000 acres of excellent farming, grazing and timber lands. For maps and other information address,

J. BOOKWALTER, Land Commissioner. C. H. WARREN, Gen'l Pass. Ag't.
ST. PAUL, MINN.
A. MANVEL, Gen'l Manager. W. S. ALEXANDER, Gen'l Traffic Manager.

FROM ST. PAUL No. 3daily	Miles.	STATIONS.	TO ST. PAUL, No 4 d'ly
5:03 p. m.	00	Lv...St. Paul...Ar	7:00 a. m.
6:10 p. m.	11	....Minneapolis....	6:25 "
10:15 a. m.	295	....Crookston....	5:35 p. m.

No. 3. Through sleeper to Fergus Falls, Crookston and Winnipeg.
No. 4. Through sleeper from Winnipeg, Crookston and Fergus Falls.

CROOKSTON AND MINOT—Trains leave Crookston daily, Sundays excepted at 10:20 a. m. and arrive at Crookston from Minot at 5:15 p. m. Sundays excepted.

ST. HILAIRE BRANCH—Trains leave Crookston Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 10:15 a. m. arriving in St. Hilaire at 12:15 p. m. Leave St. Hilaire same days at 2:00 p. m. arriving in Crookston at 4:00 p. m.

A. MANVEL, Gen'l Manager. C. H. MIX, Agent. C. H. WARREN, Gen'l Pass Agent
W. S. ALEXANDER, Traffic Manager.

Northern Pacific RAILROAD.

The New Route Between

Grand Forks,

AND

St. Paul,
Minneapolis,
Duluth,

And all points East. The direct line to

Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, British Columbia, Puget Sound and Alaska.

EXPRESS TRAINS DAILY,

To which are attached Pullman Palace Sleepers and Elegant Dining Cars. On overland trains, Emigrant Sleepers Free. The only line

YELLOWSTONE PARK.

TIME SCHEDULE.

Depart West Bound.		Arrive East Bound.
4:50 p. m.	St. Paul	7:00 a. m.
4:30 "	Minneapolis	6:35 "
3:45 "	Duluth	7:45 "
8:40 "	Brainerd	1:15 a. m.
1:00 a. m.	Winnipeg Junction	8:50 p. m.
2:33 "	Twin Valley	7:25 "
3:27 "	Fertile	6:31 "
4:00 "	Tilden	6:05 "
4:35 "	Red Lake Falls, { Depart	5:30 "
	{ Arrive	5:10 "
5:25 "	South Euclid	4:29 "
5:36 "	Bullington	4:20 "
5:44 "	Keystone	4:05 "
6:25 " Ar.	Grand Forks { De.	3:25 "
6:45 " De.	{ Ar.	3:20 "
7:12 "	Kelly's	3:05 "
7:27 "	Mekinock	2:50 "
7:42 "	Beans	2:37 "
7:31 "	Gilby	2:28 "
8:02 "	Johnstown	2:17 "
8:15 "	Forest River	2:05 "
8:25 "	Grafton	1:28 "
7:33 "	Drayton	12:50 "
10:15 " Arrive	Pembina	Depart 11:35 a m

☞ Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars between Grand Forks and St. Paul. Dining Cars on west bound trains. Coupon Tickets on sale to all points South, East and West. For full information as to time, rates, address

W. E. JERMAINE, Ticket Agent. Grand Forks.
CHAS. S. FEE, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

CLEVELAND HOUSE,

R. BURKHARDT, Prop.

Handy to Depot.
Handy to Post Office.
Handy to Land Office.
Handy to Stables.
Handy to Court House.

The most convenient Hotel to any business house and to deal with of any Hotel in the city. Give me a call. Terms $1. Yours truly,
RUDY BURKHARDT.

A. P. HOLAND

(Successor to S. S. Johnson.)

PHOTOGRAPHER

COPYING and ENLARGING

in all sizes and first-class work guaranteed.

PICTURE FRAMES

made to order, on short notice. Any work in my line neatly and promptly executed at lowest living rates.

☞ GIVE ME A CALL. ☜

Studio opposite Post Office,
Robert Street, - - - Crookston, Minn

The Polk County Journal.

H. E. COOKE, Editor and Proprietor. DEVOTED TO THE WELFARE OF POLK COUNTY. TERMS---$1.50 Per Annum

VOL. XII. CROOKSTON, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, AUGUST 23, 1888. NO. 18

Polk County Journal.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES,

One Dollar and Fifty Cents, if paid in advance, to any address inside of Polk County. If outside of Polk County 15 cents must be added for postage. If not paid in advance $2 per annum to any address.

ADVERTISING RATES.

SPACE.	1 w.	2 w.	3 w.	1 m.	3 m	6 m.	1 year
½ inch	$.50	$1 00	$1 25	$1 50	$3 00	4 50	$ 6 00
1 inch	75	1 25	1 75	2 00	4 50	6 00	10 00
2 inches	1 50	2 25	3 00	3 50	6 50	9 50	15 00
3 inches	1 75	2 75	3 75	4 50	9 50	13 50	20 00
4 inches	2 50	3 50	4 50	5 50	10 00	18 00	25 00
5 inches	3 00	4 00	5 00	6 00	12 50	20 00	30 00
¼ column	3 50	4 50	5 50	6 50	15 00	25 00	35 00
½ column	6 00	7 50	10 00	12 00	25 00	35 00	50 00
column	9 50	12 00	15 00	18 00	35 00	60 00	100 00

Entered at the Post Office in Crookston as Second Class matter.

MILLER, FOOTE & SWEATT,
ATTY'S-AT-LAW,
McKinnon Block, - - - rookston, Minn.

THE PIONEER HARNESS SHOP,
M. RAUE BUEHLER, Proprietor.
A full supply of everything kept by the trade.
Cor of Broadway and Third Sts,
CROOKSTON, - - MINN

D. H. FISK,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND LOAN AGENT.
Collections a Specialty.
FERTILE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA.

P. C. SCHMIDT,
ATTORNEY AT LAW. | MONEY TO LOAN
Crookston - Minn

H. STENEERSON,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
Crookston, Minn.

FRANK IVES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
AND
Solicitor of Patents and Pensions,
CROOKSTON, MINN.

Having special arrangements with one of the most reputable and responsible firms of Patent Lawyers in Washington, I can offer better inducements to inventors than can be secured elsewhere, and absolute certainty against "leakage" of valuable facts pertaining to business entrusted to my care.

A. H. DUNLOP, M. D.,
Graduate McGill University, Montreal.
LICENSED COLLEGE PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON QUEBEC.
Office on Second Street, Crookston.

M. M. VAN DYKE
Physician and Surgeon,
Office corner of Main and Second Streets,
CROOKSTON. - - - MINNESOTA

A. A. JUST, M. D.,
Homoeopathic Physician and Surgeon,
Office on Broadway, east side, opposite Wm. Anglim's residence.

A. C. WILKINSON,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
(Successor to R. A. Wilkinson,)
Room 5, Furnet Block | Crookston, Minn.

M. LeGUEE,
Veterinary Surgeon.
Residence and office on Jerome's Addition.
CROOKSTON, - - - MINN.

G. G. HENAULT
Practical Dentist,
SECOND STREET,
CROOKSTON, - - MINN

OFFICE IN DOBSON'S BLOCK,
Over Mrs. Bangs' Fashionable Millinery Store.

All work in my line skilfully and promptly performed, Give me a call.
G. G. HENAULT.

MINNESOTA HOUSE,
(FORMERLY BOX HOUSE.)
ONE-HALF BLOCK FROM DEPOT.
WM. HEIDRICH, - - Proprietor.

Having rented this Popular House and thoroughly re-fitted and re-furnished it throughout, I am now prepared to meet the wants of all who want good and cheap accommodations.

Farmers custom speciallyinvited,
Terms $1.00 per Day.

Fall Stock
—OF—Men's,
Boys'
AND Children's CLOTHING
ARRIVING
DAILY!
Desirable
Styles!
Standard
Quality!
Lowest
Prices!
It Pays to Trade at the
C. O. D.
Clothing House.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For President,
BENJ. HARRISON
Of Indiana.
For Vice President,
LEVI P. MORTON,
Of New York.
For Member of Congress, 5th District,
SOLOMON G. COMSTOCK,
Of Clay and Polk Counties.

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

A Republican State Convention for the state of Minnesota will be held on Wednesday, September 5th, 1888, in Market Hall, in the city of St. Paul, at 12 o'clock, noon, for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following positions:

Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.
One Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.
Governor.
Lieutenant Governor.
Secretary of State.
State Treasurer.
Attorney General.

And for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the convention.

All citizens who believe in the principles of the Republican party: who desire its success, and who will support the candidates nominated by the National Republican Convention held in Chicago, June 19th, 1888, are invited to co-operate in the election of delegates.

The counties are entitled to the following number of delegates and an equal number of alternates.

Aitkin	4	Martin	4
Anoka	5	Meeker	6
Becker	5	Mille Lacs	3
Beltrami	2	Morrison	4
Benton	3	Mower	7
Big Stone	4	Murray	4
Blue Earth	9	Nicollet	5
Brown	5	Nobles	4
Carlton	3	Norman	4
Carver	4	Olmsted	7
Cass	2	Otter Tail	11
Chippewa	4	Pine	3
Chisago	6	Pipe Stone	4
Clay	5	Polk	9
Cook	2	Pope	5
Cottonwood	4	Ramsey	20
Crow Wing	4	Redwood	4
Dakota	6	Renville	6
Dodge	5	Rice	8
Douglas	6	Rock	4
Faribault	6	St. Louis	10
Fillmore	9	Scott	3
Freeborn	7	Sherburne	4
Goodhue	12	Sibley	4
Grant	4	Stearns	6
Hennepin	23	Steele	6
Houston	6	Stevens	4
Hubbard	2	Swift	4
Isanti	5	Todd	5
Itasca	2	Traverse	4
Jackson	5	Wabasha	6
Kandiyohi	7	Wadena	4
Kanabec	8	Waseca	5
Kittson	3	Washington	7
Lac qui Parle	6	Watonwan	4
Lake	3	Wilkin	3
Le Sueur	7	Winona	8
Lincoln	4	Wright	8
Lyon	5	Yellow Medicine	5
McLeod	4
Marshall	4	Total	150

St. Paul, July 20, 1888.

JOHN S. PILLSBURY, Chairman.
JOEL P. HEATWOLE, Secretary.

The Chairmen or Secretaries of the different county conventions will please report to the Secretary of the State Central Committee, the names and post office address of the delegates and alternates, and also the county committeemen. If this is done promptly it will be of great service to the party, and insure prompt and active work. The State Committee request this kind favor of each county convention.

A Republican Legislative Convention for the 45th Legislative District will be held at the Court House, in the City of Crookston, County of Polk, and State of Minnesota, on Tuesday September 25th, A. D. 1888, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon for the purpose of placing in nomination a representative for said district in the State Legislature and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the convention.

The committee have adopted the basis of representation as fixed by the Republican State Convention under which the counties are entitled to the following number of delegates:

Beltrami	2
Kittson	3
Marshall	4
Norman	4
Polk	9

By order of Committee.
Dated at Crookston Aug. 16th, 1888.
H. E. IVES, Secretary, JOHN CROMB, Chairman.

To Anti-Saloon Republicacans.

Important Assistance that Every Republican can Render by Prompt Action.

The Anti-Saloon Republican National Committee has removed its headquarters to No. 1 Broadway, New York City, and desires to hear from temperance republicans in every part of the country in reference to all matters of interest in their respective localities. It is especially anxious to know who are willing to do something to help the cause of temperance and republicanism. All such will oblige by writing at once, giving a short statment of the condition of sentiment in their respective localities, with suggestions as to what should be done to improve matters. Mere common scolds and pessimistic grumblers will oblige by not trespassing on our time.

ALBERT GRIFFIN,
Ch'n Anti-Saloon Rep. Nat'l Com.
No. 1 Broadway, N. Y. City. [16-tf]

True Friends of Temperance.

Grant County Farmer.

Among the earnest supporters of the Harrison ticket in New Jersey are members of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union. A branch of this society exists in every parish in the state. The temperance men are incensed at the free rum proclivities of the New Jersey democracy. For the past ten years a crusade has been carried on in the Catholic temperance societies in behalf of high license, and although the democrats at election time invariably promised to agitate the matter in the legislature, nothing was done until last winter, when the republicans passed the high license law. Now the temperance voters declare they will rebuke the whisky party, and a movement is under way to aid in the election of the republican ticket, on the ground of morality and public expediency.

Labor Echo; William L. Scott, the coal baron, who pays lower wages than any other operator, and who employs Pinkerton detectives to coerce his miners, who pays his hands in store orders, and who is generally denounced by labor organizations as a tyranical master, will have charge of Mr. Cleveland's campaign. Scott has been elected chairman of the national democratic executive committee.

Good-By, Old Grover, Good-By.

(Air: "Good-by, My Lover, Good-by.")

The train is coming
Around the bend.
Good-by, old Grover good-by!
It's loaded down
With Harrison men,
Good-by, old Grover, good-by!

CHORUS.

Bye, Free-Trade baby!
Rock it, Grover, tenderly!
Bye, Free-Trade baby!
We'll smash the cradle!
Good-by!

Free trade is busted,
Protection, we say!
Good-by, old Grover, good-by!
Roast beef to eat,
Two dollars a day!
Good-by, old Grover, good-by!

The time has come
For loyal men—
Good-by, old Grover, good-by!
To shoot the bandanna
And vote for Ben!
Good-by, old Grover, good-by!

The duty on wool
We'll keep the same!
Good-by, old Grover, good-by!
If you don't believe it
Just ask Jim Blaine!
Good-by, old Grover, good-by!

The same on salt,
Both fine and rock!
Good-by, old Grover, good-by!
We'll have remain
Says Frank Hiscock!
Good-by, old Grover, good-by!

No rebel flags
Will be returned!
Good-by, old Grover, good-by!
Those veto cranks
True soldiers spurn!
Good-by, old Grover, good-by!

Your colors are out,
The English rag!
Good-by, old Grover, good-by!
We still unfurl
The American flag!
Good-by, old Grover, good-by!

Tippecanoe
And Morton, too!
Good-by, old Grover, good-by!
If you can't remember
You will in November!
Good-by, old Grover, good-by!

The Red Bandanna.

(Air: "Hold the Fort.")

Ho! ye voters, see the symbols
Waving in the sky;
Reinforcements now are coming,
Victory is nigh!
Look not on the old bandanna,
When it's colored red;
But support our Nation's banner
It is far ahead.

See the motley crowd advancing
Grover leading on!
Mighty men their ranks deserting,
All their hopes are gone.
Look not on the old bandanna
When it's painted red;
'Tis the symbol of oppression,
Take the flag instead.

See our glorious banner waving,
Hear our speaker's voice!
In our leader's name we'll triumph,
Then we'll all rejoice.
Look not on the old bandanna
Which is colored red;
'Tis the symbol of secession,
Raise the flag instead.

Thousands have deserted Grover
And his hungry crew;
Always longing for an office,
Nothing else will do.
Look not on the old bandanna
When it's colored red;
But admire our Nation's banner,
Thurman's rag we'll shed.

Grover's broken every promise,
Made all matters worse;
We'll reduce that awful surplus
From his frame and purse.
Look not on the old bandanna
When it's colored red;
Bless and cheer our Nation's banner,
It is far ahead.

Fierce and long the campaign rages,
But our victory's near;
All support our noble leaders,
Cheer, ye voters, cheer!
Look not on the old bandanna
While it's colored red;
'Tis a product of old England,
Cheer the flag instead.

Ex-Rebel Officials in Dakota.

Minneapolis Evening Journal

It is a generally accepted fact that the population of Dakota contains a larger proportion of ex-Union soldiers than any other section of the country. following up the same subject, it would appear perfectly right and natural if a corresponding proportion of the veterans in the territory held office. But they do not. Even the patriotic, but stay-at-home civilians do not seem to have the largest official plums. By whom are the offices held then?

By ex-rebels!

A Deadwood correspondent furnishes the following list of offices in that city filled by ex-confederates:

Judge, United States and district court, C. M. Thomas, ex-rebel and carpet-bagger, Kentucky; clerk, United States and district court, W. H. Jones, ex-rebel and carpet-bagger, from Kentucky; United States commissioner, W. H. Jones, ex-rebel and carpet-bagger, from Kentucky; deputy United States marshall, Felix Ingram, ex-rebel; postmaster, Deadwood, B. P. Smith, ex-rebel; A. D. C. to Gov. Church, Huger Wilkinson, ex-rebel.

It cannot be called waving the bloody shirt to criticise the administration which has made possible this extraordinary list. Given the facts, and what do we find?

That Dakota is a Republican territory.

That by rights it should be two Republican states.

That, other things being equal, its offices should be filled by Republicans

That a large proportion of its offices should be filled with ex-Union soldiers

But the contrary is true, to-wit:

Dakota is kept out of the Union by a Democratic administration, for political purposes.

The great majority of its federal and territorial offices are filled by Democrats, appointed because of their value to the party, many of whom are non-residents.

Many of these appointees are ex-rebels, while resident ex-Union soldiers are not only debarred from holding office, but, with all other citizens of the territory, are disfranchised by the non-admittance of Dakota to the Union.

Here are six federal and territorial offices in Deadwood alone held by men who bore arms against the Union, while not a single federal or territorial office in the city is filled by an ex Union soldier. It is to be hoped the same ratio does not hold in the rest of Dakota and the other territories.

No further comment is necessary. The facts speak for themselves and suggest their own moral.

The Third Party.

An Earnest Man Who Firmly Believes That the Republican Party Is Good Enough for Him.

Iowa State Register:

"Why dont you join the third party? I thought you were a prohibitionist!" exclaimed a zealous young brother to me the other day. Let me answer my ardent young friend and all others like him. Like yourself, I supposed I was a prohibitionist. I suspect I was one before you were born. No saloonkeeper where I have lived for the last thirty years has doubted it. No enemy of the saloon who lived in my community ever questioned it. I have run the whole gauntlet of stones, knives, pistols, and threatened hangings, drownings, and burnings, with the usual "tar, feathers and rail" accompaniments. For six years I fought with the "beasts" of that modern "Ephesus" where Haddock fell. I was so "orthodox" a prohibitionist that the first "third party" convention that ever met in Iowa made me its candidate for governor—in my absence and without my knowledge—and I didn't back down from the race. The third party kept up its fight until the Republican party agreed to submit a prohibitory amendment to a vote of the people of Iowa. This hand wrote the resolution that went into the platform, and when that resolution carried I nominated Sherman for governor in the convention and immediately proclaimed to the prohibitionists of Iowa that the time had come for every temperance man to rally to the

SUPPORT OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY,

both on the account of its attitude on the question of temperance, and also because of the fact that saloonists all over the state were repudiating the party for giving us a chance to vote upon the saloon question. The resul was an overwhelming majority for prohibition followed by the enactment of the best, and in the main, the best enforced prohibitory law on this planet; and to day the Republican party is the prohibition party in Iowa. Instead of prohibitionists of Iowa now stultifying themselves by going back upon the party that has done so much for our cause, we are hoping and believing that the "sober second thought" of our brethren in other states will lead them to do as we have done. We did not "fight" the Republican party, as these modern third party champions are doing. We pressed the claims of our homes and our hearts upon the politicians, and fought only the saloon. So that, when we were able to command the attention of the party, it had not been made our enemy by our abuse and villification. Not so these modern third party evangelists. Their chief "organ," having a copperhead editor of "Confederate" proclivities, spews out more venomous screed against the Republican party than it has shown toward the saloons and the devil and the Democrat party altogether! That which makes copperheads and traitors hate the Republican party, should and will make loyal and true citizens, ponder well before casting a vote where it will inevitably strengthen and perpetuate the power of the party that is the true ally both of the rebel and the saloonkeeper. Furthermore, I may as well say right here that when the third party convention nominated ex-rebel Gen. Brooks for vice president it "reckoned without its host," or rather, it reckoned itself out of a 'host' of votes that it might otherwise have secured. Men may prate as they like about "reviving old animosities" and about "forgiveness" and all that. I can and will forgive any ex-rebel

WHO REPENTS OF HIS TREASON,

but forgiveness does not compel me to vote for him for an office that no extrator ought ever be nominated to fill. Every man in the rebel army who had sense enough to be general ought to have been "fixed" so that neither the unrepentant rebels of the South nor the short-sighted Proibitionists of the North would have a chance to vote for him. They should have been disfranchised and some of their "shining lights" hung before the third party was hatched. Another thing: the Democratic party are already laying plans and raising money to help "boom" the third party Prohibition ticket in all the doubtful states. The suggestive fact has leaked out from the hightest councils. The saloons and whisky rings will "come down" handsomely to aid this boom, because, if it is only big enough, the Democrat party, with its saloons and hoodlums, will rule the country four years longer. When the devil wants a thing right bad, I dont want it at all. When he begins to encourag and co-operate in any measure, however sacred, we want to forcast a little; otherwise "the very elect" may bcome his tool for scutting the only ark of safety for loyalty, virtue and human atonement that can possibly reach the harbor of success. Harrison and Morton are men whose names whose political and moral charcters, and whose popularity with the saloon element all conspire to afford to the thoughtful men the surest guarntee of the cause of temperance in their hands. The "Boutelle resolution" commits the Republican party to active hostility to the saloon curse.

THE ORGANS OF THE WHISKY RINGS

so interpret it, and are rallying their cohorts against that party. Let the prohibitionists in other states be as wise in their generation as the prohibitionists in Iowa, and the record of the Republican party of Iowa will speedily become the record of the party throught the nation. But if the third party shall again defeat the Republicans and continue the dominion of the Democracy, treason and hoodlumism, let me say to the mad leaders of that movement, as Mordecai said to Esther, "Think not with thyself that thou shalt escape." Think not to make yourselves other than the laughing stock of those triumphing hoodlums. Think not—as some party so fondly hope—that the Republican party will then fall to pieces, and that its members gravitate naturaly to those who are abusing them like pickpockets. Think not that the Republican party, whose history is the history of the nation's wisest statesmen, truest patriots, saintliest martyrs, and most illustrious warriors—the party of the Union soldier and of the ever multiplying generations of sons whose glory in their veins are enriched with the blood of the Union soldier—the party of the freedom and the protected American labor—think not that the party is thug to die. It is vital with too many hallowed memories and sacred associations to perish thus. It will live when we are all gone to dust. Let us wisely help to make her the emancipator of the slaves of rum as she has been of the slaves of the defendants of the old English coolies.

JOHN HOGARTH LOZIER.

Here is a nut for the Prohibitionists to crack: The republican party contains five times as many temperance men as the prohibition party—the republican party has given the country all the effective prohibition it has today—the republican party has never refused to take up this question whenever a majority of the people were ready to support it—the republican party has even yielded to prohibition sentiment and submitted the question before a majority of the people would support it—the republican party has enacted prohibitory laws in opposition to both the democratic party and the third party prohibitionists—the republican party has always supported measures looking to the restriction of saloons. With these facts before them how can any temperance man consistently weaken this party when by so doing it would give the control of the country to the party which is acknowledged and professes to be the friend and champion of the liquor rings and the saloons? Can any third party prohibitionist crack this nut to the satisfaction of reasonable men.

The Minnesota Loan and Trust Co.
HAVE ESTABLISHED AN AGENCY AT CROOKSTON.
MONEY LOANED ON IMPROVED FARMS,
IN ANY PART OF THE RED RIVER VALLEY.
NO DELAY! NO BONUS!
Money Supplied the Moment Notes are Signed. Letters of inquiry promptly answered.
STEENERSON & McMANUS, Agents,
Two doors South of U. S. Land Office. CROOKSTON, MINN

We are established in Crookston TO STAY. We do not do business here this year to go away the next. In loaning money, as in other business, we have a character for fair dealing to sustain Call on us before going elsewhere. Remember all interest on our loans is payable at our office.

STEENERSON & McMANUS.

ALWAYS ON THE WINGS OF TIME
And Ready for Business, to Serve Customers to the Best of their interest, at the Popular Jewelry Store of

C. H. SAAKE,

I am absolutely without a competitor; my store contains the Best Goods that can be obtained, and at prices that no other dealer can afford to sell at. My success is the best guarantee and the reward of good work, of good treatment, and the established fact that I have given full value for every dollar left with me. Be sure and call before buying elsewhere.

C. H. SAAKE,
The Jeweler, Main St., Opposite Merchants' Nat'l Bank.

NEW CIGAR STORE,
SIGN OF THE BIG INJUN.
H. F. BROWN, Proprietor
Second Street,
CROOKSTON, - - - MINN.

Cigars of every known brand, from a cheroot of a 25 center. Cigarettes, Chewing and Smoking Tobaccos of all kinds, Snuff, Pipes to suit the fancy of all, from a corn-cob pipe to a meerschaum.

Particular attention is invited to our line of Meerschaum Goods. NONE FINER IN THE NORTHWEST.

Drop In and See the New Store!
H. F. BROWN.

NEW MEAT MARKET
At Steenerson Bros. Old Stand, on Main Street,
SANDS BROTHERS, Prop's.

Having purchased this stand we have put in a large and complete stock of Fresh and Salt Meats of all kinds, secured the services of a thoroughly competent butcher, and are now ready to supply the Choicest Roasts and Steaks of Beef, Pork, Mutton, and everything in our line. We invite your patronage. Orders delivered when desired.

SANDS BRO'S, MAIN STREET.

THE SECOND HAND STORE,
(Yvernault's Old Place,)
Main Street, - - Crookston, Minn,
KEEPS A FINE, LARGE STOCK OF
NEW FURNITURE;
At Prices Unrivalled in this market. Also a Large Stock of
SECOND HAND FURNITURE,

Little worn. Parties desiring to dispose of Old Furniture can exchange it with me for New Furniture at a Bargain, or I will Pay Cash for it. Call and see my stock and get prices

PETER GOTHIA.

Polk County Journal.

W. G. COOKE, Publisher.

CROOKSTON, MINN., AUGUST 23.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

'Round Home.

Mrs. Jas. Sheasgreen is improving in health.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Cooke are visiting the editorial family this week.

Many are busy in the harvest-field this week. A few commenced last week.

The weather, this week reminds one of June or July. It will hasten on the harvest at a lively rate.

Editor Bodine, of the Red Lake Falls News, was in attendance at the republican convention last week.

Dave Robinson returned to civilization last week from Ohio. Dave has not been in the best of health down there and will try the Northwest awhile.

Parker Pearce left for the western slope last week on a voyage of discovery. He will skirmish 'round a while, and if he finds a good opening for business, will send for his family.

Mrs. Carrie Larsen, of St. Hilaire, was brought before Judge Chistianson last week and committed to St. Peter. Not long since her little child was drowned in a well which sad event so preyed upon her mind that she became insane.

Our boys and childrens department complete with all the novelties of the season. Parents will do well to look us over before purchasing.
C. O. D. Clothing House.

I. E. Baker, who for so long a time has been in the employ of Lee & Horrick, has severed his connection with that firm and goes to Minneapolis for employment. I. E. is one of the best millers ever in the city and will never lack for a job anywhere.

The Crookston club played Warren on Tuesday and got left, 7 to 10. Jim Creighton says if this sort o' thing is to continue forever, he will have to take the matter in hand and get up a scrub nine that will walk through the land like a mowing machine. Jim says "that thing could easy be did."

John Johnson was one of the enterprising farmers of Garden in the city last week. He says this a poor year for corn and vegetables, owing to cold weather and too much rain. He thinks the grain is not materially injured in grade, but does not think the quantity will be up to last year.

Superintendent Elliot was skirmishing around on Saturday afternoon, trying to find somebody eloquent enough to go to Euclid to orate in the evening. He succeeded in enlisting Judge Montague, who is doing yeoman service in the good cause this fall, and they do say that the Judge gave them a rattling good speech: He knows how to do that.

Full line of hosiery, gloves, underwear in endless variety.
C. O. D. Clothing House.

T. B. Walker's saw-mill at Grand Forks was destroyed by fire last Thursday. A. C. Schmidt, who was over at the time, says it was one of the most imposing fires he ever saw, the flames leaping into the air fifty feet or more. He thinks the Crookston Fire Dept. could give the Grand Forks dept. pointers in the art of "getting there" in a hurry. It is doubtful whether Mr Walker rebuilds the mill at the Forks.

Engineer Fred Chapin spent the Sabbath with friends in the city enroute for his "run" in Montana, from a trip to Minneapolis, Fred is looking healthy and hearty, although he says that it is a pretty rough and lonely country out there and that he is desirous of returning to civilization again, which he hopes soon to do. He reports that Fred Almy was more seriously hurt than was at first reported here and that his recovery has been slow. His family is with him at Minot.

Call at Mrs. E. E. Bangs' Millinery Parlors for Mrs. Ozins' Celebrated Orange Cream for the toilet. [14-tf]

On Thursday, Coroner Shepard was summoned to go out to the Perry farm to hold an inquest on the body of a man found dead in a field. The body was that of Edwin Arnold, a married man, who had been employed on the place up till within a week or so, when he quit and came to town, saying that he had had trouble with his wife and was never going back. He was last seen about town on Saturday. What time or how he met his death is only a matter of conjecture, though the coroner's jury returned a verdict of death by appoplexy. The body was brought to Crookston for interment.

Arthur Dufrense met with an accident on Sunday that might have been a a very serious matter. Together with several he was out after the festive chicken, and in one of those unaccountable manners in which all such things occur, he was shot in the face and neck. One shot found lodgment just below the right eye and was afterward extracted, another is still embedded beneath the left eye, three shots were in his mouth and one remains in his neck to remind him of that hunt. These shots were intended for a duck on a pond and after killing the duck they glanced along on the water till they found Dufresne upon whom they made a hasty call. It was a close call for his eyesight and he feels very grateful over his lucky escape.

Geo. Whitcomb, the genial commercial traveler, was in the city on Friday.

The W. C. T. U. meeting at Ada last week was well attended, we learn, and highly enjoyed by all who attended.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Copeland and Mr. and Mrs. I. U. Jennings went out to Maple Lake on Friday evening, returning on Monday evening.

We satisfy all our customers, we ask no bonus, and we pay over money on oans the moment notes are signed.
STEENERSON & McMANUS.

Archie Shannon, formerly with John McLean of this city, was in the city last Friday, with overcoat on arm. Archie says he is now a commercial tramp.

Matt. Dauser gave a very pleasant party last Saturday evening, a number of his most intimate friends joinining him in celebrating his 20th anniversary.

The Mite Society social held at the residence of Mrs. Houg, last Friday evening, was quite largely attended, and all had a tip top time. Ice cream and cake were served as refreshments.

We refer to farmers to whom we have made loans as to our promptness in dealing with them. Our old customers always recommend their neighbor to us.
STEENERSON & McMANUS.

P. A. Havrevold stopped off on Saturday evening on route to represent Ward County in the republican convention at Watertown. P. A. used to be a prominent Minnesota politician several years ago.

Lots of hunters took the field on Wednesday, but most of 'em returned under the charitable mantle of night. We asked one ambitious Nimrod how many he got and he responded: "Ate." We have positive information that he got one bird, but Jennings insists that it was "ate."

A game of base ball was played at Warren between the Warren and Fisher nines last Friday afternoon. The Warren boys had a walk-away, with a score of 38 to 12. The Fisher boys say that the game was not fair, the Warren boys having some men from Crookston, and other places.

Advices from Mrs. E. E. Bangs this week are more cheering. She is rapidly recovering from her illness and beginning to enjoy herself highly. She thinks the climate will prove beneficial in her case and she may decide to remain during the coming winter. She expects soon to visit Great Falls, Butte City and other places of note.

Our assortment of French, Scotch and domestic flannel shirts never more complete styles and prices correct.
C. O. D. Clothing House.

Prof. Sanborn's lecture on Monday evening was very slimly attended but was highly enjoyed by all who were there. It was full of wit and wisdom and well worthy a full house. While a silly minstrel show would have packed the house, this lecture, of some real practical value as well as entertaining did not attract enough patronage to pay expenses.

The funeral of Samuel Huggard on Friday was held at the Presbyterian church, Rev. O. H. Elmer officiating. A large number of his old neighbors and friends were in attendance, among whom were Wm. Carlton and wife, A. E. Brush and wife, A. Findlayson and wife, D. H. Miller and wife, and Monroe Palmer of Angus, and Deacon Bain and wife of Fisher.

Overcoats for fall wear in Worsteds, Kerseys, Meltons. Look our line over while on your shopping tour.
C. O. D. Clothing House.

In our rambles the other day, we encountered three pretty little girls, (in the neighborhood of nine years old) each with a natty little campaign cap on. Thinking to be entertaining to the little ladies we remarked, as they went tripping smilingly past: "Ah, you little democrats!" Whereupon one bright little miss, (whose father, by the way, is rock-rooted in republicanism—known from Crookston to Minot, as a stalwart of the stalwarts) spoke up like a flash, holding up her cap for our inspection: "I guess you are more of a democrat than we are, as you don't seem to be able to read what our caps say." Realizing the force of the remark we collapsed at once and passed along, pondering deeply upon the lesson in political economy so neatly and aptly given.

We have only one note and mortgage we make a loan the day applied for, charge no bonus, and make interest payable at our office in Crookston.
STEENERSON & McMANUS.

We do not like to have our Third Party friends get hold of it, as they might misconstrue the cause, but the joke is too good to keep and as it is already public property, it can do the victim no harm to repeat it for the benefit of JOURNAL readers. It seems a delegate to the republican convention rode over after supper to attend the evening session which lasted until nearly 11. So absorbed did he become in counting his ballots for delegate to the State Convention that, upon adjournment, he clear forgot the horse. went home afoot, and went to bed. Some of the boys insist that it must have been the exhuberance of the celebration of his election that did it, but we know that could not have been. The gentleman himself claims that it was a mistake upon the part of the hired man whom he told to take the horse home and put her in the stable—however it came, it was just as rough on the horse, that had to chew post hay until daylight in solitude.

DIED.

On Monday evening, at 10:30, Delia Ruthetta, second daughter of C. P. and Elizabeth Hathaway. She was born in Red Wing, on Sept. 23d, 1872, consequently would have been 16 years of age had she lived until Sept. 23d, next. She came to this city with her parents in June, 1879, where she has grown to young ladyhood, making many warm friends who sincerely mourn her early demise. She united with the Baptist church during the pastorate of Mr. House and has ever since been a faithful and consistent member of that church. Her death was the result of a siege of measles which threw her into quick consumption. Though her last hours on earth were marked by terrible suffering, yet was she calm and patient, being for the most part of the time radiant with happiness, borne up by that faith and hope which faileth not, which is a sheet anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast. She fully appreciated her situation and the fact that the sands of life for her were fast ebbing, and her whole thought seemed to center upon the welfare of her friends, for to her death had no pangs, no terror and the hereafter seemed full of glory and happiness. She is spoken of as always possessing a bright, lovable, unselfish nature and her friends will long cherish her memory as they recall her many good traits. The funeral was attended from the Baptist church on Wednesday, the pastor, Rev. Chas. Carroll, officiating.

Attention Comrades.

Father Lawler, of St. Mary's Catholic Church, having arranged to preach a memorial sermon on the death of Gen. P. H. Sheridan, on Sunday, August 26th, and having invited Col. Cobham Post, G. A. R., to be present, it is hereby ordered that the members assemble at Post Hdqr's on said evening at 7 o'clock to attend said service in a body.
BY ORDER OF O. H. LUCKEN, COMMANDER
C. S. SPENDLEY Adj't.

Wheat, No. 1 Hard 72.

Mrs. I. U. Jennings has just received a new stock of fall millinery. [18-tf]

Misses Edie and Eunie Copeland are spending the week in Grand Forks the guests of the Misses Kopps.

Do your trading at the C. O. D. Clothing House and save money.

Lots of hay coming to the market nowadays. It sells along from three to four dollars as you can catch it.

The sociable at the Baptist church, on Monday evening, was well attended and all seemed to have a pleasant time.

Norman County held her convention on the 18th. Her State delegates are said to be Scheffer 1st and Gilman 2d choice.

We loan money to pay up railroad ands.
STEENERSON & McMANUS.

Will Heidrick and Dick Lilly having purchased Ben Clements' stock are on deck to supply your wants in the grocery line.

Duntley and Feran are putting on lots of style. A new front and a general fixing up renders their place very attractive.

F. B. Benedict is down from Fosston wearing a high, white, republican hat on this cold-water day. He is a stalwart from way back.

Col. Bemis is enroute for home and expected to arrive about Sept. 1st. He will spend some little time visiting friends along the route.

We learn that Prof. Thompson has bought out a large barber shop at Seven Corners, St. Paul, and is doing a land office business, at which all his old friends up here rejoice greatly.

Prof. Thompson has sold his Robert street property to W. Alderman and has gone to St. Paul with his family. J. E. Bradley has taken possession of the old stand and fitted it up in good shape for the reception of his customers.

On all loans we make, interest payable at our office in Crookston.
STEENERSON & McMANUS.

On Wednesday Mr. I. U. Jennings received a telegram from Norwalk, Ohio, stating that his son-in-law, I. M. Underhill, is dangerously sick with pneumonia. Mrs. Jennings leaves this evening. They had been anticipating a visit which they intended to have taken in September.

A mighty Nimrod brought in last Wednesday evening, as the result of an all day's hunt, a diminutive chicken. A skeptical bystander insisted that the chicken had died a natural death, and called on Doc. Dunlop for a professional opinion. After viewing the defunct, the Dr. gave it as his opinion that the deceased had been dead at least one week.

We are informed by Mr. Dunsmore, lately from Mo., that from all reports, Missouri will go republican this fall. Never, since the war, has there been such enthusiasm. At one place, over 60 solid democrats have signed the roll of the republican club. The prohibitionists are getting quite a number from the democracy. They are helping rather than hurting the republicans there.

Some of our citizens who listened to Prof. Sanford were so pleased with him that they hired him to return, guaranteeing his price, $50. All above expenses will be turned over to the W. C. T. U. All who enjoy hearing a good lecture should not fail to hear Prof. Sanford. We predict a larger audience than greeted the Prof. on his first visit. The lecture will be tomorrow (Friday) evening, probably at the opera house.

The Arditi Concert Company will appear at the opera house on Monday evening next. This company is highly spoken of by the local press every where and no doubt are well worth the price of admission which is only 40 cents; children 20. Signor Frank Juliot one of the best performers on the harp will appear as will Miss Florina White, the celebrated pianist. All lovers of music should not fail to hear this troupe.

Beltrami Telautographs.

BELTRAMI, August 20, 1888.

H. B. Budd and C. M. Ohl attended the republican county convention as delegates from this place.

The man who has sown wild mustard all over this township, and has never paid half of the help who have worked for him since he has been here had his character painted in glowing colors, but not in shades to suit his idea, in front of Ford's store, by a gentleman whom he had wronged a few days ago.

D. Fulton's father, who has been making him a visit, has returned to his home near Ada.

Editor Bartlett, of the Fertile Journal was in town on Thulsday.

Is it true that the brute whose unmarried daughter gave birth to a child, some time ago, fed the little one to the hogs? If so, such a monster ought to be hung, and have his trial afterward.

The carpenter who is repairing the schoolhouse says that the school director of dist. 53 tried to palm off some rotten poplar lumber on the district at a good price. The other members knew him to well. He says he always does his duty; is that doing his duty?

EDNA.

What a Plucky Woman Can Do.

Mrs. Henry Witty was up from Garden last week and reports her grain looking excellently well this year. Ever since the death of her husband, she has supported her little family by working her own land and she has always raised the best of crops. Where many a woman would have given up in despair, she has wrung success from the untoward circumstances that surrounded her. She says that it is her earnest wish to educate her children, believing that to be the best legacy she can bequeath them. With such a laudable object and such energy, she deserves and will no doubt attain abundant success.

Minneapolis Exposition.

The St. P., M. & M. R'y will sell excursion tickets to Minneapolis for the exposition at one fare for the round trip, on the following dates, August 21st, 23d, 25th, 28th and 30th, September 1st, 4th, 6th, 18th, 20th, 22d, 25th, 27th and 29th. Tickets will be good to return to destination until Monday following date of sale. Tickets will also be sold every day from Sept. 8th to 15th inclusive to St. Paul or Minneapolis at one fare for the round trip, good to return to destination one day after being stamped at St. Paul or Minneapolis but not later than Sept. 17th. Tickets will include admission coupon at twenty-five cents each, this amount will be added to railroad rates. For full particulars apply to local agent or F. I. Whitney, G. P. & T. A., St. Paul, Minn.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to express our heartfelt thanks to the many kind friends who have aided us in our sore bereavement. Verily of such was it spoken by Him, who spoke as never man spake: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto Me."

C. P. HATHAWAY AND FAMILY.

Best residence lots in the city and on your own terms; mind, ON YOUR OWN TERMS.
STEENERSON & McMANUS.

Teachers' Examinations.

The semi-annual examination of teachers for the County of Polk will be held as follows:

At the Central School Bulding, Crookston, Friday and Saturday, August 24th and 25th.

At the School House in Red Lake Falls, Monday, August 27th,

At the School House in Fosston, Wednesday, August 29th.

All examinations to begin promptly at 9 a. m.

No candidate under sixteen years of age will be admitted to examination.

EZRA F. ELLIOT,
County Superintendent.
Crookston, August 13, 1888.

Sealed Bids.

CROOKSTON, Minn., Aug. 14, 1888.

Sealed bids will be received by the City Council of the City of Crookston until Aug. 31st, at 6 p. m., for plans, specifications and bids for building a hose and bell tower 25x30 feet at base, adjoining the City Hall of the City of Crookston.

By order of City Council,
JOHN PATERSON,
City Clerk.

For Sale.

Ten fresh milch cows with calves at their sides. These cows are all grade Jerseys and excellent for the dairy Will sell cheap for cash or good paper till fall or will give one year's time on good security. For particulars see [16-tf] CHRIS. HOUSTON.

For Sale.

One Threshing rig complete; Minnesota Chief separator, and J. I. Case engine, strawburner, all in complete running order. For particulars call on
JAS. GREENHAGH, Jr., Crookston.
[16-tf.]

We can loan money on better terms than anyone else in the valley. Money paid over the moment securities are executed. STEENERSON & McMANUS.

TO RENT.

My hotel and furniture, or will sell the furniture. Apply on premises at Carman.
Z. DAOUST.

Farm loans completed and money paid over the day application is made.
STEENERSON & McMANUS.

100 100

CHOICE RESIDENCE LOTS

IN JEROME'S ADDITION!

Nearer the Business Center than any other Lots now for sale over there.

Above High Water Mark. Good Cellars and Good Wells

Easily Obtained. If you want a Building Lot, or if you desire a chance for investment where you can double your money inside of a year. It will pay you to look into this chance to

BUY AT YOUR OWN FIGURES, PRACTICALLY!

M. R. BROWN.

IT PAYS

TO TRADE WITH

BARNES & SLOCUM,

CASH DEALERS IN

Groceries and Crockery.

Get their prices and you will say so.

McKinnon Block, Robert St., Crookston.

Stewart & Laurence,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

HEAVY AND SHELF

HARDWARE,

BAKER STEEL BARBED WIRE.

JEWETT'S STOVES AND RANGES,

Plymouth Binding Twine

A Drop From the Sky.

Two Ladies will Drop Five Thousand Feet From a Baloon During the State Fair.

The management of the State Fair have secured at great expense the most novel and exciting features ever introduced in the State, which are no less than two balloon ascensions, one of which will be made by a lady, the aeronauts to drop from a balloon from the height of five thousand feet and decend to the earth, by means of a parachute. The aeronauts engaged for these ascensions are Prof. Oscar Hunt, Prof. J. W. Price, Mrs. Hunt and Mrs. Price. The exact dates for these ascensions have not yet been fixed, Prof. Price has made 285 ascensions and he has had some thrilling experiences. Mrs. Lottie Hunt recently made an ascension at Chicago of nearly 3000 feet and dropped with her parachute into Lake Michigan, and was rescued unhurt. The parachute used in these ascensions is unlike any used heretofore and is Prof. Price's invention. It has no framework and ribs, and is held in shape solely by ropes and a hoop six feet in diameter. When expanded the balloon has a spread of about 16 feet and a length of 20 feet. It hangs from the neck of the balloon and the separation is effected by pulling a rope attached to a spring snap block. The two ascensions will be made from the State Fair grounds sometime between September 10th and 15th. One ascension and probably both will be made by one of the mentioned above.

The following is an account of an ascension recently made by Prof. Price in Illinois:

"At half past 5 o'clock yesterday evening Prof. Price shouted "Let go everybody!" and the big balloon arose in the air like a sky rocket, with the daring young aeronaut dangling from the trapeze. A strong wind from the west prevailed and the balloon was rapidly carried eastward and upward, until it had gained an altitude over 5,000 feet. The ascent was a beautiful sight.

From the many buildings groups of spectators could be seen watching the air-ship, as it hovered in the sky. The general knowledge of the fact that Prof. Price had never before attempted a parachute descent created an ill-suppressed feeling of anxiety among the people. "Will he come down all right!" was the universal question, and many were the silent prayers for his success.

In a few minutes from the beginning of the ascent, the balloon attained its highest elevation, and hung apparently motionless. It was at this moment the watching crowd for an instant held their breath as the balloon and parachute was seen to separate. For fully 150 feet the parachute fell like a dead weight, and then filling with air, its speed was suddenly arrested, and like a big bird it sailed in broad sweeps toward the earth. For a few moments the swinging of the parachute was very dangerous, on account of the high wind but this fortunately ceased as it came closer to the ground, and Prof. Price alighted safe and sound. The balloon came down about three miles east of town."

This was Prof. Price's 280th ascension, and first parachute descent. He is a young man, 26 years of age, but has had seven years experience as a professional aeronaut. His home is at Springfield, Ill.

Bossism on Top.

"Me and Mike" won the day and downed Doc and independence in the democratic State convention—as everybody predicted. The nomination is a good one but the manner in which it was done is not calculated to draw out the full party strength. Among the most conservative fears are felt that the party will lose many votes through the rule or ruin policy of its bosses. There are some who are simple enough to think that the common people are capable of selecting their own officials but they have at last found out their mistake and great is their indignation thereat. The bosses console themselves with the idea that these refractory members can be whipped into line in time to vote and probably most of them can. Great is the power of bossism in the democratic party.

For Sale.

A pure blood Polled Aberdeen Angus bull. Will sell cheap for cash or trade for colt. For terms see
THEODORE GREENHALGH.

Money to Loan.

We have the cash always on hand to loan on good farm security. No second mortgage. No delay. No commission.
STEENERSON & McMANUS.

A Snap.

M. R. Brown offers 100 lots, near the business portion of the city at figures that will give the purchaser a chance make a good thing. Look into this and be convinced.

CHRISTIANSON BROTHERS,
(Correspondents Fargo Loan Agency.)
REAL ESTATE,
Farm Mortgage Loans and Insurance.

☞ Special Bargains in Choice Farm Lands, improved and unimproved. Low prices and easy terms.
—OFFICE ON ROBERT STREET,—
CROOKSTON, - - - MINN.

W. A. ROBERTSON,
D. D. S.
Graduate of Dental Department of the Univer sity of Maryland.
OPERATIVE AND MECHANICAL
DENTIST.
OFFICE, IN McKINNON BLOCK.

Proceedings City Council,

Proceedings of a regular meeting of the city council of the city of Crookston held Aug. 14th 1888.

Meeting called to order. President Watts in the chair, members present. Alds. Lally, Childs, Nolan, Steenerson, Fournet, Marlette, Walter, Buhn and Jennings.

The minutes of last meeting were read and approved.

The petition of W. Watts and others for a sidewalk in the third ward was on motion granted.

The petition of Peter Berg and others was referred to the ways and means committee to report on same at the next regular meeting of the city council.

The petition of W. H. Stuart for rebate on taxes was referred to the financial committee.

A petition was presented by James W. Lilly and others requesting that a sidewalk on Ash street, on the west side along block 21, also a crosswalk across said Ash street on the north side of 5th street.

Ald. Steenerson offered the following resolution: Resolved that the petition of James W. Lilly and others for a sidewalk along east side of block 21 original townsite of Crookston and crosswalk be granted, and the walk ordered laid as prayed for in said petition. The ays and nays being called with the following result: Ays alds. Lally, Childs, Nolan, Marlette, Steenerson, Fournet, Walter, Buhn, Jennings and Watts, nays, none.

The petition of W. H. Stuart for rebate on street taxes was referred to the finance committee.

The city engineer presented his report on streets, which on motion was duly accepted and referred to the alderman of the 1st ward.

The proposition of S. L. Dobson to sell half of lot 19, block 5, in rear of engine house, on motion was laid on the table.

The bill of Clevis Champaux for rebate on taxes was referred to the alderman of the 1st ward.

The finance committee reported favorably on the following bills, which were ordered paid:

H Wight, salary as assessor......	$ 300 00
M B Hayes, boarding prisoners	10 70
J E O'Brien & Co., merchandise	42 49
McKinnon Bros., merchandise..	32 00
Stewart & Laurence, m'd'se.....	17 65
Christianson Bros., insurance on engine house........	15 00
Osias Vieu, attending chemical engine 5th ward..............	20 00
A C Schmidt, painting...........	4 50
Red River Lumber Co. lumber	122 21

Moved by ald. Fournet, seconded by ald. Steenerson that the bill of Rosenthal & Wile, police uniforms, be allowed. Carried.

Resolved, by the city council of the city of Crookston, that the presen sidewalk on west side of Main street in front of lots 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12, block 3, in Fletcher & Houston's addition, be, and the same is hereby condemned, and that a new sidewalk be, and the same is hereby ordered laid in place of such condemned walk, such new walk to be ten feet wide (except where buildings project into the street where such projection may be taken out) with outer edge a straight line and ten feet from the property line. Carried.

Moved by ald. Fournet seconded by ald. Steenerson that the bill of Rosenthal & Wile for police uniform. Carried.

Moved by ald. Childs seconded by ald. Marlette that the bid of John Carter for building sidewalks for the ensuing year for $450 per thousand. He furnishing all material except lumber. Carried unanimously.

Resolved, that the petition for a sidewalk along east side of Main street be granted, and such sidewalk ordered laid. Carried.

Ald. Childs offered the following resolution:

Resolved, that the sum of $300, be, and the same is hereby withdrawn from the general fund and placed in the hands of the city treasurer as a contingent fund, from which the said treasurer shall pay the laborers for street work, on presentation of orders, time checks or pay rolls issued by the street commissioner. Said bills to be held as vouchers against said fund until allowed by proper authority and that the clerk is hereby directed to draw an order for same. Carried.

Ald. Jennings offered the following resolution:

Resolved, that $900 be, and is hereby appropriated for buying lots 3 and 4, block 7, Fletcher and Houston's addition for the purpose of building engine house thereon. The resolution was declared lost.

Moved by ald. Childs seconded by ald. Nolan that the clerk advertise for plans and specifications and bids for building a hose and bell tower 25x30 feet in size at base adjoining city hall of the city of Crookston, the same to be opened at an adjourned meeting of the city council to be held August 31st 1888. Carried.

Moved by ald. Steenerson seconded by ald. Marlette that the city attorney be instructed to look up the title to the city dumping ground and to report on same at an adjourned meeting of the council Aug. 31st 1888.

On motion council adjourned until Aug. 31st 1888. JOHN PATESON,
City Clerk.

Minnesota State Fair.

Excursion tickets will be sold to St. Paul or Minneapolis and return, via., the St. P., M. & M. R'y every day from September 8th to 15th inclusive, at one fare for the round trip, good to return one day after being stamped at St. Paul or Minneapolis but not later than Sept. 17th. For full information apply to local agent or J. I. Whitney, G. P. & F. A. St. Paul, Minn.

HORRIBLE SHIPWRECK.

Appalling Loss of Life in a Steamship Collision —One Hundred and Nineteen Persons Ushered Into Eternity.

The story of the collision of the steamers Geiser and Thingvalla is one of the most remarkable in ocean records; as both vessels were under full headway. The night had been dark and cloudy and it was raining occasionally, but there does not appear to have been any fog or any exceptionally heavy seas. Both steamers were in charge of their first officers who were old and experienced. On whom the blame rests, neither the officers nor the passengers on either vessel were able to state. Few passengers were on the decks of the steamers at that hour of the morning. When the steamers came in view of each other in the gray of the dawn they were only a few ships' lengths apart and the crash came in a few minutes. The iron prow of the Thingvalla struck the Geiser amidships on the starboard side, tearing its way half through the side of the unfortunate steamer. Passengers and crew of the ill-fated steamer who were aroused by the shock, and who escaped injury, had no time to realize what had happened. Many who were sleeping on the side of the vessel which was struck were crushed in their berths as they slept and carried to the bottom of the sea. Those who succeeded in reaching the decks of the Geiser were hardly less fortunate. In the blinding rain that was now beating on the deck of the vessel, some of the officers were shouting vainly and running wildly about. There was no time for explanation and Capt. Mollen, who had come on deck just before the collision endeavored hastily to obtain an idea of the extent of the accident, to arouse the passengers and crew and to lower the boats. In the midst of those hurried preparations the steamer began to settle, and with a lurch she went down head foremost. The next instant a dull, heavy explosion agitated the waters as they closed over the Geiser. The boats and the life rafts were all carried down with the Geiser, and a few of the passengers were left in the water clinging to the spars and wreckage. The crash of the collision brought the Thingvalla's passengers on deck, but it was soon found that though badly crushed and leaking she was seaworthy, and boats were at once lowered for the assistance of the few people who had escaped from the Geiser. The boats of the Thingvalla pulled until after daylight over the place where the Geiser went down, taking in all they could see. Among these were Capt. Moller, who was nearly exhausted, and Mrs. Hilda Loud, a cabin passenger, who was who escaped from the wreck. While the search was being made for the survivors of the Geiser Capt. Laub, of the Thingvalla, was busy attending to the injuries that his own steamer had sustained. It was found that they were more serious than had been thought at first. The bow of the vessel had been caved in by the severe blow that she had dealt the Geiser, and although the ship's carpenters had succeeded in bracing up the walls of the bulkhead the pressure against them was so great when the ship was moving as to make it very exceedingly doubtful whether she could continue her voyage to New York, and in the event of a severe storm her condition would be too critical to take any risks. Capt. Laub decided to put at once to Halifax which was about 180 miles distant, when the Wieland was sighted and signals of distress were given. The Wieland bore down upon them and Capt. Albers, her commander, offered to take aboard all the passenger of the Geiser and the Thingvalla. They were transferred with some difficulty, the sea being rough, and the Thingvalla sailed into Halifax, while the Wieland proceeded to New York. None of the passengers of the Thingvilla were injured in the collision, but several of those of the Geiser who were rescued had sustained severe injuries in the wreck. Andreas Wilsz of Minneapolis was one of the passengers who was saved. Wilsz is a farmer, and has long been accustomed to early rising, and to this habit he attributes the fact that he is alive to-day to tell the terrible story. He was awake when the first crash came, and heard the command of the officers, "All men on deck."

DEAD AND MANGLED.

THE ONLY WOMAN

"I at once rushed on deck," he said, "and tried to cut loose one of the life boats, but did not succeed. There was a loud and long continued blowing of whistles, which aroused the passengers. Hardly any of them had time to seize life preservers or scramble upon deck before the crash came. Frenzied people rushed hither and thither crying, cursing, praying and pleading for their lives. It was a terrible spectacle. It seemed to me that the seven minutes or less we were there on deck were hours, and I cannot close my eyes now but I see the whole scene enacted all over again. I managed to get into one of the lifeboats and was taken on board the Thingvalla."

A ST. PAUL SURVIVOR.

Ole Jansen of St. Paul, Minn., says:

When he heard the ships crash together he siezed a life preserver and rushed on deck. He cut one of the Geiser's boats loose, but it stuck to the steamer until she sunk. The life boat was then freed, but turned over before it reached the water. He got on the upturned boat and was saved by the boatswain crew from the Thingvalla. The most miraculous escape of all was that of the second mate, Mr. Jorgensen. He was in his bunk when the collision occurred. The black nose of the Thingvalla scraped by his bunk pushing against the door of his cabin held it closed. The anchor chain of the Thingvalla was hanging almost within his reach. He sprang for it, and grasping it went up hand over hand on to the Thingvalla.

GRAPHICALLY TOLD.

Twenty-four of the passengers and crew of the Geiser, under charge of Second Officer Jorgensen, arrived at the Hotel Denmark, in New York. They were brawny fellows, curiously attired, and but few had either coats or stockings. Second Officer Jorgensen gave a graphic description of the collision. He said:

I was asleep in my bunk when I heard a shock and I immediately went on deck. Taking in the situation at a glance, I ordered all hands on deck. Then I swung myself off on the bow of the Thingvalla, and scrambled to her deck. The doomed craft sank gracefully, stern first, with her bow in the air. Most everybody was sound asleep, and when she began to fill, I could hear groans and heart-rending screams coming from below. Those who reached the deck made frantic efforts to cut down the boats, but they were too excited to be successful. They finally grabbed up different pieces of wood and jumped over the side of the vessel.

John Tuewild, a saloonkeeper of Hudson, Wis., a round faced bulky Swede, said:

I was asleep when I heard the crash and hurried to the deck, where I found quite a number of men attempting to loosen the boats. I saw no chance of saving mysel there, so I rushed out, picked up a plank and jumped overboard. The scene was heart-rending. There must have been thirty-five heads above the water, but one by one they disappeared.

Frederick C. Hansen, who lived in Perth Amboy, N. J., was advised to take a sea voyage for his health, and sailed on the Geiser. He said:

I heard somebody rushing through the companion way and I rushed up, carrying my coat and shoes. I found two oars and jumped overboard with them. The vessel soon went down and I was picked up.

The Geiser was an iron clad steamship of 1,818 tons burden. She was 324.4 feet long, 39.3 feet beam and 22 feet deep of hold. She was built at the yards of Burmeister & Wain at Copenhagen, in 1881. She had three masts and was fitted with compound inverted engines, with four cylinders of 36 and 72 inches diameter and 42-inch stroke. The Thingvalla is somewhat smaller than the ill-fated Geiser, being 301.5 feet long and 37.4 feet beam. She is registered at 1,630 tons burden, and was built at Burmeiter's yards, Copenhagen, in 1874.

JANSEN CASBORG'S ACCOUNT.

The following graphic account was given by a young druggist named Jansen Castborg, who was on board the Thingvalla, en route to Galveston, Texas, with his sister:

It was just about daylight, and all, with the exception of myself and a few friends, were asleep; when, all of a sudden, we heard a scuffling of feet on deck, and then a crushing noise. Then for a moment all was still. In a second all the passengers were out of their berths and all rushing for the companion-way. The screaming and the din was deafening, particularly from the lower deck, where the people with families were located. After considerable difficulty I reached the deck and rushed to see what the damage was, and just here I wish to state most emphatically that no whistles were blown on the Thingvalla before the collision. I went to the front of the vessel and saw a gap of about twelve feet. On the left side, the plates were rolled up, and on the top of them lay part of the corpse of a man, and the whole stem was covered with blood and fragments of flesh, which was soon washed off by the waves. The captain then ordered every one on deck, and, after an examination, the passengers were told there was no danger and they became quiet. The women on the occasion behaved splendidly. On the right side the plates were broken off completely, and I saw the bow of our ship go clean into the stateroom of an officer of the Geiser, who climbed up by the chains attached to the anchor. During this time there was a terrible rain storm, which was more the cause of the extreme darkness than any fog. The Geiser began to sink rapidly, and in eight or ten minutes passed down out of sight. There was no effort made on our ship to lower the boats, but it was so very dark that we could not see whether it was human beings or not that were floating around the ship, but a man's voice screamed out in the midst of

THE EXCITEMENT

that he was bitten by a shark. The screaming was something awful. It was fully twenty minutes before the boats were lowered. We all stood on the deck looking at the people being saved, but powerless to do anything ourselves. I saw three boats of the Geiser one turned upside down, another smashed in the storm, and the third had two men who were holding up a woman between them who seemed to be dead. Several had life-preservers on, but were swallowed up in the whirlpool when the Geiser went down. Some came again to the surface and were picked up. A number of us procured life-preservers and stood ready to cast them out, but I must say I wondered that so few were seen after the ship's sinking. A great number must have been drowned in their berths. In about an hour and a half the boats returned, and the saved were hoisted on board by ropes and partly by the aid of a rope ladder, which had been lowered over the side. When they were got on deck, they were each made to sit down, and they were given a glass of brandy apiece. They seemed for the most part to be in good spirits, except one man, who was covered with blood, and the doctor sent him to the hospital. "The boats were sent away again, but they only found a dead woman. The emigrants were well treated by the people on the Thingvalla. The passengers and crew then went to work to shift the cargo from the stem to the stern, as well as the chain, anchors, etc., on the Thingvalla. This had a good effect on the passengers, and they got cheerful and hopeful, as all we had to fear was a storm, as the shattered bulkhead had been backed with planks and hogsheads, and could stand a little shock. We were making about two knots per hour, when at noon we saw the Wieland. After some talk between captains we were taken on board the Wieland, being only allowed to take a small valise each. It's my first experience of a voyage across the Atlantic, and I think it will last me my life time."

A ST. PAUL SURVIVOR.

NEW YORK, Special Telegram, Aug. 17.—Peter Johannsen of St. Paul, a railroad hand, was another of the survivors who was on his way to visit in Sweden. He was in one of the life boats cutting it loose when the Geiser gave its final lurch and went under.

"I must have been sucked twenty-five feet beneath the surface," he said, "and when I came up again I struck the under side of the life boat which was bottom up. It stunned me so I nearly drowned before I could get out. There were two others on the kneel and they helped me out. I hung on with them till aid came from the Thingvalla. The only things I was able to save was a shirt and a pair of pants. It was a terrible sight to see the people going down all around, and not able to give them any assistance."

MARKETS.

CHICAGO.

No. 2 spring wheat, 82¼c.; No. 2 red, 80¼c; No. 2 corn, 45¼c; No. 2 oats 25¾c.; No. 2 rye, 45½@46¼c; No. 2 barley, 55c; No. 1 flax seed, $1.11; prime timothy seed, $2. mess pork, per bbl., $13.90@13.95 lard per 100 lbs., $8.72½; short rib sides (loose), $8.15@8.20; dry-salted shoulders (boxed), $7.40@7.50; short clear sides (boxed), $8.90@9.25; sugars, cut, loaf, 8⅝c; butter, creamery, 13½@17c; dairy, 13½@16c; eggs, 13½@14½c.

MINNEAPOLIS.

Wheat: No. 1 hard 85¼c; No. 1, Northern 83¼c; No. 2, Northern, 80¼c; Corn 40@43c. Oats, No. 2. white, 33¼c; No. 2. mixed, 31c; No. 3, white, 32c; rejected 27@30c. Barley 38@48c; Flax, $1.03@1.05 Mixed feed $16@18 per ton. Hay $6.50. Eggs, fresh 15c; Mutton, dressed 7@8½c. Potatoes, 40 per bu.; spring chickens per doz. $1.75@200; Wool, medium, 21 @ 27; coarse unwashed 17@19; Butter, creamery, 10@18c; dairy, 12@14c; grease butter 4@5c.

ST. PAUL.

Wheat, No. 1 hard, 86c; No. 1 Northern, 85c; No; 2 Northern, 82c. Corn, No. 2, 43c. Oats, No. 2, mixed, 30c No. 1, white, 32c No. 2, white, 31¼c, No. 3, 31¼c. Millstuffs, Ground feed, $17; corn meal, unbolted, $17.25; Hay, No; 1, $6.50; No. 1 upland prairie $6.00@$6.50 timothy, $9.50; Flax Seed—$1.02; potatoes; per bu. 45c; eggs, 15½c.

MILWAUKEE.

Flour steady. Wheat closed firm; September, 81c; October, 81⅞c. Corn quiet; No. 3, 45½c. Oats firm; No. 2, white, 37½c. Rye dull; No. 1, 48c. Barley lower; No. 2, 60c for old. Provisions lower. Pork—Cash and August, $13.95. Lard—Cash, $8.75; September, $8.77½. Butter—Choice firm; poor weak; dairy, 15@16c. Eggs, fresh, 14c. Cheese quiet; cheddars, 8@8½c. Receipts—Flour, 6,000bbls; wheat, 7,000 bu.; barley, 700 bu. Shipments—Flour, 21,500 bbls; wheat, 86,000 bu.

DULUTH.

Wheat, Cash 84¼c; August, 84c., September, 84⅝c.; October 84¼c.; December, 84⅝c.

A SCENE OF TERROR.

Frightful Mortality Caused by an Electrical Storm in the Vicinity of Quebec.

The thunder storm that passed over Eastern Ontario and the whole of Quebec, destroyed hundreds of houses and barns. Horses and cattle by the hundred have been killed, and many people are lost. At a small village called St. Louis de Conzague, Capt. Louis Sauve, his wife and son were killed instantly. A laborer, name unknown on the Sauve farm, was also killed by a bolt that struck the barn, half an hour after the house was struck. At St. Ignace George S. Lorimer was killed by a tree which had been struck by lightning falling upon him. In St. Hyacinthe, the son of the proprietor of a small hotel was killed while closing the window of his room. A report comes from Chaudier that two lumbermen were swept over the falls, while they were crossing the river. Lightning struck their canoe, and they were swept to death in the raging river. The hotel at Smith's Falls was set on fire, and it is reported that the wife of the proprietor died from fright. From all over Quebec come reports of houses being set on fire and whole families left destitute, and at a little place called L'Original the parish church was struck by lightning. The place was full of people at the time, 10 p. m., praying for protection from the storm. A panic ensued, and many people were seriously injured by being trampled upon. It is estimated that the damage done by the storm in this province alone will reach over $1,500,000. Later reports have just come in from Valleyfield, Beauharnos county, stating that five men have been killed by lightning in that vicinity.

Jennie Woolver, a domestic employed on the farm of William Sletzer, near Reedsburg, Wis., was shot and killed by George Moon, twenty years of age. Jennie was returning to the house from hanging out the washing, when Moon, who was standing in the doorway, took a revolver from his pocket and shot her. The ball entered her heart. After he shot her Moon rushed to where Jennie lay, picked up the revolver, kissed her, and placed the revolver to his right temple and blew his brains out. Moon had lately returned from Colorado, and it is supposed that he killed the girl because she was soon to be married to another man and refused his suit.

Bradstreet's in reviewing the foreign breadstuffs situation says that the crop reports in France are growing worse and worse. The injury to the wheat crop is irreparable, and future good weather may affect the quality, although it does not the quantity. The crop is now estimated at 253,600,000 bushels, against 312,400,000 bushels in 1887. In Hungary the wheat acreage is somewhat under that of last year. On the left bank of the Danube rainy, cold, weather has checked the development of wheat, and while in certain districts the crop is good, in others it has been attacked by rust. On the right bank of the Danube the wheat has suffered some from unfavorable weather, although an average yield is anticipated.

Republican Pointers.

Perhaps.

It is suggested by the Iowa State Register that the reason Cleveland's letter of acceptance is such a long while appearing is that it has been sent over to England for revision.

Protection for Bugs

The Mills bill puts potatoes on the free list but maintains a duty on Paris green. This is obviously designed for the protection of the potato bug. It discriminates against the farmer and in favor of the bug.

They Hate Blaine.

The Democrats are just too funny for any thing. They are so mad that the Republicans have a score of leaders who create enthusiasm wherever they go that they just hate Mr. Blaine because he is so popular. Why don't the Democrats trot out some of their big guns, if they have any of them on ice? Boston Journal.

Every Northern State

The outlook is that Harrison will carry the Electorial vote of every State north of Mason and Dixon's line, and will be elected by a very decided majority. That's the way, too, that the leaders in the Democratic party are beginning to look at it. The time has come for a change.—Cin. Commercial Gazette.

They'll Rail Anyhow.

If Mr. Blaine had not returned to take part in the campaign, how his enemies would have sneered and railed at him as a sorehead. Now that he is back, how they still sneer and rail at him for attempting to "overshadow" the man in whose interest he is about to begin work. Well, well, let them rail on. Extract their sneer and the distinguishing Mugwump feature is gone.—New York Tribune.

Cheap Enough

When whole suits of all woolen goods are sold for $6, which is the object of the Democratic raid on this Northern industry, God help the wool-growers and the poor people who maintain existence by weaving cloth and making clothing. Clothing is cheap enough now. To make it cheaper means to reduce labor to the European level.—Cleveland Leader.

Gen. Grant's Motto.

Mr. Patrick H. Winston, editor of the Review, of Spokane Falls, Wyoming, has put at the head of the editorial page of his newsy and enterprising paper these words: "Protection to home industries I regard as the most important plank in any platform after 'The Union must and shall be preserved.'" They are from a personal letter written to him by Gen. Grant, November 15, 1883.

Just as Odious.

The rebel flag order of President Cleveland had to be withdrawn under the pressure of public opinion. But it was not more odious to the people of the United States than was the free trade message of Grover Cleveland and his order to his Democratic supporters to stand by it. On election day the people will put an end to that sort of business.

A Strong Argument.

According to a calculation made by Congressman S. S. Cox and embodied in one of his recent speeches, the public debt of the United States in 1865 amounted to $84 per capita, and has since been reduced to about $18 per capita. This statement, coming from a Democratic source, is one of the most powerful arguments in favor of again placing the control of the government in the hands of the Republicans who devised and maintained the financial system which has been so successful in lessening the nation's indebtedness.

Southern Terrorism.

The Democrats have carried Alabama by an enormous majority, just as they did Louisiana, where the frauds were so gross that they became ludicrous, and called out protests even from Democratic newspapers. There is every indication that these Southern majorities are to be made extraordinarily large this year, apparently from some strange ideas of pride, though what room there is for such a feeling when the Democratic managers can literally make them of any size they choose, it is not easy to understand. Fortunately, however, there is every sign that Republican majorities at the North will be exceptionally large also, and made so not by intimidation and fraud, but by fair and intelligent discussion of the issues of the day.—New York Tribune.

The Democracy Not Fully Tested Yet.

Democrats are going about asking and snuffing with an affectation of the assurance of triumph, whether any great harm has happened to the country from the accession of the Democratic party to power. The first reply is that the Democratic party has not been tried in power since the leaders of the party had the Southern Confederacy in hand. Since the inauguration of Abraham Lincoln the Democratic party has not been able to decree, enact, construe and execute a law. The Republicans have had the veto power on them since the hour when Abraham Lincoln took the oath of office.—Cincinnati Commercial (Rep.)

Gen. Sheridan's Remark.

General Sheridan, who waved a fiery sword on numerous occasions, was never accused of waving the bloody shirt since the war. Yet the gallant fellow said on a certain occasion, in a speech before a meeting of his comrades: "I do not care to have this matter of forgiveness brought to my attention quite so much as it has been. When a man says to me that he was a rebel, and that what he did was right, and that he would do the same thing over again under the same circumstances, I rather question whether I am willing to forgive him. If you are willing to forgive such a man, then you are willing to bring back slavery, and you are willing to risk again the existence of your country. That is exactly what that thing means." The words of the distinguished soldier were uttered about a dozen years after the close of the war, and were received with bursts of applause. Every word was weighty with golden truth and right, and is just as true and right to-day as it was then.

The G. O. P. Must go.

The Southern Democrats are very happy, and with apparent good reason. They are led to believe that the G. O. P. is on its last legs. The Northern Democratic press tells them that "the Republican leaders are confronted with the certainty of the dismemberment of their party, and they realize the fact that the immense prohibition vote which will leave their ranks this year, renders almost hopeless their chances of success in the presidential campaign on which the future existence of the party is staked." This makes the South very happy. The Atlanta Constitution exults. "The old war party must go," it says, "and things look as if it will take its final departure in the course of the next few months. It remains thoroughly helpless as it sees its foundation being knocked to pieces, and the declaration of the revolt of its Prohibition contingent is a certain forerunner of its final crash."

The South has waited a long time for this happy consummation. This G. O. P. has been its object of special hate ever since the G. O. P. set itself against the extension of human slavery. It was in 1860 that the G. O. P. elected Lincoln and held him at the head of the government until the Southern attempt to raise a Confederacy on the ruins of the republic was defeated—a Confederacy, the corner-stone of which, said Alexander Stephens, was negro slavery. Down to this day, when the G. O. P. protests against the disfranchisement of the negroes, the South has continued to hate it. When, the other day, Senator Colquitt, of Georgia, refused to deliver an invitation to Maj. McKinley to deliver an address at a religious and industrial assembly at Atlanta, he said: "We want no Republicans in our section."

So the G. O. P. is to go, at last. What a blessed thing for old Jeff Davis that he has lived to see this day.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

A hay stack standing in Orval Winan's barnyard in Rice county, Minn., was set on fire and it was with the greatest difficulty that his barn and house were saved from destruction. Evidently there are barn burners abroad, and if anyone will cause their arrest and conviction they can secure the reward of $1,000 offered by the city, and the board of underwriters of Faribault.

DOROTHY WHITCOMBE.

Why She Called Herself a "Mean Old Woman."

The sun was slowly rising in the East. Brighter and brighter grew the great round ball, until with a sudden movement it seemed to burst, and a golden, dazzling flood covered the sky; the birds were slowly wakening; first a faint peep was heard and as faintly answered, then a sudden twitter, and the air was full of bird-voices. The flowers were lazily, drowsily opening their dainty petals, and all nature, refreshed by a still night's slumber, awoke to a probable day of joyousness.

It was just after the battle of Long Island, where the Americans, pressed in on every side, had suffered a serious defeat, and the Tories were everywhere; in the bushes, up the trees, taking possession of comfortable farmhouses, anywhere where rest was to be found there also was found a Tory.

Good Farmer Whitcombe, among all this mass of British, was a true patriot in the cause of freedom, but, residing as he did in a Tory neighborhood, outside from very near neighbors he was thought to be a loyalist.

Great consternation reigned in the kitchen of the farm-house on that beautiful morning, for the news of the American defeat had just reached there. Joel Ashley, the boy who had brought the news, just now added to his tale: "And do you know that they are going to the different farm houses demanding shelter and food. I shouldn't wonder a bit but what they would soon be here." he added, comfortingly.

"The nasty varmints, not a rest or a morsel of food will they get here, and if they demand it, why, they will find out with whom they have to deal," and certainly Mistress Dorothy looked fierce enough to make the bravest heart quail as she stood with one hand upraised, as if to strike the foe with a large iron spoon which she held, and the other hand placed defiantly on her hip.

"Sh! sh!" murmured the old man, "if thine enemy hunger—"

"Now, father, you just keep quiet; there's no use in quotin' Scriptur' to me, when I know them Britishers are comin'; you know if 'twant for your blindness and my bein' a woman, there would be two of the best soldiers in the Continental army as they would want."

Just then was heard the patter of tiny feet, and the door was burst open, admitting a little girl, followed by a young woman.

"The Tories have beaten!" exclaimed Miss Dorothy.

"No!" the young woman answered, in surprise.

"But I say that they have, and, what's more, they'll probably come here and ask for lodgin' and food. I'll give it to 'em—food for thought." And Mistress Dorothy bustled around setting breakfast on the table.

"Well, well," was all Patty Whitcombe could find to say, but she finally exclaimed: "Mother, if you refuse them admission they may seize the property and fire the house."

"That's so," the old woman said, musingly. "I suppose if it comes to the worst we'll hev to let them in. Breakfast is ready; come, father."

They had no sooner sat down when a knock was heard at the door. The two women looked at each other, and the old man's lips were just framed to say: "Come in," when his wife said: "No, you don't father; I'll meet 'em," but the younger woman was even quicker, and the dame sat down on her chair.

But for all her bravery, Patty felt a sort of faint-heartedness creeping over her; she threw open the door, and there, to confirm her worst fears, stood two soldiers in the uniform of the hated redcoats. "Good morning, good mistress," said the older man, stepping forward, "I pray you to give us a bit of breakfast, for we have had a long fast, and my comrade here is all but completely exhausted."

Conquering her repugnance with a mighty effort she managed to say: "You and your comrade may enter and partake of our breakfast."

With a grateful look, both men crossed the threshold. Mistress Dorothy sat rigidly in her chair, she had tightly closed her eyes when the knock was heard, and had kept them closed, until the strangers had entered the room, and now she glared ferociously at them through her glasses. Her daughter-in-law, noticing those glances, stepped behind her and whispered: "Not so fierce, mother, not so fierce, or they will surely suspect something."

"Don't fret; perhaps you would like me to go up to them, and shake hands with 'em, and say why didn't they come before, and hope they'll stay, oh! the wretches," and the old lady shook herself with a grim vehemence.

The two invaders were not so fierce and terrible-looking, indeed, for soldiers who had just won a victory; they looked strangely worn, weary and disheartened. Mistress Patty felt a stir of sympathy in her heart, for the younger man reminded her so vividly of her husband, who was so bravely fighting in the true cause; in fact, little Dorothy went up to him, laid her dimpled hand on his knee, looking trustfully up in the handsome face bent over her, and said: "Papa."

"And where is papa, my dear?" he asked, gently lifting the child on his knee.

"'Way, 'way off, fightin' the—"

"Dorothy," her grandmother's voice sounded like gravel crunched viciously together, "your mother is going to feed the chickens and you'd better help her," with that she began to busily clear off the table. "I don't suppose you want any thing more?" she suddenly said, when the table was almost cleared.

"No, we have had sufficient, thanks to your kindness," courteously replied the older man.

"'Tain't no thanks to me at all," she returned tartly, "you're soldiers, so I had to do it."

"What an exceedingly curious cream cup," exclaimed the younger man, taking the curious piece of workmanship up and examining it, with the air of a connoisseur. That was the last drop in Mistress Dorothy's cup of bitterness which was already overflowing. She had let them enter her house, given them their breakfast, and now, after allowing them all these liberties, always under protest, that they would now begin to confiscate her property was too much; she snatched the cream cup out of the astonished man's hands, and began excitedly: "You'd better go now, you'd better go, you've had your breakfast and a little rest, and at this time o' day visitors ain't wanted 'round the farm."

"But, my dear madam," the young man broke in, "I assure you I meant no harm, and really my friend and I need a rest so badly that we are afraid we must trespass on your hospitality," here a faint smile crossed the young man's face, "a little longer; give us but a bed to rest our weary limbs a little while and then we will depart."

Dame Dorothy looked at the young man sternly. "In my days, young man, when folks told us we wan't wanted we got out."

"But, madam," the older man interposed, "circumstances alter cases, remember that these are strange days, and strange things happen in them; but by the way, madam, are you a Tory or a rebel?"

"Taint none of your business," was the uncompromising reply.

"Well, will you allow us a bed?" he asked.

"I think it's time you was a startin'," was the laconic answer.

"Then since it becomes a necessity I demand in the name of—" Here something seemed to choke him, for he seemed unable to go on.

"Well, if I must I suppose I must, but if ever I wished a feather bed was filled with pine needles, I wish that thar one was," and with that she opened a door disclosing a bed-room. They silently entered the room, and she, with a bang of the door, fled to the kitchen. "There, I've gone and done it," she said, in high wrath, "I've harbored two British soldiers under my roof, and if any body ought to be taken before General Washington and convicted as a spy I feel like that one. Joel Ashley," she said, suddenly, turning to the boy who was the sole occupant of the room and who was gazing at her in bewilderment, "I've got an errand for you." "Yes'm," he said, meekly enough. Joel was always meek when the madam was in such a wrath.

"You know where the Continentals are stationed about ten miles from here, eh?" Joel nodded. "Well, you stir yourself and go over there and tell their commander there are two red-coats in this house and if they want them to come for them right away, right away, mind you; now hurry." And Joel did hurry.

Madam sat rocking herself violently to and fro. "There, you've gone and done another mean thing," she said to herself, angrily. "Doin' a mean thing is jist like tellin a lie, you do one and you'll surely do another; I guess I'll just peek in the room and see if they've set it afire yet." She tiptoed across the hall and looked through a crack in the door, then her conscience smote her worse than ever; carelessly lying on the bed, his fair handsome face looking so worn and thin even in sleep, he reminded her also of her soldier boy. The older man was wearily writing at a table, resting every once in a while, but soon resuming his task.

"I'm a mean old woman," she soliloquized. "But—they're Britishers." That settled the question, and she returned to her work.

Morning entered into afternoon, and afternoon slowly melted into early evening, the shadows gently creeping over the land, the birds were twittering a good night, and still the soldiers slept. Softly, cautiously, a band of fifteen men were wending their way towards the Whitcombe farmhouse; nearer and nearer they got, until you could see that they wore the Continental uniform. They reached the house and were met by mistress; she pointed to the room where the soldiers were then sat herself rigidly down in her rockingchair to have an argument with her conscience.

Suddenly—what is that she hears? A hearty laugh re-echoed through the house. She hurried to the door where the soldiers were. And what did she see? Her two red-coats shaking hands heartily with the Continentals. And what does she hear?

"Captain," one of the men says, "we had given you and the Colonel up for lost, and the camp was in sore distress about you."

And he, the admirer of the cream-jug, answers in a full, rich voice: "The Colonel and I were surrounded by the British on every side: we just escaped capture, stole these uniforms from two dead Tories and traveled weak and weary, through bogs and swamps to join you, but, overcome by fatigue, stopped here for a few hours' rest. But how did you come here?"

"We came to capture two British soldiers, but instead have found our Colonel and our Captain. Three cheers, men, three cheers!"

And they did cheer strong and hearty.

And Mistress Dorothy? She crept back to the kitchen, rocked herself back and forth and said: "Dorothy Whitcombe, what a fool you've been!" —Bertha Loomer, in New York Mail and Express.

Eternal Fitness.

A sailor for sea,
And a spinster for tea,
A lawyer for talking, and a soldier for fighting;
A baby for noise,
And a circus for boys,
And a typewriter man to do autograph writing,
A banker for chink,
And a printer for ink,
A leopard for spots, and a wafer for sticking;
A crack base-ball slinger,
An opera singer,
A shotgun, a mule, and a choir for kicking.
—Burdette.

Portable Timepieces.

Parisiennes are never so happy as when they are changing the "fashions." No sooner has one cri come into vogue than it is supplanted by another, and so the perpetual transformation goes on with the regularity of a pendulum, until it comes to a full stop, and then begins over the old ground once more. Some months since it became highly unfashionable to have pendules, no matter of what period or artistic sumptuousness of design and ornament, on your mantelpiece. The reason for this was that ladies carried little portative watches, first on their card-cases, and afterward embedded in the handles of their parasols and "gamps." There was therefore no occasion for them while visiting to cast furtive glances at pendules when they wanted to know the time. It was, moreover, a dastardly reproach, if a not glaring insult, to your visitor to keep a clock on the mantelpiece of your salon when you know, or was supposed to know, that she had a tiny chronometer made after the most approved style ticking in the top of her parasol. Now another slight change in the fashion of portable timepieces has set in, and the last command of modish caprice is to carry a small watch imbeded in a bracelet of morocco leather which is worn around the wrist.—Paris Dispatch.

A Resemblance.

"Did the close resemblance between a ghost and a balloonist ever strike you?" asked the snake editor. "No," replied the horse editor. "How do they resemble each other?" "Well, a balloonist is an aeronaut." "Yes; but what is a ghost?" "It's an airy naught, too."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

How my Wife was Won.

My name is Augustus Browning. I believe, at one time, some of my friends had serious fears that I would never enter the state of matrimony. At all events, each friend knew of some one who would make me such a nice wife. What had I done to be so unmercifully persecuted? But the truth is, I had my own ideas of a wife. I knew I should find somewhere in this great world a woman pure as a snow-drop and modest as a daisy, with a sweet voice and dainty ways; with eyes that might flash, yet be controlled by the gentle power of love. Notwithstanding the match-making propensities of my friends, I remained steadfastly a bachelor until 30, and enjoyed hearty my single blessedness. The ladies will doubtless think that during this time my garments were without buttons, and my hosiery with more than the proper apertures; but such was not the case, Mrs. Vail, my landlady, being in charge thereof. She was a very nice housekeeper, and a woman who had seen better days, or at least happier ones, if one might judge from occasional remarks made by her, and the fact that she occupied a house of her own —a three-story one—in a pleasant street in Islington.

I had breakfast and tea at the house, but dined in the city; for being head clerk in a large wholesale house, I found it necessary to look carefully after the interests of my employers, considering likewise I was working for myself, as I expected to be one of the partners the next year.

At Mrs. Vail's my room was the second floor front, and afforded me a good view of all that transpired in the street; and, as I was not acquainted with my neighbors, not even knew their names, I used to sit on summer evenings in a comfortable easy chair by the window, smoking fragrant cigars, building castles in the air, and watching the occupants over the way.

Some one at my elbow says: "You ought to have been ashamed of yourself," but I do not know that I have ever regretted it.

I discovered that a beautiful girl glided gracefully about the house in drapery that seemed to envelope her like a delicate summer cloud. I noticed her little caressing ways about the loved ones, and of course it must have been the "maiden fair to see" whose voice I heard trilling away as only birds and maidens can.

I am a man who even now cannot resist paying homage to every bit of womanhood I see; therefore, when this pleasure was to be my evening's entertainment, can you wonder that I remained at home, nothing else offering any attraction?

I ventured to ask one morning who our neighbors were over the way, whereupon Mrs. Vail said: "Oh, that is Mrs. Forest's house. They have lived there for many years, for I remember their daughter when she was a little wee thing—she used to look so sweet in her white frock and corals."

I thought to myself then she was just as sweet now as she was then, if not sweeter.

"I have heard," continued Mrs. Vail, "that when she was young she was a somnambulist, but she may have got over it. I've not heard of it lately. I'm very little acquainted with them; but its a good thing to know one's neighbors, in case of fire or accident happening;"—which sensible remark finished, I roamed in fancy with the beautiful unknown, while visions of operas and hair-breadth escapes were mingled in delightful confusion.

"Rather a dangerous young lady to marry, Mrs. Vail," said I, my dream being over.

"Bless me! you don't thing of marrying, do you, Mr. Browning?" said she, looking alarmed—I suppose the thought of losing me was insupportable.

"Well, not at present," said I.

All day long I thought of Grace, and immediately after tea sought my room and looking-glass to take an inventory of my personal attractions I came to the conclusion that I was a good looking fellow, and I'd go in and win—if I could. But I must tell you of myself, and leave you to judge.

I am not what the ladies call a love and a perfect little dear of a man. On the contrary, I am tall, rather stout, with fair complexion, hazel eyes, and brown hair, that, although cut short, will curl in spite of fate; a mouth too womanly for one of the sterner sex, and teeth that render a smile irresistible. Men know when they are admired.

I took my post at the window, and observed that the family were moving about, dressed as if to receive company. My heart beat fast with jealous fear. Perhaps some lover is expected, or it might be a marriage.

"Have I, then, wasted my time," I soliloquized, "while some miserable fellow has walked in and borne off the prize?"

Just then Grace entered the drawing-room opposite, more beautiful than ever, and very soon the guests began to arrive.

They danced and sang, and I was in a state of misery as I watched the attentions bestowed upon Grace. I waited until every guest had departed, and satisfied myself that there was no whispered "Good-night" for any favored one. After every light had disappeared, I was still disinclined to sleep, spite of morrow's duties. I sat as if moonstruck, thinking of the future and wondering how I might gain entrance to its, to me, enchanting portals.

It was past midnight, and I was gazing at the innumerable stars shining so far away in the deep blue heavens, when my attention was attracted by the appearance of a ghostly looking figure gliding about over the roof of the opposite neighbor's house.

"What, in the name of common sense, is that?" I asked myself, and rubbed my eyes to see if I might be dreaming; but no, it was flitting from one side to the other, as if searching for something lost, but at last came to the eave near a chimney, and depositing a small parcel in it, turned and glided away as swiftly as it had appeared. I remembered Mrs. Vail's words, and resolved that the woman I intended to bestow my name upon should take no more nocturnal rambles. Thinking I had seen quite enough for one night, I sought my pillow, and was soon asleep.

Glancing at the paper the morning after, while waiting for breakfast, my eye fell on the following advertisement:

Any person giving information leading to the discovery of a full set of coral, taken from the residence of Mr. James Forrest, Chestnut street, Islington, will be liberally rewarded. Apply, etc.

"Now, thought I, "I'll attend to that little matter myself with all the pleasure in the world." The fates were at last propitious. My actions must have been strange, however, as Mrs. Vail kindly inquired if I was not as well as usual that morning.

Once at my place of business, I remarked that our neighbor over the way, at Islington, had been robbed the evening but one previous.

"What! Mr. James Forrest?" asked one of the clerks. "He is a lawyer, and has got an office in Moorgate street. He's a fine old chap—got a pretty daughter, and lots of money."

I decided to call on Mr. Forrest, and on reaching his office found him alone and disengaged. I introduced myself, and told him what I had seen, and that from motives of delicacy for the young lady I had not mentioned it, but I thought I would come and inform him of my suspicions.

"Thank you heartily, said he. "I can easily obtain the missing articles; and if you like, I shall have great pleasure in introducing to you my family. If not otherwise engaged, suppose you come over this evening."

Wasn't I a happy fellow on leaving that office? Perhaps I didn't congratulate myself that I was naturally of an inquisitive disposition. I could not whistle, of course, nor smoke a cigar—that was against the law—so I walked directly back to my business, trying not to look too radiant; but I was so kind to my inferiors that the clerks thought I had been imbibing, or had received a legacy.

I had never had even a passing fancy for any lady of my acquaintance, and had thought all women were about alike as regarded beauty. But the name of Grace seemed the most musical in the world. I repeated it softly over to myself while dressing for my visit, and when ready to go took one more look in the glass and called myself an idiot, for it occurred to me that the admiration might be all on one side.

I passed the evening in the presence of Grace Forrest, and went home more hopelessly in love than ever. The days flew by like a pleasant dream, and every evening found me a welcome visitor at Mr. Forrest's house. I found the family well informed refined and agreeable.

I was invited to attend church with them on Sunday, and then to lunch, which invitations were seconded by a blush and smile from Grace that always settled the question.

One evening after tea we adjourned to the drawing-room and were chatting pleasantly, when Mrs. Forrest was called from the room to attend to one of the younger members of the family; and soon Mr. Forrest followed suit as unceremoniously as if I were and old friend.

Was ever such an opportunity given a man? I determined then and there to know my fate.

"Grace," said I—I had taken the liberty of addressing her thus before —"did you recover the articles purloined from your jewel box?"

"Oh, you saw that, did you? Yes, I got them, but papa was very quiet about it, and would say nothing about the reward."

"Well," said I, "I know something about that myself; and if I thought I should not offend, I might tell you."

"I know papa would not care," said Grace, "for he told me to find out, if I could."

"I believe then," said I, "that I will claim the reward, as I am the man who informed your father of their hiding place."

"I am sure I thank you very much," said Grace. "but the idea of offering you a reward——"

"Oh, I shall claim one!" I interrupted, growing bold. "It is the little hand."

But I shan't tell you how she answered or what more was said; only the old folks opened the door very unexpectedly, while my arm was around her waist, and her head upon my shoulder. I heard some very pleasant words from Mr. and Mrs. Forrest, but I forgot them.

I flattered myself it was very well done, and Grace, learning the whole story after marriage, resolved to promenade in future in daylight, and in full dress.—Pittsburgh Press.

Missions Nearer Home.

The larger number of church members who take only an apathetic interest in foreign missions will derive much encouragement from the speech of a Boston clergyman at the convention of Christian Endeavor Societies at Chicago. "What is the use," asked this gentleman, "of discussing foreign missions when there are 10,000 foreign infidels and idol worshipers landing on our shores every month. There is ample room for foreign missionary labor right in the United States. Boston, with 600,000 people, has no more than 25,000 members of Protestant churches; New York with its 2,000,000 people, has less than 90,000 Protestants, and Chicago, with 800,000 people, has fewer than 100,000 Protestants. There are 2,860,000 people in these three cities who do not attend our churches. Why then should we go to India or China, or Germany or Italy, to preach the Gospel? If the Bible is true, those who do not believe on the Lord Jesus have nothing before them but eternal destruction. About 80,000 die and go to perdition every year."

Polk County Journal.

W. G. COOKE, Publisher.

CROOKSTON, - MINNESOTA.

A nugget of ruby ore, weighing 1,600 pounds and estimated to be worth $10,000, was taken, from a mine near Elko, Cal., a few days ago.

The latest arrangement in Paris for wedding at home is a floral umbrella, under which the happy pair stand.

Tea cultivation, it is said, is to be tried by a rancher at Elko, Nev., who proposes employing Indian women and children to gather the leaves.

A new kind of strike occurred in a female seminary at Nashville, Tenn., the other day, where a class of young ladies indignantly struck against instruction from a text-book on history which recited the old story of Jefferson Davis's capture in female attire.

One of the waiters employed at one of the larger clubs in Chicago is the son of a wealthy and prominent man in Holland, a former general in the army and the head of an ancient baronial family. Another waiter, a German, who died in Chicago recently, had similar aristocratic antecedents.

The white pasha in the Soudan is believed to be Emin Bey, who, failing to get relief from Stanley, has concluded to help himself by attacking the Mahdi. That is partly a solution of the vexed question. But where is Stanley? The American public is more interested in him than in Emin Bey.

American tourists travel in Europe this summer more economically than usual, probably because they have learned to travel like the natives. By following native customs, choosing hotels most frequented by the natives, and by other devices, Americans are not made subject to foreign imposition and find traveling less expensive than they have been led to suppose.

The horribly brutal speeches to invalids that are made by visitors apparently friendly and apparently sane are inexcusable. Some of them are so horrible that one must laugh at the very remembrance of them. To a dear old gentleman who had been confined to the house for some time was put the cheerful inquiry, "Does the grave look pleasant to you, Mr. ——?"

The Wolverhampton correspondent of the London Times states that during a recent heavy thunderstorm a collier named Bates, who had lost his eyesight through an accident, was being led home, when a flash of lightning was reflected on the spectacles he wore to conceal his disfigurement. After the peal of thunder which followed he complained of a pain in his head. The next moment, to his surprise, he found that he had regained possession of his eyesight.

A big flock of crows kept pulling up a Connecticut farmer's corn almost as fast as it was planted. So he built a pen in the cornfield and laid wait to shoot them as they came. But whenever he went to the pen with his gun the crows boycotted the place, till he grew tired and returned. One day the farmer took his farm hand with him and after remaining in the pen sometime sent him back alone. Not long after this the birds flew down in large numbers, showing that they were poor mathematicians and could not count.

The early Indian tribes who inhabited Mt. Desert Island believed that the Garden of Eden was situated at that spot, and, according to their legends, when the white man gave the name of Eden to one part of the island, it was only coming to its own again. Strange as it may seem the primeval father of the Maine red man was a youth with golden hair and eyes like the hazel berry, tall and of great beauty. The Eve who came to him just when his loneliness was unsupportable, first appeared coming through the clouds. Her first exclamation at seeing him was the Indian for "Oh dear." She at once cut off his golden locks and began to weave them into a strong cord growing larger as she proceeded. At a suggestion from Monicho, the god of evil designs, the man took the cord from her and bound her with it when she ceased growing, but did not stop working. The next thing she did was to bend down a tall gree stalk near her and gather from it its golden seeds which she made into bread, being thus the discoverer of Indian corn. The couple, after teaching their children how to raise and use this grain, were translated to the constellation of stars known as the Sickle, whence they still watch over their earthly home.

RESUME OF THE NEWS

The Latest Telegraphic News Condensed.

Doings at Washington.

The troops of the Second cavalry, stationed at the Presidio, and a detachment of the same regiment at Benecia, California, have been placed by instructions from Washington under marching orders. They will be sent to some point in Arizona on the Mexican border. The movement is thought to be due to trouble caused by border ruffians and also by the Indians in Arizona.

Maj. Gen. Schofield has issued a general order announcing that he has assumed command of the army. He also issued an order detailing First Lieutenant S. F. Sawyer, Fifth artillery; First Lieutenant T. H. Bliss, First artillery, and First Lieutenant John Pitcher, First cavalry, for duty at army headquarters as aides-de-camp. Colonels Sheridan, Kellogg and Blunt, late of Gen. Sheridan's staff, have also been assigned to temporary duties at army headquarters.

The Senate committee on pensions are considering a bill to pension Mrs. Sheridan. It is thought that the bill will carry about $2,000, although the sum as it stands in the bill at present, $5,000, is mentioned. The committee generally think that $5,000 is little enough, but the difficulty of getting such a bill through the house is recognized. The members of the committee believe that the pension of the wives of the three greatest soldiers of the war should be fixed the same as if they had been presidents' wives—$5,000.

The adjutant general of the army received the following telegram from Maj. Gen. Howard, dated San Francisco, Aug. 14: Several sensational reports have come to me from different sources, claiming an Indian raid into Pleasant valley, Ariz. All these have been proved to be without foundation. Gen. Miles sent from San Carlos the following telegram: Just received the reports from Pleasant valley. I was satisfied the report could not be true, and made no report of it. It proved to be entirely without foundation. There are but six men away from their proper camps avoiding arrest for acts of violence resulting from Indian quarrels. I expect three to surrender here and three to surrender at Apache; none left reservation, neither have they disturbed the person or property of white men. They fired upon scouts, but the causes and circumstances cannot be fully explained by telegraph. In the main all other Indians are under control, and a condition of peace prevails.

The Record of Casualties.

The body of Joseph Humpert, who was drowned in Lake Pepin, off the excursion steamer Sea Wing, was recovered.

A sixteen-year-old son of Erick Selim, eight miles southwest of Canton, Dak., accidentally shot himself in the shoulder a few days ago. He was driving a harvester, and a shotgun he was carrying was discharged, the contents nearly blowing his arm off near the shoulder. The physicians say he will not recover.

Sherman Mathies and family were returning to Fergus Falls, Minn., from a picnic at Swan lake, when the team ran away. There were six in the wagon, all of whom were thrown out. Mr. Mathies had two ribs broken and was otherwise bruised. Mrs. Mathies and one little girl was also injured quite badly.

While several boys were picking berries on the hill about one mile from the city of Duluth, Minn., a half dozen shots were fired by some one unknown. One took effect in the groin of Hans Uensolf, aged fourteen, inflicting a fatal wound. It is supposed boys were shooting at a mark, and the boy was accidentally hit.

Mrs. F. Walter was badly burned at Brookings, Dak. She was painting the floor, and was told to put the can on the stove and make the paint hot, as it would wear better. She did so, and the paint took fire, and in throwing it into the street she was badly burned about the hands and arms, and lost most of her hair.

Julius Johnson and John Popp, while engaged in repairing a wire fence, were instantly killed by a thunderbolt near Elk Point, Dak. Johnson was a married man and leaves a widow and three children, and Popp was in his employ. Neither were marked in any way, except that Johnson had a small black spot burned on his neck.

A fire in the vestibule of the old Germania hall at La Crosse, Wis. caused $200 damages. In the vestibule were found a broken jug, a half-burned box of sawdust and a strong smell of kerosene. Shortly after a fire broke out in P. Lehnens grocery store. All the contents were ruined by water, fire and smoke, and the building badly damaged. Insurance $1,350. Last fall a fire caught in the same store in the same way and caused about the same loss. Lehnens thinks inflammable substances were thrown in through the window.

Criminal Doings.

Dr. C. C. Givens shot and killed Webb Stewart at Centerville, Indiana. Givens claims he shot in self-defense and that Stewart had threatened to kill him.

Ole Iverson, who attempted suicide by cutting his throat in the county jail at Austin, Minn., some weeks ago, has been adjudged insane and taken to the Rochester asylum.

John L. Sullivan, the pugilist, appeared in the Brighton police court in Boston to answer a charge of drunkenness. He pleaded guilty and was fined $5 and costs, which he paid and was discharged.

A young man named Geo. B Spencer, clerk for H. F. Evans, of Morris, Minn., is missing, together with $500 belonging to his employer. The young man has been traced to Wahpeton, where it is said he was spending money freely. Some believe the young man is demented.

Through skillful detective work of a citizen the parties who burglarized Gallard's store at Aberdeen, D. T., were detected. E. Burns, who is suspected of being one of the gang of petty thieves which has infected the city of late is under arrest, and other suspected parties are closely watched.

Three tramps giving their names as John Howard, Martin Lenard and James Murray, near Northfield, Minn., stole a purse containing twelve dollars which belonged to Barney Eishen, a farmer. They started for Faribault, but were overtaken at Dundas by Chief Johnson and brought back and placed in the lock-up, where they await justice.

C. C. Lane, proprietor of the Jim Cook house at Bemdale, Minn., took a load of blueberries to Alexandria. There he met Frank Riggs, whom he had known for years. Riggs wished to ride home with him, and Lane charges that when about six miles out Riggs knocked him out of the wagon with a board, hammered him up in bad shape, stole his watch and $75 in money, left him lying on the ground insensible and left with the team.

What the Chicago police think was an attempt at the wholesale destruction of property on the Burlington road was discovered. A policeman's attention was attracted to an object on the "Q" track on Sixteenth street, near the viaduct. On picking it up he found that it was a gas-pipe bomb, containing enough dynamite to blow up an entire train. The bomb was six inches long, and one and a half inches in diameter—one of the largest size made by the anarchists. The police have no clue as to who placed the bomb upon the track, but are inclined to suspect some of the Burlington strikers or their sympathizers, the dynamite was almost under the viaduct, and if exploded, it would have resulted in a heavy loss of property, if not in the destruction of life.

Foreign Cullings.

Superintendent Roycraft and special constables arrived at Victoria B. C., from Skeena. When they arrived at Hazelton, on Aug. 1, they found the news of their arrival had preceded them and the Indians had fled. The whites were looking starved and ill from anxiety and want of rest, and were glad to see the reinforcements. Everything was quiet.

The facts in the case of Larry Donovan, the bridge jumper, as they gradually become known, are exciting a great deal of sympathy in London. On the Saturday previous to his death Donovan got into a drunken quarrel and in the fight which ensued had both his eyes blackened and his body badly bruised. He continued his spree until Tuesday morning, meanwhile visiting the vilest resorts and bragging about his daring feats. Finally he accepted a challenge to jump from Hungerford bridge for $10, with the stipulation that should he fail to perform the feat without injury to himself he should receive nothing. He removed nothing but his coat and hurriedly leaped from the footpath into the water, which he struck on his side or stomach. He immediately sank and was seen no more until his body was picked up at Deptford. No boat was provided for his assistance or rescue, and his companions disappeared as soon as they discovered that the jumper was beyond the reach of help.

Personal Gossip.

The body of Dr. Watson's father was found in the river at Worden's ferry, fifteen miles below Dubuque, thereby clearing up the mystery of this strange disappearance. He was ninety years of age, and wandered from his son's house on July 30 in an aberration of mind. Whether he committed suicide or was drowned accidentally the coroner's jury has failed as yet to ascertain.

The reception to Gen. Rea, grand commander of the G. A. R., at Aberdeen, D. T., was a most enthusiastic and successful event. Features of the day were a grand procession participated in by visiting posts and local organizations and public exercises in the afternoon at the ball park. Fully a thousand people, including many Grand Army men, were present to hear Gen. Rea's address.

While Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt was riding in her Victoria on Bellevue avenue, New York, her cariage was run into by a dog cart and she was thrown out. She was taken into the cottage of John Jacob Astor, opposite, and then taken home in another carriage, her own being demolished. The horses ran into Mr. Astor's grounds, and were narrowly saved from jumping from the cliffs. Physicians remained with Mrs. Vanderbilt all the evening. It is impossible to ascertain the full extent of her injuries. It is feared she is badly hurt.

Miscellaneous News Items.

The Missouri river began its ravages again at Sioux City, when nearly thirty feet of earth for a distance of several hundred feet disappeared.

The second congressional democratic convention of Minnesota at its meeting at Mankato, unanimously nominated Hon. Morton S. Wilkinson as a candidate for congress to run against Lind, the Republican nominee.

The retailers of lager beer, numbering nearly fifty, who are still dispensing liquor at Grand Forks, D. T., under the sobriquet of "Mumm," local option law to the contrary notwithstanding, were arrested. They each disgorged $50 and costs to the city's treasury.

Bert Santelle came to Wadena, Minn., and made complaint to the authorities that a neighbor of his, H. W. Loche, was crazy, and wanted him taken care of. Locke heard of this proceedings and put for the woods, where he now is, armed with a Winchester rifle and about fifty rounds of catridges. He is about fifty years old and has been sent to the asylum from this country twice before. He has a wife and large family.

The annual convention of the Wisconsin Anti-prohibition society opened at Madison, Wis., with about two hundred whisky dealers present. The society's mission is to defend the liquor interests by securing laws favorable to them, and it is an effective body to off set prohibition for it will spend money with lavish hand to gain its end. The present membership exceeds 4,000 men who are vitally interested in the freedom of the liquor traffic. Col. C. S. Ellsworth, a former prohibition orator, now state organizer of the anti-Prohibitionists, advocated strangulation of high license, and said there was not a liquor man in Wisconsin who did not oppose the Republican free whisky plank.

A Plea for Statehood.

Over the signature of W. C. Arnold, chairman of the executive committee for division and admission of North Dakota and of South Dakota, the following address has been forwarded to President Cleveland from said committee:

We, the people of Dakota, irrespective of party, respectfully but most earnestly ask simple justice at your hands. We are bound by the closest ties of kindred, friendship and patriotism to the citizens of the states, and request that we be clothed with the rights and powers of statehood for both North Dakota and South Dakota. We have 600,000 intelligent, industrious people, who have for tedious years unavailing been imploring and entreating congress to admit us into the sisterhood of states. The two proposed states embrace an area 96,000,000 acres of fertile land, which produces annually 60,000,000 bushel of wheat and 30,000,000 bushels of corn. We have $50,000,000 invested in banking; 5,000 miles of railroad; 4,000 public schools, employing 5,000 teachers and expending annually $2,000,000. We furnish millions in precious metals, and pay millions in tribute in the way of taxes to the general government. The committee on territories, of the present house of representatives, has turned a deaf ear to our petitions, and we now appeal to you, asking that the admission of the two states be made the subject of a special message to congress. We speak boldly because we know our cause is just; we ask fearlessly because we are only asking for the rights of American freemen; we appeal sincerely because we long for release from territorial vassalage; we petition earnestly because of an inherent right to enfranchised manhood. Will the president of the United States, who is enthroned above all kings, refuse the prayer of a suffering, patriotic people? If not, then shall there arise in the great Northwest two new stars whose luster shall add glory and brightness to the thirty-eight which now adorn the old flag.

Murder and Suicide.

A horrible shooting affair took place at Minneapolis at a lodging house kept by Mrs. Harris. One evening a young man applied for a room for himself and his wife, who, he said, was to arrive on a train. About midnight pistol shots were heard in their room. After an alarm a policeman put his shoulder to the door and burst into the room. On the bed, as if asleep was a young man. On the floor, lying on her left side, with her left arm under her head, was a woman. A revolver within a few inches of her right hand and the trickling blood from a wound back of her right ear, told the story in an instant. She was unconscious, but her heavy breathing told that she was still alive. Not so with her companion. He was dead. A bullet wound in the left temple told the tale. The identity of the actors in this horrible tragedy was revealed by a young man who appeared to have been a companion of the pair, and who said the man was James Scanlan, a gambler, and the woman Pearl Wilson, who has until a few weeks ago kept a bagnio at 439 Jackson street, St. Paul.

As to the cause of the murder, it is apparent that Pearl shot Scanlan and that, too, when he was asleep. There is every indication that his death was instantaneous. With a pint bottle of whisky half emptied and several bottles of beer, it would appear that the two had been on a debauch, but their conduct and appearance did not go to show that. Neither was there any occasion for jealousy. Without a doubt, the woman is insane, or at least was when she fired the shots.

He Pulled off His Boots P. D. Q.

From the Kansas City Times.

"On my train recently coming up from St. Louis," said Conductor James Merrifield, of the Missouri Pacific, to the Gossiper last night, "was a party of men who had been having a good time all the way up. When we came to Pleasant Hill one of the men came to me and told me he had been robbed of $35, and that he believed he could pick out the man who robbed him. I asked him if he wanted the man arrested. 'No,' said he, 'you just watch me fix him.' I went forward to where the man sat and the man who had been robbed tapped him on the shoulder and said: 'You live in St Louis, don't you? 'Yes.' 'Friends all live there, don't they?' 'Yes.' 'If anything should happen you where would you want your remains to be sent for burial?' 'To St. Louis, of course; but why do you ask?' 'Now, look here; you give me my $35 or you will go back to St. Louis a corpse, and inside a very few hours.' 'I haven't got your $35,' protested he. 'Don't parley over this any longer, but give me that money. I mean business.' Well, sir, that fellow pulled off his boot and shelled out that $35 in a hurry, I can tell you."

Extensive Post-office Robbery.

Chicago officers have unearthed a robbery, and such a robbery as almost appals one in its vastness. The culprits have been captured and the stolen mail matter recovered—at least a great portion of it. The valuation of this matter will not fall short of $200,000. The story of the crime is an interesting one. The thieves are named Oberkamf and Mack, the former confessing that he had been rifling the mail boxes in Chicago for a long period, and that he got into these boxes by means of a regular mail service key. He refuses to state where he obtained the key, which is numbered 168. It bears the name of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha railroad was designed for the use of the mail service on that road. Just how it was lost, and to what clerk it belonged, will be investigated at Washington. Oberkampf sent for Detective Klinger and gave him a letter which led to the arrest of Mack, who took the officers to his room on Cottage Grove avenue, where he turned over a lot of checks and drafts. Mack, who is an intelligent appearing man of about forty years, said that Oberkampf had given them to him to keep and that he did not know where the latter had got them. He disclaimed all connection and knowledge of the crime and said that he first became acquainted with the German while engaged in the insurance business. He had engaged Oberkampf to address circulars for him. His connection with the affair was clearly proven, however, when it became known that he had been frequently seen in the company of Oberkampf at the latter's rooms. As to how long the prisoners have been operating the officials can give no definite answer. However, they think that Oberkampf has been breaking into mail boxes for the past two years, and it is known that for that space of time he has not done a stroke of work.

Von Oberkamf was indebted to his landlady, and in payment tendered her a check which she accepted and returned him a difference of about $50 in cash. The check turned out to have been forged, and she placed the matter in the hands of the police, who located the man in a room on North Market street. In searching this room, the officers were astonished to find a trunk filled to the top with letters. They had all been opened, and bore no postmark, and each had had the stamp removed. It was then ascertained that Von Oberkamf occupied still another room, and when this was searched another trunk full of letters, all in the precise condition described above, were found. At another room in the hotel were found a valise packed with broken mail matter, and a bunch of keys. One of the keys was one which opened railway mail pouches, and another would open any letter box in Chicago. All the captured mail matter was taken to the office of the postoffice inspector. The envelope contained all sorts of queer things usually sent through the mails, from dry goods samples, and bits of jewelry, to writing pads, and photographs. But that which showed the magnitude of the depredations was the presence of piles of insurance policies, trust, deeds, drafts, checks, money orders and promissory notes. The largest check was for $10,000, drawn, by a wholesale grocery house of Chicago on the Continental National bank. Numerous other drafts, ranging in figures from $7,500 to $1,000, and scores drawn for $500 each were found. The post-office authorities are now investigating how the postal keys came into Von Oberkamf's possession. It is supposed that some letter carriers, anticipating the loss of his position, had a duplicate of his key made, and that he gave it to Von Oberkamf, sharing with him the proceeds.

The Railroads and the Indians.

The conference committee on the bill to ratify the Northwest Indian commission's agreement with the Shoshone and Bannock Indians reducing the Fort Hall reservation made its report to the house and senate and it was adopted. The senate amendment granting the Utah & Northern Railroad company 150 acres of land at Pocatello for station grounds, etc., was agreed to with an amendment providing for the forfeiture of the lands if the railroad company in any way alienates them. The bill provides that the road shall pay as much in addition to the $3 per acre already agreed upon as the appraisers may think the land cut up into town lots may be worth. There was no opposition to this report of the conference committee. The secretary of the interior transmitted to the senate, in response to a resolution, a report from the commissioner of Indian affairs and the commissioner of the general land office showing the roads which have received from congress the right of way through Indian reservations since the beginning of the Forty-ninth congress. The report shows the following roads were granted right of way through Indian reservations by the Forty-ninth Congress.

Maricopa & Phenix, Gila River reservation; Rock Fork & Cook City, Crow Creek reservation; St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba, Blackfeet and Fort Berthold reservation; Utah & Northern, Uncompaghree reservation.

The following rights of way have been granted by the Fiftieth congress:

Billings, Clark's Fork & Cook City, Crow reservation; Duluth, Rainy Lake River & Southwestern, Boise Forte reservation and Red Lake reservation; Milwaukee & Western, Lac de Flambeau; Washington & Idaho, Cœur d'Alene reservation.

The following bills for right of way through Indian reservations are pending in congress.

Aberdeen, Bismarck & Northwestern, Great Sioux reservation; Cedar Rapids, Iowa Falls & Northwestern, Pipestone reservation; Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, Lake Traverse reservation in Dakota; Duluth & Winnipeg, Fond du Lac reservation; Forest City & Watertown, Sioux reservation; Jamestown & Northern, Devils Lake reservation; Missoula Northern, Flathead reservation; Montana, Kansas & Texas, Indian Territory Moorhead, Leach Lake, & Northern, White Earth reservation; Newport & Kings Valley, Silutz reservation; Northern Pacific, Wakaina reservation; Oregon Railway and Navigation, Nez Perces reservation; St. Paul, Black Hills & Pacific, Sioux reservation; Utah & Northern, Fort Hall reservation; Wyoming Midland, Wind River reservation; Yankton & Missouri Valley, Yankton reservation.

The secretary of the interior is informed that the Bois and Red Lake Indians of Minnesota refused to consent to the right of way through their reservation, granted by congress to the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Northwestern Railroad company by an act of April 24, 1888.

A Strange Case.

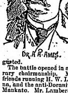
A telegram from Spokane Falls, Washington Territory, says: There is a strange mystery connected with the suicide of William O'Dell, and the like termination of his bosom friend and partner, Chris Nelson. The latter fatally shot himself in his room over the Cœur d'Alene saloon two weeks ago. O'Dell could not give any reason for his partner's rashness, as he did not drink and possessed considerable money. Now O'Dell hangs himself without any apparent cause. Both are from Seattle. At the inquest it developed that a witness named Beck was interested with O'Dell and Nelson in a contract that was found among O'Dell's effects. The contract was between D. E. Denny & Son of Seattle, and Wm. O'Dell, Chris. Nelson and Beck. It was dated March 14, 1888, and provided for payment of $2,000 to them for clearing a number of lots in North Seattle for Denny's contract. Beck said everything had been completed in June and Nelson and O'Dell, the two suicides, had come here while Nelson remained at Seattle. Beck said that in speaking of Nelson, O'Dell said he was very foolish to commit suicide, for he had money and there was plenty of work to be had here, and he could not understand it, for he never knew Nelson to have a revolver before. The last time he saw O'Dell was Wednesday. It was developed also from his testimony that O'Dell had done contracting in Minneapolis and was well known among Scandinavians there; that he had worked on the Cascade division of the Northern Pacific, that he was a regular visitor to variety theaters and rather partial to the fair sex; also that he had written to Seattle for money which he expected to receive in a few days.

Capt. Jack Williams, a professional swimmer and a native of the Island of Malta, accomplished a remarkable feat at St. Louis. He went up to Alton Ill., and was taken out in the river and his hands were bound to his side. His two legs were strapped together and he was then dropped overboard. His object was to swim thus handicapped to St. Louis, a distance or twenty-five miles. He started a few minutes after 12 o'clock, clad only in a pair of trunks. He arrived at the big bridge a few minutes after 7 o'clock, having been eight hours in the water. He was accompanied by an excursion boat and made the long swim without rest of stoppage. He propelled himself by working his legs and swam the entire distance on his back.

Minnesota Democracy.

Their Lively Convention at St. Paul Results in a Doran Victory and the Nomination of Eugene Wilson for Governor.

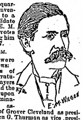
The Minnesota democratic State Convention met in St. Paul, and, as was anticipated, a stormy and exciting time followed. The attempt to depose Doran and Kelly was a failure, and they were masters of the situation from the first; the regular Ramsey county delegates were allowed to take their seats, but they were humiliated and mortified at their position; Dr. Ames and the Hennepin county delegates were defeated and disgusted.



The battle opened in a fight for the temporary chairmanship. Mr. Doran and his friends running H. W. Lamberton, of Winona, and the anti-Doranites, Daniel Buck, of Mankato. Mr. Lamberton was elected—the vote being 192, against 165 cast for Buck.

NOMINATION FOR GOVERNOR.

After hours of quarreling, the convention finally got to a vote for a candidate for governor. E. M. got Wilson 223 votes out of 350, giving him a majority of 87.



THE PLATFORM.

Resolutions were adopted as follows: The Democrats of Minnesota congratulate the taxpayers of this state and the the nation upon unanimous nomination and the assured election of Grover Cleveland as president, and of Allen G. Thurman as vice president of the United States. The long public record of these nominees, the rare courage and ability shown by each of them in the discharge of the official duties repeatedly entrusted to them, their indomitable antagonism to corrupt schemes of corporate monoply and partisan plunder, their conscientious adherence to the principle that "public office is a public trust," and their stalwart honesty and fearless devotion to sound political principles, in spite of popular clamor and regardless of personal popularity, are the best guarantees that the executive administration of this government can be safely committed to their care. The national Democracy invites the country to no experiment with untried men; it offers the tested fidelity and statesmanship of its candidates as the best argument for their election. No suspicion of jobbery, timidity or official dereliction taints the administration of Grover Cleveland. To him we owe it that the great question of the abolition of a superfluous revenue by a reduction of the excessive taxes upon necessaries is made the prominent issue of this campaign. This issue, as declared in the national Democratic platform, meets our unqualified approval. At the same time we reiterate the more advanced principles set forth in the platform adopted by the last Democratic state convention as an explicit statement of that policy of revenue reform which we believe should be adopted gradually, but as rapidly as practicable until the entire system of taxing the many for the subsidizing of the few shall be forever abandoned. We hope that the slight reduction of 4½ per cent in the existing 47 per cent tariff as proposed by the so-called Mills bill, will, when put into practical operation, fully satisfy the people that a greater and more thorough reduction in the same system of taxation can safely be made with permanent benefit to our industrial interests, to the workingmen employed therein, and to all the people of our whole country.

But it is not alone the field of national politics that demands the attention of the voters of Minnesota. The same influences that have created extravagance, profligacy and corruption in the national Republican party have worked out their inevitable results in the administration by that party of the affairs of this state. For years last past the Republican party has held undisputed control of all branches of the state government, resulting in the rapid development in its legislation of the Republican conception of government as the surest fountain of easily-acquired wealth. The complaints of the people have been either unheeded or, under the pretense of giving relief, have been met with remedial laws which, through ignorance or design, have but aggravated the evils complained of, while the legislature, dominated by the party, has departed from the legitimate functions of a state and has perverted its powers to unusual and unwise purposes.

Grain Inspection—The farmers of the state complained that they were suffering from the extortions of the elevators; that these, by a perversion of the powers and duties of the railroads, were, though built and owned by the roads, given into the exclusive control of individuals, who operated them in their own interests, thus creating a monopoly of grain buying with the usual concomitants of such power in dockage of weight and systematic undergrading of grain; and that for this there was no relief aside from the power of the state of which they appeal, ignoring, either through ignorance or desire, the simple remedy of compelling roads to resume and perform their proper functions as carriers of grain, and in their exercise to operate the elevators for the shippers of grain as they operate their yards and warehouses for the shippers of other commodities. The only remedy a Republican legislature offered was the present cumbrous and inefficient grain inspector act, which, if honest is stupid, and if not is malevolent. They answered the appeal for relief from a grinding monopoly by continuing the monopoly; for an open market by one sealed by competition; and they armed the farmer against the undergrading of his grain by the remarkable provision for its inspection at a point hundreds of miles from and at a time days after the time he had sold it to the local buyer. This masterpiece of legislative stupidity or deceit, not only injures the class it assumes to protect, but adds another to the usual uncertainties of the market against which the local buyer can only guard by diminishing the price. But it takes annually from the treasury about $80,000 to feed the officers it creates.

House File 157—While under arbitrary laws the state enforces the payment of the last cent of tax levied upon the property of the humblest citizen, a Republican legislature by that measure, notorious as "House File No. 157," remitted to a railroad company, enriched by a grant of the public domain, the taxes upon its land evaded by it for years, and amounted to about $1,000,000, under the specious pretense of "an act to relieve settlers" on these lands. We offer this as a monumental example of the kind of "protection" modern Republicanism affords to a tax-burdened people.

Multiplicity of offices—successive Republican legislatures have busied themselves in the discovery of places in the civil service of the state in which officers could be planted and cultured. Commission has followed commission, and bureaus with large salaries appended have been created, and each successive legislature taxed its ingenuity to find place for heedy partisans until the charge lies against the Republican party, which a century ago our fore fathers laid against their king: "He has erected a multitude of new officers, and sent hither a swarm of officers to harass our people and eat out their substance."

Extravagance—It has greatly increased the amount of taxes imposed upon our people, and with lavish hands it has wantonly squandered the funds thus collected. So recklessly has this been done that the state is now confronted with the appropriations exceeding the revenues, so the public institutions are now being run upon credit.

Oil Inspection—It has ignored that principle of legislation which, when possible, leaves the execution of laws to the self-interest of men, and has created an oil inspector, whose fees are paid by the consumer and amount to $20,000 per year, and the legislature at its last session refused to take any action though requested.

We particularly arraign the present executive of the state for he has persistently refused to interpose his veto for the protection of the public treasury against the extravagant legislature. We commend to his consideration the example of Grover Cleveland as evidence the wholesome influence upon vicious legislation which an intelligent executive can exercise by a judicious and resolute exercises of the veto power. He has debased the civil service of the state by removing officers of mature experience in order to pay the debts and discharge the obligations of a political campaign. Under him the judiciary of this state for the first time in our history has been prostituted for the purposes of factional partisanship, and men of knowledge incompetency have been clothed with the judge's ermine as a compensation for their political services in the caucus and upon the stump. We submit that the time has come for the decisive overthrow of the politicians who have so long directed the affairs of our state. We insist upon a thorough revision of the existing methods of state government, to the end that taxation may be radically and permanently reduced; that no more money shall be taken from the people than is absolutely necessary for the economical administration of the legitimate affairs of the state; that superfluous offices shall be abolished and necessary offices consolidated, the expense of maintaining the same reduced and the efficiency increased; that appropriations shall be restricted to objects of general public benefit; that our railroad and warehouse legislation shall be so framed as to afford just facilities to our people for the sale and transportation of their products without unfair discrimination in favor of individuals or localities; that the rates of transportation of freight and passengers on such roads be reduced to the lowest point consistent with a fair remuneration to the railroads for the service rendered by them; that the transfer of freight from one road to another on reasonable terms and the adjustment of rates, so that no more shall be charged for short than for long hauls, shall be rigidly enforced; and that the entire railroad system of the state shall be so regulated as to discharg the duties of common carriers with out discrimination, upon reasonable terms and with equal benefit to all the people of the whole state; that competency and trustworthiness shall be the only tests; appointments to the civil service; and, finally, that the legislation and administration of public affairs shall be wholly and only such as will conduce to the prosperity of all our people and the development of the entire state.

The perpetuity of Democratic institutions depends on the purity of elections, and that can best be secured by a really secret ballot. We, therefore, favor a reform of our methods of voting, based upon the principles of the Australian system, thus making impossible the coercion or purchase of voters.

SECOND DAY'S WORK.

Eugene M. Wilson appeared in the convention, in response to official notification and made a good speech amid much applause and enthusiasm. His remarks were of a peaceful and soothing nature and did much to restore some degree of harmony, which had been absent hitherto.

But when it came to nominating a candidate for Lieutenant governor, the row broke out again, and an hour was spent in quarreling over the selection of a man. The same trouble occurred with the other candidates, and it took some hours to agree upon the following ticket.

Lieutenant Governor—Daniel Buck, of Blue Earth.

Secretary of State—W. C. Brandenhagen, of Carver.

State Treasurer—Hans Nelson, of Otter Tail.

Attorney General—Charles D'Autremont, of St. Louis.

Chief Justice—Seagrave Smith, of Hennepin.

Associate Justice—Geo. N. Batchelder, of Rice.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS.

At large—J. S. O'Brien, of Washington; W. F. Kelso, of Kittson.

First district—Andrew Nelson, Olmsted; Geo. Schwarts, Wabasha; alternate.

Second district—H. B. Constance, Blue Earth; R. T. Hammond, Watonwan, alternate.

Third district—O. M. Hall, Goodhue; Frank Nicolin, of Scott; alternate.

Fourth district—J. F. Stone, of Pine; D. M. Woodbury, of Chicago; alternate.

Fifth district—Henry Keller, of Stearns; Geo. M. Giltinnan, of Stevens; alternate.

THE CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

After a long and severe struggle, the central committee was based upon judicial districts, the members from which selected their own committeeman as follows.

1. E. C. Stringer, Dakota.
2. Wm. Hamm, St. Paul.
3. H. C. Shepard, Winona.
4. C. M. Foote, Hennepin.
5. Stephen J. Croaker, Rice.
6. A. R. Pfau, Blue Earth.
7. Martin Shea, Otter Tail.
8. W. T. Bonniwell McLeod.
9. M. Mullane, Brown.
10. W. H. Harries, Houston.
11. R. N. Marble, St. Louis.
12. A. E. Arness, Chippewa.
13. A. M. Becker, Nobles.
14. Wm. Anglim, Polk.
15. A. G. Brooker, Wadena.
16. P. H. O'Hara, Big Stone.

Three more will be selected by the candidate for governor.

Captured a Prince's Steward.

During the years when brigandage was rife in the papal states many intensely dramatic incidents occurred. One, which is vouched for by William Beatty-Kingston, illustrates the cool effrontery of the brigands and the helplessness of their victims. One of Prince Orsini's land stewards was carried away and his capture was signified in the usual manner to his employer. An ambassador was thereupon sent out to neutral territory to treat with the bandits' representative. This negotiator demanded a large sum of money as the prisoner's ramsom; together with 200 loaves of bread, ten barrels of wine, fifty rifles, 2,000 ball cartridges, and twenty good watches. Moreover, the brigands coolly demanded that their old watches should be taken to Rome, repaired, and brought back as good as new. The prince communicated this demand to the papal authorities, who only shrugged their shoulders and said: "If, Altezza, you want your agent back again perhaps you had better give these scoundrels what they ask. We can do nothing," Accordingly, as the steward was a valued retainer, the prince performed the specified requirements to the letter and effected his ransom. But the most pathetically absurd side of the story is that touching the steward himself. He returned from his adventure half-dazed with fright and privation and terribly shaken in nerve. He was, in after years, frequently compelled to visit Rome, and often met some of his former hosts in the street. They always greeted him affectionately, and made him treat them to wine, and called him the best of good fellows, but they never failed to add, in a jesting manner which congealed his blood; "Mind you never mention us to anybody, as it might get you into trouble, and we are so fond of you that we should be in despair were anything to happen to you,"—San Francisco Argonaut.

A Bad Country For Vermin.

The mouse pest in Australia is much worse than the rabbit pest. The climate is so soft that they have thrived enormously, and there is said to be hardly a residence or store that is not pestered by the plague. In some places they are so thick that, in order to get the stock properly fed, men have to watch while they are eating their provender.

DOINGS IN MINNESOTA.

War has been declared against the whisky element at Pipestone, and more arrests are likely to follow.

The lumber mills at Anoka have disbursed $80,000 among the laboremen in that vicinity during the past ninety days.

C. F. Kindred has sold the cars and rails of the Brainerd street railway to the Fargo Street Railway Company.

Gustaf Carlson, a prominent farmer living near White Rock, was bound over to await the action of the grand jury on a charge of selling liquor without a license.

A frame dwelling belonging to William Sondermann of Hastings, caught fire from a defective flue and was burned with a portion of its contents. Loss about $1,000; insured for $800.

The assessed valuation of Dakota county for 1888, as equalized by the board, is: Real estate, $8,725,697; personal property, $1,865,557; a grand total of $10,591,254.

Fred Klaus of Empire, Dakota county, has been committed to jail for fifteen days by Justice Gray of Farmington for an assault upon his wife.

W. C. White, who was shot by L. H. Parker July 31, died at Bird Island. Parker, who is a mail agent in Northern Wisconsin, is out on bail.

The county commissioners of Douglas county, appointed Thomas Barros sheriff of Douglas county, vice J. Urness, removed by Gov. McGill.

William Danforth of Red Wing, who engages quite extensively in the propagation of bees, has extracted thus far this season 280 pounds of honey from two hives, which he has sold for $35.24.

The voters of LeSueur have decided not to issue bonds and the new school building will be completed by levying an assessment, while the improvements on the old building will not be put in until next year.

Two women, arrested for keeping a house of ill-fame at Pipestone broke jail and escaped to Dakota. Thomas Dixon and George Caregie, a livery man are under arrest for assisting the prisoners to escape.

J. D. Jones, living near Denison, had his barn, four horses and farm tools destroyed by fire, probably the work of an incendiary. The loss will aggregate $4,000, with an insurance of $2,000.

A grand celebration was held at Winona to commemorate the commencement of grading on the Winona and Southern. For 30 years Winona has been striving for this road, and finally is in a way to see her wishes fulfilled.

Two brothers named Mutchler, residing on the flats in Wilken county, were arrested charged with stealing three sets of double harness from farmers at Pelican Rapids. They were tracked, and the harness found secreted on their premises.

The three-year-old daughter of H. W. Zeller was fatally scalded at Lake Benton. The mother was washing and the child fell into a tub of hot water sitting on the floor. It was terribly burned and lived but a short time.

Fred C. Brown of St. Peter was unanimously elected steward of the insane hospital in St. Peter by the board of trustees at their annual meeting held in Rochester. Mr. Brown succeeds G. W. Dryer, who resigned. He is a brother of W. C. Brown, land officer at Winona, and has been connected with the hospital for years.

Frank B. Kellogg of St. Paul is at Fergus Falls beginning a suit in the case of Sophia Head against Morris D. Cutler, which involves property valued at $150,000. Mrs. Head claims that Cutler was simply a mortgagee but has kept the property. The case is similar to the King-Remington case. The Cutler interests here are very heavy.

The limb of a tree, seemingly cedar, though no cedar grows there, was dug out of solid clay forty-two feet below the surface in the Camden bluffs in Marshall county by the graders on the new railroad a few days ago and sent to Prof. Winchel, who, from a description before receiving it, pronounced it a relic of an anti-glacial forest.

City Marshal Richardson arrested a woman at Little Falls answering the description of and supposed to be Mrs. Margaret Bryce, who is charged with murdering her grandchild last March near Anoka. Annie Bryce, the daughter of Mrs. Bryce, was supposed to be an accomplice in the crime and the authorities are trying to find her. The marshal has been watching the case several days, and when the arrest was made the authorities an Anoka were notified.

The storms in Iowa were among the most severe that have occurred in the central portion of the state for many years. The railways centering at Des Moines were greatly damaged and trains were delayed many hours. Wash-outs are reported on all the roads and crops were damaged.

The Southern representatives in congress are very much exercised over the spread of yellow fever to the South. The Florida congressmen called on the president and the surgeon general of the marine hospital service to urge that radical measures shall be adopted. They desire to have the president interpret the act which placed a considerable sum at his disposal for the suppression of epidemic diseases in such a manner that the treasury department may order destroyed and pay for all the buildings deemed necessary to destroy in the infected districts to check the spread of yellow fever. The president and the surgeon general don't think that the law confers such powers. The probability is that the president will ask for additional legislation, giving ampler powers, and for an increased appropriation. It is expected that an appropriation of $600,000 will be asked for. There is already at the disposal of the department from the unused funds of former years $150,000.

FIFTIETH CONGRESS.

Tuesday, August 14.

SENATE.—Mr. Reagen introduced a bill to define trusts and to provide for the punishment of persons connected with them or carrying them on, and moved its reference to the committee on judiciary.

Mr. Reagan also introduced a bill, which was referred to the committee on commerce requiring the officers and at least three-quarters of the crew of every United States merchant whaling or fishing vessel to be either native born or naturalized citizens of the United States.

HOUSE.—On motion of Mr. Hovey, of Indiana, the senate amendment was concurred into the house bill for the erection of a marine hospital at Evansville, Ind.

The senate bill to regulate commerce carried on by telegraph was referred to the committee on commerce

"Mr. Sayres of Texas moved that the house go into committee of the whole for the consideration of appropriation bills. Mr. Townshend, championing the military committee's opposition to the fortifications bill, stated that he wished that the deficiency bill could be considered, the subject of fortifications being in conference on the army appropriation bill. Mr. Sayres' motion was then carried, but the fight was resumed in committee. The afternoon was consumed in an ineffectual effort to secure and hold a quorum.

Wednesday, Aug. 15,

SENATE.—After passing a few unimportant bills which were not objected to, the senate resumed the discussion of the fisheries treaty, with Mr. Morgan speaking in favor of his motion to postpone further consideration until December.

HOUSE.—The lack of a quorum in the house was made immediately apparent this morning when Mr. Outhwaite, of Ohio, called up his motion to reconsider the vote by which the senate Columbus exposition bill was amended by provision for expositions at Richmond, Va., Atlanta and Augusta, Ga., and Kansas City Mo. Not more than 100 members voted on the question, and Mr. Outhwaithe let the matter drop for the present.

The house then went into committee of the whole on the fortification appropriation bill.

Thursday August 16.

SENATE.—Mr. Reagan took the floor to speak on the president's annual message.

Mr. Allison, desiring action on the conference report on the army appropriation bill, represented the necessity for disposing of the appropriation bills in preference to other matters for which there was no immediate pressure.

Mr. Blair complained that the extract read by Mr. Reagan was not a full report of Mr. Blaine's remarks on the subject of trusts, and he sent to the clerk's desk and had read the report from the New York Tribune.

The conference report on the army appropriation bill was then taken up.

HOUSE.—The fortification appropriation bill was passed without division.

Mr. Morrill gave a resume of the various measures of a general character, which had been reported from the committee on invalid pensions, and urged the necessity of fixing a time for their consideration.

The roll call showed the presence of 174 members, and the morning hour having expired the resolution went over.

Mr. Richardson, of Tennessee, from the committee on printing, reported back adversely the resolution directing that committee to investigate the assertion that the public printer buys felt for printing purposes in England. Accompanying the resolution was a letter from the public printer denying the truth of the assertion. The resolution was laid upon the table.

Mr. Springer, of Illinois, attempted to secure consideration of the Oklahoma bill, but the point of no quorum was raised against him and he was forced to abandon the attempt.

Friday August 17.

SENATE.—The senate spent the early part of the afternoon in debating a resolution requiring the removal of all electric light and motor wires which are strung above ground. The resolution was finally referred to the committee on the District of Columbia with instructions to report favorably.

The bill amendatory of the act of the 18th of June, 1886, relating to postal crimes, was then taken up and, after being amended so as to reduce the penalties, it was passed.

HOUSE.—On motion of Mr. Forney, of Alabama, the senate amendments to the sundry civil appropriation bill were non-concurred in and a conference ordered.

Private business having been dispensed with, the house, in the consideration morning hour, resumed the consideration of the resolution assigning certain days for general pension legislation, the pending question being on the demand for the previous question.

The vote resulted, yeas 110, nays 5—no quorum, and a call of the house was ordered.

A conference report on the bill granting a right of way to the Utah & Northern Railroad company through the Ft. Hall reservation of Idaho, was agreed to.

Saturday, August 18.

SENATE.—Representative Lind will appear before the senate committee on public lands Monday to explain his bill which Representative MacDonald introduced and which passed the house, forfeiting lands granted to the Hastings & Dakota railroad. This bill, it is believed, will be reported and pass the senate, and, if it does, will be the only forfeiture bill which will pass both houses.

HOUSE.—Mr. McCreary, of Kentucky, from the committee on foreign affairs, reported for immediate consideration the senate bill to prevent the coming of Chinese laborers into the United States with an amendment repealing the acts of May 6, 1882 and July 5, 1884, the appeal to take effect on the ratification of the pending treaty.

Mr. Morrow, of California, declared that the passage of the bill was necessary in order to protect the people of this country from the evils of Chinese immigration. While the pending bill was favored by the people of the Pacific coast, because they believe it to be a step in advance of any previous statutory law neither the treaty nor the bill met with their entire approval, because they believed that the government should reserve to itself the right to legislate whenever occasion requires it, against any foreign immigration which might be inimical to the interests of the United States. It ought not to be obliged to go to China for a treaty whenever it wished to prohibit the immigration of Chinese, but should be able to prohibit it by statutory enactment.

A Child's Marvelous Escape.

New York Sun.

William Curtin sat reading an evening newspaper in front of his saloon, 101 Monroe street, recently. Four-year-old James Barry played at his side. Curtin heard a scream. The next second a white object flashed before his eyes. He clutched it. His hands caught the waist of Jeremiah Collins, nineteen months old, baby who was falling head downward, with his mother from a fourth-story window over Mr. Curtin's head. The force of the baby's fall brought Mr. Curtin's hands down to the ground. The baby's face just grazed the pavement. The child was unhurt. Almost at Mr. Curtin's feet lay Mrs. Mary Collins forty years old. Her clothing brushed little Barry as she fell flat on her back. She died almost instantly.

She had taken her baby into a vacant front room across the hall from her apartments to give him an airing. A funeral procession had just passed and, it is supposed, she sat in the window sill, with the baby in her arms, to see it, and, in leaning over to look up the street, lost her balance. Nobody saw her fall from the window. Her husband, Patrick, a laborer, lay in a back room of their apartments; sick from heat prostration. No other members of the family were at home.

THE CHAMPION ECONOMIST:

The Widow Practiced His Pet Virtue and so Caught Him.

A traveler in Kentucky who had stopped and begun a conversation with a squint-eyed old fellow who was cutting briars and sassafras sprouts out of the fence corners pointed to a house some distance away and asked:

"Who lives over there."

"The Widder Bradley," the farmer replied, "an' I do reckon that she's a little the peartest woman in the neighborhood. She fust married Pete Bradshaw. Pete he died, and the widder was putty much grief struck. She had a little money, and she hired a stone cutter to chisel out a monument for Pete, agreein' to furnish the rock herself. The cutter went to work, but as he wa'n't in a very big hurry, the widder she tuck a likin' to a fellar named Sandy Smith an' married him. Then she told the cutter to jest chip along at his lezur' an' he done so. It wa'n't long after this till Sandy got a leetle full, fell offen the foot long into the bayou and was drowned. The widder had him dug out and buried beside Pete an then went to the cutter an' told him to put one more name on the monument. She moped around fur some little time an' didn't 'pear to enjoy her vidults very much' but arter w'ile thar come along a feller named Mose Bradley. Mose he made a dead set at the widder, an' she tuck him, she did. About a month arter this Mose he run afoul uv a pizen sort uv unresponsible feller an' was laid out. The widder was mightily crushed, bein' uv a powerful tender natur', but urged on by her strong business instincts she got on a mule, rode over to the stonecutter's house an' calling the feller out to the fence axed him ef that ar monument was done.

" 'Not quite,' the feller 'lowed, ez he brushed some limestone dust outen his whiskers.

" 'Wall! says she, 'have you got room on the readin' side uv it fur er nuther name?'

" 'I reckin I ken 'comerdate you, madam,' said he.

" 'Wall, then," she 'lowed, 'jest put Mose Bradley on thar in ez good shape ez you ken.'

"He done it, an' the widder she put up the monument over all three of the fellers an' had these here words cut on one side: "Here lies the bodies uv my three tender an' lovin' husbands.' Now, sir," the farmer added, as he struck at a lizard with his briar-hook, 'do you know whut sort uv a break I'm goin' to make?"

"Can't say that I do," the traveler replied.

"I'll tell you. I'm goin' to marry that widder."

"She must be very attractive."

"No, she aint', nuther."

"Has money, I suppose?"

"No."

"Then why do you wish to marry her?"

"On account of her political economy. You see, her husbands wuz mixed up more or less in politics, an' a woman that makes one monument do fur three politicians is the female critter that I'm after. I reckon I love economy better'n any man in the world. Some folks likes music, an' some air fond uv barbecued shoat; some like liker, an' some like a good hoss, but jest give me economy, ef you please. Ef I'd get all the economy I wanted I would have been wuth suthin' to-day. I married the most 'stravagant woman I ever seen. Do you know what the woman would do? I've know'd her to buy five yards an' a ha'f uv calico to make a dress outen, when she oughter know'd that five yards was enough. An' eat! w'y I have know'd her to set at the table an' eat fu fifteen minutes at a stretch. Yes, an' she got so tony toward the last that she wanted sugar in her coffee. I argued with her, I did; I told her that ten minutes after she drank the coffee it wouldn't make no difference whether it had been sweetened or not, but she would have her way. She broke me up, that's what she done. Wall," he added, as he reached out with his briar hook and turned over a toad, "I'm goin' to marry that widder, an' ef she dies on my hands I'll bury her ez clost to that monument ez I kin an' git that stoecutter to gouge out another name."—Arkansaw Traveler.

Mr. Cable's Advice to the Negroes.

From the August Forum.

Vote! Cast your vote though taxed for it. Cast your vote though defrauded of it, as many a white man is to-day. Cast your vote though you die for it. Let no man cry, "Liberty or blood;" leave that for Socialists and Parisian mobs; but when liberty means duty, and death means one's own extinction, then the cry of "Liberty or death" is a holy cry, and the man who will not make it his own even in freedom is not free. Seek not to buy liberty with the blood either of friends or of enemies; it is only men's own blood at last that counts in the purchase of liberty. Whatever may have been the true philosophy for more ferocious times, this is the true philosophy for ours. Cast your votes, then, even though many of you die for it. Some of you have died, but in comparison how few; 300,000 white men poured out their blood to keep you bound, other 300,000 died to set you free, and still the full measure of American freedom is not yours. A fiftieth as much of your own blood shed in the inoffensive activities of public duty will buy it. Keep your vote alive; better nine free men than 10 half free. In most of the Southern states the negro vote has been diminishing steadily for years, to the profound satisfaction of those white men whose suicidal policy to keep you to alienism. In the name of the dead, black and white, of the living, and of your children yet unborn, not as of one party or another, but as American freemen, vote! For in this free land the people that do not vote do not get and do not deserve their rights.

Cost of Getting the News.

From the Boston Herald.

Eugene M. Camp, who has collected the statistics on this point says, through the American, that the entire cost of all the news in the papers in this country is $20,655,000 per year. This is curiously divided. The special bureaus, which are principally located in New York, with the right to look over the proofs every night of some of the morning jourals, cost $845,000. This is divided up among 100 of the leading provincial papers. The business of the Associated Press now amounts to $1,250,000 yearly, and that of the United States foots up to $450,000. These two sums, with the special outlay for telegraph tolls outside of the organizations, place the total to all the papers of $1,820,000 for this department. In addition to this there are to be reckoned the special services of professional correspondents in adjacent towns and important centers, whose salaries aggregate $1,000,000 besides. This makes the total cost of all the service about $2,880,000 per annum. In the larger cities of the Union it costs all the way from $400 to $2,200 a week for the working up of local districts. Mr Camp reckons this yearly expense at about $15,600,000. This is a correct analysis of the expense in collecting news and the proportion in which one branch of the service is related to the other. there are three lines on which this work proceeds—the gathering of news by the local reporter, the news of the telegraph and the special correspondent. Each method is closely related to the other. The statement shows that there has been a great development of journalism in the matter of news. Every effort is made to get the news and one combination only paves the way for another in order to keep the lead in this department of a newspaper. The greater the combination the greater the result, and the paper that has the news is the one that the public is most willing to pay for.

Towed by a Whale.

Cape Ann Advertisr.

A letter has been received from the steward of the schooner H. B. Griffin, Captain George Nelson, now absent on the Banks, in which it is stated that they have met with an unusual experience, viz., that of being towed by a whale. The affair occured on a fine day when all the dories were out attending the trawls. The captain and steward were on board as usual, looking after the vessel and keeping an eye on the dories, when all at once they felt a sudden jerk, and soon the vessel was going through the water at a rapid rate and no motive power visible. It takes considerable to startle a fisherman, but this was something so uncommon, a vessel dashing through the water at a rapid rate with her sails furled and anchor down, that they began to look alarmed. Suddenly the cause made itself manifest, when a monstrous whale arose to the surface, with the anchor fast either in his jaw or blow hole. He tore through the water at a high pressure rate, and was fast taking the craft out of sight of the dories, thus leaving the crews exposed; and besides this, there was danger of the vessel being towed under. The only remedy was to cut the cable. This was done, and his whaleship went off with the anchor in tow. The jib and foresail were hoisted, and the vessel was seen engaged in picking up her dories, and on the way to Newfoundland, where a new anchor and cable were secured.

There are but two other similar cases of which we have any record, which we have found in the files of our paper, viz: Schooner C. H. Price was towed a day and a half by a whale in 1873, when the fluke of the anchor broke and she was released. Then, again, on the 16th of December, 1874, while the schooner Sultana, Captain Peterson, was at anchor on the Grand Bank, a sudden motion was felt, and soon the vessel was speeding through the water at a twelve knot speed. The captain, not wishing to lose sight of his dorymen, cut the cable after he had been towed some distance, otherwise he thought he might have captured the monster. There was a companion whale which swam with the one who had the anchor, and he was evidently astonished at the predicament of his mate.

Directory of Minneapolis Wholesale Houses.

DRUGS—Lyman-Eliel Drug Co. 100 Wash. Av. N.
GROCERS—Geo. R. Newell & Co. 3d St & 1st Av N.
" Harrison, Farrington & Co. 200 1st Av S.
HARDWARE—Miller Bros & Fletcher, 119 2d st S.
SADDLERY H'd'w., Dodson, Fisher & Brockmann, 15 3d St. N.

There is every prospect of another outbreak between Woodsdale and Hugoton, in Kansas, as the people of the former place aver that they will be revenged for the death of their four citizens. The situation in Grant county is also so strained that the citizens asked Gen. Miles to leave one company at each of the towns, Cincinnati and Ulysses, as between these two places the bitterest rivalry exists over the county seat question. Both towns are paying numbers of lawless characters from the neutral strip $1 a day and board to remain within their border, as they can vote on the county seat question in about thirty days. Arms are said to be in the possession of the belligerents. Each side is afraid of the other, hence the request for troops.

A dispatch from Suakim to the London Times says: "The reports concerning the presence of a white man in the Bahr-el-Gazette district are confirmed. He is known as Abu Digna, and has a force of enormous strength, including a large number of half-naked men, probably from the Niam Niam country. This is a strong point in favor of the idea that the white man is Stanley. The khalifa of Khartoum has sent a force of 6,200 men against him. The Negus of Abyssinia has sworn to capture Khartoum, and the khalifa is greatly alarmed."

FOR LOSS OF APPETITE TAKE ALLEN'S Iron Tonic Bitters. All genuine bear the signature of J. P. Allen, Druggist, St. Paul.

The body of Joseph Humpert, who was drowned in Lake Pepin, off the excursion steamer Sea Wing, was recovered.

A Tremendous Sensation

would have been created one hundred years ago by the sight of one of our modern express trains whizzing along at the rate of sixty miles an hour. Just think how our grandfathers would have stared at such a spectacle! It takes a good deal to astonish people now-a-days, but some of the marvelous cures of consumption, wrought by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, have created widespread amazement. Consumption is at last acknowledged curable. The "Golden Medical Discovery" is the only known remedy for it. If taken at the right time—which, bear in mind, is not when the lungs are nearly gone—it will go right to the seat of the disease and accomplish its work as nothing else in the world can.

Walker's saw mill was totally consumed by fire at Grand Forks, Dak. the blacksmith shop, oil room and pump house being the only mementos left of its former existence. The fire originated in the roof of the building immediately over the boiler, and spread with lightning alacrity, enveloping the entire mill in flames within five minutes' time. T. B. Walker, the proprietor of the mill, estimates the loss at over $50,000; insurance, $23,000, and stated that his future intentions regarding the rebuilding of the mill are dubious.

"Had Been Worried Eighteen Years."

It should have read "married," but the proof-reader observed that it amounted to about the same thing, and so did not draw his blue pencil through the error. Unfortunately there was considerable truth in his observation. Thousands of husbands are constantly worried almost to despair by the ill health that afflicts their wives, and often robs life of comfort and happiness. There is but one safe and sure way to change all this for the better. The ladies should use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Forest fires have been raging fiercely in the townships of Clarendon, Lavant Canonti and Oso., in Canada, and have already done damage to the extent of nearly $500,000. The whole section has been devastated and many settlers have lost everything they possessed. Communication is cut off, as the bridges and corduroy roads have been burned or rendered impassable by fallen trees. The Ontario government will be appealed to for aid.

The national commandery of the Sons of Veterans at their meeting in Wheeling W. V. elected the following officers: Commander-in-chief, George B. Abbot of Illinois: lieutenant general, E. H. Milham of Minnesota; major general, John Hinckley of Massachusetts; council-in-chief, G. B. Smith of Connecticut, W. E. Bundy Ohio, R. L. Obenstein of Missouri and C. B. Cooke of Dakota.

Moxie.

Old men use Moxie the year round to keep their nervous system strong enough to support the functions of their body, and mend up the break down of a long business life. The young city bloods to remove the effects from liquors and a night of dissipation. A tumbler full will break a recent intoxication in an hour, with no ill effects of stimulation.

The second congressional democratic convention of Minnesota at its meeting at Mankato, unanimously nominated Hon. Morton S. Wilkinson as a candidate for congress to run against Lind, the Republican nominee.

"Give Him $2, and Let Him Guess."

We once heard a man complain of feeling badly, and wondered what ailed him. A humorous friend said, "Give a doctor $2, and let him guess." It was a cutting satire on some doctors, who don't always guess right. You need not guess what ails you when your food don't digest, when your bowels and stomach are inactive, and when your head aches every day, and you are languid and easily fatigued. You are bilious, and Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets will bring you out all right. Small, sugar-coated, easy to take. Of druggists.

Gen. Hovey, nominee for governor of Indiana, has written some poems, also a book on Peru.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria,

Frank Thulen, a blacksmith at Minneeella, Dak., shot and killed John Clark, also a blacksmith. Thulen claims he saw some person stealing out of his shop at daylight. He fired at him with fatal results.

Faithfulness is necessary in all kinds of work. Especially is it necessary, in treating a cold, to procure the best remedy, which is Allen's Lung Balsam, and take it faithfully according to directions, and it will cure a cold every time and prevent fatal results. Sold by all druggists at 25c., 50c., and $1.00 a bottle.

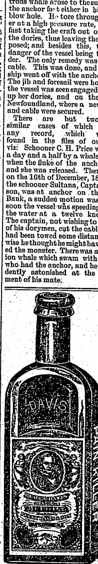
A five-months old son of August Von Linden, of Stillwater, Minn., was accidentally smothered to death. The infant was asleep upon the floor, covered lightly, when a man threw a pile of carpet upon it, not knowing that the heap on the floor was a covered-up infant.

William Webber, in the district court at Deadwood, Dak., pleaded guilty to opening and stealing the contents of a registered package, and got two years in the penitentiary.

The North Star Lung and Throat Balsam is a sure cure for Coughs and Colds.

Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in many cases removes the tumors. It is equally efficacious in curing all Skin Diseases. DR. SWAYNE & SON, Proprietors, Philadelphia. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT can be obtained of druggists. Sent by mail for 50 Cents.



IF ANY OF YOUR FAMILY are troubled with Cholera, Cramps or Bowel Complaint, give them PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER.

DO NOT FORGET

Perry Davis' Pain Killer

At this season of the year it is always well to keep it on hand.

Do not trifle with yourselves by testing untried remedies. Be sure you call for, and get the genuine PAIN-KILLER, as many worthless nostrums are attempted to be sold on the great reputation of this valuable medicine.

Directions accompany each bottle.

Price 25 cts., 50 cts. and $1 per bottle.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

The Loveliest Skin.

THE WHITEST, CLEAREST, SOFTEST, PUREST skin, free from pimple, spot, or blemish, is produced by that greatest of all Skin Beautifiers and Purifiers, the

CUTICURA SOAP.

Incomparable as a Skin Soap, unequalled for the Toilet and Bath, and absolutely pure, and without a rival as an Infantile Skin Soap. Delicately medicated, exquisitely perfumed, astonishingly effective, it enjoys unheard of popularity, as evidenced by a sale greater than that of all other medicated toilet soaps in the world combined. Sold throughout the civilized world.

POTTER DRUG & CHEMICAL CO., BOSTON, U. S. A. Send for "How to Purify and Beautify the Skin."

SICK HEADACHE

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills. They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side. TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable. Price 25 Cents.

CARTER MEDICINE CO., NEW YORK.

Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price.

WEAK MEN and WOMEN can quickly cure themselves of Wasting Vitality, Lost Manhood from youthful errors, &c., quietly at home. 32 page Book on All Private Diseases sent free, (sealed.) Perfectly reliable. 30 years experience. Dr. D. H. LOWE, Winsted, Conn.

ASTHMA CURED

German Asthma Cure never fails to give immediate relief in the worst cases, insures comfortable sleep; effects cures where all others fail. A trial convinces the most skeptical. Price 50c. and $1.00, of Druggists or by mail. Sample FREE for stamp. DR. R. SCHIFFMAN, St. Paul, Minn.

THAYER'S

Catarrh Cure!

A New Departure.

This treatment for Catarrh introduces entirely a new system. The nasal passages are thoroughly cleansed, the living germs destroyed, the mucus membrane restored. If thoroughly used it will cure any case of Nasal, Throat or Bronchial Catarrh. Prepared by the U.S. DISPENSARY CO., Minneapolis, Minn.

PANTS Are worn just the same as ever the Big Boston Minneapolis, is making a clearance sale of these useful articles. Cotton Worsteds, 60c.; best Jeans, $1; guaranteed all wools, $1.50; stylish Cassameres, $2.50, $3, $3.50 and $4. Fine all-wool Black Worsteds. $4.75. Send an order for a piece.

SCHLIEK & CO. ST. PAUL MINN.

We carry the largest stock of FINE SHOES in the Northwest. Goods sent C. O. D. on approval. Write for New Illustrated Catalogue and Price list. SCHLIEK & CO., St. Paul, Minn.

ST. PAUL SCHOOL FURNITURE CO., ST. PAUL, MINN.

School Furniture and School Supplies. Correspondence solicited from district officers, and those desiring an agency. Ask for Catalogue D.

SHORTHAND!

and Typewriting. Standard system; lessons, day, evening and by mail; send for circulars. MISS J. D. HESS, Union Block, St. Paul, Minn.

It will be to your advantage when writing advertisers to say you saw their advertisement in this paper.

Why Don't

You take Hood's Sarsaparilla, if you have impure blood, have lost your appetite, have that tired feeling or are troubled by sick headache, dyspepsia or biliousness. It has accomplished wonders for thousands of afflicted people, and, if given a fair trial is reasonably certain to do you good.

"I have been troubled a great deal with headache, had no appetite, no strength, and felt as mean as anyone could, and be about my work. Since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I have not had the headache, my food has relished, and seemed to do me good, and I have felt myself growing stronger every day." M. A. STEINMAN, 19 Grand Avenue, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

IF YOU HAVE

MALARIA OR PILES,

SICK HEADACHE, DUMB AGUE, COSTIVE BOWELS, SOUR STOMACH and BELCHING; if your food does not assimilate and you have no appetite,

Tutt's Pills

will cure these troubles. Try them; you have nothing to lose, but will gain a vigorous body. Price, 25c. per box.

Sold Everywhere.

GOLD is worth $500 per lb. Pettit's Eye Salve is worth $1000, but is sold at 25 cents a box by dealers.

$5 TO $8 A DAY. Samples worth $1.50 FREE. Lines not under the horses' feet. Write BREWSTER SAFETY REIN HOLDER CO., Holly, Mich.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION

GUNS Fishing Tackle, Pocket Cutlery and General Sporting Goods. Send for Catalogue. CHAS. B. PROUTY & CO., 63-65 Washington St., Chicago.

GLEK—HARMLESS. Positive Cure for failing Manhood. Gives solid health. $1 bottle, by drug's. Glek Co., 33 N. State st, Chicago

PENSIONS $50,000,000 for Soldiers, Sailors, their widows or parents. PENSIONS INCREASED. Discharges procured. No pension, NO FEE. Latest law, pamphlet Free! PATRICK O'FARRELL, Att'y, Washington, D.C.

Big G. Cures in 1 TO 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture. M'f'd only by the Evans Chemical Co. Cincinnati, Ohio.

I prescribe and fully endorse Big G as the only specific for the certain cure of this disease. G. H. INGRAHAM, M. D., Amsterdam, N. Y.

We have sold Big G for many years, and it has given the best of satisfaction. D. R. DYCHE & CO., Chicago, Ill.

$1.00. Sold by Druggists.

MANLY PURITY AND BEAUTY

CUTICURA REMEDIES CURE SKIN AND BLOOD DISEASES FROM PIMPLES TO SCROFULA.

NO PEN CAN DO JUSTICE TO THE ESTEEM IN which the CUTICURA REMEDIES are held by the thousands upon thousands whose lives have been made happy by the cure of agonizing, humiliating, itching, scaly, and pimply diseases of the skin, scalp, and blood, with loss of hair.

CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, and CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Beautifier, prepared from it, externally, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood Purifier, internally, are a positive cure for every form of skin and blood disease, from pimples to scrofula.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by the POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CO., Boston, Mass. Send for "How to Cure Skin Diseases."

Pimples, blackheads, chapped and oily skin prevented by CUTICURA SOAP.

Rheumatism, Kidney Pains and Weakness speedily cured by CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER, the only pain-killing plaster.

FOR OLD PEOPLE!

In old people the nervous system is weakened, and that must be strengthened. One of the most prominent medical writers of the day, in speaking of the prevalence of rheumatic troubles among the aged, says: "The various pains, rheumatic or other, which old people often complain of, and which materially disturb their comfort, result from disordered nerves." There it is in a nut shell—the medicine for old people must be a nerve tonic. Old people are beset with constipation, flatulency, drowsiness, diarrhœa, indigestion, rheumatism, neuralgia. These diseases are of nervous origin. Paine's Celery Compound, that great nerve tonic, is almost a specific in these disorders, and by its regulating influence on the liver, bowels, and kidneys, removes the disorders peculiar to old age. Old people find it stimulating to the vital powers, productive of appetite, and a promoter of digestion.

Sold by druggists. $1.00. Six for $5.00. Send for eight-page paper, with many testimonials from nervous, debilitated, and aged people, who bless Paine's Celery Compound.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

DWIGHT'S SALERATUS

TO MAKE

A DELICIOUS BISCUIT

ASK YOUR GROCER FOR

COW-BRAND SODA OR SALERATUS

AND TAKE NO OTHER.

400,000 subscribers already? Why not MAKE IT A MILLION? To introduce it into a million families we offer the PHILADELPHIA

LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

AND PRACTICAL HOUSEKEEPER

FROM NOW to JANUARY, 1889

Four Months—balance of this year,

ON RECEIPT OF

ONLY 10 CENTS Silver or Stamps.

Finest and most costly illustrations by the best artists in the country.

Pure and Safe Fiction only. Domestic Stories.

We have engaged for the coming season the most popular and best known writers in America to write Expressly for our columns, original copyrighted matter.

Elizabeth Stuart Phelps,
Josiah Allen's Wife,
Mary J. Holmes,
Marion Harland,
Rose Terry Cooke,
Will Carleton,
Robert J. Burdette,
Eliza R. Parker,
Kate Upson Clarke,
Mrs. John Sherwood,
Florine Thayer McCray,
Dr. Wm. A. Hammond,
Christine Terhune Herrick.

Artistic Needlework—Finely Illustrated. Everything new and original. Edited by an expert. Patterns guaranteed correct and reliable and so clearly explained and illustrated that a novice would have no difficulty in working them.

Interior Decorations—By MRS. A. R. RAMSEY, Profusely Illustrated. New Ideas and Original Designs

New Fashions—By MRS. JAMES H. LAMBERT.

Hints on Home Dressmaking— By EMMA M. HOOPER.

Instructive articles on "How to Appear Well in Society," "How to Talk Well and Improve your Grammar."

Breakfast and Dinner Parties—Home Cooking, Dainties and Desserts. Teas, Suppers, Luncheons and Receptions. Gives explicitly all the little details women want to know. Tells how to entertain guests, how to serve refreshments, what to have, and how to make it.

How Women Can Make Money—By ELLA RODMAN CHURCH.

Talks With Mothers—By eminent physicians.

Greatly ENLARGED and IMPROVED.

Handsomely printed on fine paper and profusely illustrated. 20 Pages.

CURTIS PUBLISHING CO., PHILA., PA.

"JONES HE PAYS THE FREIGHT"

Scales of all Sizes. 5 Ton Wagon Scale with Brass Tare Beam and Beam Box, $60. For free Price List of all kinds, address

JONES OF BINGHAMTON, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

O The BUYERS' GUIDE is issued March and Sept., each year. It is an encyclopedia of useful information for all who purchase the luxuries or the necessities of life. We can clothe you and furnish you with all the necessary and unnecessary appliances to ride, walk, dance, sleep, eat, fish, hunt, work, go to church, or stay at home, and in various sizes, styles and quantities. Just figure out what is required to do all these things COMFORTABLY, and you can make a fair estimate of the value of the BUYERS' GUIDE, which will be sent upon receipt of 10 cents to pay postage. MONTGOMERY WARD & CO. 111-114 Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

DR WINCHELL'S TEETHING SYRUP

Is the best medicine for all diseases incident to children. It regulates the bowels; assists dentition; cures diarrhœa and dysentery in the worst forms; cures canker sore mouth; is a certain preventative of dyptheria; quiets and soothes all pain; invigorates the stomach and bowels; corrects all acidity, and gives energy and tone to the entire system; will cure griping in the bowels and wind colic. Do not fatigue yourself or child with sleepless nights, when it is within your reach to cure your child and save your own strength. Prepared only by the Emmert Proprietary Co., Chicago, Ill.

Sold by all Druggists at 25 cts. Per Bottle.

DRAKE UNIVERSITY AND CALLANAN COLLEGE

Open next Session Sept. 11th. Literary, Normal, Commercial, Musical, Art, Bible, Law and Medical Departments. Usable Instructors; Facilities Superior; Expenses Low; Surroundings Pleasant. Address G. T. Carpenter, Chancellor, Des Moines, Ia.

PENS USE THE BEST. Stationers keep them. Standard quality all styles. Sample doz. 10 cents by mail. 26 John St., New York. ESTERBROOK.

WHEN VISITING MINNEAPOLIS EXPOSITION, & STATE FAIR

DO NOT FAIL TO VISIT

GOODFELLOW'S!

The Largest Dry Goods Store in the Northwest

247 and 249 NICOLLET AVENUE, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Send your name and address for 20th SEMI-ANNUAL CATALOGUE AND SHOPPERS' GUIDE. WHOLESALE PRICES on all goods for Personal or Family Use.

TOWER'S FISH BRAND SLICKER The Best Waterproof Coat.

The FISH BRAND SLICKER is warranted waterproof, and will keep you dry in the hardest storm. The new POMMEL SLICKER is a perfect riding coat, and covers the entire saddle. Beware of imitations. None genuine without the "Fish Brand" trade-mark. Illustrated Catalogue free. A. J. Tower, Boston, Mass.

S. E. OLSON & CO.'S

MAMMOTH WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DRY GOODS HOUSE,

213 AND 215 NICOLLET AVENUE, MINNEAPOLIS.

THE CHIEF BARGAIN HOUSE OF THE NORTHWEST.

Mail Orders receive our best attention. Shopping done through this department as advantageously as in person. Send for samples.

Bryant & Stratton Chicago Business College!

SHORT-HAND INSTITUTE and ENGLISH TRAINING SCHOOL. Is the STANDARD INSTITUTION and the LARGEST IN THE WORLD! Full information, Catalogue, terms, etc., sent FREE. Address H. B. BRYANT & SON, Proprietors, Chicago, Ill.

NORTHWESTERN CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC,

608 1-2 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

Fall term opens Sept. 3-4-5, 1888. The only first-class music school in the Northwest. The best teachers for all in every branch of musical study. Free classes of the greatest value. Pupils from 16 states and territories. Send for calendar. CHAS. H. MORSE, Director.

The Last Ten Thousand.

PART I.

On a wet gloomy afternoon in the April of 187- Mr. James Heath sat in a house in Adam-street, Strand, and in the curiously-furnished apartments which he called his office. The very dirty window curtains of the room were of the richest silk. The costly Turkey carpet was covered with dust and littered with bundles of old law papers and newspapers, besides letters and other documents, which, having been torn up, had evidently lain on the floor untouched for weeks or months. On the walls of the room were hung a number of valuable oil paintings, water colors, and engravings. Madonnas and Holy Families of the early Spanish and Italian schools, pets of the ballet and the prize ring, Dutch boors, landscapes, portraits and racing scenes—mingled as they were without the least regard to style or subject, the general effect was altogether novel and surprising. About the chamber were a number of chairs and couches, mostly of antique patterns, but all of them made of the most costly materials, and covered, like the carpet, with dust. In the corners of the room were piles of well-bound volumes, and two massive sideboards—one of oak, the other of ebony—were piled with miscellaneous heaps of books, glasses, and silver plate. Everything about the chamber, in short, was dirty, costly, and incongruous.

Finally, muffled up in a thick overcoat, and with his back to the fireplace, in which there was no fire, sat Mr. Heath. He was a rather stout man of about sixty, with keen, gray eyes white hair, and a very rubicund complexion. On the table before him stood among a number of paper a bottle of brandy and a tumbler, and he was engaged in reading a long letter, which, was written in a rather sprawling, boyish hand.

"Dear Sir," the letter ran, "I must have £500 by Monday, and I want at least £500 besides. This, with what I owe you at present, will make £4,000. I propose, in consideration of that £1,000 which I now ask you to advance, to assign to you the whole of my life interest in the £15,000 3 per cent. consols, together with the whole interest under the policy of assurance for the £3,000. The premiums on the policy amounts to £200 per annum, so that the £450 odd which accrues from the consols will leave a balance of about 250 per cent. interest on the £4,000 until the policy falls in. In other words, for £4,000 you get an absolute reversion in £10,000, together with £250 a year until the reversion is realized. I am aware that I could do better than this, but I want the money at once and I am ready to submit to the sacrifice for immediate payment. I shall call on you to-morrow afternoon at 4 o'clock, when I hope you will let me have a check. Yours, faithfully.

Robert Oswald,"

Mr. Heath read the letter very carefully through two or three times, after which he laid it on the table and leaned back in his chair, while he indulged in a soliloquy which he muttered half aloud.

"Yes," he said, "the terms are good enough. The young fool in in consumption already, though he's barely twenty-three, and this season will kill him. Chapman says his right lung is nearly gone—lucky I got him to insure for the big sum at once. Wants the money, I suppose, to meet his losses on the City and Suburban. What's he going to do, I wonder, when he has parted with his interest in the £15,000? Fall back on his mother, I suppose. She's supposed to be wealthy, but her money is all in American stocks, they say, and if report is true she knows how to keep it. The widow of a Scotchman, who made a fortune in America, they came back to England about five years since to get into society and put young hopeful through Oxford. The father died three years ago, and the mother has been leading a rather retired life since, so they say. But, nonsense, what has all this to do with me? Young Mr. Oswald, who has got himself into consumption through dissipation, is practically offering me £10,000 for a further advance of £1,000. Even if I had to wait a few years it's good enough. But he hasn't twelve months' life in him. Three months more, at the rate he is going at present, ought to finish him. And then?"

Mr. Heath continued almost aloud, and in an excited manner:

"Then I have made the £100,000 which it has been the ambition of my life to be worth. This is the last ten thousand. With this I shall be worth almost exactly one hundred and two thousand pounds in hard cash, besides the good-will of this cursed business, and all the things, which I shall dispose of at once. Why, I ought to have nearly one hundred and ten thousand pounds; but never mind, once I have a hundred thousand pounds in hard cash. I shall give up. To that I have made up my mind. And then? Well, I shall go on the Continent for a time. I'd be pretty well forgotten in the course of two or three years, and my name is not in particularly good odor just now—hasn't been for years past. Never mind that—when a man has four or five thousand a year, people are not too particular about his antecedents. I may take a place a little way out of London—be a sort of county magnate for a bit—and work my way into a decent club. Let them say what they like behind my back, they'd be bound to be civil to my face, and that's all that any one need care. Half the peers in England would go crazy if they only knew what their servants were saying about them. Fools, we're all, more or less, tarred with the same brush, thinking vermin as we are, if this new theory of evolution or what ever it's called be true. No, if I once get foot into a good club, they could not get out of it again, if I only can afford to act respectably. Let them whisper what they like behind my back, all that I have to deal with is what is said or done before my face, and the hounds would be silent, for they can prove nothing. If the brutes have to lick me, what do I care if they would like to bite. 'Heavens, what a contemptible thing is human nature!' the great Napoleon used to say when he was a young man starving in Paris. Contemptible is not the word. Worthless—indifferent—unworthy of even contempt—poor wretched puppets. You band together, and club your wretched selfishness into what you call respectability. Respect? Why, you will have more real respect for me, who'll force my way, and walk alone among you, then you have for the sleekest creature of your back. Yes, 'Lions walk alone, jackals held together,' as Pitt used to say, and one can play the Pitt of the Napoleon in private, as well as in public life, if need be. Yes, I have only to wait now till Mr. Oswald smashes up the little that's left of his constitution. Not many months at the furthest. Strange that the last 10,000 should come altogether in this way; I might have been three or four years getting it together. Perhaps longer. Who can tell? We make more bad debts than people think, and, like the snail crawling up the post, I might, now and then, have slipped down at night twice as far as I had crawled during the day.

"But here the whole thing is done. The last ten thousand made, as the saying is, by a stroke of my pen. And yet, it's curious how I have had a suspicion from the first moment I set eyes upon this brat that he'd be at once my making and my ruin. Tush! such nonsense; the thing is perfectly legal, and the money is perfectly safe. Even if I lost it, I'd be very far from ruined; but it is quite safe. So, Mr. Oswald, you shall have your thousand pounds, more especially as you are pretty certain to kill yourself with it. Still I have a strange liking for the lad. He has good qualities with all his folly; But oh, humbug! what have I to do with these feelings? If I had any one to leave my money to—a child of my own to inherit my wealth—I might wish to leave it a little cleaner than it is. Yes, it's hard to think that the riches for which I have toiled will go to people who curse my name—If I don't leave them to the nation, or turn them into cash and fling it into the sea before I die. Come in!"

The last two words were in answer to a knock at the door.

"Mr. Oswald, Sir," said a boy who acted as a sort of a clerk to Mr. Heath.

"Show him in," said the latter as he resumed his seat at the table.

A tall, handsome, but very delicate young man entered the room.

"Well, young Sir, what can I do for you?" said Heath in a gruff voice, which was intended to be pleasing and assuring.

One of Mr. Heath's peculiarities was that he seemed to take a delight in making his clients state their business as often as possible, however well he might be acquainted with it.

"You can offer me a chair if you want to be civil, and a glass of brandy if you're inclined to be friendly," replied Oswald in a languid familiar manner, which just bordered on being contemptuous.

"Oh, please be seated, my dear Sir, if you insist on ceremony," said Heath, pushing a bottle and a glass toward his visitor as he spoke. "And how, beside offering you a chair and a little brandy, what else can I do for you?"

"Well, confound it! you know what I have come about. You have had my letter. What's the use of asking such a question?" was the impatient rejoinder.

"Yes. I have had your letter, but I don't like the business. I tell you frankly, I don't like to see a young man ruining himself as you are doing—"

"Oh, curse it all! I have not come here to be lectured," interrupted Oswald, angrily. "Will you do the thing or not? This is Thursday. I must have the money by Saturday night."

"I would have to give notice to the Trustees of this fresh charge, and there is barely time to get the thing through. I would rather you took the matter somewhere else," replied Heath, dubiously.

"But that is impossible, and I must meet my engagements on Monday," was the answer.

The result of some further conversation was that Mr. Heath, with a great show of reluctance, suffered himself to be persuaded to have everything ready to make this further and final advance an Saturday.

"You will have twenty pounds in gold, eight ten-pound notes, and the remaining nine hundred pounds 'short,'" said Oswald as he was leaving the room.

"Yes, I hope you will take care of it," replied Heath.

"I shall win twenty thousand over the Guineas. Good evening," was the answer, and Mr. Oswald took his departure.

On Saturday Oswald duly received the £1,000 after he had executed a deed, by which he assigned the policy of assurance and his life interest in the £15,000 consols to Mr. Heath. According to the will of the late Mr. Oswald, the £15,000 was, if Robert Oswald died without issue, to be paid to a distant relative who lived in America.

Mrs. Oswald, I may add, derived her income from certain investments in American railway stocks. She was supposed to be very well off, but it was a curious thing that, though she went a good deal into society, nobody seemed to know much about either her or her late husband. They had come from America about five years before and taken a house in Porchester Terrace, Bayswater.

The late Mr. Oswald brought very satisfactory references from Chicago, kept a very good balance at his bank, and entertained, as did Mrs. Oswald, in a very hospitable manner. This, however, was really all that was known about them. As to their son, Robert, he had unluckily taken to betting, and got into the clutches of Mr. Heath, with what result, so far, we have seen above.

It is not necessary to say more than that Robert Oswald lost his money, and brought himself to his death-bed during the next two months. As Mr. Heath knew, he was in consumption when he sold his annuity, and the effect of his losses and constant dissipation precipitated the collapse of his system. "When sorrows come, they come not single spies but in battalions." On the morning after the race for the "Two Thousand Guineas," when Robert was left utterly penniless, and in debt to a number of bookmakers, Mrs. Oswald received a letter from her stock broker, saying that he would like to see her at her earliest convenience. Accordingly she went at once to the City, where she learned that the two American railways in which nearly all her money was invested had ceased to pay dividends. That, in short, the shares were almost unsalable, as it was highly probable that the concerns would be sole under foreclosure of mortgages. Mrs. Oswald did all she could under the circumstances. She gave up her house in Porchester Terrace and took lodgings in St. Paul's road, Camden Town, where she devoted herself to the task of nursing her son, who was now fast sinking in consumption.

PART II.

In the second week of the following June, Mr. Heath, who had a small house in Notting Hill, was sitting in his parlor at a little after 8 o'clock in the evening, when a servant came in to say that a Mr. Bailey wished to see him.

"Show him in at once," said Heath, who rose from his seat and went to the door to meet him.

"Well," said Heath, in his usual gruff way, when he had closed the door, which he did very carefully as if he were afraid that some one might be listening outside.

"Mr. Oswald's dead, Sir. Died at 5 o'clock this evening. I only heard of it within the last hour, and I came on at once to tell you."

For a moment there was silence, during which the little man stood twirling his hat in his hands.

At last Heath said, "Are you quite certain of this?"

"Quite certain, Sir," was the answer. "I have it from the servant in the house. I had been expecting the the news all day, and directly Mrs. Wilmot told me I thought I'd make assurance doubly sure by seeing the servant myself. As I told you, I knew her before she went to live in St. Paul's road. I told you how I heard from Mrs. Wilmot everything that went on in the house."

"Well, well, that will do. Here is a sovereign for your trouble in coming here. Look into my office next week and I shall pay you what we have arranged, when I have the formal proofs of his death, Cood-night."

"Good-night, Sir, thank you," said Bailey, as he left the room.

Bailey was a nondescript character who was occasionally employed by Heath, sometimes as a broker, sometimes as a private detective. In the present instance, by virtue of his having some relatives living in St. Paul's road, he had been engaged to bring Mr. Heath the earliest intelligence of Robert Oswald's death. When he had gone Heath walked up and down the room for some minutes in silence. At length he muttered to himself:

"One hundred and two thousand pounds in hard cash, made at last! I shall sell everything I own within a fortnight's time—furniture, bills, pictures, all. They will fetch another six thousand; but, whatever they bring, they shall be sold at once. I am determined to enjoy my wealth while I have time, and to do that I must cut the life I have been leading at once. Yes, my 'pile' is made. I have at last what years ago I said I would make, and I shall be out of England this day fortnight. What may I not do yet, with over a hundred thousand pounds and the brains and knowledge which I possess! Good heavens, how suddenly the last ten thousand has come! What a lucky chance it was that threw the young fool into my clutches! I managed him properly, there's no doubt. But yet it was a lucky chance that brought him to me. Still it's strange the presentiment I have always had about him. Oh, bother such nonsense! what have I to do with presentiments? I shall be believing in ghosts and hobgoblins next! Yet I seem to be sorry instead of glad, and there is that fear of some impending evil which I seemed to have every time I saw him. What on earth can this be?"

The last question was caused by a sharp knock and ring at the hall door. In a few seconds the servant came in with a telegram. Mr. Heath looked at the envelope nervously before he opened it. At last he took out the telegram, which he read two or three times over, us if he doubted the evidence of his eyesight. Then he put the telegram in his pocket, whispering to himself in a trembling voice as he did so—

"What can it be? What can it be?"

The telegram which evidently caused him so much uneasiness was as follows:

"Mrs. Oswald, To James Heath, Esq.,
St. Paul's Road. Stanhope Terrace,
Camden Town, Notting Hill.

'It is of great importance that I should see you to-night. Robert Oswald died at five o'clock this evening. Please come here at once on receiving this telegram.'"

"Could it be some conspiracy to get me into the house and murder me?" thought Mr. Heath, as he walked about the room, with the telegram in his pocket. "Oh, nonsense! I need not be afraid of that. They are very respectable people in the house. No, depend upon it, it is either that the mother wants to beg or borrow from me; or that there is some screw loose about the policy of assurance. Curse it! Like my usual luck. But I had better be off there at once. What a curious authoritative way she telegraphs in, though."

He left the house, and, hailing the first hansom he met, was driven rapidly to St. Paul's road. A servant opened the hall door before he could knock, and having asked if he was Mr. Heath, conducted him up stairs to the drawing room. Though it was just 9:30 o'clock, and getting rather dark, no lamp or candle was lighted in the room, and as Mr. Heath entered he could just discern through the deep twilight the figure of a tall woman who was sitting by one of the windows dressed in black. She rose as he entered and asked him to take the chair which was a few yards from where she was sitting. From the position in which she sat, and the darkness of the room, Mr. Heath could not discern her features very clearly, and to tell the truth he felt exceedingly uncomfortable. He was pretty well case-hardened of course; few men had more curious experiences, and some of the scenes he had witnessed in the pursuit of his vocation were not a little appalling. But just as one of the first things that is taught to every medical student is that he must disregard the pain which he has to inflict on his patients, so, from the very outset of his career, Mr. Heath had trained himself to be perfectly callous about the feelings and interests of the people with whom he was brought in contact. Still, all the teaching in the world cannot make a surgeon insensible to pain which is inflicted on himself, and it was just because he was apprehensive that some calamity was about to fall upon him that Mr. Heath felt on the present occasion a sense of fear which almost amounted to terror.

"You have been prompt in responding to my telegram," said the lady in a hard, defiant voice. "My son, as I told you, is dead. You have stripped him of his little property. He died a pauper. You make £10,000 by his death. I have lately lost nearly all that I was worth. I have spent pretty nearly the rest in nursing him through his last illness. I want twenty pounds in ready money to pay his funeral expenses. You are the proper person to give it to me. Do you refuse?"

I dare say that Mr. Heath would gladly have paid twenty pounds, or more, for the relief he experienced when he heard this speech. So it was only a begging appeal after all. "Thank heavens!" he muttered to himself, and for the first time since he heard of Robert Oswald's death he felt really easy in his mind.

"My good madam," he said, in his usual tone of gruff determination, "your son sought me voluntarily He had ample value for what he sold me. I have nothing more to say on the matter, and I must wish you good night."

"But I have something more to say to you," said the lady, who rose from her chair at the same time that he did. "Had you given me the twenty pounds I would have been content to let you go in peace. As it is you must hear why you are the proper person to pay for the funeral of my son. Come here; I have something to tell you which you will remember to the last day of your life. See—"

She threw open the folding doors that separated the drawing room from a bedroom which was brilliantly lighted with candles. On a bed lay the body of Robert Oswald. His mother went round and stood at the far side of the bed, facing Heath, who advanced a little way into the inner room as if he were drawn by a spell.

"Now, Sir," she exclaimed, "do you recognize me?"

"I can't say I do, madam," said Heath, whose eyes were fixed on the face of the corpse, and who hardly looked at her.

"Twenty-two years make a difference, no doubt," she said as she removed a scarf which was tied around her head, and let her long auburn hair fall about her shoulders. "Now Philip Arnott, look at me again and see if you recognize the face of the wife whom you forced to leave you. Look on that bed and see if you recognize your own features in the face of your dead son."

"My son!" exclaimed Heath—or Arnott, as he really was.

"Yes," said his wife, "it is not many days since, by an accident, I found out that you, whom I knew to have ruined him and from whom I tried to save him, were also his father. When you forced me to fly from you twenty-two years ago I found a protector for myself and child. We went to America, where we lived for years as man and wife. In an evil hour we came back to England. God or fate brought your son and you together—the little darling child whom you used to nurse on your lap—the little child who used to pull your whiskers and throw his arms around your neck. You loved him, though you did not love me; but, oh; see—there is the result!"

For a moment Arnott, who was deadly pale, looked in her face, and uttered one word, "Alice." Then he looked at the corpse again, and said mechanically, as his eyes were riveted on it, "Bob"

"Yes, Bob and Alice," cried his wife. "You recognize us now; but what is the matter—?"

Phillip Arnott was swaying from side to side. Suddenly he fell senseless on the floor. It was many hours before he returned to consciousness, but when he did so he was in a state of idiocy, in which condition he remained until he died, about three months afterward. As he had made no will his property was divided under the Statute of Distributions. I have only to add that Alice Arnott succeeded, as his widow, to her share of the property, and returned to America shortly after his death.—Belgravia.

He Lost His Coffin.

Down at Albuquerque there was one special consumptive who, being that, felt that somehow no other consumptive should be permitted in the place. He was a character noted for going on frequent "benders" until he came very near to having the jimjams and then sobering up. He had a kind of privilege in the town and became jealous of it. One day another consumptive put in an appearance, much to the prior resident's disgust. They met. The old resident eyed the new comer all over. Then he said:

"Say, you've come here to die, I s'pose. Well, there ain't much life between us. I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll go across the way and shake the dice with you for a coffin."

"Goes!" said the other.

The old resident lost the shake, and he went off at once on a terrific jamberee and died. The new comer was so mad he went raving about the place.

"He did it to get out of paying for that coffin. That's the meanest trick I'ever had done to me."—San Francisco Chronicle.

FOR THE ELDER SON.

Dr. Talmage Pleads the Cause of the Elder Son in the Parable.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 12.—The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., of Brooklyn, is in this region. He has spoken several times at the great Piedmont, Chatauqua, and his public appearances are attended by vast multitudes everywhere. Preaching from the text (Luke, chapter 15, verse 28,) "And he was angry, and would not go in," he said:

Is the elder son of the parable so unsympathetic and so cold that he is not worthy of recognition? The fact is that we ministers pursue the younger son. You can hear the flapping of his rags in many a sermonic breeze, and the craunching of the pods for which he was an unsuccessful contestant. I confess that for a long time I was unable to train the camera obscura upon the elder son of the parable. I never could get a negative for a photograph. There was not enough light in the galery, or the chemicals were poor, or the sitter moved in the picture. But now I think I have him. Not a side-face, or a three-quarters, or the mere bust, but a full-length portait as he appears to me. The father in the parable of the prodigal had nothing to brag of in his two sons. The one was a rake and the other a churl. I find nothing admirable in the dissoluteness of the one, and I find nothing attractive in the acrid sobriety of the other. The one goes down over the larboard side, and the other goes down over the starboard side; but they both go down.

From the window of the old homestead bursts the ministrelsy. The floor quakes with the feet of the rustics, whose dance is always vigorous and resounding. The neighbors have heard of the return of the younger son from his wanderings and they have gathered together. The house is full of congratulators. I suppose the tables are loaded with luxuries. Not only the one kind of meat mentioned, but its concomitants. "Clap!" go the cymbals, "thrum!" go the harps. "click!" go the chalices, up and down go the feet insides, while outside is a most sorry spectacle.

The senior son stands at the corner of the house, a frigid phlegmatic. He has just come in from the fields in very substantial apparel. Seeing some wild exhilarations around the old mansion, he asks of a servant passing by with a goatskin of wine on his shoulder what all the fuss is about. One would have thought that on hearing that his younger brother had got back, he would have gone into the house and rejoiced, and if he were not conscientiously opposed to dancing, that he would have joined in the Oriental schottische. No, there he stands. His brow lowers, his lip curls with contempt. He stamps the ground with indignation. He sees nothing at all to attract. The odors of the feast coming out on the air do not sharpen his appetite. The lively music does not put any spring into his step. He is in a terrible pout. He criticises the expense, the injustice and the morals of the entertainment. The father rushes out bareheaded and coaxes him to come in. He will not go in. He scolds the father. He goes into a basquinade against the younger brother, and he makes the most uncomely scene. He says, "Father, you put a premium on vagabondism. I stayed at home and worked on the farm. You never made a party for me; you didn't so much as kill a kid; that wouldn't have cost half so much as a calf; but the scapegrace went off in fine clothes, and he comes back not fit to be seen, and what a time you make over him! He breaks my heart, and you pay him for it. That calf to which we have been giving extra feed during these weeks wouldn't be so fat and sleek if I had known to what use you were going to put it! That vagabond deserves to be cowhided instead of banqueted. Veal is too good for him!" That evening, while the younger son sat telling his father about his adventures, and asking about what had occurred on the place since his departure, the senior brother goes to bed disgusted and slams the door after him. That senior brother still lives. You can see him any Sunday, any day of the week. At a meeting of ministers in Germany some one asked the question, "Who is that elder son?" and Krummacher answered, "I know him; I saw him yesterday." And when they insisted upon knowing whom he meant, he said, "Myself; when I saw the account of the conversation of a most obnoxious man, I was irritated."

First, this senior brother of the text stands for the self-congratulatory, self-satisfied, self-worshipful man. With the same breath in which he vituperates against his younger brother he utters a panegyric for himself. This self-righteous man, was full of faults. He was an ingrate, for he did not appreciate the home blessings which he had all those years. He was disobedient, for when the father told him to come in he stayed out. He was a liar, for he said that the recreant son had devoured his father's living, when the father, so far from being reduced to penury, had a homestead left, had instruments of music, had jewels, had a mansion, and instead of being a pauper, was a prince. This senior brother, with so many faults of his own, was merciless in the criticism of the younger brother. The only perfect people that I have ever known were utterly obnoxious. I was never so badly cheated in all my life as by a perfect man. He got so far up in his devotions that he was clear up above all the rules of common honesty. These men that go about prowling among prayer meetings, and places of business, telling how good they are—look out for them; keep your hand on your pocketbook! I have noticed that just in proportion as a man gets good he gets humble. The deep Mississippi does not make as much noise as the brawling mountain rivulet. There has been many a store that had more goods in the show window than inside on the shelves.

This self-righteous man of the text stood at the corner of the house hugging himself in admiration. We hear a great deal in our day about the higher life. Now, there are two kinds of higher life men. The one are admirable, and the other are most repulsive. The one kind of higher life man is very lenient in his criticism of others, does not bore prayer meetings to death with long harangues, does not talk a great deal about himself but much about Christ and heaven, gets kindlier and more gentle and more useful until one day his soul spreads a wing and he flies away to eternal rest, and everybody mourns his departure. The other higher-life man goes around with a Bible conspicuously under his arm, goes from church to church, a sort of general evangelist, is a nuisance to his own pastor when he is at home, and a nuisance to other pastors when he is away from home; runs up to some man who is counting out a roll of bank bills or running up a difficult line of figures, and asks him how his soul is; make religion a dose of ipecacuanna; standing in a religious meeting making an address; he has a patronizing way, as though ordinary Christians were clear away down below him, so he had to talk at the top of his voice in order to make them hear, but at the same time encouraging them to hope on; that by climbing many years they may after a while come up within sight of the place where he now stands! I tell you plainly that a roaring roystering, bouncing sinner is not so repulsive to me as that higher-life malformation. The former may repent; the latter never gets over his pharisaism. The younger brother of the parable came back, but the senior brother stands outside entirely oblivious of his own delinquencies and deficits, pronouncing his own eulogium. Oh, how much easier it is to blame others than to blame ourselves! Adam blamed Eve, Eve blamed the serpent, the serpent blamed the devil, the senior brother blamed the younger brother, and none of them blamed themselves.

Again, the senior brother of my text stands for all those who are faithless about the reformation of the dissipated and the dissolute. In the very tones of his voice you can hear the fact that he has no faith that the reformation of the younger son is genuine. His entire manner seems to say, "That boy has come back for more money. He got a third of the property; now he has come back for another third. He will never be contented to stay on the farm. He will fall away. I would go in, too, and rejoice with the others if I thought this thing was genuine; but it is a sham. That boy is a confirmed inebriate and debauchee." Alas! my friends, for the incredulity in the church of Christ in regard to the reclamation of the recreant. You say a man has been a strong drinker. I say "Yes, but he has reformed." "Oh," you say, with a lugubrious face, "I hope you are not mistaken, I hope you are not mistaken." You say, "Don't rejoice too much over his conversion, for soon he will be unconverted, I fear. Don't make too big a party for that returned prodigal, or strike the timbrel too loud; and if you kill a calf kill the one that is on the commons, and not the one that has been luxuriating in the paddock." That is the reason why more prodigals do not come home to their father's house. It is the rank infidelity in the church of God on this subject. There is not a house on the streets of heaven that has not in it a prodigal that has returned and strayed home. There could be unrolled before you a scroll of 100,000 name—the names of prodigals who came back forever reformed. Who was John Bunyan? A returned prodigal. Who was Richard Baxter? A returned prodigal. Who was George Whitefield, the thunderer? A returned prodigal. And I could go out in all directions in this audience and find on either side, those who, once far astray for many years, have been faithful, and their eternal salvation is as sure as though they had been 10 years in heaven. And yet some of you have not enough faith in their return.

You do not know how to shake hands with a prodigal. You do not know how to pray for him. You do not know how to greet him. He wants to sail in the warm gulf-stream of Christian sympathy. You are the iceberg against which he strikes and shivers. You say he has been a prodigal. I know it. But you are the sour, unresponsive, censorious, saturnine, cranky, elder brother. and if you are going to heaven one would think some people would be tempted to go to perdition to get away from you. The hunters say that if a deer be shot the other deer shove him out of their company, and the general rule is, away with the man who has been wounded with sin. Now, I say, the more bones a man has broken the more need he has of a hospital, and that the more a man has been bruised and cut with sin the more need he has to be carried into human and divine sympathy. But for such men there is not much room in this world the men who want to come back after wandering. Plenty of room for elegant sinners, sinners in velvet and satin and lace, for sinners high-salaried, for kid-gloved and patent-leather sinners, for sinners fixed up by hair-dresser, pomatumed and lavendered and cologned and frizzled and crimped and "banged" sinners—plenty of room! Such we meet elegantly at the door of our churches, and we invite them into the best seats with Chesterfieldian gallantries; we usher them into the house of God, and put soft ottomans under their feet, and put the gilt-edged prayer-book in their hand, and pass the contribution box before them with an air of apology, while they, the generous souls! take out the exquisite portemonnaie, and open it, and with diamond-finger push down beyond the 10 dollar gold pieces and delicately pick out as an expression of gatitude their offering to the Lord, of 1 cent. For such sinners plenty of room, plenty of room. But for the man who has been drinking until his coat is threadbare and his face is erysipelased, and his wife's wedding dress is in the pawnbroker's shop, and his children, instead of being in school, are out begging broken bread at the basement doors of the city—the man, body, mind and soul on fire with the flames that have leaped from the scathing, scorching, blasting, consuming cup which the drunkard takes, trembling and agonized, and affrighted, and presses to his parched lip, and his cracked tongue, and his shrieking yet immortal spirit—no room.

Oh, if this younger son of the parable had not gone so far on, if he had not dropped so low in wassail, the protest would not have been so severe; but going clear over the precipice as the younger son did, the elder son is angry and will not go in.

Oh, be not so hard on the criticism of the fallen, lest thou thyself also be tempted. A stranger one Sunday staggered up and down the aisles of my church, disturbing the service until the service had to stop until he was taken from the room. He was a minister of the Gospel of Jesus Christ of a sister denomination! That man had preached the Gospel, that man had broken the bread of the Holy Communion for the people. From what a heighth to what a depth! Oh, I was glad there was no smiling in the room when that man was taken out, his poor wife following him with his hat in her hand, and his coat on her arm. It was as solemn to me as two funerals—the funeral of the body and the funeral of the soul. Beware lest thou also be tempted.

An invalid went to South America for his health, and one day sat sunning himself on the beach, when he saw something crawling up the beach, wriggling toward him, and he was affrighted. He thought it was a wild beast, or a reptile, and he took his pistol from his pocket. Then he saw it was not a wild beast. It was a man, an immortal man, a man made in God's own image; and the poor wretch crawled up to the feet of the invalid and asked for strong drink, and the invalid took his wine flask from his pocket and gave the poor wretch something to drink, and then under the stimulus he rose up and gave his history. He had been a merchant in Glasgow, Scotland. He had gone down under the power of strong drink until he was so reduced in poverty that he was lying in a boat just off the beech. "Why," said the invalid, "I knew a merchant in Glasgow once," a merchant by such and such a name, and the poor wretch straightened himself and said, "I am that man." "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."

Again, I remark that the senior brother of my text stands for the spirit of envy and jealousy. The senior brother that all the honor they did to the returned brother was a wrong to him. He said: "I have stayed at home, and I ought to have had the ring, and I ought to have had the banquet, and I ought to have had the garlands." Alas for this spirit of envy and jealousy coming down through the ages! Cain and Abel, Esau and Jacob, Saul and David, Homan and Mordecai, Othello and Iago, Orlando and Angelica, Caligula and Torquatus, Cæser and Pompey, Columbus and the Spanish courtiers, Cambyses and the brother he slew because he was a better marksman. Dionysius and Philoxenius, whom he slew because he was a better singer. Jealousy among painters. Closterman and Geoffrey Kneller, Hudson and Reynolds. Francia, anxious to see a picture of Raphael, Raphael sends him a picture. Francia, seeing it, falls in a fit of jealousy among authors. How seldom contemporaries speak of each other. Xenophon and Plato living at the same time, but from their writings you would never suppose they heard of each other. Religious jealousies. The Mahommedans praying for rain during a drought, no rain coming. Then the Christians begin to pray for rain, and the rain comes. Then the Mahommedans met together to account for this, and they resolved that God was so well pleased with their prayers He kept the drought on so as to keep them praying; but that the Christians began to pray, and the Lord was so disgusted with their prayers that He sent rain right away so He would not hear any more of their supplications. Oh, this accursed spirit of envy and jealousy! Let us stamp it out from all our hearts.

A wrestler was so envious of Theogenes, the prince of wrestlers, then he could not be consoled in any way; and after Theogenes died and a statue was lifted to him in a public place, his envious antagonist went out every night and wrestled with the statue until one night he threw it, and it fell on him and crushed him to death. So jealousy is not only absurb, but it is killing to the body and it is killing to the soul. How seldom it is you find one merchant speaking well of a merchant in the same line of business. How seldom it is you hear of a physician speaking well of a physician on the same block. Oh, my friends, the world is large enough for all of us. Let us rejoice at the success of others. The next best thing to owning a garden ourselves is to look over the fence and admire the flowers. The next best thing to riding in fine equipage is to stand on the street and admire the prancing span. The next best thing to having a banquet given to our prodigal brother that has come home to his father's house.

Besides that, if we do not get as much honor and as much attention as others, we ought to congratulate ourselves on what we escape in the way of assault. The French general, riding on horseback at the head of his troops, heard a soldier complain and say: "It is very easy for the general to command us forward while he rides and we walk." when the general dismounted and compelled the complaining soldier to get on the horse. Coming through a ravine, a bullet from a sharpshooter struck the rider, and he fell dead. Then the general said: "How much safer it is to walk than to ride!"

Once more I have to tell you that this senior brother of my text stands for the pouting Chistian. While there is so much congratulation within doors, the hero of my text stands outside, the corners of his mouth drawn down; looking as he feels—miserable. I am glad his lugubrious physiognomy did not spoil the festivity within. How many pouting Christians there are in our day—Christians who do not like the music of our churches, Christians who do not like the hilarities of the young—pouting, pouting, pouting at society, pouting at the fashions, pouting at the newspapers, pouting at the church, pouting at the government, pouting at the high heaven. Their spleen is too large, their liver does not work, their digestion is broken down. There are two cruets in their castor always sure to be well supplied—vinegar and red pepper! Oh, come away from that mood. Stir a little saccarine into your disposition. While you avoid the desoluteness of the younger son, avoid also the iracibility and the petulance and the pouting spirit of the elder son, and imitate the father, who had embraces for the returning prodigal and coaxing words for the splenetic malcontent.

Ah! the face of this pouting elder son is put before us in order that we might better see the radiant and forgiving face of the father. Contrasts are mighty. The artists in sketching the field of Waterloo, years after the battle, put a dove in the mouth of the cannon. Raphael, in one of his cartoons, beside the face of a wretch put the face of a happy and innocent child. And so the soue face of this indescrible and disgusted elder brother is brought out in order that in thr contrast we may better understand the forgiving and the radiant face of God. That is the meaning of God. That is the meaning of it—that God is ready to take back anybody that is sorry, to take him clear back to take him back forever, and forever to take him back with a loving hug, to put a kiss on his parched lip, a ring on his bloated hand, an easy shoe on his chafed foot, a garland on his bleeding temples, and heaven in his soul. Oh; I fall flat on that mercy! Come, my brother, and let us get down into the dust, resolved never to rise until the Father's forgiving hand shall lift us.

Oh, what a God we have! Bring your doxologies. Come, earth and heaven, and join in the worship. Cry aloud. Lift the palm branches! Do you not feel the Father's arm around your neck? Do you not feel the warm breath of your Father against your cheek? Surrender, younger son! Surrender, elder son! Surrender, all! Oh, go in today and sit down at the banquet. Take a slice of the fatted calf, and afterward, when you are seated, with one hand in the hand of the returned brother, and the other hand in the hand of the rejoicing father, let your heart beat time to the clapping of the cymbal and the mellow voice of the flute. "It is mèet that we should make merry and be glad: for this thy brother was dead and is alive again; and was lost, and is found.

Ecuador's Hidden Gold.

Everybody who has read Prescott's fascinating volumes knows what followed: With the aid of the Spaniards Atahualpa conquered his brother, and then the Spaniards conquered him. When he lay a prisoner in the hands of the guests he had treated so hospitably, he offered to fill his prison with gold if they would release him. They agreed, and his willing subjects brought the treasure; but the greedy Spaniards demanded more. Runners were hurried all over the country, and the simple, unselfish people surrendered all their wealth to save their King. But Piazarro became tired of waiting for the treasure, and the men in charge of it, upon hearing the news that Atahualpa had been strangled, buried the gold and silver in the Llanganati, where the Spaniards have been searching for it ever since.

No amount of persuasion, temptation, nor torture could wring from the Indians the secret of the buried gold. Two men of modern times are supposed to have known its hiding place. One of them, an Indian, became mysteriously rich, and built the Church of San Francisco, in Quito. On his death-bed he is said to have revealed to the priest who confessed him that his wealth came from the hidden Inca treasure, but he died without imparting the knowledge of its location.

Another man, Valverde by name, a Spaniard, married an Inca woman, and is supposed to have learned the secret from her, for he sprang from abject poverty to the summit of wealth almost in a single night. Valverde, when he died, left as a legacy to the King of Spain a guide to the buried treasure. Hundreds of fortunes have been wasted, and hundreds of lives have been lost, in vain attempts to follow Valverde's directions. They are perfectly plain to a certain point, where the trail ends, and cannot be followed farther because of a deep ravine, which the credulous assert, has been opened by an earthquake since Valverde's time. These searches have been prosecuted by the Government as well as by private individuals.—American Magazine.

Col. Thomas Ochiltree, with a suspiciously red händkerchief in his hands which he vigorously protests is not a "bandana," tells this story: "When Thurman was in the senate one of his fellow-members was Henry G. Davis of West Virginia, the father-in-law of S. B. Elkins. An important debate came on in which Thurman took a leading part. In the midst of it Davis went to sleep with his head on his arm on his desk. Thurman stopped to blow his nose, and it is one of his personal peculiarities that on such occasions he literally wakes the dead. On this occasion he woke Davis, who, in early life, was a Baltimore & Ohio brakeman, and who, as he opened his eyes, caught sight of Thurman's red bandana waving in the air. In his half-dazed condition, he coupled the sound and the bandana into a railroad danger signal, and grabbing his desk he attempted to twist it around like an old-fashioned brake before he remembered where he was and began to laugh at his delusion."—New York Mail and Express.

Babies in the Woods.

From old Virginia comes a pretty, half pathetic story of two little lads of three and six who were lost for two days and nights in the Shenandoah Mountains, though the whole valley was out looking for them. They were found at last cuddled in dry leaves in the shelter of some big rocks, and the little one's clothes, to the practiced mother's eye, were wofully awry.

Asking the reason, she was told that upon their first night out the baby had utterly refused to sleep in his clothes; so the elder undressed him, spread his little skirts upon the rock that served for a bed, put the bonnet under his curly head and at morning put on the clothes again as best his tiny fingers could. Throughout their wanderings, which extended for miles, the little fellows had kept the tin bucket with which they had been sent to the spring for water.

Grover is beginning to cast about him for a job after the 4th of March next. The people will change the program in November.

The democrats begin to appreciate the dilemma that their free trade views have gotten them into and are beginnin to be the most uneasy mortals in existence. They see the hand-writing on the wall, and they don't like it.

We like to see a good man, earnestly seeking to do all the good he can in any way that he can, but your ultra third-party man, who can see no good under the sun except of his own devising—who will not consent to do a good action if it happened to be devised by the republican party, who rather vote for the liquor interests than that—suits us too well.

What is the matter with the republican county platform that every temperance man, every sound business man, every practical, earnest, progressive thinker in the county cannot unite upon it? The third party will sit up nights and rack their brains before they will get up a better. It is a platform broad enough, deep enough, and good enough for the most exacting.

The Duluth Herald mentions the name of Dan Cash for Attorney-general. If, as is supposed, Att'y-General Clapp has fallen on the Scheffer boom and broken his neck, there will be a call for an Att'y Gen'l in which case Duluth has better claims than any other point and presents the name of a man in every way worthy. Duluth has always stood up for the republican party through thick and thin—and has had more of the latter than the former and deserves recognition at this time.

The democratic congressional convention for the Fifth district has been postponed till the 11th of Sept. This is said to be a move in favor of Canning. It is said the bosses favor B. F. Nash, of Fargo, and Barrett, Hixon & Co. want Canning and hope by having a chance to manipulate a little, to secure his nomination. If "Me and Mike" have decided upon B. F. Nash, of Fargo, B. F. Nash, of Fargo, it is, and don't let that fact escape your memory for a moment. Whichever horn of the dilemma they seize, they will find it to be the wrong one.

Duluth Herald: This is a sample of what is occurring every day and in all parts of the North: John T. Dunn, ex-speaker of the New Jersey Assembly says: "Yes, I am going to vote for Harrison, because I am disgusted with my party and have been since it became a free trade organization. If the managers think they can bamboozle working men into calmly accepting a dollar a day instead of three, they will find out on November 6th that they have made a great error. Irish-Americans at Elizabethport will vote for the protection ticket almost to a man. I am a democrat, but I'll have no English in mine."

Mr. Comstock says that he shall wait until the democrats put up their man before he takes the stump, then he will take hold in earnest. Up here "we" all favor Rev. B. F. Nash, of Fargo, as his peculiar views on the tariff are supposed to be very attractive to the average granger of the Fifth District which is supposed to render him most available. That he is a citizen of the Territory makes no difference at all; it is the success of the thing we are after and "Me an' Mike" think the Rev. gentleman would run like wild-fire, so up he goes. There is a man in Norman county whom some of the democratic farmers would like to see nominated, but bless you, he can't have it. He is rather too independent of the bosses to suit, and, unless the "common herd" (as the dems describe every-day, ordinary farmers) rise in their might and put him up in spite of bossism, he stands no earthly show. Meanwhile Mr. Comstock, Micawber-like, is waiting for somebody to turn up.

The East Grand Forks Courier says that O. A. Thoreson will announce himself as an independent candidate for county treasurer at the coming election. No doubt the wish is father to the thought to the Courier, but we do not believe that Mr. Thoreson is that kind of a republican. Whatever an individual or two may have done, Mr. Thoreson had many friends in that convention, men who were tried and true republicans; men who would regret exceedingly to see Mr. Thoreson make such a move and we do not believe that he is a man to go back on his friends as this action would be doing. It has been customary in the past, when men aspire to office for them to go around and see the people and get acquainted and we are told that Mr. T. has not done this. While this is nothing against the character of a candidate, the omission sometimes has a disastrous effect to a worthy man, as it seems to have in this case. We personally know of some who said they would have liked to have aided Mr. T. who gave as a reason for not doing so, that he had not been around to give people a chance to get acquainted with him. There is an unwritten law of honor binding upon all who seek office at the hands of a party to support the nominee of that party under all ordinary circumstances. With such an eminently fair convention as was this one we can see no good reason for any one bolting its decision as every one was given a fair show. There is always more or less talk by malcontents, after every convention and we believe this class of people are doing more of it in this case than Mr. Thoreson is.

The Republican County Convention.

The Republican County Convention which met last week was as fair a body of representative men as ever met in Polk County to nominate a ticket and the ticket nominated is one of the best ever submitted for the suffrages of the people. It is needless for us to mention the excellent qualities of auditor P. J. McGuire who is well known to be the best auditor in the State, capable of filling the office of State Auditor. The same high compliment may be paid to treasurer O. H. Lucken, who has so acceptably filled the office for several terms. The fact that register Andrew Eiken was nominated by acclamation speaks volumes in his behalf, showing the high appreciation of his manner of discharging his duties during his first term. Judge Christianson received the same compliment and amply deserves it. D. D. Williams, the nominee for county attorney is a new man in the field. He is a young attorney at Red Lake Falls and is said to be a man of high attainments, a man in every way worthy and competent. Sheriff Paulsrud, having served one term in office has become familiar with its workings and is more capable of discharging its duties than ever before. The ticket is a good one, a strong one, well worthy the earnest support of every republican and we see no reason why it should not be elected by an old-time majority.

The Third Party Convention.

The Prohibs hold their convention today for the purpose of putting in the field a county ticket throughout. What good they can see in such a move we fail to discover. For the sake of a possible victory in the dim future there might be some use, perhaps, in the support of a presidential ticket for the purpose solely of preserving party organization but there is no earthly shadow of reason for putting up a county ticket, nor a legislative nor a congressional, for in neither case can they hope to win and in every case all they can possibly accomplish would be to defeat—whom? The upholders of the liquor traffic that they profess to hate? Oh, no! Not at all but on the other hand the only sympathizers and friends they have. That there are earnest and sincere men in the third party is seen by the fact that there are those in it who are satisfied to make a gain in the right direction, who, recognizing in the position of the republican party a disposition to help, are willing to take hold and help. They are not willing to be responsible for the present state of things for four years more nor to contribute thereto. These men recognize the fact that the republican party is the only party that ever did anything for their cause, and they do not think it right to do their best to kill their only friends, as your dyed-in-the-wool third party leaderddoes, whose only aim in this fight at this time is to kill the republican party, even going so far in their hatred as to accept campaign funds from the saloons through the Columbia Association. With murder in their hearts they claim to be the only friends of humanity, earnestly endeavoring to save the fallen. If their zealous efforts were wisely directed they would hail with delight every effort for reform from whatever source it comes and by uniting their efforts help the more surely to accomplish the object. In county matters they do not pretend to say that any office save commissioner can benefit them one iota, but instead of attempting to secure prohibition commissioners in the only possible way to do it, they utterly and surely defeat the only good thing they could accomplish by making a senseless fight for the whole ticket. At heart the rank and file, the common-sense of the party is not in sympathy with this, but as yet they do not seem to have learned the fact that their leaders, great and good though they claim to be, being human are as liable to be guided by purely selfish motives as any other party leaders. The fact that the party was founded to fight a curse to the human race gives them the only strength they have with the people, but the fact that they have to deal with an intelligent people, and not with a lot of zealous bigots is the reason why the third party movement as it is conducted by its leaders cannot now or ever accomplish the good it might if properly managed; the good that all earnest, sensible citizens wish to see accomplished. The earnest, thinking men and women among them have no old scores to settle no revenge to gratify. The attitude of the third party leaders to-day is that of hatred to the republican party, their only hope to gratify their revenge in the death of that party. This is what we mean when we say that they have

MURDER IN THEIR HEARTS.

What good could be accomplished in the gratification of the wishes of such leaders? Would that spread the gospel of peace abroad more abundantly and all mankind be more abundantly blessed? The defeat of republican candidates means the defeat (in almost every case) of temperance men and the triumph of the liquor interests. Every vote cast for the third party this fall contributes to that end—is a vote to aid the liquor traffic. As unpalatable as this fact is it is the plain and simple unvarnished truth which cannot be got around, however much men may quibble and attempt to hide the hideous fact. The third party theory that a voter should cast his ballot in the interests of the liquor traffic now in order that some day in the dim future good may come of it is not borne out by Bible truths. That good book admonishes men to be earnest in season and out of season ever striving for the right—and the liquor interest is not the right, neither is a man right in voting to uphold it even for ever so short a period. The Bible nowhere teaches us to do evil in the hope that good MAY come of it but it does admonish men to do right at all times and under all circumstances and it leaves no doubt in the mind of the earnest seeker after the truth as to what is the right thing to do in this as in every other question affecting the welfare of humanity.

A republican club was organized at Euclid Saturday evening, August 18th, with 23 members, H. C. Misner president and Dr. J. S. Chapin vice president. After the organization of the club, R. J. Montague Esq. addressed the people for about an hour, very clearly setting forth the principles of temperance and tariff from a republican standpoint.

To the Women of the United States.

"The first concern of all good Government is the virtue and sobriety of the people and the purity of the home. The Republican party cordially sympathizes with all wise and well directed efforts for the promotion of temperance and morality."

REPUBLICAN PLATFORM, 1888.

Responding heartily to these noble sentiments, and to other enunciations of political truth concerning social, economical, and moral questions contained in the comprehensive declarations of the adopted by the recent convention at Chicago, we send greeting to the women of the United States, and ask them to make utterance of their devotion to home and country by giving active support to the Republican party in the pending campaign. We who send you this call, do not claim pre-eminent devotion to home and country. We know that everywhere in our land are patriotic women; they love the flag; they waved it in holiday splendor under the blue sky of national prosperity; they revered it when its brightness was dimmed by the smoke of war. It is precious as the blood of kindred, sacred as the shroud of beloved dead. To all who believe that the flag is worth all it costs—to all loyal women this address comes.

NATIONAL REPUBLICAN PLATFORM,

The Republican party is not a sectional—it is a national party. In its counsels are wounded veterans of the Union army, and soldiers of the late confederacy, and enfranchised slaves; the party knows no east, no west, no north, no south. Eastern culture and western enterprise have nurtured a Conservative-radicalism as contiguous and continuous as is the Continental railway system which the Republican policy of internal improvements made possible.

Across the "Bloody Chasm"—a part of our historic past—are the clasped hands of growing industries, sensitive and responsive with nerves of trade, steam and smoke and flame from furnace, factory and mill are the cloud by day and the fire by night, renewedly attesting Republican principles, and guiding the country out from the wilderness of sectionalism into the promised land of a perfectly restored nationalism.

In the ranks of the Republican party are found many citizens of foreign birth.

In America they are Americans; they do not forget the mother country nor the father-land, but here they are loyal to the stars and stripes; their loyalty was tested even to the shedding of blood in war; with whatever makes for good citizenship they are welcome in the party; their rights under the flag command respect.

The achievements of this great party have made luminous this century's history. Under God's blessing it rescued the imperilled nation, saved the Government our fathers left us, and maintained the institutions which assure to American women the exhalted position they now enjoy. The Republican party has always been the party of protection; protection to the citizen, protection to the negro, protection to the ballot box, protection to the wage-earner, protection to the wage-payer, and now in line with past professions and performances it declares for PROTECTION FOR THE "HOME." Can American women fail to respond?

This party is not a squad of unskilled, untrained recruits, reckless to attempt, and helpless to secure political defence; it is not a troop of detached soldiery out on picket duty; it is it was raised from the fire-side of the people; its ranks are kept full by the farm, the shop, the school, the mill; it is sworn to champion at the command of the sovereign-people—"Whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are of good report," in Government.

THE REGULAR ARMY OF AMERICAN PROGRESS,

American women, this is the party to whose services we call you. What position will you take and hold during the month of the coming campaign? Do you realize the moral side, the heart side of the economic questions which are being discussed in the campaign? Do you remember that when labor is degraded, woman is degraded? The shop girl, the factory operative, the sewing woman, indeed every working woman whether she toil in home, or shop, or school, is interested in the maintenance of the American standard of values in labor, and its return to the home. In November next, twelve millions of voters will go to the polls and determine who shall receive the highest honor in the gift of the American people. Is this anything to you? Does it make any difference to you who this man is, and for what set of principles he stands?

Would not the choice of

BENJAMIN HARRISON AND LEVI P. MORTON,

as chief executives of this great nation, tend to establish a popular standard of private morals and public service which any mother might present to the aspirations of her sons? Do not their lives illustrate that purity in personal character is consonant with the highest worldly success? That the dealings in the heart of trade, the court of justice the legislative chamber, or the camp of war need never cause a blush in the home? Is it not vital to the Nation's life that these truths be emphasized in the characters of the people's chief representatives?

Young women of the land have you no debt to pay to that established order of things which we call christian civilization? Do you realize that Republican Institutions are the material organism through which this spirit of civilization breathes? Will you not in thankful appreciation of the inheritance into which you have entered, pledge humble fealty to the Republican party, whose standard-bearer wears the white flower of a blameless life? Beyond the immediate demands of the present campaign lies the broad field of political ethics; women are equally concerned with men in the seed sown and the harvest gathered there.

KEEPERS OF THE NATION'S HOMES,

educators of the Nation's children, sharers in its industries, and guardians of its shrines, will you not also give your best brain and heart to a study of the principles of government and their application in practical politics? This giving shall not impoverish, its withholding has not enriched the hearts and homes of American women.

The State is not less a divine institution than is the family where your throne is, the church where you and your children worship God and study His laws. Under our system of Government the State is that great temple which the people are forever building and re-building. If they build well the structure shall endure and safely protect our sacred interests from vandals without and from trators within. If they build recklessly or wickedly, the structure shattered and destroyed, will fall about our heads, and we, defenceless, shall vainly seek the foundations where our homes were, where our alters stood.

Let us, therefore, in this as in every relation of life, do what we can. Enlarged opportunities impose commensurate obligations. The united influence of Republican women will conserve moral power in society, utilize dormant political forces for the public good, and aid in

THE DOMINANCE OF REPUBLICAN PRINCIPLES.

We ask all persons, men and women, who approve these sentiments above expressed to communicate with us at the office of the

WOMAN'S NATIONAL REPUBLICAN COMMITTEE,

No. 34 West 14th S., New York City.

MRS. J. ELLEN FOSTER, Iowa, Chairman.

MRS. THOS. W. CHACE, Rhode Isl., Secretary.

MRS. SCHUYLER COLFAX, Indiana.

MRS. HENRY S. LANE, Indiana.

MRS. H. B. SPELLMAN, New York.

MRS. HENRY K. CARROLL, New Jersey.

Much Uneasiness.

Forthcoming Statistics Which Makes the Tariff Reformers Uneasy.

Minneapolis Tribune.

WASHINGTON, D C., Aug. 18.—It is hinted about the capitol to-day that some statistics have been collected which have already given rise to much uneasiness among the tariff reformers and are calculated to create a sensation if officially published. It is said that these statistics will show that the revenues of the government for the current year will exceed the expenditures contemplated by the various bills making appropriations, by not more than $13,000,000. As several of the bills carrying large appropriation, although passed by the House have not yet gotten beyond its control, it is said to be possible, now that attention has been drawn to the matter, that they will be heavily cut or allowed to die without becoming laws in order to reduce the prospective large expenditures to figures approaching what had been accepted at the beginning of the session as fair estimates.

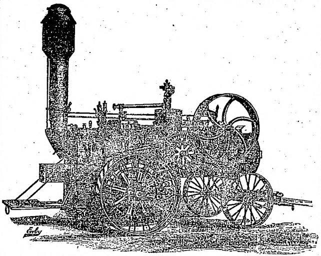
REMOVED.

HUGGARD, LARSEN & CO.

have removed their stock to their new building, opposite the New York store on, cor. Broadway and Robert. You can't miss it,

SIGN OF THE JAOKSON WAGON.

☞ JUSTRECEIVED—A fresh car of Buggies, Carriages and Road Carts. ☜



General Agents for

RUSSELL & CO'S WORLD KNOWN

Engines, Separators and Saw Mills.

Minneapolis Steel Binders and Mowers. Full line of Hay Rakes, Hand and Self Dumps. J. Thompson & Son's Cross Plows and Breakers, NEW MODEL Walking Gangs and Breakers, Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machines' Pumps, Full line of Extras. TWINE. Come and ee us!

HARMLESS SPUR WIRE

FENCING.

Cannot injure or tear stock. Comparatively cheapest fencing made. Is endorsed by every one who uses it, Strongest, most visible and only safe fence.

☞ SEND FOR CIRCULARS AND PRICES. ☜

IN USE IN MANY OF THE STATES' AND TERRITORIES.

Manufactured by the

LARM MANUFACTURING CO.,

Cor. Clinton and Van Buren Sts., Chicago, Ill.

For Sale by G. M. Barber, Second Street.

JUST RECEIVED, ONE CARLOAD

Wagons and Buggies

FROM RACINE WAGON AND BUGGY COMPANY.

We venture to say without fear of contradiction that this is the finest car of goods, in the Buggy line, ever brought into Crookston.

NO SNDE OR BANKRUPT STOCK,

The real Simon Pure Racine Manufacture.

WE can please the most fastidious in style and finish, and we guarantee every Buggy sold. We ask our customers, and the public generally, to give us a call, if they want a first-class Buggy or Wagon at bottom prices. Our Platform, Spring and Delivery Wagons are Real Beauties.

A FULL STOCK OF

Farm Machinery and Implements

CONSTANTLY ON HAND

McKiNON BRO'S,

McKinnon' Block, - - - - - - - - - - - - Main Street.

JOHN CROMB,

Attor ney-at-aw.,

ECOND STREET, CROOKSTON,

DR. M. WATTS.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,

Office over Merchants' Bank,

☞ Professional calls by day or night promptly attended to.

SCANDI AMERICAN

BANK.

Authorized Capital.......................$300,000

Paid in Capital.......................50,000

COLLECTIONS A SPECIALTY.

OFFICERS:

C. Hendrickson, President.

G. M. Barber, Vice President.

C. O. Christianson, 2d Vice President.

A. G. Gallash, Cashier.

D. Ellington, Asst. Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

O. H. Lucken.......................Crookston

L. K. Aaker....................... "

J. H. Locken....................... "

T. J. Thorsen....................... "

P. E. Sandager.......................Grafton, D. T.

A. E. Johnson,.......................St. Paul, Minn.

First National Bank

OF CROOKSTON

PAID IN CAPITAL, - $100,000

SURPLUS, - - - $11,000

Money to loan on long or short time on approved security

Interest on time deposits. Faithful attention to Collections and prompt remittance.

GEO. Q. ERSKINE, President.

WM. ANGLIM', Vice President.

CHAS. E. SAWYER, Cashier

DIRECTORS:

Wm. Anglim,

Geo. Q. Erskine,

E. M. Walsh.

K. D. Chase,

S. F. Markham,

John Moore.

Chas. E. Sawyer.

F. D. Childs

A. A. Miller

W. H. Crosby

Sheriff's Sale of Real Estate under Judgment of Foreclosure.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk.—ss.
District Court, Fourteenth Judicial District.

Jennett S. McCullough, Plaintiff.

vs.

Virgil D. Carruth and Julia E. Carruth. Def'ts.

Notice is hereby given that under and by virtue of a judgment and decree entered in the above entitled action on the 16th day of August 1888, a certified transcript of which has been delivered to me, I, the undersigned sheriff of said Polk County will sell at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, on Saturday the 6th day of October 1888, at two (2) o'clock in the afternoon at the front door of the court house, in the city of Crookston in said county, in one parcel the premises and real estate described in said judgment and decree, to-wit: The south half (s½) of the northeast quarter (ne¼) and lots numbered one (1) and two (2.) in Section numbered six (6,) in Township numbered one hundred and forty-eight (148) north, of Range numbered forty-seven (47) west, containing 163 37-100 acres of land, more or less, according to the government survey there of and situated in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota.

Dated August 18th 1888.

NELS O. PAULSRUD,
Sheriff of Polk County.

W. B. Douglas, Plaintiff's Att'y.
[18-21] Moorhead, Minn.

Sheriff's Sale of Real Estate under Judgment of Foreclosure.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk.—ss.
District Court, Fourteenth Judicial District

Jennett S. McCullough, Plaintiff. vs. Joseph Marchildon, Henriette Marchildon, Emily Gervais and the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company. Defendants.

Notice is hereby given that under and by virtue of a judgment and decree entered in the above entitled action on the 16th day of August 1888, a certified transcript of which has been delivered to me, I, the undersigned sheriff of said Polk County will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, on Saturday the 6th day of October 1888, at two-thirty (2:30) o'clock in the afternoon, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Crookston, in said county, in one parcel the premises and real estate described in said judgment and decree, to-wit: The northwest quarter of Section number fifteen (15,) in Township number one hundred and fifty (150) north, of Range forty-four (44) west, situated in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, and containing 160 acres less the 100 feet strip occupied by the Duluth & R. Co. for right of way.

Dated August 18th 1888.

NELS O. PAULSRUD,
Sheriff of Polk County.

W. B. Douglas, Pl'ffs Att'y.
[18-21] Moorhead, Minn.

CROOKSTON

CREAMERY,

WALSH & BJOIN, Prop's.

The Croookston Creamery is now ready for business, and solicits the patronage of every progressive farmer. At the prices that we now pay, you can make more money out of your cream than you can to make it into butter yourself. It only needs a trial to convince you.

We invite the patronage of all who are interested in their own welfare, as well as that of the county to call and see us,

THE OLD RELIABLE

CROOKSTON

LOAN AGENCY

STILL ON DECK.

MONEY

On Real Estae.

MONEY

On Approved Chattels.

Always on hand at the Lowest Rates.

Consult your best interests by giving me a call when you Want Money.

A. D. STEPHENS,

Second Street, Crookston, Minn.

A. F. LAPLANT.

PLAIN AND ORNAMENTAL

PLASTERING

Done to Order. ☞ All Work Warranted. ☜

CROOKSTON, MINN.

DENTISTRY!

J. H. THOMAS, D. D. S.,

ROBERT STREET. - CROOKSTON, MINN

Artificial Teeth from one to an entire set inserted. Gold, Silver or Artificial Filling used a desired. Regulating Children's Teeth a specialty. ALL WORK WARRANTED

Crookston Nurseries

Established in 1879

Tree Claim Stock

A SPECIALTY.

I will furnish my customers and others, trees and seeds for Tree Claims at reduced figures in the spring of 1887. Also all the hardier varieties of small fruits, such as Currants, Gooseberries, and Raspberries. Also good thrifty Transcendent and Hislop Crab-Apple trees, Cottonwood and Box Elder trees. Box Elder and Ash seed, and Willow cuttings. Also garden seeds. The firm of Haseltine Bros. was dissolved in June, 1883. E. W Haseltine has no interest or share in the old Crookston Nurseries, nor is he successor to the old firm of Haseltine Bros. as ha, been advertised. I continue business on the old grounds in Crookston. Don't fail to send for catalogue of prices

FRANK T. HASELTINE, Prop.

Crookston, Minn.

Polk County Journal.

W. G. COOKE, Publisher.

CROOKSTON, MINN., AUGUST 23.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

Following is a list of Districts with names of clerks, where fall terms of school will be maintained:

Dist. 4 Fisher, T. Benson, Fisher, Sept. 1, 2½ months.
" 5 Hubbard, A. Thompson, Neilsville, Sept. 15 2½ mo. 2 schools.
" 6 Vineland, E. O. Estenson, Neby, Oct. 1, 3 mo.
" 9 Lambert, Jos. Bargeron, Lambert, Aug. 20, 1½ mo.
" 11 Huntsville, D. B. Ferguson, Mallory, Sept. 15, 5 mo's.
" 18 Fisher, H. B. Christiansen, Carman, Oct. 15, 3 mo's
" 20 Gentilly, Henry T. Gondrou, " Sept. 3, 4 mo's.
" 23 Winger, John G. Johnson, " Oct. 1, 2 mo's.
" 24 Black River, Paul Avleson, St. Hilaire, Aug. 27, 2 mo's
" 25 Higdem, Martin E. Hillard, Grand Forks, Sept. 15, 3 mo's.
" 26 Andover, N. B. Soper, Carman, Aug. 19, 2½ mo's
" 28 Lowell, E. E. Lommen, Crookston, Sept. 20, 3 mo's.
" 29 Lowell, E. M. Bivens, Crookston, Sept. 1, 3 mo's.
" 32 Lake Pleasant, John Perreault, Red Lake Falls Aug. 15 3 months.
" 33 Tynsid, Ole Larson, Fisher, Sept. 15, 3 mo's, two schools.
" 35 Fairfax, John Amundson, Crookston, Sept. 15, 3 mo's.
" 40 Red Lake Falls, J. W. Bourdon, " Dec. 1, 4½ mo's.
" 43 Black River Falls, Wm Hill, grove, Wylie, Sept. 1, 3 mo's.
" 47 Euclid, L. S. Hancock, " Sept. 1, 4½ mo's.
" 48 Louisville, Nap. Doyca, Huot Oct. 1, 2 mo's.
" 49 R. L. Falls, Xavier Ducharm, " Aug. 1, 4 mo's.
" 50 Higdem, Mathias Anderson, Grand Forks D. T., Sept. 15, 2 mo's.
" 51 Higdem, Martin C. Ivern, E. Grand Forks, Oct. 15, 2½ mo's.
" 52 Brislet, C. A. Tuller, Warren, Sept. 3, 3 months.
" 54 Brislet, John Nelson, St. Hilaire, Aug. 4.
" 55 Crookston, Jas. E. Greenhalgh " Oct. 15. 3 mos's.
" 58 " A. Weber Sr. " Sept. 1, 3 mo's.
" 60 Grove Park, G. H. Tripp, Mentor, Sept. 17, 2½ mo's.
" 61 Grove Park, Frank A. Hayes, Mentor, Nov. 1, 2 mo's.
" 63 R. L. Falls, John Sutter, " Oct. 15, 3 mo's.
" 65 Garfield, T. H. Nesseth, Fertile, Sept. 15, 3 mo's.
" 66 Garfield, K. C. Norsving, Fertile, Sept. 1, 2½ mo's.
" 68 Andover, J. O. Sargent, Crookston, Sept. 1, 2½ mo's.
" 69 Garfield, N. R. Engelstad, Fertile, Oct. 1, 2½ mo's.
" 70 Garfield, Ole L. Ophrim, Fertile, Nov. 1, 2½ mo's.
" 71 Angus, W. Lemen, Angus, Oct. 1, 5 mo's.
" 73 Rockstad, C. A. Johnson, St. Hilaire, Nov. 1, 2½ mo's.
" 74 Hammond, Thos. Samson, Crookston, Aug. 13, 2½ mo's.
" 75 Russia, W. A. Marin, Fertile, Sept. 15, 2½ mo's.
" 77 Fanny John G. Tenny, Crookston, Sept. 3, 6 mo's.
" 78 Higdem, Wm. Jackson, Grand Forks, Aug. 1. 4½ mo.
" 79 Terrebonne, Thos. Crompe, " Aug. 13, 4 mo's.
" 80 " Stephen Quesnel, Tilden, Sept. 1, 3 mo's.
" 81 Terrebonne, Louis Perreault, " July 23, 4 mo's.
" 82 Fisher, A. Daniels, Crookston Sept. 15, 3½ mo's.
" 83 Woodside, E. F. Stoddard, " Nov. 15, 2½ mo's.
" 86 Godfrey, George Droppo, Fertile, Sept. 1, 3 mo's.
" 88 Gervais, M. Jeffers, Red Lake Falls, Nov. 15, 4 mo's.
" 89, Tilden, J. W. McAnulty, " Oct. 1, 2 mo's.
" 90 Godfrey, Mrs. L. A. Hunter, Maple Bay, Sept. 1, 4 mo's.
" 91 Liberty, E. B. Hafterson, Edna, Oct. 15, 2½ mo's.
" 92 Bygland, Jorgen Torgaimson, Fisher, Oct. 15, 2½ months.
" 94 Black River, Erick Adolphson, Wylie, Nov. 19, 2½ mo's.
" 95, Godfrey, Knute Tedmanson Maple Bay, Oct. 1, 2½ mo's
" 96 Kertsonville, Frank J. Williams, Gentilly, Aug. 15, 3 mo.
" 97 Garden, M. G. Peterson, Valley, Nov. 1 2½ mo's.
" 100 Garden, Peder Oleson, Rindel Sept. 1, 2½ mo's.
" 101 Garden, E. P. Ulland, Rindel, Oct. 1, 2½ mo's.
" 103 Lambert, Patrice Lemay, " Oct. 3 mo's.
" 104 John G. Johnson, Edna, Nov. 15, 2½ mo's.
" 106 Norden, Cornelius Anderson, St. Hilaire, Nov. 5, 2½ mo's.
" 107 North, J. W. Wallin, Rockstad, Oct. 1, 3 mo's.
" 108 Black River, Mrs. Hannah M. Johnson, Wylie, Oct. 1, 3 months.
" 111 Rosebud, A. M. Eaton, Hansville, Sept. 3d, 3 months.
" 112 Red Lake Falls, John Deforge Red Lake Falls, Oct. 1st, 3 months.
" 113 Godfrey, Ole S. Vallesater, Maple Bay, Oct. 1st, 2 mo's.
" 114 Emardville, Peter Anderson, Emard, Feb. 1, 4 months.
" 116 Kertsonville, Adelard Boileau Gentilly, Oct. 1, 3 months.
" 117 Fisher, Wm. Skinner, Fisher, Sept. 3, 3 months.
" 120 King, John D. Knutson, King Oct. 2, 2½ months.
" 122 King, Martin Iverson, McIntosh, Nov. 1, 2½ months.
" 124 Polk Centre, Frank Schirrich, Wyle, Oct. 15, 3 months.
" 125 Wyandotte, Knute R. Kolseth, St. Hilaire, Oct. 1, 3 months.
" 127 Norden, O. J. Tweet, Tweet, Nov. 15, 2½ months.
" 128 Knute, John E. Appegard, Willewater, Oct. 1, 2 months.
" 129 Nesbit, John A. Bryson, Fisher, Sept. 1, 3 months.
" 130 Louisville, Eustache Payment, Huot, Oct. 1, 3 mo's.
" 131 Hill River, Jno. E. Luthen, Lindsay, Oct. 1, 2 months.
" 133 River Falls, Gustaf England, St. Hilaire, Oct. 15, 2½ mo's.
" 135 Norden, Nic Nelson, Rockstad, Oct. 1, 2½ months.
" 137 Rosebud, Ole Nelson, Fosston, Oct 15, 2½ months.
" 138 Rosebud, Iver Bruun, Fosston, Oct 1, 2½ months.
" 139 King, W G Huot, King, Oct 1, 2½ months.
" 140 Kertsonville, Moses Reil, Crookston, Sept 1, 2½ mo's.
" 141 Lambert, N Martineau, Terrebonne, Sept 18, 4 months.
" 142 Rosebud, J W Galloway, Fosston, Sept 3, 4 months.
" 144 Fanny, C S Richardson. Warren, Aug 13, 3 months.
" 145 Bransvold, O T Adegard, Fosston, Oct 1, 2½ months.
" 146 Badger, Oscar Dovery, Sletten, Aug 15, 2 months
" 147 Numedahl, John W Buggee, Tweet, Oct 15, 2 months.
" 148 River Falls, C Christiansen, St. Hilaire, Oct 1, 3 months.
" 149 Sanders, Arne O Bergene, St. Hilaire, Oct. 15, 2½ months.
" 150 Roome, C C Hansel, Crookston, Oct 1. 2 months.
" 151 Lambert, Joseph Brohman, Lambert, Aug. 15, 2½ mo's.
" 152 Sullivan, Andrew Anderson, East Grand Forks, Sept. 1, 2½ months.
" 153 Louisville, Louis Huot, Huot, Sept 1, 3 months.
" 156 Fred M. Date, Mentor, Nov. 19, 2½ months.
" 157 Sletton, A T Moore, Hansville, Oct 1, 2½ months.
" 158 Badger, A D Kelly, Sletten, Oct 1, 2½ months.
" 159 Lessor, C P Gefstos, Lindsay, Sept 15, 3 months.
" 161 Fisher, Halvor Grundeson, Fisher, Sept 4, 3 months.
" 162 Lessor T A Mandt, King, Oct 1, 2½ months.
" 163 King, Charles McCarty, McIntosh, Oct 1, 2½ months.
" 164 Badger, Erek Lampe, Sletten, Aug 20, 2 months.
" 165 Roxbury, Peter Wold, St. Hilaire, Oct 1, 2 months.
" 166 River Falls, Louis Larson, St. Hilaire, Oct 15, 2 months
" 167 Red Lake Falls, Frank McGriff, Red Lake Falls, Oct 1, 3 months.
" 168 l, Hill River, Mrs C S Russe King, Nov 1, 2 months.
" 170 Knute, L M Anderson, Willewater, Nov 17, 2 months.
" 171 Knute, Knute H Rollag, Wilewater, Nov 15, 2 mo's.
" 176 Bransvold, O F Havig, Fosston, Oct 1, 2 months.
" 177 Sletten, Ole A Trovatn, Winger, Oct 15, 2 months.
" 178 River Falls, K O Gigstad, St. Hilaire, Sept 15, 4 months.
" 180 Bray, Charles P Swanson, Wylie, Nov 10, 4 months.
" 183 Winger, Ole K Lakuss, Winger, Oct 15, 2 months.
" 185 Columbia, Andrew Jenson, Fosston, Oct 1, 3 months.
" 186 Winger, Martin Anderson, Winger, Oct 1, 2 months.
" 188 Hill River, M S Lindfors, King, Aug 6, 2 months.
" 189 Lessor, Andrew Belden, Ovetia, Oct. 15, 2 months.
" 190 Woodside, James Tagley.

Special Excursion Rates.

Minneapolis Exposition and Minnesota State Fair Via Northern Pacific R. R.

Excursion tickets will be sold to Minneapolis and return for the exposition on the following dates at one fare for the round trip. Tickets good to return to destination until Monday following date of sale, viz:

Aug. 21st, 23d, 25th, 28th and 30th, Sept. 1st, 4th, 6th, 18th, 20th, 22d, 25th, 27th and 29th, every day from Sept. 8th to the 15th, inclusive, tickets will be sold to either St. Paul or Minneapolis, at one fare for the round trip, good to return to return to destination one day after being stamped at St. Paul or Minneapolis, but not later than Sept. 17th.

On account of the Minnesota State Fair, tickets will be sold to either St. Paul or Minneapolis and return every day on Sept. 8th to 15th, inclusive, good to return one day after being stamped at St. Paul or Minneapolis, but not later than Sept. 17th.

All Expostion and State Fair tickets will include admission coupons at twenty-five cents each for the Exposition and fifty cents for the State Fair which will be added to the railroad rates.

For rates inquire of ticket agents, N. P. R. R.

PROHIBITION COUNTY CONVENTION.

A delegate Convention of the Prohibition voters of Polk County, Minnesota, is hereby called to meet at the Public Reading Rooms, in the city of Crookston, in said Polk County, Minnesota, on Thursday, August 23d, 1888, at one o'clock p. m., for the purpose of choosing delegates to the legislative convention to be hereafter called, and for the purpose of nominating the following county officers, to-wit: Auditor, Treasurer, Register of Deeds, County Superintendent of Schools, County Attorney, Sheriff, Court Commissioner, County Surveyor, County Commissioner for each district. The basis of representation will be as follows: Two delegates from each voting precinct in the county, one delegate from each W. C. T. U. organization in the county, one delegate from each prohibition club in the county, one delegate from each Scandinavian, Father Mathew, or other total abstinence society in the county.

There will be present to address the convention, one of Minnesota's pioneers in temperance work, Mr. W. W. Saterlee, of Minneapolis. "Come up and be counted."

[16-18] County Com.

FOR SALE.

We have, placed in our hands for sale at a bargain, a half section of land near the city, on which is growing a fine crop of wheat, oats and barley. Here is a rare chance for somebody to drop into a ready made business right to hand. It will pay you to look into this bargain if you want a good farm in a good neighborhood, good water and good buildings. Address The Journal.

California Wines and Brandies.

Max Ericsson is constantly receiving California Wines and Brandies, the choicest of liquors of all kinds at wholesale and retail, which he can supply at the shortest notice. No use to send below for such things, as Max can supply them as cheaply and of as good quality as you can get anywhere. Go and see what Max can do for you.

LOTS.

Lots in exchange for farming lands.
Steenerson & McManus

REPUBLICAN PLATFORM.

Owing to the haste necessary to get out the convention report last week the typographical errors that crept into the platform were too numerous to mention. We therefore produce it this week in better shape. It is a declaration of principles that will commend itself to the better judgment of the people.

WHEREAS, The republican party of Polk County in Convention assembled, recognizing the propriety of that time-honored custom which leads political parties, when presenting their candidates for the support of the people, to at the same time proclaim the line of policy in governmental affairs which they seek to establish or to perpetuate, do

RESOLVE, That, ascribing all praise to the Infinite Being who has honored us in the past as His instrument in advancing the prosperity and welfare of the people, we point with pride to our record in former years as a guarantee of the faithful discharge in the future of every public trust committed to our care. That in local affairs, we stand for the enforcement of all laws, and especially those tending to promote temperance and morality and to suppress vice and crime; a liberal expenditure for our public schools; the conscientious care of all public property, a wise economy in the expenditure of public moneys; an impartial valuation and assessment of all property, that each, whether rich or poor, may bear their just burden of taxation.

IN MATTERS OF STATE

we hold ourselves to be the only practical temperance party. We declare ourselves to be in hearty sympathy with, and to be working for Practical Prohibition of the manufacture, sale and use of intoxicating liquors, but believe our end can only be accomplished by educating public opinion and moral sentiment to the level which we strive to attain; and recognizing the fact that the term "license" as we apply it in its relations to the liquor traffic, is not (as some claim) "permissive," but "restrictive;" we declare, in the words of the Hon. Wm. Windom, that "as between low license or no license we are in favor of low license; as between low license or high license, we are in favor of high license, and as between high license or prohibition, we favor prohibition."

We recognize our present high license law as a great stride in the right direction and give our Governor and the friends who labored so faithfully for its passage, all honor for their courage, discretion and zeal. But we would not rest satisfied at what has been accomplished, but earnestly appeal to the coming legislature to submit the question of prohibition to a vote of the people, and demand of our representatives from this district that they labor for this end.

We demand a new apportionment for the State at the coming session of the legislature, in which this district shall be secured her just proportion of representation, of which she has been so long denied. The fact that several districts in this state casting nearly 1600 votes less than this single county of Polk have three representatives in the legislature, while others, casting scarcely more votes than this district have five votes in that body, whereas we are barely allowed one vote in each branch, gives point to the justice of this demand.

We recognize in our railway systems the most potent factor of the 19th century in the material development of our country; wisely managed they become a source of incalculable benefit to each and every citizen, or in the hands of selfish and corrupt management, a mighty engine of oppression to the many for the benefit of the few. We therefore approve the exercise, by the State, of a conservative control over their affairs, but believing as we do that the people themselves are capable of self government, we favor the selection of railroad commissioners by the people rather than by executive appointment, which often becomes a reward for party service.

We hail with delight the promise of a line of iron steamboats, of the most modern construction to run in connection with the Manitoba R'y system, between Duluth and Buffalo, as promising a radical reduction in freight rates of our great staple product from our fields to the markets of the world.

We demand legislation which shall reduce the maximum charges exacted by our express and telegraph lines, or, which shall secure to their patrons a service more nearly commensurate with the charges enforced.

We demand a revision of the laws governing our public warehouses and elevators, reducing their maximum charges, and the rates of inspections at the terminal points. The justice of this demand becoming apparent, when it is known that these companys have received nearly if not quite one-half as much for buying and storing the farmers' crop during the past year as the railways have charged to haul it 300 miles to its nearest market. And that at the coming session of the Legislature there will be nearly if not quite $25000 of surplus in the treasury of the Warehouse Commission, which has been received for inspection fees, and is in excess of the expenses of the service, and which is a direct tax upon the producers.

We demand "State Aid" in the opening of our natural drainage channels, that the work of draining sub-districts may be made possible, and within the financial reach of county, municipal and individual enterprise.

Any sum so expended would, within a few years flow back into the State Treasury in the form of taxes upon enhanced values and increased production.

We demand the retention of the present tax upon intoxicants in the interest of temperance and morality either by state or national government.

We demand a thorough revision of the tariff, and a simplifying of its classifications, based upon the principle of protecting such of our industries as will by so doing build up our home markets and protect American labor; and we believe that such a revision can only be had at the hands of the Grand Old Republican Party, which by its wise and patriotic action in the past has saved this nation and brought it to its present state of liberty and prosperity.

MORTGAGE SALE.

[First publication Aug. 23th, 1888.]

WHEREAS ARTHUR T. MOORE AND Catharine J. Moore, his wife, as mortgagors, did on the 25th day of March A. D. 1885, duly execute and deliver to The American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London (Limited) as mortgagee, the following described lands situated in the County of Polk, and State of Minnesota, to-wit: The west half of Section twenty-three (23) and the northeast quarter of Section twenty three (23) Township one hundred and fifty (150) Range forty-six (46) west, containing 480 acres, to secure the payment of the sum of three thousand dollars with interest thereon, according to the conditions of one certain promissory note with interest coupons attached bearing date of March 17th A. D. 1885 and made by said mortgagors to said mortgagee or order which said mortgage was on the 27th day of March A. D. 1885 at 9 o'clock a. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the said County of Polk, in book "Y" of mortgages on pages 258 to 261 inclusive, and

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the sum of two hundred and forty dollars, due as interest upon said mortgage on the first day of January A. D. 1888 and the said interest is still unpaid and due, and whereas, It was stipulated and agreed by and between the parties to said mortgage that if default should be made in any of the conditions or covenants therein contained on the part of the mortgagers to be kept and performed, that then and from thenceforth it shall be lawful for said mortgagee or its assigns to consider the whole sum thereby secured as immediately due and payable without notice to said mortgagors or any other party, and whereas The American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London (Limited) mortgagee, has exercised its option to consider and declare and does hereby declare the whole sum of money secured by said mortgage to be due and payable, and whereas, there is now due and claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the date of this notice the sum of three thousand four hundred eight and 40-100 dollars, and no proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the lands therein described which sale will be made by the Sheriff of Polk County, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Crookston, in said county and state on the 13th day of October A. D. 1888, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the sum due on said mortgage together with taxes, if any, on said premises and seventy-five dollars attorneys fees therein stipulated to be paid in case of foreclosure and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated August 16th A. D. 1888.
The American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London (Limited.)
Mortgagee.
Pierce & Cromb,
Att'ys for Mortgagee. [18-24]

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston, Minn., Aug 14th, 1888.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston, on Sept. 27th 1888, viz: HOWARD A. MARSTON, H'd No. 11073, for the n½ ne¼ se¼ ne¼ ne¼ se¼, S. 17, T. 149, R. 44. He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz: T. J. Farden, J. W. McAnulty, Fowler Middleton, Tilden, Polk Co., Minn., H. Attix, Grove Park, Polk Co., Minn.

[18-23] H. H. Dickmann, Register.

MORTGAGE SALE

[First publication August 9th, 1888.]

WHEREAS WILLIAM M. ROSS AND Ella Ross his wife as mortgagors did on the 16th day of April A. D. 1887, duly execute and deliver to John Cromb of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, as mortgagee their mortgage bearing date of April 16th, 1887 whereby they mortgaged to said mortgagee, his heirs, executors and assigns, the following described land situated in the County of Polk, State of Minnesota, to-wit: The northeast quarter (ne¼) and the west half (w½) of the southeast quarter (se¼) of Section twenty-four (24), Township one hundred and fifty (150) north, Range forty-seven (47) west, containing two hundred and forty acres, to secure the payment of the sum of five thousand eight hundred twenty and 67-100 dollars according to the conditions of one certain promissory note bearing even date with said mortgage and made and delivered by said mortgagor William M. Ross, to said mortgagee, and payable to said mortgagee or order. Which said mortgage was on the 16th day of April A. D. 1887, at 3:40 p. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk in book "22" of mortgages on page 134, and whereas the said John Cromb mortgagee, for value received, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1887, duly assigned the aforesaid note and mortgage and the debt secured thereby to the Merchants National Bank of Crookston, Minnesota, which said assignment was in writing under seal, duly witnessed and acknowledged and thereafter on the 16th day of September 1887 at 2 p. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said Polk County, in book "32" of mortgages on page 420, and whereas the said Merchants' National Bank of Crookston did for value received on the 16th day of September A. D. 1887, duly assign the aforesaid note and mortgage and the debt secured thereby to Joseph Kelso, of Belvue, Iowa, which said assignment was in writing under seal duly witnessed and acknowledged, and thereafter on the 17th day of September 1887 at 10 a. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, in book "32" of mortgages on page 425, and whereas for value received the said Joseph Kelso did on the 23d day of May A. D. 1888, duly assign the aforesaid note and mortgage and the debt secured thereby to the Merchants' National Bank of Crookston, Minnesota which said assignment was in writing under seal duly witnessed and acknowledged, and thereafter on the 1st day of June A. D. 1888, at 10 a. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, in book "36" of mortgages on page 194, and

Whereas default has been made in the payment of the sum of five hundred eighty-nine and 91-100 dollars which is claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the date of this notice and the further sum of four thousand five hundred sixty-six and 67-100 dollars with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent per annum from April 16th, 1888, yet to become due, and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the lands therein described which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Polk County, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Crookston, in said county, on the 8th day of October A. D. 1888, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt and interest and the taxes, if any, and fifty dollars attorney's fees therein stipulated to be paid in case of foreclosure and the disbursements allowed by law subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

Dated Aug 1st A. D. 1888
The Merchants' National Bank of Crookston,
Assignee of Mortgagee.
Pierce & Cromb, Att'ys for
[16-21] Assignee of Mortgagee.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk,—ss.
In Probate Court. Special term, held Aug. 2d, 1888.

In the matter of the guardianship of Roman Anderson, Julia Anderson, Peter Anderson and Aber Anderson, minors.

On reading and filing the petition of Martha Anderson guardian of said minors, representing among other things, that the said wards, are seized of certain real estate in the County of Polk, and State of Minnesota, and that it is necessary and desirable that a part of the same should be sold, and praying for license to sell the same; and it appearing to the court, from said petition, that it would be for the benefit and best interest of the said minors to sell said real estate at private sale.

It is ordered and directed, That the next of kin to said ward, and all persons interested in said estate, appear before the Judge of this court, on Thursday the 20th day of September A. D 1888, at 2 o'clock p. m., at the Probate office in Crookston, in said county, then and there show cause, (if any there shall be) why license should not be granted for the sale of said real estate, according to the prayer of said petition.

And it is further ordered, That a copy of this order shall be published for four successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, the last of which publications shall be at least fourteen days before said day of hearing, in The Polk County Journal a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said county.

Dated at Crookston, this 2d day of August A. D. 1888.

By the court.
C. O. CHRISTIANSON,
[16-18] Judge of Probate.

[First publication Aug. 9th, 1888.]

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk,—ss.
In Probate Court. Special term, August 8th, 1888.

In the matter of the estate of Henry M Johnson (Highmore) deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of I. Tharaldsen administrator of the estate of Henry M. Johnson (Highmore) deceased, representing among other things, that he has fully administered said estate, and praying that a time and place be fixed for examining and allowing his account of his administration, and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to heirs.

It is ordered, That said account be examined, and petition heard by the Judge of this Court, on Friday the 31st day of August A. D. 1888, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Probate office in Crookston in said county.

And it is further ordered, That notice thereof be given to all persons interested, by publishing a copy of this order for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in The Polk County Journal a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said county.

Dated at Crookston this 8th day of August A. D. 1888.

By the Court.
C. O. CHRISTIANSON,
[16-18] Judge of Probate.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston, Minn., July 24th, 1888.

Complaint having been entered at this office by Hans Christopherson against Louis St. John for abandoning his Homestead Entry No. 11,712, dated April 1st, 1886, upon the e½ sw¼ and lots 3 and 4, S. 18, T. 153 n. R. 46 w. in Polk County, Minn., with a view to the cancellation of said entry, the said parties are hereby summoned to appear at this office on the 14th day of Sept. 1888, at 10 o'clock a. m., to respond and furnish testimony concerning said alleged abandonment.

[14-19] L. K. Aaker, Receiver.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston, Minn., July 11th, 1888.

Complaint having been entered at this office by Peter O. Berggrew against John Scarborough for failure to comply with law as to timber culture entry No. 1259, dated June 17th, 1879, upon the southwest quarter S. 26, T. 154 n. R. 49 w., in Polk County, Minn., with a view to the cancellation of said entry, contestant alleging that the said John Scarborough did not break or plow nor caused to be broken or plowed any part of said land the first year after the date of said entry, that there has been no improvements of any kind made on said land since the date of said entry, the said parties are are hereby summoned to appear at this office on the 11th day of Sept. 1888, at 9 o'clock a. m., to respond and furnish testimony concerning said alleged failure.

[14-19] H. H. Dickmann, Register.

THE PERKINS WIND-MILL.

BUY THE BEST AND SAVE MONEY

It has been in constant use for 19 years, with a record equaled by none. We give each purchaser a

WARRANTY

as follows: We warrant the Perkins Wind Mill, sold this day, to out-last and do better work than any other make, and not blow down, unless the Tower goes with it, and against any wind that does not disable buildings in the vicinity.

We manufacture both Pumping and Geared Mills and carry a full line of Wind Mill Supplies.

AGENTS WANTED.

Send for Catalogue, Circulars and Prices.
Address PERKINS WIND MILL & AX CO.
Mishawaka, Ind.

THE OFFICE OF
COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS
WIL BE OPEN
EVERY SATURDAY.
RESIDENCE—With D. N. Taylor, Esq., Broadway.

S. L. COLLINS

PROPRIETOR OF

MAIN STREET
Livery, Feed and Sale Stables

CORNER MAIN AND FOURTH STS, WEST SIDE,

Crookston, - - - - Minnesota.

Horses bought and sold on commission.
Everything neat and nobby.
Feeding a specialty.

FINE HEARSE
in connection which I will attend to in person.

1878. 1888.

Fontaine & Anglim,

Have the largest and most complete stock of goods in the city, consisting, in part, of
CARPETS AND HOUSE FURNISHING GOODS, DRY GOODS, NOTIONS
BOOTS AND SHOES, GENTS', YOUTH'S AND CHILDREN'S CLOTHING
STAPLE AND FANCY GROCERIES.

Pries very Low. Farmers' Produce Taken in Exchange.

THE CROOKSTON AUCTION AND COMMISSION STORE.

SECOND HAND GOODS of all kinds Bought and Sold. Also Sold on Commission. We are prepared to sell Stock and Machinery at our Yards in Crookston, or to attend Sales anywhere in Polk County at Reasonable Rates. Orders solicited. It will be to your interest to see our stock of

SECOND-HAND AND NEW GOODS

And get prices before purchasing elsewhere.

BERTHIAUM AND MICHAUD, Proprietors,
BROADWY, - - CROOKSTON, MINN.,
Between Robert and Fletcher Streets.

THE BEE HIVE!

Established in 1879.

HACK & GALLASCH

Invite Your Attention to Their New

SPRING AND SUMMER STOCK

OF EVERYTHING IN THE LINE OF

DRY GOODS, NOTIONS, BOOTS AND SHOES.
HATS AND CAPS.

IN OUR GROCERY AND PROVISION DEPARTMENT

Will be found a Full and Complete Stock of Fresh and Reliable Goods which we can sell at the very Lowest Living rates. We point with pride to our CHINA DEPARTMENT and challenge any competitor to beat it. Goods delivered free to any part of the city. When in need of anything in our line, call and see

HACK & GALLASCH. COR. MAIN & SECOND STS.

D. H. BATES,

DEALER IN

Lumber, Building Paper,
PAINTS, OILS,
DOORS, WINDOWS, AND MOULDINGS

A O

FARM MACHINERY

AGENT FOR THE CELEBRATED

MILWAUKEE HARVESTER,
(FORMERLY THE DENNETT,)
AND THE CELEBRATED
WINONA PLOWS
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

☞ You will find it to your advantage to call when need of anything in my line.

D. H. BATES,
CARMAN, - - - - MINN

MONTANA SHORT LINE.

When traveling every one should consider well the questions of economy, comfort, safety and speed, these questions being of the same importance in a journey of an hour as in one of several days' ride. An examination of the map will convince anyone that this is the most direct route to and from all the principal points in Central and Northern Minnesota, Dakota and Montana. Our equipment and time are excellent. Our rates are the lowest, but this fact is something which speaks for itself. Definite figures and maps can be obtained by applying to any Agent of the Company, or the General Passenger Agent.

St. Paul Minneapolis Manitoba Railway.

The following are a few of the Principal Points reached via this Line:

St. Cloud, Sauk Centre, Fergus Falls, Crookston, St. Vincent, Hutchinson, Paynesville, Morris, Appleton and Breckenridge, Minn.; Watertown, Aberdeen, Ellendale, Wahpeton, Fargo, Grand Forks, Grafton, Devils Lake, Bottineau and Buford, Dakota; Glasgow, Dawes (Ft. Belknap), Assinniboine, Ft. Benton, Great Falls, Helena and Butte, Montana; Winnipeg, Manitoba, and all Pacific Coast Points.

Parties seeking farms or business locations will find unusual opportunities for both on this line in Northern Dakota and Montana, also in Minnesota where the Company has for sale at low prices and on favorable terms 2,000,000 acres of excellent farming, grazing and timber lands. For maps and other information address,

J. Bookwalter, Land Commissioner. C. H. Warren, Gen'l Pass. Ag't.
St. Paul, Minn.
A. Manvel, Gen'l Manager. W. S. Alexander, Gen'l Traffic Manager.

FROM ST. PAUL No. 3 daily	Miles.	STATIONS.	TO ST. PAUL. No 4 d'ly
5:33 p. m.	0	Lv...St. Paul...Ar	7:50 a. m.
6:10 p. m.	11	...Minneapolis...	6:25 "
10:15 a. m.	[illegible]	...Crookston...	5:35 p. m.

No. 3. Through sleeper to Fergus Falls, Crookston and Winnipeg.
No. 4. Through sleeper from Winnipeg, Crookston and Fergus Falls.

CROOKSTON AND MINOT—Trains leave Crookston daily, Sundays excepted at 10:20 a. m. and arrive at Crookston from Minot at 5:15 p. m. Sundays excepted.

ST. HILAIRE BRANCH—Trains leave Crookston Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 10:45 a. m. arriving in St. Hilaire at 12:15 p. m. Leave St. Hilaire same days at 2:00 p. m. arriving in Crookston at 4:00 p. m.

A. Manvel, Gen'l Manager.
C. H. Mix, Agent.
C. H. Warren, Gen'l Pass. Agent
W. S. Alexander, Traffic Manager.

Northern Pacific RAILROAD.

The New Route Between

Grand Forks,
AND
St. Paul,
Minneapolis,
Duluth,

And all points East. The direct line to
Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, British Columbia, Puget Sound and Alaska.

EXPRESS TRAINS DAILY,

To which are attached Pullman Palace Sleepers and Elegant Dining Cars. On overland trains, Emigrant Sleepers Free. The only line

YELLOWSTONE PARK.

TIME SCHEDULE.

Depart West Bound.		Arrive East Bound.
4:50 p. m.	St. Paul	7:50 a. m.
4:50 "	Minneapolis	6:35 "
3:15 "	Duluth	7:45 "
8:40 "	Brainerd	1:15 a. m.
1:00 a. m.	Winnipeg Junction	8:50 p. m.
2:31 "	Twin Valley	7:25 "
3:27 "	Fertile	6:23 "
4:01 "	Tilden	6:05 "
4:35 "	Red Lake Falls, Depart	5:30 "
	Arrive	5:10 "
5:25 "	South Euclid	4:29 "
5:35 "	Buffington	4:20 "
5:44 "	Keystone	4:05 "
6:25 " Ar.	Grand Forks Le.	3:35 "
6:45 " De.	Grand Forks Ar.	1:30 "
7:12 "	Kelly's	3:06 "
7:27 "	Mekinock	2:50 "
7:42 "	Bean	2:37 "
7:31 "	Gilby	2:28 "
8:02 "	Johnstown	2:17 "
8:15 "	Forest River	2:05 "
8:35 "	Grafton	1:28 "
7:33 "	Drayton	12:50 "
10:15 "	Arrive....Pembina....Depart	11:35 a. m.

☞ Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars between Grand Forks and St. Paul. Dining Cars on west bound trains. Coupon Tickets on sale to all points South, East and West. For full information as to time, rates, address

W. E. Jermaine, Ticket Agent, Grand Forks.
Chas. S. Fee, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

CLEVELAND HOUSE,

R. BURKHARDT, Prop.

Handy to Depot.
Handy to Post Office.
Handy to Land Office.
Handy to Stables.
Handy to Court House.

The most convenient Hotel to any business house and to deal with of any Hotel in the city. Give me a call. Terms $1. Yours truly,

Rudy Burkhardt.

A. P. HOLAND

(Successor to S. S. Johnson.)

PHOTOGRAPHER

COPYING and ENLARGING

in all sizes and first-class work guaranteed.

PICTURE FRAMES

made to order, on short notice.

Any work in my line neatly and promptly executed at lowest living rates.

☞ GIVE ME A CALL.

Studio opposite Post Office,
Robert Street, - - - Crookston, Minn.

The Polk County Journal.

H. E. COOKE, Editor and Proprietor. DEVOTED TO THE WELFARE OF POLK COUNTY. TERMS---$1.50 Per Annum

VOL. XII. CROOKSTON, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, AUGUST 30, 1888. NO. 19

Polk County Journal.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES,

One Dollar and Fifty Cents, if paid in advance, to any address inside of Polk County. If outside of Polk County 15 cents must be added for postage. If not paid in advance $2 per annum to any address.

ADVERTISING RATES.

SPACE.	1 w.	2 w.	3 w.	1 m.	3 m	6 m.	1 year
¼ Inch	$.50	$1 00	$1 25	$1 50	$3 00	4 50	$ 6 00
1 inch	75	1 25	1 75	2 00	4 50	6 00	10 00
2 inches	1 50	2 25	3 00	3 50	6 50	9 50	15 00
3 inches	1 75	2 75	3 75	4 50	9 50	13 50	20 00
4 inches	2 50	3 50	4 50	5 50	10 00	18 00	25 00
5 inches	3 00	4 00	5 00	6 00	12 50	20 00	30 00
¼ column	3 50	4 50	5 50	6 50	15 00	25 00	35 00
½ column	6 00	7 50	10 00	12 00	25 00	35 00	60 00
column	9 50	12 00	15 00	18 00	35 00	60 00	100 00

Entered at the Post Office in Crookston as Second Class matter.

MILLER, FOOTE & SWEATT,
ATTY'S-AT-LAW,
McKinnon Block, - - - rookston, Minn.

THE PIONEER
HARNESS SHOP,
M. RAUE BUEHLER, Proprietor.
A full supply of everything kept by the trade.
Cor of Broadway and Third Sts,
CROOKSTON, - - MINN

D. H. FISK,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND LOAN AGENT.
Collections a Specialty.
FERTILE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA.

P. C. SCHMIDT,
ATTORNEY AT LAW. | MONEY TO LOAN
Crookston - Minn

H. STENEERSON,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
Crookston, Minn.

FRANK IVES,
Attorney and ounsalor at Law,
AND
Solicitor of Patents and Pensions,
CROOKSTON, MINN.

Having special arrangements with one fthe most reputable and responsible firms of Patent Lawyers in Washington, I can offer better inducements to inventors than can be secured elsewhere, and absolute certainty against "leakage" of valuable facts pertaining to business entrusted to my care.

A. H. DUNLOP, M. D.,
Graduate McGill University, Montreal.
LICENSED COLLEGE PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON QUEBEC.
Office on Second Street, Crookston.

M. M. VAN DYKE
Physician and Surgeon,
Office corner of Main and Second Streets,
CROOKSTON, - - MINNESOTA

A. A. JUST, M. D.,
Homoeopathic Physician and Surgeon,
Office on Broadway, east side, opposite Wm. Anglim's residence.

A. C. WILKINSON,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
(Successor to R. A. Wilkinson,)
Room 5, Furnet Block } Crookston, Minn.

M. LeGUEE,
Veterinary Surgeon.
Residence and office on Jerome's Addition.
CROOKSTON, - - MINN.

G. G. HENAULT
Practical Dentist,
SECOND STREET,
CROOKSTON, - - MINN

OFFICE IN DOBSON'S BLOCK,
Over Mrs. Bangs' Fashionable Millinery Store.
All work in my line skilfully and promptly performed. Give me a call.
G. G. HENAULT.

MINNESOTA HOUSE,
(FORMERLY BOX HOUSE.)
ONE-HALF BLOCK FROM DEPOT.
WM. HEIDRICH, - - Proprietor.
Having rented this Popular House and thoroughly re-fitted and re-furnished it throughout, I am now prepared to meet the wants of all who want good and cheap accommodations.
Farmers custom speciallyinvited,
Terms $1.00 per Day.

Fall Stock
OF Men's,
Boys'
AND Children's CLOTHING
ARRIVING
DAILY!
Desirable
Styles!
Standard
Quality!
Lowest
Prices!
It Pays to Trade at the
C. O. D.
Clothing House.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For President,
BENJ. HARRISON
Of Indiana.

For Vice President,
LEVI P. MORTON,
Of New York.

For Member of Congress, 5th District,
SOLOMON G. COMSTOCK,
Of Clay and Polk Counties.

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

A Republican State Convention for the state of Minnesota will be held on Wednesday, September 5th, 1888, in Market Hall, in the city of St. Paul, at 12 o'clock, noon, for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following positions:

Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.
One Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.
Governor.
Lieutenant Governor.
Secretary of State.
State Treasurer.
Attorney General.

And for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the convention.

All citizens who believe in the principles of the Republican party; who desire its success, and who will support the candidates nominated by the National Republican Convention held in Chicago, June 19th, 1888, are invited to co-operate in the election of delegates.

The counties are entitled to the following number of delegates and an equal number of alternates.

Aitkin	4	Martin	4
Anoka	5	Meeker	6
Becker	5	Mille Lacs	3
Beltrami	2	Morrison	4
Benton	3	Mower	7
Big Stone	4	Murray	4
Blue Earth	9	Nicollet	5
Brown	5	Nobles	4
Carlton	3	Norman	4
Carver	4	Olmsted	7
Cass	5	Otter Tail	11
Chippewa	4	Pine	3
Chisago	6	Pipe Stone	4
Clay	5	Polk	9
Cook	2	Pope	5
Cottonwood	4	Ramsey	20
Crow Wing	4	Redwood	4
Dakota	6	Renville	6
Dodge	5	Rice	8
Douglas	6	Rock	4
Faribault	6	St. Louis	10
Fillmore	9	Scott	3
Freeborn	7	Sherburne	4
Goodhue	12	Sibley	4
Grant	4	Stearns	6
Hennepin	38	Steele	6
Houston	6	Stevens	4
Hubbard	2	Swift	4
Isanti	5	Todd	5
Itasca	2	Traverse	4
Jackson	5	Wabasha	6
Kandiyohi	7	Wadena	4
Kanabec	8	Waseca	5
Kittson	3	Washington	7
Lac qui Parle	6	Watonwan	4
Lake	3	Wilkin	3
Le Sueur	5	Winona	8
Lincoln	4	Wright	8
Lyon	5	Yellow Medicine	5
McLeod	4
Marshall	4	Total	150

St. Paul, July 20, 1888.

JOHN S. PILLSBURY, Chairman.
JOEL P. HEATWOLE, Secretary.

The Chairman or Secretaries of the different county conventions will please report to the Secretary of the State Central Committee, the names and post office address of the delegates and alternates, and also the county committeemen. If this is done promptly it will be of great service to the party, and insure prompt and active work. The State Committee request this kind favor of each county convention.

A Republican Legislative Convention for the 45th Legislative District will be held at the Court House, in the City of Crookston, County of Polk, and State of Minnesota, on Tuesday September 25th, A. D. 1888, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon for the purpose of placing in nomination a representative for said district in the State Legislature and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the convention.

The committee have adopted the basis of representation as fixed by the Republican State Convention under which the counties are entitled to the following number of delegates:

Beltrami	2
Kittson	3
Marshall	4
Norman	4
Polk	9

By order of Committee.
Dated at Crookston Aug. 16th, 1888.
H. E. IVES, Secretary. JOHN CROMB, Chairman.

To Anti-Saloon Republicacans.

Important Assistance that Every Republican can Render by Prompt Action.

The Anti-Saloon Republican National Committee has removed its headquarters to No. 1 Broadway, New York City, and desires to hear from temperance republicans in every part of the country in reference to all matters of interest in their respective localities. It is especially anxious to know who are willing to do something to help the cause of temperance and republicanism. All such will oblige by writing at once, giving a short statment of the condition of sentiment in their respective localities, with suggestions as to what should be done to improve matters. Mere common scolds and pessimistic grumblers will oblige by not trespassing on our time.

ALBERT GRIFFIN,
Ch'n Anti-Saloon Rep. Nat'l Com.
No. 1 Broadway, N. Y. City. [10-tf]

They Probably Don't Know.

Prohibitionists do not Seem to be Aware of Their Opportunity.

Minneapolis Tribune.

The third party's opportunity has come. There in now before the Senate a proposition for congress to submit to the people a constitutional amendment, giving that body authority to absolutely prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in the United States. The proposition was submitted by Senator Blair, and was authorized by all the members of the committee, democrats as well as republicans. This is just the goal the prohibition party is trying to reach. Do the prohibitionists know that the measure they are working for is already for the action of the senate? Do they know that there is a grand opportunity for them to show their sincerity and moral strength? Nothing has appeared in the Northwestern Prohibitionist or in the Voice showing that either of the papers had been informed of this measure, now before congress, and which is so vital to them. Cannot the political journals of the other parties enlighten them as to this measure, and show them that now is their golden opportunity?

O. P. C.

Ben of Indiana.

(Air—"John Brown's Body.")

Indiana's loyal son will lead us in the fight,
Indiana's soldier son will put the foe to flight,
Indiana's Harrison will conquer for the right,
As we go marching on.
Glory! shout the glad hosanna!
Glory! Ben of Indiana!
Trample down the collar and bandanna,
As we go marching on.

The Empire State in thunder tones repeats the battle call;
The Empire State is lead by one whose name is dear to all;
The Empire State with Morton hurls the cowards to the wall,
As we go marching on.

"Protection and free ballot!" cries our gallant Harrison!
Protection and the rights of man from Maine to Oregon!
Protection for Ame ica! Behold, the battle's won!
As we go marching on.

The collar of the sheriff and the red bandanna rag,
The shackles of free traders and the Bourbon party tag,
Shall never see the light again beneath our starry flag,
As we go marching on.

Under the Banner of Protection.

(Air—"Marching Thro' Georgia.")

Harrison and Morton are the heroes of our song,
Names that to the noblest of our patriots belong,
Names that herald victory and triumph over wrong.
Under the banner of protection

CHORUS.

Hurrah! Hurrah! we'll vote for Harrison!
Hurrah! Hurrah! from Maine to Oregon!
We'll carry every faithful State
And every doubtful one,
Under the banner of protection.

Harrison and Morton to America are true,
Not a breath disloyal either statesman ever drew;
Not for Johnny Bull's "free trade" did either ever sue.
Under the banner of protection.

Harrison the soldier fought in many a mortal fray;
Harrison the soldier honors both the Blue and Gray—
Fishing, though, he never went on Decoration Day—
Under the banner of protection.

Harrison the soldier wore a Union Army suit;
Harrison the soldier faced the murderous salute—
Even tho' he never shirked or hired a substitute—
Under the banner of protection.

Harrison the patriot in duty never lags;
Harrison the statesman never ponderously brags—
Never tries surrendering the Nation's battle-flags—
Under the banner of protection.

Harrison for President! the hero of our choice;
Harrison for President will make our hearts rejoice;
"Rally for Protection!" rings the music of his voice,
Under the banner of protection.

Harrison for President will honor soldiers true;
Harrison for President will take a soldier's view;
Never will he veto bills that grant the soldier's due,
Under the banner of protection.

J. B. Pinkham addressed the citizens of Crookston on Thursday evening last, at the Opera House. He is an easy and pleasant speaker and he handled the subject from the Third party standpoint in the most approved style. He dwelt at length upon the evils of the liquor traffic, and we think no one could find fault with his views upon that subject, for those evils are too well known to need discussion, and as long as he confined himself to that he got along very well—when he attempted to discuss the tariff question he revealed the cloven foot, showing his free trade tendencies plainly. He dwelt sparingly on the question of Women's Suffrage, probably knowing that it is not very popular, hereabouts. He could not refrain from abusing the republican party, (which, he said, had left him instead of him leaving it,) and attempted by witty sayings to blind the eye to the real questions at issue. We do not suppose he intended to utter a deliberate falsehood when he said the party had left him, but we must give him credit of knowing that the republican party never was a free trade party, never advocated women's suffrage, never placed a southern rebel on a par with the heroes of the revolutionery war, nor ever endorsed any of the cranky notions he advanced. But he is a very smart man, knows more than the combined wisdom of all parties, admits that himself, and of course could not tell a wrong story nor make a mistake by any possible means, so of course all he said must be gospel truth. If, as he intimated, it only requires an act of the Legislature to compel mankind to morality on the liquor question, why would not the same remedy be equally effective all 'round? We cannot see why it would not be fully as effective in the one case as the other. Now, we do not blame people for being thoroughly disgusted with the fruits of the liquor traffic, but what puzzles us is to see earnest, sensible men wasting their efforts in this fight. Knowing full well the utter hopelessness of their efforts; knowing that the adherents of the cause they profess to hate depend solely upon the very efforts the prohibitionists are making as their only hope of success, they still keep on working to perpetuate the liquor traffic, giving them a new lease of life for an indefinite period and manifesting toward the only friends they have or ever have had a spirit of the most bitter enmity. If they should join in with the republican party at this time they could help to make a gain in the right direction—take one step toward the accomplishment of their object, if no more; and ACCOMPLISH SOMETHING.

As they plan and work now they will never accomplish their point, for they can never attract a sufficient number to their peculiar tenets to ever elect a president. They seem to forget that men can be easier won than driven, and that to win they must drop their threats and bulldozing. No party was ever formed as they are attempting to form one, by arousing a spirit of antagonism, and sooner or later will they realize the force of this truth.

Need an Eye Opener.

Some one Should tell Them of the Error of Their Ways.

Minneapolis Tribune.

Cannot something be done to open the eyes of Christian temperance workers to the fact that the efforts of the prohibitionists are toward putting a democratic president in power for another four years of free trade doctrine and whisky rule? Can not some eloquent men and women be found whose earnest voices will speak to the hearts of all energetic temperance workers and show them how their desire to see the liquor traffic crushed can best be fulfilled? Prohibition will finally prevail—all great and just reforms eventually do—but it is being delayed by the present prohibition party. My temperance friends, will you not use your influence and votes to elect temperance senators and legislators, and put men of sound temperance principles in office? That will solve the problem, for then by wise legislation prohibition would soon be an accomplished fact. It was with real sorrow I read the attack of the Union Signal on Mrs. Ellen Foster, of Iowa, who, though an earnest white ribbon worker, had the moral courage to declare herself a staunch republican. She "dares to be wise," and the Signal says she must have ceased to be a W. C. T. U. Then to have a number of earnest women; and although the Signal is trying to work for "God and home and native land," it certainly is growing bigoted, narrow-minded, illiberal and too much of a political organ to accomplish the good it aims at. If that grand woman, Frances E. Willard, could only see the matter in this light how much good she could do. The most sanguine prohibitionist in his heart of hearts knows that his cause will not win for 20 years.

MARGARET DALREMPLE.

The Whole Case.

A Prohibitionist Gives a Sensible Talk About the Folly of Some People.

Minneapolis Tribune.

As a prohibitionist who is proud of the fact that he has not taken even a glass of cider for the last twelve years, and who has an abiding faith that the cause will ultimately overcome the many obstacles in its way and march on to a glorious victory, and as one who is willing to assist in doing all things honorable to bring about this consummation of our hopes, I come to you with a few thoughts, trusting you will duly consider them, without prejudice, as free citizens of a free country, with an eye single to the best interests of the entire nation.

Some people cannot see further than the ends of their noses. They get an idea into their heads, and no amount of argument, however conclusive—no amount of logic, however convincing, nor reasoning however clear can rid them of that one idea. We must remember that there are other grave questions to be decided in the coming campaign besides the question of prohibition. There is one great issue which is paramount to all others in importance. It is simply whether the government shall continue its wise policy of protection to American industries, American labor, and American homes; or whether we shall surrender all to the English monster "Free Trade," and allow our markets to be glutted with the products and the manufactures of cheap European labor.

It was this American system to which the immortal and far-seeing patriot and statesman, Henry Clay, devoted the best years of his life. A system that has met the hearty approval of the leading spirits of America from Washington down to the present time; and a system that has economized and built up the matchless industries of the nation and made us the wealthiest, the most powerful, the grandest and best government on the face of the earth. Can one predict the utter disaster that is said to follow a subversion of that system, the failure in business, the decline in manufactures, the decrease in values, the sacrifices of real estate, the ruinous sales that would be made, the low wages, low price of our products, and the general paralysis of American industries such as our nation experienced previous to the tariff enactment of 1824, only on a much larger scale. Now, then, shall we be blinded to our own interests? Shall we close our eyes and our ears against the plain truth of the matter, as presented to us this time? Can anything tangible be done, this fall for prohibition by voting for Gen. Fisk? What could we accomplish with a prohibition president without a prohibition congress? Would it not, after all, be better for us to concentrate our efforts in the different states, and when we have secured a goodly number of these for the cause of prohibition, pull the presidential string for all it is worth?

I believe it to be a fact that we weaken our cause by bringing presidential candidates into the field at this time. Thousands of men who are prohibitionists at heart, and would vote the ticket if there was a ghost of a show, now cling to the old parties, so that the vote on president does not begin to show our real strength. We profess to be greatly interested in the American home. As republican prohibitionists would we not, every one of us, infinitely rather have Gen. Harrison at the helm than Grover Cleveland? Harrison, the gallant soldier, the true patriot, the loyal statesman, the staunch temperance advocate, and whose home is the typical American home. The republican party contains a plank favoring temperance principles. The democratic party ignores us altogether. Why, in the last two years, the republican party has passed or attempted to pass laws regulating and restricting the liquor traffic in every Northern State excepting California, Nevada, Illinois and Wisconsin. Are these facts of any consequence to you in determining how to vote?

S. L. FRAZIER.

Granite Falls Tribune: Democracy is not as solid in the North as it is in the South. The Southerner knows no law governing this free country except democratic. He pays allegiance to no creed unless it has a democratic origin. While in the North even his party has a choice between its trusty and true adherents as exemplified not long ago in a convention that finally ratified the choice of the greatest political boss that the party in this state ever knew. They may connive and scheme, but when Michael Doran says, "Hi, there!" the party comes to order.

Duluth Daily News: We do not believe in weeping over the "poor workingman" and calling him a slave and decrying his oppression. We believe he should be given a fair chance and that his every right should be jealously guarded. That done it would be silly to treat him as a weakling incapable of self-support. We want men, not paupers. To that end they must consider themselves men, bear the burden of their own mistakes and be treated as men. Anything less is degradation, which the toilers should be first to resent.

Mankato Free Press: Mr. Frank Hurd and his Cobden club boodle is to be accompanied upon his Minnesota tour by Hon. Tommy Wilson. Hurd, who favors absolute free trade, and Wilson, who wants flax protected because some of the voters whose support he wants raise that article, going up and down the land together with their expenses paid by English gold, will make a beautiful object lesson of the tariff principles of the democratic party.

Mankato Review (dem.): Now the the democratic rows—unnecessary and mischievous though they were—are over, democrats should retire to the background and permit our republican friends to enjoy their own party cotillion. It is not improbable that if democrats are attentive spectators, profiting by what they see and hear, we may not only realize our past folly, but be willing to unite in fighting the common enemy, instead of wasting our energies and pending our time fighting each other.

The Minnesota Loan and Trust Co.
HAVE ESTABLISHED AN AGENCY AT CROOKSTON.
MONEY LOANED ON IMPROVED FARMS,
IN ANY PART OF THE RED RIVER VALLEY.
NO DELAY! NO BONUS!
Money Supplied the Moment Notes are Signed. Letters of inquiry promptly answered.
STEENERSON & McMANUS, Agents,
Two doors South of U. S. Land Office. CROOKSTON, MINN

ALWAYS ON THE WINGS OF TIME
And Ready for Business, to Serve Customers to the Best of their interest, at the Popular Jewelry Store of

C. H. SAAKE,

I am absolutely without a competitor; my store contains the Best Goods that can be obtained, and at prices that no other dealer can afford to sell at. My success is the best guarantee and the reward of good work, of good treatment, and the established fact that I have given full value for every dollar left with me. Be sure and call before buying elsewhere.

C. H. SAAKE,
The Jeweler, Main St., Opposite Merchants' Nat'l Bank.

We are established in Crookston TO STAY. We do not do business here this year to go away the next. In loaning money, as in other business, we have a character for fair dealing to sustain Call on us before going elsewhere. Remember all interest on our loans is payable at our office.
STEENERSON & McMANUS.

NEW CIGAR STORE,
SIGN OF THE BIG INJUN.
H. F. BROWN, Proprietor
Second Street,
CROOKSTON, - - - MINN.

Cigars of every known brand, from a cheroot of a 25 center. Cigarettes, Chewing and Smoking Tobaccos of all kinds, Snuff, Pipes to suit the fancy of all, from a corn-cob pipe to a meerschaum.
Particular attention is invited to our line of Meerschaum Goods. NONE FINER IN THE NORTHWEST.
Drop In and See the New Store!
H. F. BROWN.

NEW MEAT
MARKET
At Steenerson Bros. Old Stand, on Main Street,
SANDS BROTHERS, Prop's.
Having purchased this stand we have put in a large and complete stock of Fresh and Salt Meats of all kinds, secured the services of a thoroughly competent butcher, and are now ready to supply the Choicest Roasts and Steaks of Beef, Pork, Mutton, and everything in our line. We invite your patronage. Orders delivered when desired.
SANDS BRO'S, MAIN STREET.

THE SECOND HAND STORE
(Yvernault's Old Place,)
Main Street, - - Crookston, Minn,
KEEPS A FINE, LARGE STOCK OF
NEW FURNITURE,
At Prices Unrivalled in this market. Also a Large Stock of
SECOND HAND FURNITURE,
Little worn. Parties desiring to dispose of Old Furniture can exchange it with me for New Furniture at a Bargain, or I will Pay Cash for Call and see my stock and get prices
PETER GOTHIA.

Polk County Journal.

W. G. COOKE, Publisher.

CROOKSTON, MINN., AUGUST 30.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

'Round Home.

No. 1 Hard Wheat 73 cents.

The best goods for the least money at C. H. SAAKE's Jewelry Store.

Miss Josephine Sletton is up from Becker County visiting friends in the city.

See that new stock of nice fall clothing at the Boston One Price Clothing Store.

Our goods are always fresh. We guarantee satisfaction.

LILLY & HEIDRICK.

Mrs. J. M. Palmer and the little Misses Palmer were visiting friends in the city this week.

The Monarch Shirt is the best in the market. Found only at the Boston One Price Store.

New Goods are arriving daily, consisting of many new designs in all lines. Come and see them.

C. H. SAAKE, Jeweler.

M. R. Brown is building a large barn on his property on the corner of Broadway and Fourth Street.

Mike Leguee is engaged in the laudable effort of breaking a pair of fine bronchos for N. P. Stone.

It is thought by competent physicians that Kaiser will recover after purging his system of such a load of corruption.

Now is the time to buy fall and winter overcoats at the Boston One Price Clothing Store while you can get them cheap.

John Sullivan went over to Grand Forks on Sunday to attend the funeral of L. Gannaw's child which occurred on that day.

The chamber of commerce will meet on Tuesday evening at 8 sharp. Business of importance. All members requested to be present.

Remember the Andrews Opera Company, Wednesday evening, Sept. 5th. This company has been here before, and were well liked. Tickets at Berthiaume Jewelry Co's store on Robert St.

The intelligent compositor last week awarded a fat take to John Carter —$450 per M. for laying sidewalk. Had he paid any attention to decimals Johnny would only be entitled to $4.50 per M., and that was his bid

The Herald says that Col. Topping has taken possession of the Richardson house again and is now ready to greet all his old friends. "Top" is never so happy as when at the head of a good hotel and he is universally popular.

On Monday morning when Capt. Greenhalgh went down to the wharf he found the Mystic Swan sunk in less than 30 feet of water. The cause can not be ascertained until she is raised but the Capt. thinks some enemy hath done this with his little augur.

Mr. Jacob Stambaugh, of Youngstown Ohio, arrived in the city on Tuesday. Mr. S. was former resident of Polk County and still has business interests here. Says Ohio is going republican by a good-sized majority. Says the Third party movement will cut no great figure in Ohio.

See the new ad of the Boston One Price Clothing Store and call 'round and see what they can do for you. They have just received the largest stock of fall goods they ever brought to this market, have bought on prices that will allow them to give better bargains than ever before offered in the city. Do not fail to get their prices and see their styles before you purchase.

The Arditi Concert Company appeared in the opera house Monday, evening to a small house. In her recitations Miss Smith is always good; she is somewhat known in our city, having appeared before a Crookston audience several times. Minnie Bowen has a sweet, well-trained voice. Frank Juliot is an excellent harpist. Col. Gorgas remarked, after the entertainment: "I call it very good, well worth the fifty cents!"

On all loans we make, interest payable at our office in Crookston.

STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

The North Dakota Fair, which will be held at Grand Forks on Sept. 18th, 19th, 20th, 21st and 22d is replete with attractions of every description, among which will be the best display of stock ever made in the Northwest. The fair will close with a great sham battle on Saturday. Fare on all roads one cent per mile. The managment deserve great credit for their efforts to instruct and entertain the people of the Northwest.

Our boys and childrens department complete with all the novelties of the season. Parents will do well to look us over before purchasing.

C. O. D. Clothing House.

Prof. Casey was in the city two days last week. He expects to go and open school at Fisher on Monday next. The Prof. is a genius in his way and only lacks the influence of an helpmeet to make him complete. From sundry hints and innuendoes we have seen in the East Grand Forks Courier we should judge that the deficiency bids fair to be supplied at an early day. We leave the case with Bro. Knappen of the Bulletin, to watch over and care for.

Mrs. A. M. Childs returned, on Saturday, from St. Paul.

Do you like fresh, sweet butter? Go to Lilly & Heidrick's.

And e‧vs Opera Company, Wednesday evening, September 5th!

A large party of young men of the city spent Sunday at the Lake.

Mrs. Hanna, living south-west of the city, was quite seriously sick last week.

Miss Mary Milne has returned home, having completed her term of school.

A. Pilan, of Montreal, Canada, has accepted a position in the New York Store.

The Andrews Opera Company is said to be the best that travels. Don't fail to hear them next Wednesday evening.

W. C. Kelso took a trip to Hallock last week, going as far as Stephen, on his bicycle. He returned on Monday evening.

Miss Annie Nelson was baptised in the Baptist Church last evening. She leaves for the scene of her school work, this week.

If you want articles in the jewelry line, don't waste your money by going elsewhere, but act wisely by paying a visit to C. H. SAAKE, the Jeweler.

J. N. Bailey intends to take a trip (by team) from his farm at Thief River, to Sauk Centre, a distance of 250 miles.

Jack Greenhalgh is up from Brainerd visiting old friends. He has been firing on the N. P. for some months, and is doing well.

Dave Ross made the dangerous experiment of putting his hand through a window pane, which resulted in a very serious wound on the wrist.

Mrs. L. E. Powell, of River Falls, Wis., is visiting with her daughter, Mrs. N. P. Stone, who is also entertaining Miss Addrews, also from River Falls.

On Sunday evening Fr. Lawler preached an excellent memorial sermon on the death of Gen. Sheridan. Col. Cobham Post was invited and turned out in a body.

Col. Bemis arrived on Sunday looking several years younger. He says his trip proved very beneficial to his health. He had a good time and returns very much refreshed for his labors.

Last week the air was filled with rumors to the effect that track-laying would begin on the branch to Fosston within two weeks. They can't begin too soon to suit the average reader.

C. H. Bruce brought us a sample of Menshury barley, which is by far the finest we have seen this year. He also left a most beautiful boquet from the garden we mentioned a few weeks ago.

Harris & Glenn are putting a new foundation under the old Kretzschmar building on Second St., now owned by C. C. Utzinger. The building will be raised up and a good brick foundation put in. Their next job will be to move the county jail building down to court house square.

Tom Morris has returned from a visit to Duluth and Minneapolis and reports having had a splendid time. He saw most of our old-time citizens who now reside in Duluth, took in Barnum's circus and Haverly's minstrels and now feels better prepared to cope with the shifting scenes of life as he finds it in the Red River Valley.

We satisfy all our customers, we ask no bonus, and we pay over money on oans the moment notes are signed.

STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

Full line of hosiery, gloves, underwear in endless variety.

C. O. D. Clothing House.

For the past week all kinds of rumors have been flying about in relation to the extent of the damage sustained from frost, but from all that we can learn we are of the opinion that it will be found not as extensive as many are disposed o fear. While there is no doubt but that our crops have suffered somewhat from unfavorable weather, we have this consolation that the best wheat in the world this year is found in the Red River Valley, and while it is true that our crops have suffered some, it is not—as it is in many places, a total failure. In fact, so severe has been the losses elsewhere that one dollar per bushel for our wheat is freely predicted. Should we get that, or even 90 cents, the amount of money that our wheat would bring to the county would be as great in the aggregate as in former years, and 90 cent or one dollar wheat will have a tendency to attract attention to this great country and bring in capital for investment in our fertile soil, so that our condition is rich with promise far better than it would be had not other portions of the country suffered far more than we have. Another feature, bright with hope, is the prospects for booming prices for next year. The crop will be so universally short this year that the best efforts of the wheat producing portions of the world will be unable to produce the surplus of the past few years for several years to come, thus ensuring good prices for several years yet. We see no good reason why our farmers should be discouraged; on the other hand, we can see many reasons why they should be greatly encouraged in view of the future prospects. The greatest drawback of the past few years has been the lack of a good price for our wheat, and all that we need now is a few years of good prices to put this country in the foremost ranks of progress. It now looks as though this is what is about to happen, and if it does, all who have so patiently and persistently stuck to the country will be abundantly rewarded.

For nice, fresh groceries, go to Lilly & Heidrick's.

Francis has a trained dog for use in taking children's pictures.

The ladies of the Lutheran Church gave an ice cream festival last evening.

Judge and Arthur made the best time (12 seconds) on hose coupling Tuesday evening.

All persons afflicted with poor eyesight, can be benefitted at

C. H. SAAKE's Jewelry Store.

Mr. Anglim went below on Tuesday in response to a message from democratic headquarters.

R. G. Elwood's genial smile again greets our vision, after an absence of several months.

We learn that Syl. Brandt, well known in the Fifth ward, has returned from Wadena, bringing a wife with him.

Reports from country along the N. P. are to the effect that crops are not shelling out very well in that belt of country.

Best residence lots in the city and on your own terms; mind, ON YOUR OWN TERMS.

STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

The Mystic Swan was duly raised on Monday afternoon and now rides the bounding wave in all her former grace and beauty.

Our assortment of French, Scotch and domestic flannel shirts never more complete styles and prices correct.

C. O. D. Clothing House.

We are informed that D. A. Darby will have the management of the Kittson Elevator, this fall, with Lon Ralston as assistant.

We must and will sell that large stock of Gents' and Youths' clothing just received at the Boston One Price Clothing Store. Mosselin & Lindell, Prop's.

Judge Carruth tells our reporter that the 8th of September is to be the happy day of his life. If ever we wished any one joy, we wish him a liberal amount of that article.

A scrub nine met on the hill on Tuesday evening, ready to cope with the regular nine, but no regular nine appeared, and after a fruitless waiting, the boys returned much pleased with the courtesy shown them by the First

We refer to farmers to whom we have made loans as to our promptness in dealing with them. Ourold customers always recommend their neighbor to us.

STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

Fred Hall left on Tuesday evening's train for his old home in Illinois. It had been hinted that Fred intended to bring back a fair sharer of his joys and sorrows and our reporter tackled him about it. Fred remarked: "I cannot say, time will tell." All of which goes to show that congratulations are in order.

Judge Chistianson went down to Sand Hill country last week to look at his wheat crop, which he reports materially injured by drouth. He thinks he will have to depend mainly on his crop 'votes this fall which, if he don't get a black frost, will be a big one. He reports much damage to crops in that neighborhood—more from drouth than any other cause.

Overcoats for fall wear in Worsteds, Kerseys, Meltons. Look our line over while on your shopping tour.

C. O. D. Clothing House.

Francis, the photographer, is re-arranging and enlarging his studio, also having new backgrounds painted to order by the world-renowned scenic artist, Lafacite W. Leavy of New York. As soon as arranged, Mr. Francis will have the finest arranged and largest rooms in the Northwest, and as to work—he always leads. Call at his rooms and took over samples of work to be seen there.

Mrs. I. U. Jennings has just received new stock of f all millinery. [18-tf

We loan money to pay up railroad ands.

STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

The Andrews Opera Company, consisting of thirty artists, has been engaged by Mr. J. O. Mathews, to play here on Monday, Sept. 5th. The Andrews Opera Company is well known in Crookston, having performed two operas here last year and given entire satisfaction, even created universal enthusiasm. Since then the company has added several talented singers, and are, if possible, better prepared to render in a masterly manner the works of the great masters. Mr. Mathews deserves credit for his efforts to secure the highest order of attractions, and deserves general support, as he has given a guarantee to the company for a large sum.

Eli Steenerson, who has travelled extensively in Polk County, says that a conservative estimate of the damage to wheat in this county is about 25 per cent. On the west side he says there will be about an average crop—about 20 bushels per acre, as the grain is not appreciably damaged, but on the east side more damage has been done, some pieces being utterly ruined and many will not yield over 10 bushels per acre. He thinks the increase in price will more than counter-balance the loss, however. This view of the case is more conservative than that taken by some, who place the damage at 50 per cent. That our wheat is damaged somewhat there can be no doubt, but the probability is that the damage arises more from the drouth and other causes than rom frost. We are inclined to the opinion that Mr. Steenerson's view of the case is the nearest right, and that, with good weather from this on we shall realize as much from our wheat this fall as ever, if not very much more. If the prophecies of some, that wheat will bring a dollar prove true, we shall realize more out of this crop as a whole than ever before.

Ham Thompson opens out in Bradley's old stand on Main St.

I. Tharaldson is up from Wisconsin for a few days' visit. Says we have better crops than they have down there.

J. E. Bradley has his new quarters fixed up in elegant shape. He will have two bath tubs ready for business and being an experienced hand, is prepared to give any kind of bath desired.

We can loan money on better terms than anyone else in the valley. Money paid over the moment securities are executed. STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

S. F. Markham has been jealous of Brown's wooden Injun sign, and last week, in order to "lay over" Brown, he engaged a living specimen to sit upon a dry goods box in front of his store with a great big sign upon him telling the passer by where the best tobacco and cigars could be found. Mr. Lo endured it with the usual stoicism of his race until Markham went home to dinner, and then gently slid down and waddled off. The boy in charge noticed the change of base and hailed the "sign" which paid no attention to him so he went out and and dismantled his signship so far as the campaign hat and red bandana were concerned, and allowed Mr. Indian to hie him to his native heath.

We have only one note and mortgage we make a loan the day applied for, charge no bonus, and make interest payable at our office in Crookston.

STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

The G. N. Woods Company appeared on Friday to play a two nights engagement. Through some blunder their paper had not arrived in time to bill them, and as Col. Sanford was to speak that night, only a few appeared at the Opera House, and the play was postponed. On Saturday evening the company appeared in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." Mr. Wood took the part of Jackall and Hy-ena to perfection, while Miss Marguerette St. John played the parts of "Dr. Jekyll's daughter," "Mrs. Jellicose" and "the Strange Servant" excellently well. The play is not a strong one, neither is the support, the stars being about all there was worthy of mention. Mrs. Jenne entertained the audience with some fine samples of her skill on the piano, keeping her hearers awake during the long waits between acts.

Saturday night was an eventful one in police circles. About midnight a fellow was brought in with his skull cracked and bleeding profusely. He had been indulging in the ardent and somebody hit him a clip for luck. He was taken to the 1st ward police headquarters and placed under the tender care of "Dr." Mc Donald who soon brought him to a realizing sense of his done up condition. Shortly after, Arthur Dufresne rushed in saying that a burglar was at work in his residence, whereupon Dan seized his (!) rusty revolver and, followed by the whole department, rushed for the ensanguined field, but alas! The robber bold had fled, leaving naught but a broken window and a very much terrified maiden as evidence of his nefarious work. He had climed upon a lean-to and broken in the window to a room wherein the maiden had been dreaming the happy hours away in sweet unconsciousness of impending evil, but when Arthur lit out for the police the fellow somehow got the idea that his services in that house were no longer required and gave leg bail for appearance later. If Dan had only got a chance to speak to him with that revolver—but then, he didn't get the chance.

Farm loans completed and money paid over the day application is made.

STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

Coroner Shepard was summoned to go out to the town of Badger last Saturday to attend to a supposed case of suicide. With Mr. Geo. H. Holt he went out and found the body of Mr. John Mikkelson suspended by a rope to a rafter in his cabin. They cut him down and summoned a jury who rendered a verdict of temporary insanity. Mr. M. was a single man about 42 years old, living alone in a little cabin on his claim. He had about 14 head of stock and was in apparently good circumstances. In the cabin was found several crocks of butter ready for the market. Last winter some time deceased received an ax wound which put him under the doctor's care for some time and caused him a great deal of worry, which, it is supposed caused temporary insanity. From the position of the body it is supposed that he climbed upon his bunk, secured the end of the rope to a rafter, after tying it round his neck and stepped off into eternity. One foot rested upon the bunk and the other slightly touched the floor. Upon a sack of grain near the body rested a Norwegian hymn book and bible, open, which books it is supposed he was reading just before he committed the awful deed. It is said that his father is living in Marshall County.

MARRIED.

NELSON—SCHONMEYER.—In this city, Aug. 27th, 1888, by C. S. Spendley, Justice of the Peace, Mr. Peter Nelson to Miss Louisa Schonmeyer, all of this city.

New Tonsorial Parlors

—AND—

BATH ROOMS,

J. E. BRADLEY, Proprietor.

Having rented the shop recently occupied by Prof. Thompson, on Robert street, I have repapered and repainted the institution and am now prepared to welcome all my old patrons and friends. I have had a long experience in baths and am prepared to give any kind desired.

Everything in my line in the Latest Styles of the art. Give me a call.

100 100

CHOICE RESIDENCE LOTS

IN JEROME'S ADDITION!

Nearer the Business Center than any other Lots now for sale over there.

Above High Water Mark. Good Cellars and Good Wells

Easily Obtained. If you want a Building Lot, or if you desire a chance for investment where you can double your money inside of a year. It will pay you to look into this chance to

BUY AT YOUR OWN FIGURES, PRACTICALLY!

M. R. BROWN.

IT PAYS

TO TRADE WITH

BARNES & SLOCUM,

CASH DEALERS IN

Groceries and Crockery.

Get their prices and you will say so.

McKinnon Block, Robert St., Crookston

Stewart & Laurence,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

HARDWARE,

BAKER STEEL BARBED WIRE.

JEWETT'S STOVES AND RANGES,

Plymouth Binding Twine

Call and Examine

THE NICE STOCK OF Fall Clothing

—FOR—

GENTS'

AND YOUTHS'

—AT THE—

BOSTON

ONE PRICE Clothing Store,

At Prices LOWER than ever before quoted.

The Monarch Shirt, the best fitting, most fashionable and cheapest shirt in the market, found only at the Boston One Price Clothing House.

☞ We guarantee a perfect fit and satisfaction, being merchant tailors we can make any ready-made suit fit you or make you one that will.

Our stock is all new and complete and we are bound to sell it all this season if bargains are any inducement to buyers.

Before you purchase we invite you to call, look us over, and let us quote you prices. Remember the place,

Boston One Price Clothing Store,

COR. MAIN and ROBERT STS.

Mossefin & Lindell,

Proprietors.

THE CHANCE OF THE YEAR.

Everybody Should Visit the Twin Cities During the State Fair.

The Thirtieth State Fair of Minnesota begins September 10th, and closes September 15th. It will be the greatest exhibition ever made in the state, and as a means of education will be worth a visit. Secretary Denney has been working like a beaver since his appointment last winter, and now has the satisfaction of knowing that he will be able to present to the people of the state a model fair in every respect. He has been aided in every possible manner by President Merriam, the board of managers and the superintendents of the various departments, every one of whom have taken a greater personal interest in the fair this year than has ever been shown before. There is a good natured rivalry between the heads of the various departments in the matter of making the best exhibits, and the result will be a stupendous aggregation of live stock, dairy and agricultural products, arts and mechanics. The big barns will not be large enough to hold the cattle and horses, and the managers are perplexed as to what will be done with the overflow. Some of the finest live stock, in both horses and cattle, that have ever been exhibited by a state fair will be shown this year. Over 600 horses will be in the barns, and twenty-five per cent. more cattle than were ever before exhibited at a Minnesota fair. The country exhibits of agricultural products promises to be one of the greatest features. Supt. Bushnell, of the machinery department, says he will have the greatest show ever seen in Minnesota. The managers have provided in addition to the regular exhibits two great attractions which cannot fail to please everybody. One is the balloon ascension and drop by parchute by Prof. J. W. Price and Millie Viola. Two ascensions will be made during the week, one of them by Miss Viola. She will ascend in the balloon to the height of five thousand feet and then let herself loose and descend, clinging by her hands to the hoops of the parachute. It will be one of the most thrilling sights ever witnessed, as none before have ever attempted to make this descent. The great sham battle promises to surpass the exhibition of last year. The military at Fort Snelling, together with the Artillery Corps which will give a magnificent battery, there will be the three crack regiments of Minnesota: the Hibernian Rifles and the Sons of Veterans and many other military organizations of the state will take part in the battle. Gen. Ruger, and the officers of his staff, with the governor and his staff, and other celebreties, will review the troops just before the battle.

The railroads have made the very low rate of one fare for the round trip during the fair week only, and everybody who wishes to visit the twin cities and enjoy the great carnival of fun which will run there during that week cannot afford to miss this opportunity.

For Rent.

The Utzinger building on Second Street. Address, A. G. Gallasch.

For Sale Cheap.

One span of good work horses. Address, A. G. Gallasch.

Prohib. Convention.

Rev. S. Barteau was made chairman and John T. Watts secretary.

The convention then put the following resolution through the mill, viz:

RESOLVED—That in our action in this convention we pursue the same (dog-n-the-manger) wise dispassionate policy shown by the National and State Conventions and place in nomination only such men as are avowen supporters of the Prohibition party.

The suggestion in parentheses is our own, no doubt the committee would have used it had they stopped to reflect how well it would match their policy.

The following ticket was then put up:

Auditor, A. M. Childs; treasurer, A. P. Hanson; attorney, John Watts; register, J. M. Palmer; supt. schools, Ella M. Harrington; sheriff, E. G. Grefthen; court commissioner, M. Sanaker; surveyor, S. Kjolhoug; com. 1st dist., J. D. Knudson, 3d dist., J. P. Marcum, 5th dist., J. P. Cummings.

After doing very well so far the convention proceeded to "bust" their little resolution by endorsing Shepard the republican candidate for coroner. As they did not make any nomination this is an endorsement.

The following platform was adopted:

The prohibition party of Polk County, in convention assembled, acknowledging Almighty God as our leader, and our personal accountability to Him our incentive to faithfulness in His service, hereby endorse without reservation the declaration of principles announced by the national convention at Ind ianapolis June 1st, 1888, and also the candidates for president and vice-president which they presented for our support. And yet more emphatically would we assert our belief, and in view of the fact which is universally conceded by every honest, intelligent person, that the liquor traffic and the drinking saloon are the most potent enemies of everything which tends to the enlightenment and exaltation of our nation and of every individual of the nation. The speedy and effectual prohibition and destruction of this evil is a matter of far greater consequence than any other question now at issue in American politics; and in this belief we have separated ourselves from the other political parties with which we have formerly affiliated, and array ourselves as the unswerving enemies of this wholesale destroyer of our national prosperity and would-be invader of our domestic peace.

We unhesitatingly assert that all laws, which extend to the traffic any protection or encouragement whatever are absolutely wrong and without excuse, and should be at once repealed. We maintain that all license of this traffic is permissive in its character and not restrictive, even though it may fix a limit to its permission. And that no price, however high, is sufficient to justify the issuance of permission to any one to deal out the damning, soul destroying, misery creating poison to human beings.

We would not ignore or minify the importance of other quesoions and issues which agitate the minds and demand the attention of all good citizens, the most salient of which are noticed in our national platform hereinbefore referred to. But we claim that the wise and effectual settlement of this one supreme question, will necessarily go far toward relieving other questions and issues of their perplexity and difficulty, and render their solution much more simple and plain.

And that any party which has for its aim and object the highest possible good of humanity, may safely be entrusted with the affairs of nation and state.

And pledging our party to a faithful discharge of all the duties and an honest and economic management of all the trusts which may be committed to it, we call upon all conscientious men of either party whose views are in harmony with these principles, to unite with us in this important struggle, regardless of party demand or dictation, remembering that no political party is infallible or immortal, however much we have labored with it and loved it when it was actively grappling with the live issues of the day and seeking to benefit mankind.

Our city schools reopen on Monday, September 3d, with the following excellent corps of teachers:

Superintendent—John Moore.

Central School—Mr. Edgar L. Porter, Miss Kate Campbell, Miss Maggie Brown, Miss Mary Towey, Miss Evelyn Hall, Miss Anna Moore, Miss Gertie Wright.

Second Ward School—Miss Laura Laumann, Miss Sophie Aaker.

Fourth Ward School—Miss Hattie Noyes, Mrs. Cynthia Hitchcock.

Fifth Ward School—W. F. Hitchcock.

Hill School—Mrs. Wm. Marin.

Minneapolis Exposition.

The St. P. M. & M. R'y will sell excursion tickets to Minneapolis for the exposition at one fare for the round trip, on the following dates: Aug. 21st, 23, 25th, 28th and 30th, Sept. 1st, 4th, 6th, 18th, 20th, 22d, 25th, 27th and 29. Tickets will be good to return to destination until Monday following date of sale. Tickets will also be sold every day from Sept. 8th to 15th inclusive to St. Paul or Minneapolis at one fare for the round trip, good to return to destination one day after being stamped at St. Paul or Minneapolis, but not later than Sept. 17th. Tickets will include admission coupon tickets at 25 cents each; this amount will be added to railroad rates. For full particulars apply to local agent or F. I. Whitney, G. P. & T. A., St. Paul., Minn.

Sealed Bids.

CROOKSTON, Minn., Aug. 14, 1888.

Sealed bids will be received by the City Council of the City of Crookston until Aug. 31st, at 6 p. m., for plans, specifications and bids for building a hose and bell tower 25x30 feet at base, adjoining the City Hall of the City of Crookston.

By order of City Council,

JOHN PATERSON,

City Clerk.

Call at Mrs. E. E. Bangs' Millinery Parlors for Mrs. Ozias' Celebrated Orange Cream for the toilet. [14-tf]

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

Dakota's Republican Convention Assembles at Watertown.

Liberal and well directed efforts had made Armory opera house a bright and patriotic place for the holding of Dakota's mammoth convention. The eighty-seven counties were designated by banners, streamers of bunting floated from the ceiling and on the walls were many mottoes.

Harrison Allen, chairman of the territorial central committee called the convention to order. After prayer by the Rev. E. S. Updyke of Brookings the convention proceeded to elect a temporary chairman, and after considerable balloting Nash of Beadle county was elected. The convention then adjourned till 7 o'clock in the evening.

EVENING SESSION.

The evening session opened with a great deal of brass band and a larger deal of uncertainty. W. C. Arnold of Beadle moved a committee of nine on credentials and it was carried, whereupon, after a decent amount of delay, Chairman Nash named the following, (taking the list out of his vest pocket):

W. C. Arnold, Beadle; Sidney Mann, Kingsbury; O. E. Bassford, Spink; W. S. Dodge, Cass; F. Lococque, Douglas; H. D. Hanson, Deuel; J. W. Lawler, Pennington; A. M. Elliot, Turner; C. A. Van Norman, Barnes.

The committee on permanent organization was also made to consist of the following:

T. Huntington, Day; R. Buchanan, Minnehaha; G. F. Goodwin, Ransom; George F. Hopp, Brookings; C. E. Boyden, Codington; Dan Yorkey, Walsh; F. Baldwin, Stutsman; J. S. Kelly, Beadle; J. Allen, Turner.

The nine on resolutions are these:

A. Thomas, Kingsbury; Eugene Huntington, Day; A. J. Edgerton, Davison; T. E. Camburn, Brown; John H. King, Pennington; Alex Hughes, Burleigh; A. W. Jonson, Hughes; M. Hankinson, Richland.

SECOND DAY.

The day was consumed in settling the rights or supremacy in the Black Hills, and, as usual, Judge Moody is a victor. The fight before the convention on the contesting delegations lasted for four hours and a half, and was one which few of the younger states of the union could have equaled in the ability displayed. But the majority of sixty-three for Moody does not mean that Mr. Gifford is a sure winner. The Moody men had the equities clearly with them, and the others the technicalities, and the convention preferred equity to routine. Gifford says he has 200 delegates and is confident. Allen claims to be in better shape than ever before, and Campbell, Palmer and others say they can see no change in the situation warranting a prediction in favor of any one. Matthews is believed to be weaker, on account of hostility Central Dakota has engendered, and Grigsby is in about the status. The resolutions are regarded with high favor and the platform is undoubtedly calculated to win votes from farmers, free traders, revenue reformers, Prohibitionists and all the rest of them. There is a possible chance now that a final adjournment may come with the end of the day. The nominee by the central committee alone remains to be decided.

The credentials committee concluded their labors at 5 in the evening after a good deal of hard and fruitless work. Judge Moody spoke for an hour in behalf of his delegation, while Edwin Van Cise and Judge W. E. Church did the talking for the Bullock contingent. After consideration, Messrs. Arnold of Beadle, Mann of Kingsbury, Fowler of Pennington, Elliot of Turner and Lecocque of Douglas, a majority of the committee, decided upon reporting in favor of the Moody delegation as having all the equities in their favor. The minority, consisting of Messrs Bassford of Spink, Dodge of Cass, Horson of Duel and Van Wormer of Barnes, decided to present a report in favor of the Bullock men, and the North Dakota hostility to Judge Moody had much to do with their action. Prior to the convention a large number of Scandinavians met and formed.

The platform was reported as follows, and adopted:

THE PLATFORM.

The Republicans of North and South Dakota in convention assembled, hereby publish and declare:

First—That the present Democratic administration at Washington, emulating the present Tory administration in the government of Ireland, has maintained and exercised a tyranny over this territory unjustified, unwarranted and subservient of the privileges of the founders of the republic in denying us admission into the Union of states for the sole and only reason that a majority of our people differ with the administration upon the political issues of the day.

Second—That we arraign the present governor of this territory for prostituting his high office to personal and ambitious ends and purposes; that he maintains a perfect indifference to the wants of the people whom he rules; that he encourages large and unwise appropriations; that he threatens to veto measures unless the legislature shall be subservient to his will; that his appointees, in many cases, are men who have no qualifications for office, but are his personal retainers, supported at the public expense.

Third—That we hail with joy and pride the action of the late national Republican convention, and recognize in Gen. Harrison a patriotic soldier, a wise and safe statesman and the early and earnest friend of Dakota; and recognize the Hon. Levi P. Morton an eminent statesman and philanthropist, a true and tried Republican.

Fourth—That by every precedent established in the history of the admission of new states into the Union, by the rights guaranteed under the constitution and the laws of the United States, it is the duty of congress to admit North Dakota and South Dakota into the sisterhood of states, and the refusal by a Democratic house to so admit is a violation of the duties and obligations of its members, and we hereby reiterate our unalterable opposition to admission as a whole.

Fifth—That we, as delegates in this convention, will support no man for office whose position upon the question of division and admission is in the least equivocal or uncertain.

Sixth—That the great agricultural interests of Dakota demand that they should be protected, fostered and guarded with jealous care, and such laws enacted as will secure equitable rates of transportation, allowing no discrimination against sections or individuals; that we favor the improvement of the great water ways of the Northwest, so as to bring close competitions in the carrying trade; we favor a warehouse law which will give every farmer a better market, and which will not leave him at the mercy of any elevator, mill or railroad combination; that no trust should be fostered or allowed, nor monopolies created which have a tendency to inflate prices.

Seventh—We declare ourselves in favor of a thorough revision of the revenue laws of Dakota, whereby all property shall be equally taxed and taxed to its owner. We declare in favor of a usury law which will be effective and which will not encourage reckless and extravagant speculation, but which will provide sufficient money at a reasonable rate of interest for all honest and legitimate pursuits.

Eighth—That we welcome, with the open hand of fellowship and friendship, the people who have come from foreign lands to better their fortune and find a permanent home in this, the country of their adoption, intending to render due obedience and respect to its laws.

Ninth—That we favor a revision of the tariff and a reduction of the same upon such articles as it can be made upon without sacrificing the interests of American labor, and that all necessaries of life upon which the tariff is a tax should be admitted at the lowest possible duty consistent with the preservation of American industries. We charge the national Democratic party with being the enemy of Northern soil and Northern labor, and arraign it for the determination and sectional provisions of the Mills bill, by which Northern productions are deprived of protection, while those of the south, the late confederacy, which declared explicitly against any tariff for protection, are protected by a high tariff, which is, in many cases, nothing more nor less than a tax.

Tenth—That we condemn the present Democratic administration for its persistent and continued hostility to the ex-Union soldiers in vetoing pension bills upon the most frivolous pretext, without reference to the justice of the claim or the merit of the applicant, thereby carrying out the theory of the present executive that the alms house is the proper refuge of our brave veterans, as demonstrated by his willingness that the man who stood as his substitute should be permitted to die there; that the foreign service of the United States should not become the asylum for ex-Confederate soldiers, as the reward of treason, for opportunity given them to demonstrate the victory of the Union over rebellion to be more apparent than real, but that such representation belongs to the Union veteran, other things being equal.

Eleventh—Following the lead of our national platform as enunciated at Chicago and of the will of the people, of this territory as expressed in a majority of the counties upon the question of local option, we heartily endorse all just measures for the banishment of the saloon from our borders.

Joseph Allen of Turner reported from the committee on permanent organization in favor of Col. E. C. Geary of Fargo, Cass county, for permanent chairman, with J. E. West of Bington, secretary, and W. G. Mitchell of Walsh as assistant. The report was adopted and Col. Geary took the chair without making a speech for which he was applauded.

THIRD DAY.

George A. Matthews, of the town of Brookings, Brookings county, a young lawyer and speaker of the last legislative council, was nominated as the Republican candidate for delegate to congress from Dakota, the ballot being the seventeenth of the day and the convention. On the fourteenth ballot Gifford showed such strength that he would have been nominated on the next roll call had not the anti-Giffords united and forced an adjournment. During the evenings recess Grigsby was urged to withdraw in favor of either of them, but would not do so, Minnehaha county declining to give color to the charge that their townsman had been put up as a straw man, while the delegation was really for Gifford, Minnehaha was also determined to beat Judge Palmer, and did not much care about anything else.

THE EARLY PROCEEDINGS.

Col. Geary called the convention to order three quarters of an hour later this morning, which was not at all bad considering the lateness of the hour of adjournment and the amount of rolling the necessities of the situation called for. Said situation at the hour of opening may be thus summed up: Gifford in the lead and able to dictate the man, if not to succeed personally; Allen confident of holding his strength and very hopeful of a lightning stroke; Grigsby in better shape than ever before as being a possible heir to Gifford's strength; Matthew or any other Central Dakota man over-weighted with the stigma which undoubtedly attaches in this convention or least to the Aberdeen convention; Campbell, an uncertain member of what can scarcely be called an equation; Palmer, so heartily hated by many delegates that they would make any combination rather than allow his nomination; favorite sons of various breeds hopeful on account of the possibility of a dark horse. There was a preliminary tussel over Barnes county, Messrs. Root and Van Wormer being at odds. Van Wormer kept the seat Root tried to exclude him from. Alex Hughes than moved that the convention proceed to a formal ballot for the selection of a candidate. To the joy of everybody the motion was carried and all nominating speeches cut off. The roll was called and the total result announced, as follows, the total, however, not being indicative of actual strength:

O. S. Gifford, 168½; Harrison Allen, 101½; G. A. Matthews, 65½; G. A. Pierce, 38; H. G. Campbell, 34; M. J. Grigsby, 32; P. J. McLaughlin, 28; C. B. Little, 19; J. H. King, 17½; H. Root, 7; D. M. Evans, 7; C. S. Palmer, 5; J. Cochran, 5. Total 528. Necessary to choice, 265.

After about 15 ballots in which the result was about similar to the first one the race settled down to Gifford, Matthews and Grigsby. On the 17th and final ballot Matthews received 361—96 more than was necessary. Mr. Matthews, the nominee, was called to the platform amid cheers, and made a good speech, the portion received with most favor being that in which he pledged himself to a belief in the admission of a North and South Dakota. He promised to act as Dakota's errand boy at Washington if elected, and of his election he had no doubt.

THE COMBINE AGAINST GIFFORD.

Capt. J. H. Jumper of Brown moved that the chair appoint a committee of nine to select a territorial central committee to consist of thirty-seven members. An effort was made to have the members named by legislative districts, but it was voted down and the chair named as the committee of nine:

Messrs. J. H. Jumper, Brown; J. E. Hagart, Cass; W. S. Sander, Richland; J. E. West, Edington; W. A. Bartly, Burleigh; F. A. Sebring, Eddy; J. B. Kelly, Beadle; B. H. Sullivan, Aurora; George H. Rice, Moody.

Judge Moody wanted to add W. T. Cond of Pennington county, but the chair ruled him out of order, and the committee was directed to meet and report to the convention to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock, to which hour an adjournment was then taken. Under the new deal the combine against Gifford will name the committee. Moss, Gifford, Moody and others will; if represented at all, be so by grace of North and Central Dakota.

For Stealing Opium.

Deputy United States Marshals Cavanagh and Kranz went to Ogdenburg and made the most important government arrests made in this district in years. The parties arrested are Nathan H. Lytle, Jr., deputy collector of the port of Ogdensburg; William J. Cummisky, janitor of the government building, and John W. Stone, one of the most prominent attorneys in St. Lawrence county. They are charged with having on or about July 2 last stolen from the custom house 100 pounds of opium. This is the outcome of the arrest of the Gardeners last winter at Ogdensburg who were captured with nearly $25,000 worth of opium in their possession. Mr. Stone is the lawyer who defended the Gardners when their case came up. The prisoners were in default of $20,000 bail each, committed to jail. It is claimed that Stone put up the job. Cummiskey had the keys to every room in the building, and it was easy for him to reach the goods. The duty upon opium is $10 a pound, so there was considerable money in the scheme if it was successfully worked. Imitation cans had been procured and filled with oak blocks weighing the same as opium and were left in their stead. Gardner was to receive the opium in Chicago and dispose of it, but was caught in time. It is understood that one of the three is ready to confess the whole business.

* * *

By the explosion of a thresher engine boiler on the Stranahan farm near Cory, Pa., three laborers were instantly killed.

Chieftain John Grass, head of the hostiles at Standing Rock, has gotten himself into the lock-up at the agency, having been successful in intimidating the Indians and keeping them from signing the bill. His heart grew brave and he undertook to throw off the restraints of the agency life, and he was about to leave the reservation to head off the commissioners in their work at Crow Creek and stir up trouble among the Indians there. The agent at Standing Rock ordered him not to leave the agency, but he defied his authority and was arrested and locked up. Sitting Bull is in a fair way to get in the same place soon, for which let us rejoice.

William Cail and Charles McIntyre, the two thieves who stole Herder Davis' team of ponies on the 17th inst., were captured near Coopertown with the ponies in their possession, and brought to Grand Forks, Dak., by Sheriff Swan. They both admit their guilt. Their trial comes off soon.

Oliver Webb, living in Roscoe township, Goodhue county, Minn., who is now in his eighty-fifth year, cast his first vote for president in 1828 for John Quincy Adams. He voted for "Tipecanoe and Tyler too" in 1840, for James G. Blaine in 1884, and if permitted to live will cast his vote for Harrison and Morton in November next.

Advices from Jacksonville, Florida, say the sanitary association has decided that the names of sick and dead of yellow fever should be published. The epidemic is certainly gaining ground. The Grand Union is deserted. Insurance companies have withdrawn risks.

The government is in receipt of information that a violent outbreak of cholera has occurred on board the Portugese transport India bound. Within forty-eight hours thirty-eight cases were manifested, twenty-four of which were fatal.

By the overflowing of the banks of the Teng Chow river, flooding the country for a mile on either side 800 workingmen were drowned.

S. Taft of Mazeppa was brought to Wabasha on a warrant, charged with outraging a fourteen-year-old daughter of Peter Clement of Chester township. The girl alleges that she was induced to enter a barn, where she was partially stupified by drinking beer furnished by a man named Colliny and Taft, and that she was subsequently ravished. Taft waived examination and was held to the grand jury, giving bail in the sum of $1,000 for appearance at the November term of the district court. The prisoner alleges that he is innocent of the crime charged. Taft is twenty-eight years old.

AN AWFUL DISASTER.

The Great Steamers Oceanica and City of Chester Collide in the Pacific Ocean.

One of the most terrible marine disasters that ever occurred on the Pacific coast happened in the Bay of San Francisco, a short distance from Golden Gate, on the 22nd. The steamer of Chester left her dock at San Francisco at 9:30, and started on her regular trip to Eureka, on the northern coast of California. An unusually large number of passengers stood on her decks and waved adieu to friends who had gathered on the wharf. The Chester steamed slowly down the bay, and when within two miles of the Heads encountered a thick fog so peculiar in that locality. Capt. Wallace, of the City of Chester, began blowing his steamer's whistle to warn all vessels of his approach. The Chester proceeded cautiously in her course, till off Port Saint, when the hoarse sound of another whistle floated across the water. Capt. Wallace answered the signal and gave the proper warning to the stranger to pass on the port side. This was evidently not understood, for in a moment those on board saw the huge prow of the Occidental & Oreintal steamer Oceanica emerge from the fog. The Oceanica had just arrived from Hong Kong and Yokohama, and was moving up the bay to her dock. The huge steamer was so close to the Chester that there was no possibility for the latter to escape. The cabin passengers were nearly all on deck, and the captain, seeing the danger, called to them to prepare for the shock. A panic ensued at once, particularly among the women and children, of whom there was a large number. The Oceanica struck the Chester on the port side at the gangway, and the shock was terrific.

At the moment of the shock most of the officers and crew of the Chester seemed to loose possession of their senses and several passengers stated afterwards that some of the crew took the first opportunity to climb aboard the Oceanica and left the passengers to cut away the boats. One of these was lowered as soon as possible and a number of the passengers taken off in it. Others provided themselves with life preservers and jumped overboard. The greater portions, however, were compelled to remain on the steamer, which began to settle immediately after the collision. Torrents of water rushed into her hold and in five minutes after the collision the Chester disappeared and sank in fifty fathoms of water. Those of the passengers and crew who came to the surface were picked up by the Oceanica's boats. The greater number were drawn down by the rushing water and never appeared again.

The cabin passengers numbered seventy, and of these ten are also lost. The names of the cabin passengers lost are as follows: D. W. Anderson, Oakland, Cal.; Mrs. S. E. Prater, San Diego; Mrs. C. H. Haney, Eureka, Cal.; J. A. Hampton and wife, Virginia, Nev.; C. T. Davis, Springville, Cal.; and Miss Davis, his neice; J. Greer, Napa, Cal. Mrs. Meect and Mrs. Porter. The following are the members of the crew lost: E. R. Chambers, steward; R. Fulton, Adam Richmond.

HOARD FOR GOVERNOR.

Wisconsin Republicans nominated W. D. Hoard on the first Ballot.

By far the most exciting state convention ever held in Wisconsin was the Republican convention held at Milwaukee. It had been prefaced by a very active four-sided canvass covering more than six months, and by twenty-four hours of as lively button-holing at the hotels as was ever seen. At 12:10 Chairman Payne called the convention to order, and after the secretary had read the call for the convention, Mr. Payne announced that the state central committee had selected Hon. Philo Orton of Darlington for temporary chairman. W. H. Reynolds of Ashland and J. H. Davidson of Green Lake county were chosen secretaries of the temporary organization. The temporary organization was later made permanent. Mr. Orton on taking the chair made a brief speech in which his allusions to the protection policy of the party and to the presidential candidates were heartily applauded.

Brown of Waupaca made a fifteen minutes' speech, placing W. D. Hoard in nomination as the farmers' candidate.

J. S. Barney of West Bend Island the Hon. E. C. McFetridge in nomination. When the Eighth district was reached Humphrey, in a strong speech, presented the name of Horace A. Taylor of Hudson.

Col. Ginty's presentation came next. His name was presented by Col. L. J. Rusk of Chippewa Falls, and was seconded by M. C. Ring of Neilsville. After considerable sparring over unimportant questions the convention got down to balloting. The first ballot was an informal one and resulted as follows: W. D. Hoard, 137; Taylor, 83; McFetridge, 63; Ginty, 38; Palmer, 2.

After several ballots the convention voted by a small majority to adjourn until 8, o'clock. When the delegation was called to order the Taylor men felt confident, and the hopes of the McFetridge men revived suddenly when Col. Rusk arose and in a speech withdrew the name of Col. Ginty, and when the motion was made that a formal ballot for governor be made there was not a dissenting voice. It took less than ten minutes to take the ballot Hoard receiving 105 votes, two more than was necessary to nominate him. Timme was nominated for secretary of state, George W. Ryland was re-nominated for lieutenant governor; H. B. Harshaw, state treasurer; C. E. Estabrook, attorney; J. B. Thayer, state superintendent; Atley Peterson, railroad commissioner; Phil Cheek, Insurance commissioner.

Terrible Explosion.

The large paper mill owned by George Whiting, situated on the Island between Neenah and Menasha, Wis., was destroyed by fire. While the burning structure was surrounded by a crowd of spectators, the battery of boilers exploded. The roof and the walls were thrown outward, sending a shower of bricks and timbers among the spectators Eighteen persons were killed, seven fatally injured, and a number less seriously hurt, several of whom will die. The mill was a three-story structure, built four years ago at a cost of $100,000. About 1:30, while the building was a mass of flames, the explosion occurred without warning. The roof of the building was thrown upward and outward, the walls of brick crumbling and crashing into the street, and in an instant scores of men were buried by the debris. There was a moment of silence and then a cry of horror went up from the multitude. Body after body was found, crushed and mangled, by the great timbers and masonry almost beyond recognition, and then removed to the city hall. The injured were carried to neighboring residences or to their homes as soon as their identity could be established. The dead are as follows:

John Moore, Joseph Bridges, William Guelte, Thomas Dourgais, Frank Sheffer, Gilbert Mericle, Frank Mandever, Frank Muncmer, Chris Laighouser John Leichowger, John Hoffman, Lewis Roesch, Joe Bul, —— Knoelke, Thomas Jetters, —— Shoewiecsji, Sylvester Jeljhous, man unknown.

Fatally injured—Albert Hoechemer, Benjamin Crouse, Joseph Smith, Joe Smith, John Suller, —— Tingle, —— Soeltz.

The loss on building is $100,000; insurance, $52,000. The cause of the awful calamity is traced directly to the iron bleach. It is said that this was full of steam and rags, and had become superheated. When the cold water from the fire engines struck it, the explosion followed instantly. The destroyed mill was built by William Gilbert of Chicago, and George A. Whiting of Neenan in 1882. It was understood at the time the mill was built that it cost between $55,000 and $60,000. Every factory in the city is closed and will remain so till after the burials. Flags are at half mast on all the public buildings.

The arrest at Denver, Col., at the point of a pistol, in the Windsor hotel of three counterfeiters unearths one of the biggest sensations developed here for many years. The band consists of residents of Chicago, New York and other cities, and they were in constant communication. The counterfeiters were to manufacture some "good" coins, as a feeler, after which bogus stuff was to be made of chemical material which was warranted to wear for a year, and be sold to customers at the rate of $1,200 for twenty-four pounds. The preparation of which the coins were to be manufactured had a large percentage of gold. Agents at Chicago and other points were to distribute it. Manuel Lensaire, the head of the gang, arrived and registered at the Windsor, where he was met by two accomplices. While they were discussing the prospects Gage, who was in the room, gave the signal and the officers, with drawn revolvers, walked in and captured the men. Considerable material, including a perfect die and some of the money, was captured. Some of the money was of pure gold, and when tested at the mint was pronounced to be gold.

REPUBLICAN PICK-UPS.

Cleveland's Plea for Votes.

Just as I am, without one plea,
But that George Brinski fought for me
And that he died in poverty,
To win your votes I come, I come.

Just as I am, without a scar
To show that I was ever thar,
In skirmish or in bloody war,
To win your votes I come, I come.

Just as I am, my badge a star
With eagle and crossed cannon bar
To fool the boys of G. A. R.,
To win their votes I come, I come.

Just as I am, for confed flags
I had no peace; I would the rags
Have back returned, but for the gags,
To win their votes I come, I come.

Just as I am; come, Daniel, say,
Must I rely on ban-dan-a
To pull me throught this devious way,
To win your votes I come.

Just as I am, I'm tossed about;
This "free trade" fuss fills me with doubt;
From politics I wish the thing was out.
To win your votes I come, I come.

Just as I am, with cheek and gall,
My message I would glad recall
Before it compasseth my fall;
To win your votes I come, I come.

A counterfeit G. A. R. badge, with medallion head of Cleveland on the star, has been introduced in Kansas, and probably in the other parts of the country.

NOTE.—They are on sale in the Capitol of the United States!—Rochester Democrat.

Truth from a Democratic Paper,

We may as well be frank, while we are upon the subject, and state the situation as it is. The chances to-day in Connecticut are against the Democrats.—New Haven Register.

Grown Up Now.

The mugwump dodge does not work beyond the limits of 1884. The mugwump has grown to a full-grown democrat, and usually he is the most virulent, snarling, fault-finding, hungry, greedy democrat in the whole drove.

Northern Rebels the Worst.

A Chicago newspaper, which is a double-ender Bourbon Democrat in the morning and solidly Republic in its evening issue, remarks that "the time is coming when the veto messages of Cleveland will be properly regarded as among the greatest papers ever written in the "White House." Evidently our contemporary thinks the Confederacy is the saddle to stay, and the cause for which Union soldiers shed their blood will soon pass into "innocuous desuetude." It takes a Northern rebel to crawl low in the dirt.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

An Aggressive Campaign,

"Good morning—how is the grand work in the interests of Democracy starting in today?" said the chairman of the Democratic National Campaign Committee to his private secretary, coming into headquarters about noon and blowing the dust off his desk.

"Splendidly," replied the assistant briskly. "I have one letter from a prominent Western New York manufacturer who has always been a Democrat, saying that he shall vote for Harrison and Morton and giving his reasons for it; and a postal card from a traveling minister in Upper Canada ordering twelve pounds of tracts, 'on the duty young men owe their grandparents.' I guess he intends to direct it to some missionary society."

Bleeding Postal Employes.

One of the coming problems will be to determine how far a newspaper man in search of information may travel into the region of prevarication to accomplish his ends. A Chicago Tribune reporter the other day by representing himself as an employe of the Chicago postoffice penetrated into the mysteries of the collection of Democratic campaign funds far enough to learn that the national committee is securing "voluntary" subscriptions from the employes of Mr. Judd's office, ranging from ten dollars upwards. It was rather cruel to interfere in an unostentatious industry of that kind especially as the postmaster's law partner was gathering the subscriptions quietly and without scandal. The Tribune's revelations had a tendency to throw a suspicion on the postmaster but Mr. Judd promptly "vindicated" himself as he did in the Oberkampf case. He didn't know anything about it. As it was a matter that required some intelligence and concentration of energy it is quite probable that the postmaster's plea will clear him.

Knock This Chip off.

Money is necessary to the existence of the Government. Under our fiscal system the main reliance of States, counties and municipalities is upon taxation of property—the exception being the sale of licenses for carrying on certain lines of business. Money raised by taxation comes from owners of factories, machinery and other personal property, as well as from farms and farm equipments, and is the price paid by the owners for defence of their rights in property and the peaceable pursuit of the business of their choice.

To exempt any one man's property from taxation would be an injustice to all compelled to pay taxes. Yet this is just what free trade proposes to do. American owners of farms, houses, machinery, etc., are to be taxed, while the same rights they enjoy are to be given free to others—to men who owe no allegiance to our government and who seek profits from trade here to be spent in other countries.

Hay, barley, wheat, wool, etc., are grown in large quantities by Canadian farmers who never paid a cent of taxes toward the support of our government. If these men propose to send their products here to be sold in our markets, why should they not be taxed, at least as much as our farmers are taxed, for the privilege? But the free trader says no, let the foreigner have our markets without cost, although the American farmer's taxes need to be increased in consequence, and then complacently suggests that if growing such articles under this one-sided arrangement proves unprofitable our farmers can turn their attention to some other productions.

Protection insures for our own citizens not only the first, but always the best chance in the markets of the country they have helped to build up. This is both patriotism and good business policy. Its opposite is the un-American policy advocated by the President and other free trade advocates, and for which they have received the plaudits of the Cobden Club and every prominent journal in Great Britain. It remains to be seen if a majority of American farmers agree with them.

One Consolation.

Democratic leaders are greatly disturbed by the revolt of working-people against their free-trade policy. Let them console themselves with the reflection that their great ally, "The London Times," has anticipated this rebellion, yet is confident that its candidate, Mr. Cleveland will pull through. This is the way the thing is worked out:

"Good," replied the chairman as he locked up his desk and arose; "first-class, that's a heavy mail for us to get. It shows that the people are awakening to a full realization of the necessity of keeping the Democratic party in power. Draw on those postmasters who failed to respond to our bills, and try and be out about 4 o'clock when the man comes round to collect the rent for this room." Then he put on his coat and went fishing for the rest of the day.—New York Tribune.

We are not likely to see the working classes of the Eastern States go for free trade just yet; their minds have become fixed in the protectionists groove; but in many other quarters it is probable that President Cleveland's appeal will be effectual. Nobody, not even an American, likes paying taxes. A tariff is not in itself an instrument of happiness so those effected by its provisions. It is at best a means of preventing worse evils; and the American people are now asked to "reason together," and to consider whether, after all, the evils which their tariff brings with it, are not really worse than those which it prevents.—London Times.

It is a pity that the "other quarters" from which reinforcements are to be received for the free-trade cause are not specified. Still "The London Times" is a great authority on free-trade matters, and our friends the enemy may comfort themselves with the thought that it must know what it is talking about. It certainly is right in one respect. The working classes here are not likely to go for free trade just yet.

DAKOTA NEWS.

Ole Oleson, an employe of the Central railroad, fell under a construction train at East Sioux Falls and had a leg cut off.

Mr. Mayo, assistant at the Union depot, Oakes, and Miss Minnie Thompson were married by Rev. R. H. Hooke at the residence of D. A. Shuter, and were serenaded by the band of which Mr. Mayo is a member.

Mrs. L. J. Tisdale of Huron, was very severely burnt on her hands face, neck, head and arms while she was feeding a gasoline stove reservoir. She thought she had put out all the burners, but had left one lighted and burning low.

The several school township clerks in the county, when making their report to the county superintendent, are required to express their opinion as to the value of the school lands in their several townships. In the report received the value is estimated everywhere from $2 to $10.

Sixty-five paving block cutters, in the employ of the Sioux Falls Granite company, are out on strike owing to a difficulty arising as to the time of monthly payment. The company is in no hurry for men, and will make no effort to induce the strikers to return to work.

Wahpeton presented a beautiful sight in the elaborateness of her decorations of public and private buildings in honor of the forth annual session of Knights of Pythias, grand lodge for Dakota, which convened here. As all the delegates have not arrived, the Knights have not settled down to business.

Fargo Special: Attorney General Templeton returned from Bismarck, where he has been attending the meeting of the territorial board of equalization. He reports that the total assessment of the territory, real and personal, this year is $161,420,974.32; last year it was $157,084,365.99; showing an increase this year of $4,336,608.33.

Engineer Bergstrom, of the Minneapolis water works, arrived at Grand Forks. He brought with him a diver's paraphernalia to be used for the purpose of cleaning out the intake pipe of the water works in the Red river. It will be several days, however, before the stones and mud are fully removed.

Judge Rose has returned home after concluding Morton county's term of court, and was waited upon by a delegation of fifty citizens, who presented him with a handsome chair. Ex-Mayor Flint made the presentation speech. The chair is an elegant affair, costing over $100. It is handsomely upholstered, and the frame consists of twelve Texas steer's horns.

It is believed by "old timers" that the commissioners at Standing Rock are quietly getting signatures to the treaty. After the big council and defiant speeches by Gall, John Grass, Sitting Bull and others all the Indians were dismissed and sent home. They visited individually Indians at their home, and undoubtedly they are meeting with success. These rumors come here through Indians and by way of runners. In fact, it is the only way news can be got, for all reporters and correspondents have been dismissed by the commission, thus closing avenues for communication with the press.

Some would-be practical jokers went to the Grand Forks engine house, uncoiled over eight hundred feet o fire hose, carried it a distance of three blocks to the residence of a tribe of the demi-monde, attached the hose to the hydrant and turned the water on. After opening the front door of the residence of these parties, they placed the nozzle of the hose in proximity to the inner door and fled. An hour or two afterward, when the frail angels, discovered it, their domicile was flooded to a depth of several feet, carpets destroyed and furniture generally. Although sentiment generally is opposed to such a proceeding, it has relieved, or will do so, at least, that neighborhood of a pestilential nuisance.

In the Democratic county convention at Fargo there was a fusion between Prohibitionists, the Farmers' alliance, disgruntled Republicans and Democrats. The convention indorsed Smith Stimmel, the Farmers' alliance candidate, for the council; Augustus Roberts, Republican, for judge of probate; William Mitchell, Republican, candidate for superintendent of schools; John D. Batson was nominated for treasurer: E. V. McKnight, register of deeds; Peter S. Golberg, auditor; C. W. Smith, sheriff; S. B. Bartlett, district attorney; J. D. White, surveyor; Dr. A. A. Andrew, coroner; Walter Muir and J. M. Wager for members of the house.

Grand Forks Special: The bid of the Dakota Investment company for the new bridge bonds was excepted. Their bid was $50,531 for $50,000 bonds drawing 7 per cent interest for twenty years, when the bonds become redeemable. The usual sight of two city auditors was visible. Mayor Griggs served a notice on the present incumbent, W. R. Bierly, to resign his office, appointing J. H. Shephard in his stead. Bierly consulted the city attorney, who advised him to retain his office until a new appointee had been confirmed by the council. Shephard put in his appearance and proceeded to act as auditor. A motion was finally made by Ald. Reeder to the effect that until the council had confirmed the mayor's nominee, which they are not very liable to do, the present auditor should retain his position. The motion was unanimously adopted. This virtually ties the hands of Mayor Griggs, and a deadlock between the council and its executive chief prevails.

ON THE PATH BELOW.

I reached Burton's in the mountains beyond Bristol, late in the evening, having, as usual, blundered about the trail. The cabin stood just off the road, and all around it was silent and dark. It has always been a wonder that his dogs did not attack me. He had three, and they were as cross and crabbed as old bears. They came running down the trail to meet me, growling and barking but as soon as they came up they made friends. They were playing around me when I stood in front of the cabin and called:

"Hello! you! Hello! Hello!"

In about in a minute a voice answered:

"Who is yer, an' what's wanted?"

"Stranger in search of lodgings."

He seemed to doubt it for he made no immediate reply. After a long minute I heard a woman arguing:

"I tell you he must be all right. If he wasn't them dogs would hev devoured him!"

"Wall, come in!" called the man, and I stumbled along to the cabin to find him in the half open door with his rifle in his hands. My explanations soon satisfied him that I was all right, and he struck a light, piled some blankets in a corner, and said:

"Stranger, that's the best lop I kin fix ye off-hand. Jist tumble down and doan' worry about nothin'."

"I was soon fast asleep, having nothing to keep me awake. Right in the heart of the grim old mountain—among people whose faces I had only glanced at—among men who settle their disputes with knife or bullet—entirely at their mercy and in their power if they wanted to rob or kill and yet there was no cause to be afraid. When you are the guest of a mountaineer you are safe.

Next morning I found the family to consist of husband, wife and three children. The oldest of the three children was a boy of twelve, who had killed his bear and was a dead shot. As soon as I had looked around me I knew that a distillery could be found near by. After breakfast Burton pumped me for a few minutes, sized me up in his mind as "O, K," and said:

"Come up with me and see the boys. And I want to tell you that we've been expecting visitors for the last two days, an' we may hev a scare befo' night."

"What sort of visitors?"

"United States chaps artes our still. They've had a spy in yere trying to locate it. We saw him twice yesterday."

There were three other men at the still, which was hidden away in a dark and rugged ravine, approached by a footpath which could be ambushed at every rod. All the corn was "toted" on the men's backs over this path, and the kegs of whisky were slung to a pole and carried between two men. The still was perfect, but small, and in the five or six months it had been in operation the men had not made the wages of mechanics. I asked one of them how long since he had had a five dollar bill, and he squinted his eyes, counted his fingers, scratched his head and finally replied:

"Wall, stranger, you may remember the battle of Stone River?"

"Yes."

"A right smart ago, wasn't it?"

"Yes; twenty-five years ago."

"Wall, just arter that fight I had a five dollar bill, and that's the fust and last time."

What money they made by illicit distilling went for boots and shoes, clothing of the plainest kind, tinware, tobacco and tea. One of them had had three pounds of brown sugar in his house within a year. The others had not had an ounce; one had not tasted tea, coffee, sugar, white bread or fresh meat (outside of wild meat) for over two years.

The still was about a mile from the house.

If any stranger came by the trail one of the dogs was sent up the ravine with a piece of cloth tied to his neck. Half way between the two, as I discovered later on, was another path intersecting. This came out of another ravine, and was used by the men only occasionally. The boy was stationed at this intersection to watch both paths and give an alarm if danger threatened. It was about 11 o'clock in the morning when he came running in and said:

"Spy coming, pop!"

Then an instantaneous and terrible change took place in the bearing of the men. We had been lying about at ease, every man seemingly having a heart full of kindness, but this announcement started a blazing fire in every eye, set every jaw, and I could see desperation in each face. It needed no handwriting on the wall to tell me that the spy would be wiped off the face of the earth without compunction if discovery threatened. Burton beckoned to me, made a signal to others which they understood, and we climbed up the rugged face of a rock; ran for a quarter of a mile over broken ground which was well wooded, and then suddenly halted at a spot out looking the second path and high above it. Burton made me a sign as he crouched down beside a large rock, and cautiously approaching I looked down into the ravine and saw a solitary man—the spy. He was coming up the path. If he passed the spot where we were stationed his scent alone would locate the still.

"Click! Click!"

"Good heavens! but you are not going to shoot him!" I whispered to Burton as he cocked his rifle.

He half turned to look at me. His face was as hard set as iron.

"For the sake of earning a few dollars he would see us starve!" he replied. "He knows his danger. Let him pass this rock and I will shoot him!"

I dared say no more. Burton was desperate and determined.

We looked down at an angle of forty-five degrees on the spy. You could have told that he was a spy by his actions. He had the gait of an Indian bent on a surprise. He looked about him like one who expected the whistle of a bullet at any moment. He came slowly on.

Could I signal him?

No! He was not looking up but around him.

Coming—coming—coming—advancing at a steady pace toward death. Would Burton shoot? He already had the man covered.

Thump! thump! thump!

It was my heart pounding away like a pile driver. It would be murder. I would be accessory. If I dared to shout—to—!"

Thank God! Was it the fall of a fragment of rock up on the mountain side, or the hoarse call of the great buzzard poised above us which made the spy halt in his tracks? Ten feet more and a finger will press the trigger. He peers this way and that—he looks up and around—he starts to advance but halts again. Is some one praying for him—has he a guardian angel who whispers a warning?

It is two minutes—two minutes which tick away slowly that they seem to be hours in length. I lean against the great rock, almost gasping for breath, while Burton has his eye at the sights and his finger ready to pull. It is a tableau on the threshold of death. It is a pantomine at the edge of a grave.

"Go back! Go back!" I entreat in my mind to the spy.

He removes his hat, wipes his brow, and is evidently anxious.

"If you value your life go back!" I would fain say.

He looks around him like one who feels danger in the very air.

"You will be shot if you advance! Hear and heed the warning!"

The warning reached him by that mysterious channel which the human mind has not fathomed. I saw him start in fear, and then, seeming entirely against his will, he turned short about and almost ran as he hurried up the path and out of sight.

"H'm! He'un has got off this time, shure," said Burton as he rose up and let the hammer of his rifle down.

"You would have killed him?" I asked.

"Dead as this rock!"

"It would have been murder."

"Then let he'un keep away from yere!"

A Chautauqua Romance.

From Cleveland, O., comes the report of a talented lady artist who spent last summer at Chautauqua, where she met one of the numerous family of Colonels from Arkansas. There was a case of mash, not the genuine sour mash, but sweet, which turns to sour. She listened to fairy tales of luxury which awaited her in his far-off Southern home; was enraptured thereby, yielded to the gentle wooing of love, married and went South, only to find the pictured mansion a rotted-down hovel, the lovely plantation a patch of brambles, the carringes and fine steeds an old farm cart and a lop-eared mule, so mean that the nigger wouldn't steal it, and her love of a husband transformed into a lazy galoot who wouldn't lift a finger to provide for her. Friends sent money for her to get back to Cleveland and the divorce court will set her free. She has a nice bit of experience and a new subjects in her mind's eye for several pictures as a reward for the good sense she didn't have a year ago. The season is open again at the summer resorts, the army of fools is on the move, as usual, all oblivious of the guide-boards, which, as in the case referred to, are planted all along the pathway of life, and ere another summer comes reports of the harvest of fool taxes will come in. Next to the old fool the biggest fool is the female fool who fools herself by imagining the he-fool from Wayoff, who goes fool hunting at the summer resorts, is just the proper fool for her to fool with. Let the procession move.

Paddy Murphy's Breeches.

While traveling in the south of Ireland, a tourist was regaled by a car driver with the tale of how Paddy Murphy had his breeches let out. It was thus told:

"Well, sor, Paddy Murphy, who lives in a cabin close by, wanted a pair of breeches. So he goes down to Peter McClogan, the tailor, who lives in the valley below, and says, says he, 'Peter, I want you to make me a pair of breeches.'

"'Stand by, says Peter, 'and I will measure you.'

"So the breeches were made, and when sent home, they were so small that Paddy could not get into them. Back he took them, and told Peter, how vexed he was with them.

"'You've made my breeches too small, he says. 'You must let them out.'

"'Well,' says Peter, 'leave them with me, and I will do that same for you.'

"So Pat left them to be let out. Time went by, and Peter did not send them back. So Paddy went down to the valley to see why he did not get them. As soon as he got to the house, he saw the tailor digging up some potatoes, and he shouted out to him, 'Peter, have you let my breeches out?'

"'Faith and I have!' says Peter, 'I've let them ont for a shilling a week ever since you left them!'"—Clothier and Furnisher.

* * *

"The hardest question I ever had to answer," said a gentleman who had just come down from the Thousand islands, "was put by my little boy while the train was passing through a small strip of woods. "Papa," he shouted, the roaring of the train making it difficult to hear, "are there any lions an' tigers an' bears in these woods?" "No," I said. "Well, if there ain't no lions an' tigers an' bears in woods," he shrieked above the din, "what do they woods for?"

Polk County Journal.

W. G. COOKE, Publisher.

CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA.

Already a New York paper suggests a monument to Sheridan in that city. This generation is not likely to see it there.

During a courtship of six years an English lover and his sweetheart exchanged 1,000 letters—500 each—and now she is suing for breach of promise.

A man at Atchison, Kan., builds an addition to his house every time a daughter marries, in anticipation, he says, of the time when she will bring her husband and children home to live with him.

Signals flashed from an arc lamp upon the clouds at the Cape of Good Hope, have been seen at a distance of fifty miles. This method of signaling may prove useful at sea, especially for vessels in danger.

A monster toad weighing sixty-six pounds, and measuring nearly three feet round the body, is said to have been found at Juillac, France, and sold for $350 to a manufacturer at St. Etienne. Its croaking bears a close resemblance to the barking of a dog. The inhabitants of all the country round have been pouring into Juillac to see the phenomenal animal.

Whitelaw Reid is about to rebuild his country-seat, Ophir Farm, which was recently destroyed by fire. Ophir Farm has been unlucky since it was built by Ben Halliday, its original owner. Halliday had nothing but misfortune there, and the late John Roach, who bought it from Mr. Halliday's creditors, into whose hands it had fallen, was almost equally unfortunate, though his misfortunes were not of quite so tragic a nature.

On May 15, 1800, the State of New York gave to the United States the island between New York city and Brooklyn, known as Governor's Island. It was fortified and has since been used as a military station. Now that the advances of the science of warfare have made is valueless as a defense of the city, it is proposed that the United States shall give it back to the State, and that it be turned into a park for the recreation of the people in the lower part of the city. The island contains about sixty acres. It is entirely probable that Congress will pass the required law.

The power of a wind-mill has been successfully applied to the generation of electricity for domestic purposes by Prof. Blythe, of the Glasgow Philosophical Society. The wind-mill was of the old-fashioned kind, with four arms each thirteen feet long. The dynamo was belted directly to the fly-wheel of the mill, and charged twelve cells of storage-battery. The current was used both for light and for driving a turning-lathe. Ten eight-candle power incandescent lamps were supplied, with current to spare; and a good breeze for half a day stored electricity enough for the light required on four evenings of three or four hours each.

One night John R. McLean, editor of The Cincinnati Enquirer, was seated at his desk up to his eyes in business, when a bumptious young reporter strolled in from the city editor's room, and, seating himself familiarly near the editor-in-chief, inquired in an off hand way, "Well, Mac, how does the news pan out tonight?" Not in the least disconcerted by the extraordinary conduct of his subordinate, who, by the way, was a new comer on the paper and hardly known to him, Mr. McLean responded in an apparently pleasant way: "Don't call me 'Mac,' it seems to stiff; call me Johnny." He didn't call again.

At certain seasons people rush to Florida by thousands on account of the supposed healthfulness of the climate. Just now they are leaving in still greater numbers because they regard it as the most unhealthy State in the Union. It does not follow that because Forida possesses a delightful winter climate it is healthy at all seasons, and the present appearance of yellow fever in Jacksonville and other cities is but a repetition of what has often happened before in that State. It is probable that the panic which seems to have seized upon the inhabitants of Jacksonville is about as foolish as the attempt to check the ravages of the disease by cannon-firing, but people rarely act sensible in the face of a possible danger of this kind. The mad rush of dwellers in the infected cities to the North and West renders it necessarry that the health authorities, whether national, State or municipal, shall use the utmost vigilance to prevent the spread of the disease.

NEWS IN BRIEF.

News From all Parts of the World in a Condensed Form.

Washington Briefiets.

The comptroller of the currency has authorized the City National Bank of Salem, N. J., to begin business with a capital of $100,000.

A bill drafted by officials of the treasury department was presented in the senate by Mr. Harris to prevent the introduction of contagious diseases from one state to another. A similar bill was introduced in the house by Mr. Crisp, of Georgia.

Secretary Fairchild has directed that all the bonds purchased by the government since the 1st of July shall be applied to the purposes of the sinking fund. The estimated requirements of that fund for the present fiscal year are $47,850,000, and the secretary proposes to meet them, if possible, by the purchase of bonds.

The following pensions have been granted: Wisconsin—Original invalid; E. T. Clark, Black River Falls; J. Konmars, Sheboygan; E. Olsen Brayer, alias E. Olson, Black Earth; E. B. Sweet, Waukegan; M. A. Holt, Madison, P. Sheridan (deceased), East Troy; N. Rickemann, Rome; M. Ambrose, Janesville; H. Masters, Oasis; S. Brandt, Pedee; D. H. Stoddard, North Branch; L. W. Berto, Hixton; J. F. Andrews, Chetek; J. McCabe, Ridgeway; F. G. Knight, Kingston; J. Schmidt, Grafton; H. Mey, Waldo; D. Leahy, Madley; J. Noonan, Phillips. Increased: P. Brady, Loganville; P. Pigg, Merrimack; S. Hart, Mindora; De V. Barrows, Oakfield; E. C. Dixon, Remey; H. Washburn, Almond.

Sinful Siftings.

George Smith, for a few days a porter at the depot hotel, Barnesville, Minn., turned up missing, as did $800 out of the safe in the office, which had been left unlocked.

Frank Waltz, aged nineteen, and August Blettner, aged twenty-one, became involved in a quarrel while on the floor dancing at a birthday party at the residence of Mrs. Stringer, in Pittsburg, Pa. Simultaneously Waltz and Blettner drew knives and sprang at each other. In an instant the fight was ended and Blettner was prostrated with a terrible gash in his left breast. Waltz was badly cut on the wrist. Blettner's injuries are fatal, death being momentarily expected. Waltz is under arrest.

The white miners of the Elliot Furnace company at Round Mountain, Alabama, were discharged for getting drunk. They drove the colored miners our, but Capt. Elliot ordered the colored men back to start up the furnace. The white miners have a lot of dynamite in their possession, and say they will blow the furnace up as soon as it starts. The sheriff of Cherokee county is on the ground with 100 men. Arms have been sent to the scene of the trouble from Rome, Ga., and Gadsden, Ala.

During the storm at Faribault, Minn., some one entered G. Clark's bed room and took his clothing and the chair on which they were hanging out into the kitchen. Here they left the chair and a part of the clothing, but his pants they carried out into the garden. They secured about $100 in money and two gold watches worth about $100. Mr. Clark knew nothing of the robbery, until morning, when he arose and missed his pants. When they were found they were very wet, and were evidently in the rain which fell during the night.

Old No. 58 Lafayette street, in Louisville, Ky., a house which has been noted for the crimes committed in it, and for the vice it has fostered for years, was the scene of a horrible tragedy. Police officers Joseph Rosenberg and James W. Jones, while attempting to make an arrest, were both stabbed to death by Charles Dilger, formerly a private policeman and general bad character about town. Dilger was beating his mistress, and the officers, attracted by her cries, broke into the house and attempted to arrest the tough, with the fatal results cited. The murderer was jailed.

Reports are received of the wanton murder of an eighteen-year-old boy near the village of Clifton, in Pettis county, Missouri. The victim, John Tabb, was at work in the field when William Beaman, a farmer, residing in the neighborhood, walked across the field, shot the boy and then fled to the brush. The killing was witnessed by John Tabb, father of the boy, Link Morris and a man named Brown. Two weeks ago Beaman and his wife quarreled, and a member of the Beaman household implored Morris and young Tabb to go to the house and pacify Beaman, which they did. It was for this interference that Beaman killed young Tabb. A posse is in pursuit, and if Beaman is captured he will be lynched.

J. F. Grace, an attorney at law of Highland Wis., has brought suit against Rev. Thomas Dempsey, pastor of the Catholic church of that town, and several of his parishioners, to recover damages in the sum of $15,000 for an alleged assault upon the plaintiff by the defendant in revenge for a public accusation made by Grace against Father Dempsey, to the effect that the latter had held improper relations with the wife of Grace, a beautiful and accomplished woman. In his complaint the plaintiff alleges that he was forcibly taken by the friends of Father Dempsey to the latter's house and compelled by threats and other maltreatments to get down upon his knees before the priest and withdraw and humbly apologize for the charges he had made against him, and that while in this position he was struck several times by Dempsey. Grace and his wife are both members of Father Dempsey's church. It is claimed that the testimony will be rather sensational. The priest protests his innocence and has engaged the best counsel to help him out of his trouble.

Accidents and Casualties.

A large number of cattle in the vicinity of Hade, Minn., have died from eating too much red clover.

Michael Murphy, aged twenty-three, was killed by being struck on the jugular vein by a pitched ball while playing base ball at Rochester, N. Y.

Three young boys were out boating at Appleton, Wis., and while one was handling a rifle it went off, shooting a boy named Frank Cadman, fourteen years of age, through the left lung. It will kill him.

Two passenger trains on the Rockaway Beach branch of the Long Island railroad collided near Hammil, one locomotive being smashed and several persons injured, but none seriously. The accident was due to the carelessness of Engineer Hunt in disregarding a signal. He admits his fault and has been discharged. Engineer Willis and Fireman White, of the wrecked engine, saved their lives by jumping.

Forest fires are raging fiercely along the Italian frontier, and already a section of country 200 kilometers long has been devastated. The town of Trentino, on the border, and a number of villages have been devastated. Heavy thunder storms have prevailed in several parts of the country. At Karneuburg thirty-five houses were leveled to the ground by the force of the wind, and several other villages were completely ruined and several persons killed. In other parts of Austria one hundred houses are reported to have been wrecked and many of their inhabitants injured.

William Jarvis, an old resident of Grand Forks, D. T., met with a serious accident while out driving. When in the vicinity of the Manitoba track, his horse became unmanageable and ran away. Upon striking the track, which is graded slightly above the road level, the wheels of the buggy rebounded, throwing Jarvis violently on the ground. He struck on his left shoulder. The physician who attended Jarvis diagnosed a broken collar bone and three or four ribs, the latter pressing in and injuring the thoracic viscera. His recovery is dubious on account of his age.

Wadena was visited by a big fire on the 20th which started in a vacant building on Third street, between Averill and Front, the alarm was sounded and the firemen and a large number of citizens responded. The fire spread rapidly from building to building, there not being a sufficient amount of water to do any good. Finally, a hand engine was taken over to a cistern tank of the Northern Pacific railroad, where there was a large amount of water, but at that time eighteen buildings had already been consumed. By hard work, the Merchants hotel and a building standing by its side was saved. The total loss amounts to between $60,000 and $70,000.

A. Gringrass, son of a respectable citizen of St Boniface, Manitoba, came to Winnepeg a few weeks ago on a visit, and has since been having a general good time with friends, spending his money on whisky freely. One day he got into altercation with a bartender of the Board of Trade saloon. A scuffle ensued which resulted in the bartender, James Behan, striking Gingrass over the head with an empty bottle, indicting fatal injuries, from the effects of which he died. Behan was arrested shortly after.

News about People.

Edward Aronson, business manager of the Casino, New York, died at his home, of consumption of the bowels.

The many friends of Congressman and Mrs. Rice will learn with deep sorrow of the death of their eldest daughter, Miss Annie, which occurred at White Bear lake.

John Bright, who has been ill for some months, is convalescing slowly. He is so weak that even bath-chair exercise exhausts him.

Gouverneur Morris, one of the old New York Morrises, a member of the famous old family of that name, died at New York, aged seventy-five. He was one of the earliest projectors and constructors of the Union Pacific railroad. He was one of the originators of the Illinois Central and Iowa system of roads. His mother was a niece of Thomas Jefferson.

Nuggets of Foreign News.

Archbishop Croke has donated £50 to the fund for defraying the expenses of Mr. Parnell in his action against the Times.

The Vienna correspondent of the Daily News says he has heard from Munich that King Otto, of Bavaria, is sinking fast, his fits of insanity having become much more frequent.

Harland and Wolff, one of the prominent shipbuilding firms in Belfast, have closed their yards owing to the fact that part of their employes struck work. The action of the firm affects 5,000 persons.

It is stated in well-informed circles that Italy's note in relation to the seizure of Massowah does not affect Russia's attitude on the question. Russia, it is said, will conform to the views of Turkey, whose interests are prejudiced by the seizure and who is incompetent to declare the incident closed.

Michael Davitt professes to see in the proposed visit of Irish athletes to America germs of Pan-Gaelic gatherings in Ireland which shall become established customs. Already it is to hold a universal festival in 1880, and Mr. Davitt's suggestion to hold quinquennial festivals with the object of inducing Irishmen from abroad to visit Ireland and compete for prizes in national athletics, poetry, industries, etc., has met with extremely favorable endorsement. Mr. Davitt hopes thus to revive the "Tailtean" games, which existed in Ireland centuries before the Olympian games were known.

News in General.

A strong effort is being made by the business men of Rice Lake, Wis., to secure a branch from the main line of the "Soo" to that city. The effort promises to be successful.

The North Dakota Elevator company, which removed its general office from Jamestown to Duluth last fall, removed to Minneapolis. The principal reason for the change of base given is the bad passenger train and mail facilities on the Northern Pacific road out of Duluth.

George Donovan and Jack Dinan, two bantam weights, fought eight bloody and desperate rounds with skintight gloves in a barn in West Chester county, New York, for a stake of $300. Dinan won by knocking Donovan out with a right-handed blow under the ear. About fifty persons were present.

It is stated that the promoters of the proposed great lumber combine of Northern Wisconsin and Minnesota held a private meeting at the Grand Pacific hotel at Chicago. Among those present were F. Weyerhauser, of Rock Island; Senator Sabin, F. N. Prince and J. C. O'Gorman, of Stillwater; Gen. A. G. Norton, of Winona, and I. N. Searles, of Stillwater. After the conference broke up the gentlemen were unanimous in refusing to be interviewed.

Twenty-four wholesale liquor dealers of St. Louis have formed a corporation to build a gigantic distillery in that city. The purpose of the organization is to directly oppose the whiskey trust, which has put the prices of high wines at a figure which the organization claims is altogether too high in comparison with distilled goods, notably the Kentucky brands. The corporation is capitalized at $100,000, and it is proposed to put up a distillery with a capacity of 200 barrels a day. Nearly all the stock has been taken and there will be violent opposition to the whiskey trust from now on.

A rather sensational affair was developed at Brainerd, Minn., regarding certain public accounts and their payment. The city voted $1,000 to aid in the purchase of fair grounds, part of which was due to F. B. Thompson. The latter was also lately allowed several hundred dollars by the county commissioners for assessing Cass county. Mayor Hempsted vetoed the council donation, and an injuction was prrocured against the payment of the assessment allwance. Meanwhile Mr. Thompson succeeded in getting both accounts paid by getting the checks thereof, which were dated ahead, cashed, and it is said has gone to the Pacific coast to remain. The checks were those of H. J. Spencer and E. M. Westfall, and aggregated $1,200.

Mrs. Christian Keefer and her married daughter, Lena Withelem, were arrested at Terre Haute, Ind., by Supt. Stout and Capt. Murphy, on a charge of defacing and raising money. The evidence was so conclusive that they confessed. They have evidently been at the business a long time. Their plan was to get $1 bills, and by cutting the figure off of the stamp on cigar boxes and pasting it with the white of an egg next to the figure 1, make it appear as a $10 bill. Twenty dollar bills were raised in this way. Three of these bogus $10 bills were passed on local merchants, and numerous other attempts were. Mrs. Keefer admitted that she practiced the same work at Chicago. They were held to await the action of the United States commissioner. The penalty is $5,000 fine and fifteen years at hard labor.

Receiver Weller, of the defunct Commercial National bank, now estimates the assets of the concern at $250,000 and its liabilities at $450,000. When the bank failed the assets pronounced by Examiner Stone to be nominally $640,000 and its liability to depositors $517,000. Both sums, he said, would be largely reduced by rediscounts. A dividend of 30 per cent was paid a short time since and an assessment of 100 per cent was made on the stockholders. The latter will contest this assessment on the ground that a few months before they paid a similar assessment by order of the controller. Receiver Weller announces that he will enter suit against all stockholders who fail to pay the assessment by Aug. 25. The directors against whom civil action is likely to be taken are Gen. Booth, Frank D. Stout, William Andrew and John R. Walter.

Increased Appropriations.

Speaker Carlisle has had an examination made of the condition of the appropriations. Speaking of this subject with special reference to the current statements as to the effect of the appropriations upon the reductions proposed by the Mills bill, Mr. Carlisle says:

The statement which I have prepared shows that counting all of the appropriation bills that have passed, and those which are pending, the amounts carried by those bills will be $425,000,000. This is an apparent increase of $45,000,000 over the appropriation bills for the last year, but this difference is only apparent. An analysis of the bills will show this and show that making the proper deductions, the net increase over the bills of last year, assuming that all that is contained in the present bills will become laws, will be only $25,000,000; for instance, the senate amendment to the army appropriation bill contains $6,000,000 for fortifications and the fortifications bill which passed the house contains the same amount. It is clear that only one of these provisions relative to fortifications will pass. This item of $6,000,000 is duplicated in the estimates of the appropriations. The river and harbor bill, also, is a bill for two years, and the amount appropriated is double the ordinary amount of the river and harbor bill. It is to be remembered, too, that the deficiency bill failed to become a law last year, and that the bill this year is, therefore a double appropriation. This is a good many millions. There are, besides, a great many unusual items in the bills. The appropriation for the payment of the judgment in the Choctaw claims is one. That is $3,000,000. This judgment congress refused to pay in the bills of last year, and it comes over into the bills of this year. It is a mistaken policy, and there is no possible economy in it. On the contrary, this judgment bears interest at the rate of $176,000 annually, and the refusal to pass this judgment last year, when it was presented in due form, will cost the government unnecessarily the amount of interest for a year.

THE WHITE CAPS.

This Band of Indiana Ku Klux to be Broked up—A Detective Initiated with the League.

A short time ago a detective was hired by prominent Indiana men to investigate and if possible expose the workings of the "White Cap" regulators. He joined the organization in Harrison county about two months ago, being sworn by a branch organization. The oath demanded of every candidate is fairly blood-curdling in its provisions, the penalty of its violation being death, as well as requiring the deposit of $200 in cash with the superior or head of the order as a forfeit for the least violation of any of the by-laws. It virtually makes a man swear that he is a criminal, and places the evidence of his guilt in the hands of the "White Caps." But the detective complied with all those conditions. Once admitted he was again subjected to many curious tests in order to test his sincerity, one of these being a frightful ordeal in which he found himself convicted of having entered the order with sinister motives and condemned to be shot therefor. At the last moment, after being led to a dismal swamp, gagged and blindfolded he was given an opportunity to confess and save his life. These stages of the initiation being passed, the purposes of the order were then unfolded. These consist in the enumerating of a long list of mock morality, precepts concerning the defense of virtue, the sanctity of the domestic circle, and the disapproval of drunkenness and licentiousness in all forms. Those were really a cover to the chief design; which was the prompt avenging of any wrong, real or imaginary, to any member of the organization. Upon any pretext which he deemed sufficient, a superior officer could order the flogging of any man or woman, even though they were unknown to the rest of the clan. The members of the organization do not believe in the use of firearms except as a last resort. The chief headquarters are near English, though each county and even each township have separate lodges. The membership embraces a most startling roll of prominent names, including leading farmers, merchants, and even many officials. There are men belonging to the order whom the general public would never dream of having any such affiliations. It is this fact which makes the conviction of members almost impossible. Being unknown they can color a jury to their liking, thus rendering their suppression a difficult matter. A mistaken idea prevails regarding the magnitude and membership of the organization, for while it embraces many classes the number of members is not nearly so large as is supposed. Many raids are made by men desiring to throw the responsibility on the "White Caps." The most of the members of the order live in and about Leavensworth, Corydon and English, with a few in Orange, Martin and Dubois counties. Their mode of operating is as follows: The head of the district is informed that a certain party shall be warned, whipped or ordered to leave the country. He calls a meeting, and without even putting the matter to a vote delegates certain men to perform the work, which they are compelled to do without hesitation. Although the detectives took part in several raids he refused to go into details or give the names of those participating, but he will report to his employers and will probably meet them at Louisana. The present action of Gov. Gray has excited the "White Caps" somewhat, and they have issued the following circular to members:

On the Ohio, Aug. 8.—To all "White Caps:" It has been announced in the press that Gov. Gray has seen fit to interfere with our organization. As our own counties are the best judges of the cause of the "White-Caps," and they have not interposed their authority to molest us, this interference upon the part of the state authorities is unwarranted and uncalled for. We are willing to be judged by our acts and by our neighbors and fellow citizens, but declare our unalterable opposition to the invasion of our counties by the minions of Gov. Gray in order to persecute the "White Caps." It has therefore been decided to resist this interference if necessary with blood. The first one of our members who is subjected to injustice shall either be released or revenged.

There was no signature.

A FRIGHTFUL TORNADO.

Great Damage Done to Shipping at New Orleans—Lives Lost and Crops Destroyed.

New Orleans La. Aug. 21.—At 0.30 o'clock Friday night a fresh easterly wind set in, which by 2 a. m. Sunday was blowing a gale. The signal service reports the rainfall for the twelve hours ending 7 o'clock Sunday morning at 7.08 inches. The total for twenty-four hours was 8.5 inches. The highest velocity of wind observed was sixty miles an hour. Great damage was done in the city and throughout the sugar belt, from Baton Rouge to the gulf, including the rice section of the state. Much of the sugar cane and rice was blown flat on the ground and many sugar houses and dwellings were damaged. The damage to the sugar crop is roughly estimated at from 10 to 50 per cent; to the rice crop, 20 to 50 per cent. In the city many houses were unroofed, fences prostrated and trees uprooted. The heavy rain on the night of the 19th nearly flooded the city. The storm drove the waters of the gulf up against and over the Louisville & Nashville railroad embankment, extending from Michon to Lookout station, a distance of twenty miles, caused many washouts and the suspension of traffic over that portion of the road. The loss on coal barges sunk is now estimated at $300,000. The crops along the river for a distance of over twenty miles have been entirely destroyed. A number of vessels are overdue and undoubtedly encountered the storm in the gulf. The Future City with seven barges and the Oakland with six barges, from St. Louis, due here Sunday, have not yet arrived, and nothing has been heard from them. Passengers arriving by the Texas & Pacific railroad from Shreveport report damage to buildings and crops similar to that done at Donaldsonville and Plaquemine. Sugar houses and other buildings were damaged or destroyed and crops were reported blown down. A similar condition of affairs is reported from many points on the Morgan road.

IN MORGAN COUNTY.

News from Morgan county is to the affect that dozens of houses were wholly or partly unroofed and fully fifty buildings are off their foundations. The floating elevator George Gilchrist, valued at $13,000, was destroyed. Among the heaviest losers of property along the river are the coal dealers. When the last news was received eighty loaded coal barges and boats and one boat of Coke had sunk and a number of others were reported sinking. The Pittsburg & Southwestern Coal company lost forty at Willow Grove, twenty-seven at Nine-Mile Point and ten at Brown & Jones' coal yard at Almiers. Brown & Jones lost one boat of coke and one barge and one boat of coal. W. G. Coyle lost one boat. The total loss is $240,000. The steamer Keokuk was wrecked at Baton Rouge. She was valued at $20,000, and was insured for $10,000 in Western companies. On the shores of the Mississippi the surf washed over the bay at the St. Louis bridge. At Pass Christian trees were uprooted, bath houses blown down, including those of the Mexican Gulf hotel. At Oaklawn plantation, owned by Col. Robert E. Rivers, eight cabins, sugar houses and reed sheds were blown down and completely wrecked. At Tom Schaffer's Anna plantation only three of the houses were left standing. At Franklyn eighteen dwellings were unroofed. All through the Teche country the cane has been blown down, but it is not estimated that the total damage will exceed one-third of the crop of that section. Last Friday Mr. Caffrey, accompanied by his three sons, and several companions left Belle Isle for Lost Island on a pleasure trip. No news has been received from them and grave apprehensions for their safety are entertained. The Baton Rouge steamers Teche and Warren, both here, were badly damaged. The up coal fleet is a total wreck. Wood, Bodley & Co. lost fifty-seven coal boats, and Coyle, Wilmot & Co., twenty-five, entailing a loss of about $290,000. Wood, Bodley & Co. also lost two coal elevators at the city wharf. The steamship E. H. Ward, Jr., from Truxillo, arrived at 8 o'clock last night. Within 400 miles of Passaca she encountered storms and was driven seventy-five miles beyond Mobile bay. She threw over a portion of her cargo, but sustained no damage.

IT IS DEFEATED.

The Senate Rejects the Fishery Treaty by a Strict Party Vote.

"There being no further amendment the clerk will report the resolution of ratification." The voice of Mr. Ingalls, the presiding officer of the senate, is always grave, but there was an unusual solemnity to its tone when he made the announcement which brought the senate face to face with the final vote upon the fishery treaty. The end of the debate had come, and the administration was about to encounter the worst defeat which any administration has experienced in a treaty negotiation. There was a larger attendance of senators than for some time, many of them had come here for their vacations to be present at the most important political question in congress of this session. Prior to the vote Mr. Morgan was permitted, by the courtesy of the senate, to conclude his speech. He had spoken thirty-seven hours upon this treaty. At the very last moment the administration indicated that it also had another side, which he had held in reserve. This was demonstrated in the amendment which Mr. Gray of Delaware, one of the immediate representatives of the state department in the senate, presented as a substitute for a portion of the Eleventh article of the treaty. That amendment proposed that Canadian vessels in United States ports should be required to take out licenses for commercial privileges on like conditions as those imposed by Canada on American fishing vessels in Canadian ports. This was the first conclusion by a representative of the administration that there was any reason why the treaty should not be one-sided, or that there ought to be inserted in the treaty anything to provide for mutual rights or mutual concessions.

Finally, the presiding officer having called the attention of the senate, in a solemn voice, to the fact that the vote was about to be taken on a resolution of ratification, the vote was put, resulting in the defeat of the resolution by a vote of 27 to 30. Under the constitution, a two-thirds vote of the senate, which must be of record, is necessary to ratify a treaty. The vote in opposition to this treaty was strictly partisan, with the exception that, voting upon the two previous motions, Mr. Voorhees, when the motion on the resolution of ratification was put, suddenly disappeared from his seat, and his name is not found on the voting list.

There is much interest manifested in the probable policy of the administration under the retaliation act, now that the fishery treaty has been rejected. The statements made are all speculative, as the president has not authorized any one to state what his position will be. It is probable that he will not decide for himself until the presentation to him of some specific facts shall make some action necessary.

Vigorous Pursuit of Train Robbers.

A bold attempt was made to rob the Union Pacific east bound passenger train at Dana water tank, near Rawlins, Wyo., by six or seven masked men. As the train stopped for water three men ordered the engineer, fireman and front brakeman to throw up their hands. The engineer and fireman obeyed, but the brakeman, Frank Tilmdn, refused and knocked one of the robbers into the ditch with his lantern. Tillman then ran to the express car to get a gun. The robbers fired at him and wounded him in the arm and hip. The express messenger and postal clerk now fired upon the robbers, one of whom was wounded in the leg. The robbers were put to flight, carrying their wounded companion with them. During the firing Fireman Nash was shot in the arm. Passengers who were armed attempted to pursue the bandits, who, however, escaped.

A posse of men mounted on fleet horses and well armed left Rawlins on a special train for Dana, led by Deputy Sheriff Hanks, in pursuit of the desperadoes. They struck the trail of the robbers a mile and a half north of the scene of attack. The camp of the robbers was found. Their horses were newly shod and the trail was easy to follow. The brakeman's cap was found 200 yards south of the tank, dropped there by the robbers in order to mislead the pursuit. Five hundred dollars per head for the robbers dead or alive, is offered by the Union Pacific company, and $50 by the governor of Wyoming Territory. Eight men crossing the Union Pacific track two and a half miles east of Carbon, or thirty miles east of where the attack was made. They were well mounted and armed, and were heading south towards North Park, Colo. They have made a detour from the north, going east and then south. A posse from Carbon have started in pursuit. The entire country is aroused. Short work will be made of the robbers if they are discovered. They are supposed to be a part of the Teton Basin Jackson gang of cow-punchers.

Tried to Murder His Wife.

A great deal of excitement was created in Superior by a shooting affray, which included a jealous husband, his wife and defender. The particulars of the affair are as follows: Some weeks ago Mrs. Richard Collins left her husband and made her home with the family of James Meyers. Recently a party, including the Meyers family and Mrs. Collins, went to a picnic. Collins followed them, and upon the grounds was a constant source of threatening to kill her if she danced and making many other threats. Upon returning home the party was again followed by Collins. He went into the house where the ladies were seated, drew his revolver, and, aiming it at the breast of his wife fired. Meyers having apprehended trouble, anticipated this movement and dashed the pistol downward, the bullet passing through Mrs. Collins's right leg and

NEARLY THROUGH THE LEFT.

Collins then fired upon Meyers, but without effect. The two men grappled and Meyers, freeing his right hand, pressed his own revolver to Collins' head and fired, the bullet inflicting a severe scalp wound. He then tried to shoot again but the cartridge failed to explode. In spite of his wound, Collins still endeavored to shoot Meyers and doubtless would have accomplished his purpose but for the arrival of two men who were attracted to the scene by the shooting and succeeded in overpowering Collins. Meyers gave himself up to the authorities and was held to appear at the end of thirty days in $1,000 bonds. The bullet was extricated from Mrs. Collins' legs. It was found to be almost wrapped up in the muslin which it carried with it in passing through her garments.

Crops not so Badly Damaged as Reported.

Among the dealers, railroad men and farmers throughout the country there appears to be the greatest difference of opinions concerning the condition of the crops and the possible damage by frost, rust and other evils. It is generally the case when damage is first reported that it is greatly overestimated. The first appearance of frost, for instance, creates an idea in the farmers' mind that his grain is entirely spoiled, but when the frost is gone and his wheat is still there he immediately rushes to the other extreme and says there was no damage whatever. The fact of the matter is that the real damage by frost does not show itself immediately. A frozen apple, when the frost is first extracted, looks perfectly sound and plump, but two or three days afterward it rapidly decays. The same rule is applicable to wheat. From reports received at the railroad offices it would appear that the reports of damage to crops from frost has been greatly exaggerated. That there has been frosts in the northern part of the state there can be no doubt, but in most localities the wheat was so far advanced that nothing short of a freeze, that is to say, a hard enough frost to freeze water, could do any damage. When the wheat is in the milk a very slight frost can do inestimable damage, but in the next stage when the wheat is in the dough and begins to harden, a slight frost does not effect it as it would tomato and similar vines. In the Red river valley most the wheat is beyond the milk state and harvesting will begin next week. South of Fargo there has been no damage whatever, and north of Fargo there has been only slight damage to a few scattering fields, and nothing like the widespread damage that was reported.

A Big Cyclone in the East.

A cyclone passed across the state about six miles below Wilmington, Del., cutting a path about 200 feet in width, leveling trees, orchards and out buildings and doing damage estimated at $150,000. So far as known but one person was killed. In Wilmington the buildings of the Neblow Bros' iron works were wrecked in an instant. Huge timbers were tossed about as though they had been straws. A workman employed in the works was killed by the flying timbers. The next moment the cloud descended upon the creek. Five small boats were capsized and two men, Abraham Knight and William Collins, who were in one of the boats, were drowned. The darkness seemed to grow more dense as the funnel-shaped cloud reached the town. It jumped the Pennsylvania railroad depot to Busey and Jones' and the car shops, tore away 100 feet from the end of the car repair building, crossed the Brandywine and went off in the direction of the oil works.

FIFTIETH CONGRESS.

Wednesday August 22.

SENATE:—The senate started the beginning of a mighty political battle that bids fair to make some music for the country before it is finished. Mr. Chandler called up his resolution providing for an investigation of the frauds which were so palpable in the late Louisiana elections. He also referred to the outrages in Washington county, Texas, which enraged Reagan and Coke, the senators from Texas who denied the accusations.

Senator Davis presented to the senate a petition from a large number of citizens of Fergus Falls asking for the passage of house bill 9,234, for the relief of the heirs of William Goffer.

Senator Beck offered an amendment to the house tariff bill an additional section suspended until further order of congress all laws relating to the sinking fund, and had it referred to the finance committee. He also introduced a bill repealing all laws relating to the sinking fund, and asked that it be laid on the table until the decision on his amendment to the tariff bill.

A bill was passed appropriating an additional $200,000 to be used by the president in his discretion to prevent the spread of yellow fever and cholera.

HOUSE.—Mr. Townshend, of Illinois, presented the conference report upon the army appropriation bill, which in the House appropriated $2,462,900 and in the Senate $3,531,000; and as agreed upon by the conference committee $2,938,100. The report was agreed to without division.

Thursday August 23.

SENATE.—The immediate adjournment of the Senate on receipt of the President's message on the fisheries was the main incident in today's proceedings. A bill to amend the 11th section of the act authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi river at St. Louis (by striking out the word "stockholders") was reported by Mr. Vest, from the committe on commerce, and passed. The resolution offered yesterday by Mr. Edmunds fixing the daily hour of meeting of the Senate at 12 o'clock was adopted.

Mr. Chandler then resumed and finished his speech begun yesterday on the resolution for the investigation of the Louisana state election frauds. The resolutions reported from the Judiciary committee on the suppression of colored voters at the municipal election in Jackson, Miss., last January, were taken up, and Mr. Wilson, of Iowa, spoke in support of them.

Mr. Pruden, one of the President's secretaries, appeared and delivered "a message in writing" from the President to the Senate. It was a duplicate of the message relating to the fisheries subsequently delivered and read in the House. Mr. Wilson, as soon as the message was announced, yielded to Mr. Edmunds who moved an adjournment.

HOUSE.—The feature of the day was the reading of the President's message on the fisheries.

Within three minutes after the reading of the message, Wilson of Minn., offered a bill covering the exact points in the message upon which the President demands legislation.

Mr. Crane introduced a joint resolution authorizing the President to veto specific items in appropriation bills.

Friday August 24.

SENATE.—The President's message on the fisheries treaty was read before the Senate. Mr. Sherman moved that it be printed and referred to the committee on foreign relations.

Senator Edmunds spoke at some length on the message as did also Senators Sherman, Morgan and Hale.

The debate closed with a controversy between Mr. Beck and Mr. Sherman about the fiscal policy of the administration, and Mr. Sherman's responsibility for the tariff and the sinking fund and trusts.

Mr. Morgan introduced in the Senate a bill identical in terms with that introduced in the House by Mr. Wilson to give effect to the President's message on the treaty.

HOUSE.—The conference report on the bill for the erection of an appraiser's warehouse in New York city was agreed to.

A resolution was passed directing the printing of 15,000 copies of the President's message on the fisheries treaty.

Saturday August 25.

SENATE.—The fortifications bill is in the hands of the senate committee, and liable to stay there, for if the army bill is agreed to, as it ultimately will be, the fortifications bill will be a superfluity, its provisions being almost identical with those of the army bill. The deficiency bill is causing the house a good deal of trouble, but will probably pass early in the week, minus the French spoilation clause, which the senate will probably reinsert when it has its chance at the bill. The fellows who are trying to keep the machinery of legislation moving are getting tired of calls of the house, and have revoked all leaves of absence to take effect on Monday next.

HOUSE.—The House spent most of the time to-day vainly endeavoring to secure the presence of a quorum and in discussing means and methods to insure the presence of a majority early next week.

A resolution reported from the judiciary committee, calling on the attorney-general for information as to the number of convictions that have been made for the offences of polygamy, and adultery in Utah and Idaho, and also the number of pardons granted to persons so convicted, was adopted. Mr. Burns, of Missouri, moved that the house go into committee of the whole on the deficiency appropriation bill, but there was no quorum present.

Tuesday, August 28.

SENATE.—Mr. Plumb, from the committee on public lands, reported back the senate bill to forfeit lands granted to the state of Michigan to aid in the construction of a railroad from Marquette to Ontonagon, and gave notice that in a few days he would call it up for consideration.

A new conference on the army appropriation bill was agreed to and Senators Allison, Plumb and Gorman were appointed conferees.

Representative Mason offered a resolution citing the fact that the administration of the treasury department had deposited with the national banks without drawing a cent of interest $60,000,000, worth to the banks, at 5 per cent per annum, at least $10,000 per day, and calling for an investigation to ascertain if the charge that the banks were making large contributions to the Democratic campaign fund as an indirect consideration for this privilege.

HOUSE.—Mr. Cannon, of Illinois, and Mr. Bynum, of Indiana, indulged in some rather lively personalities in regard to the statement recently made by the latter gentleman that Levi P. Morton, while a member of the Forty-sixth congress, had voted in favor of a motion to lay on the table a bill to enforce the provisions of the eight hour law. The fact was developed that, according to the Record, Mr. Morton had voted as stated by Mr. Bynum, but according to the journal of the house Mr. Morton had not voted at all.

Mr. Davis, of Massachusetts introduced a resolution requesting the president to communicate to the house copies of all communications addressed by his direction to the government of Great Britain, remonstrating against the breach of the treaty of 1871, whereby Great Britain promised to the United States equality in the matter of canal transportation, and the replies of Great Britain to such communications.

A Queer Bank Note.

From the Hartford Times.

A. M. Craig of Southington, has a curiosity in the shape of a bank note, on one side of which is a promise to pay $10 and on the reverse $20. In 1861, among the notes made by the government for the Second National bank of Springfield, Mass., there was an error in printing one sheet of three bills, and they were signed and paid out, first to the town and then to the fire department and then to the merchants. The error was of course, at once discoveried and the bills called in. Two of the number were found and destroyed, but the third was lost. Mr. Craig not long ago was shown some curiosities, among them this bill. He made an offer for it which was accepted. He has already been offered over $200 for it by curiosity seekers.

DOINGS IN MINNESOTA.

John Anderson, living in East Red Wing, was committed to the county jail for cruelly beating his child.

The dates of the Wright county fair have been changed to Sept 25-28. This is the same week the Meeker fair will be held.

The artesian well at Benson has reached a depth of a little over 500 feet and they are still drilling in solid rock.

At Winona 411 dogs have been licensed. A good many have been killed or given to farmers to avoid the tax.

Willie Warner, eleven years old, was drowned in the river at the cement works while bathing at Mankato.

Applications are coming into the normal school at Winona, so rapidly that the prospects are good for an increase over the large attendance it usually has.

The Red Wing fire department will not, in all probability, contest for any of the prizes at the Minneapolis exposition. They do not think the prizes large enough.

Miss Mary Keyes, who has been in the public schools of Winona for twenty-two years, has resigned her position to take a place in the normal.

John B. Till of Lake township has been put under $300 bonds to keep the peace toward F. J. Schmauss of Lake City, for three months. He is accused of threatening to kill Mr. Mr. Schmauss.

Already 170 feet have been reached at the Freeborn gas wells of the Minnesota Natural Gas, Oil and Fuel Company, of Albert Lea. The big machinery of the state is used, and the Trenton limestone, now reached, is being drilled as fast as possible.

The Park Region Pioneer joins the Mankato Democrat in urging the governor to pardon W. F. Mirick, a printer sentenced to the penitentiary for life for shooting the traducer of his wife. It says he has children, an aged mother and an invalid sister who need his care.

Col. Sheehan, White Earth Indian agent, completed another inspection of his berry pickers and having found better picking near Motley and Pillager collected Old Soldier's band and removed them there. The agent has just come down from White Earth, and is enthusiastic over the crop prospect on the reservation.

A six-year-old daughter of Charles Johnson, at St. Cloud, was run over by a runaway and shockingly mangled, probably fatally. The left leg had been stepped upon and the flesh torn from the bone by the calks of the horse's shoes, and hardly a square inch of the little one's body, head and face, but what was cut and bruised.

We have to say generally of the wheat crop, says the editor of the Moorhead News, that it is not as good as it promised to be earlier in the season. It is not well filled; the heads are small, and the berry is shrunken. The yield will not greatly exceed last years's crop, and we doubt if the quality will be as good, except it will not be so foul with weed and grass seeds. The oat crop is large and fine to all appearances.

Capt. B. P. Shuler and other ex-members of the Ninth Minnesota regiment are making arrangements for a reunion of that regiment at L. P. Plumber Post hall, Minneapolis, on Friday Sept. 14. The sham battle at the state fair will take place on the day following, and survivors from different points of the state are expected to visit St. Paul and Minneapolis at that time. There are about two hundred and fifty Ninth Minnesoto regiment men still living in Minnesota.

Capt. W. A. Thompson, of the United States engineer corps, arrived at Lake City and will put a force of men at work to repair the damages done by ice last spring to the government piers at this place and Stockholm, Wis. He thinks $400 will cover the expense of repairs to the pier here, but the Stockholm pier is so badly injured that to put it in good condition again will take the unused balance of the appropriation made to build it, some $5,000.

A party of Winona merchants, consisting of Messrs. Preece, Matthews, Van Norman and Fleishman, were driving into Minnesota City, when the neck yoke broke as they were descending the hill near the village. The team immediately ran. Messrs. Preece and Matthews jumped from the carriage, but Messrs. Van Norman and Fleishman hung on for two miles when they were obliged to leap out. Horses and men eventually escaped without serious damage, but the carriage was wrecked.

Considerable feeling has been aroused among some of the citizens of Winona owing to the intention of the Southwestern railroad of constructing the road along the south side of the lake, thereby practically rendering the beautiful drive on that side useless for pleasure or business. The board of trade had a committee of citizens appointed under its auspices to confer with the railroad officials. The building of the line on the north side will demand one half a mile more road and an increased expense of perhaps $50,000. As the city will not vote another bonus and no private citizens care to guarantee this increase, it is probable that the city, through lack of foresight, will lose what would have eventually become a magnificent boulevard.

TALMAGE AT HOME.

"Trouble on Both Sides," the Subject of his Sermon at Brooklyn.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 19.—The Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage's subject today was: "Trouble on Both Sides," and his text: "There was a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side."—I Samuel, xiv. 4.

The cruel army of the Philistines must be taken and scattered. There is just one man, accompanied by his bodyguard, to do that thing. Jonathan is the hero of the scene. I know that David cracked the skull of the giant with a few pebbles well slung, and that 300 Gideonites scattered 10,000 Amalekites by the crash of broken crockery; but here is a more wonderful conflict. Yonder are the Philistines on the rocks. Here is Jonathan with his bodyguard in the valley. On the one side is a rock called Bozez; on the other side is a rock called Seneh. These two were as famous in olden times as are Plymouth Rock and Gibraltar in modern times. They were precipitous, unscalable and sharp. Between these two rocks Jonathan must make his ascent. The day comes for the scaling of the height. Jonathan, on his hands and feet, begins the ascent. With strain, and slip and bruise, I suppose, but still on and up, first goes Jonathan, and then goes his bodyguard. Bozez on one side, Seneh on the other. After a sharp tug, and push, and climbing, I see the head of Jonathan above the hole in the mountain; and there is a challenge, and a fight, and a supernatural consternation. These two men, Jonathan and his bodyguard, drive back and drive down the Philistines over the rocks, and open a campaign which demolishes the enemies of Israel. I suppose that the overhanging and overshadowing rocks on either side did not balk or dishearten Jonathan or his bodyguard but only roused and filled them with enthusiasm as they went up. "There was a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side."

My friends, you have been, some of you, in this crisis of the text. If a man meets one trouble, he can go through with it. He gathers all his energies, concentrates them upon one point, and in the strength of God, or by his own natural determination, goes through it. But the man who has trouble to the right of him and trouble to the left of him is to be pitied. Did either trouble come alone, he might endure it; but two troubles, two disasters, two overshadowing misfortunes, are Bozez and Seneh. God pity him! "There is a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side."

In this crisis of the text is that man whose fortune and health fail him at the same time. Nine-tenths of all our merchants capsize in business before they come to 45 years of age. There is some collision in commercial circles and they stop payment. It seems as if every man must put his name on the back of a note before he learns what a fool a man is who risks all his own property on the prospect that some man will tell the truth. It seems as if a man must have a large amount of unsalable goods on his own shelf before he learns how much easier it is to buy than to sell. It seems as if every man must be completely burned out before he learns the importance of always keeping fully insured. It seems as if every man must be wrecked in a financial tempest before he learns to keep things snug in case of a sudden cataclysm. When the calamity does come, it is awful. The man goes home in despair and he tells his family: "We'll have to go to the poor house." He takes a dolorous view of everything. It seems as if he never could rise. But a little time passes, and he says: "Why, I am not so badly off after all; I have my family left."

Before the Lord turned Adam out of Paradise he gave him Eve, so that when he lost paradise he could stand it. Permit one who has never read but a few novels in all his life, and who has not a great deal of romance in his composition, to say, that if, when a man's fortune fail, he has a good wife—a good Christian wife—he ought not to be despondent. "Oh," you say, "that only increases the embarrassment, since you have her also to take care of." You are an ingrate, for the woman as often supports the man as the man supports the woman. The man may bring all the dollars, but the woman generally brings the courage and faith in God.

Well, this man of whom I am speaking, looks around, and finds his family is left, and he rallies, and the light comes to his eyes, and the smile to his face, and his courage to his heart. In two years he is quite over it. He makes his financial calamity the first chapter in a new era of prosperity. He met that one trouble—conquered it. He sat down for a little while under the grim shadow of the Rock Bozez; yet he soon rose and began, like Jonathan, to climb. But how often is it that physical ailment comes with financial embarrassment? When the fortune failed it broke the man's spirit. His nerves were shattered. His brain was stunned. I can show you hundreds of men in New York whose fortune and health failed at the same time. They came prematurely to the staff. Their hand trembled with incipient paralysis. They never saw a well day since the hour when they called their creditors together for a compromise. If such men are impatient, and peculiar, and irritable, excuse them.

They had two troubles, either one of which they could have met successfully. If, when the health went, the fortune had been retained, it would not have been so bad. The man could have bought the very best medical advice, and he could have had the very best attendance, and long lines of carriages would have stopped at the front door to inquire as to his welfare. But poverty on the one side, and sickness on the other, are Bozez and Seneh, and they interlock their shadows and drop them upon the poor man's way. God help him! "There is a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side."

Now, what is such a man to do? In the name of Almighty God I will tell him what to do. Do as Jonathan did—climb; climb up into the sunlight of God's favor and consolation. I can go through the churches and show you men who lost fortunes and health at the same time, and yet who sing all day and dream of heaven all night. If you have any idea that sound digestion, and steady nerves, and clear eyesight, and good hearing, and plenty of friends are necessary to make a man happy, you have miscalculated. I suppose that these overhanging rocks only made Jonathan scramble the harder and the faster to get up and out into the sunlight; and this combined shadow of invalidism and financial embarrassment has often sent a man up the quicker into the sunlight of God's favor and the noonday of His glorious promises. It is a difficult thing for a man to feel his dependence upon God when he has $10,000 in the bank, and $50,000 in government securities, and a block of stores and three ships.

"Well," the man says to himself, "it is silly for me to pray 'Give me this day my daily bread,' when my pantry full, and the canals from the West are crowded with breadstuffs destined for my storehouses." Oh, my friends, if the combined misfortunes and disasters of life have made you climb up into the arms of a sympathetic and compassionate God, through all eternity you will bless Him that in this world "there was a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side."

Again, that man is in the crisis of the text who has home troubles and outside persecution at the same time. The world treats a man well just as long as ever it pays to treat him well. As long as it can manufacture success out of his bone, and brain, and muscle, it favors him. The world fattens the horse it wants to drive. But let a man see it his duty to cross the track of the world, then every bush is full of thorns and tusks and thrust at him. They will belittle him. They will caricature him. They will call his generosity self-aggrandizement, and his piety sanctimoniousness. The very worst persecution will some time come upon him from those who profess to be christians.

John Milton—great and good John Milton—so forgot himself as to pray, in so many words, that his enemies might be thrown down into the darkest and deepest gulf of hell, and be the undermost and most dejected and the lowest down vassals of perdition! And Martin Luther so far forgot himself as to say, in regard to his theological opponents: "Put them in whatever sauce you please, roasted, or fried, or baked, or stewed, or boiled, or hashed, they are nothing but asses!" Ah, my friends, if John Milton or Martin Luther could come down to such scurrility, what you may not expect from less elevated opponents? Now, the world sometimes takes after them; the newspapers take after them; public opinion takes after them; and the unfortunate man is lied about until all the dictionary of Billingsgate is exhausted on him. You often see a man whom you know to be good, and pure, and honest, set upon by the world and mauled by whole communities, while vicious men put on a supercilious air of condemnation of him; as though Lord Jeffreys should write an essay on gentleness, or Henry VIII. talk about purity, or Herod take to blessing little children.

Now, a certain amount of persecution rouses a man's defiance, stirs his blood for magnificent battle, and makes him fifty times more a man than he would have been without the persecution. So it was with the great reformer when he said: "I will not be put down; I will be heard." And so it was with Millard, the preacher, in the time of Louis XI. When Louis XI sent word to him that unless he stopped preaching in that style he would throw him into the river, he replied: "Tell the king that I will reach heaven sooner by water than he will reach it by fast horses." A certain amount of persecution is a tonic and inspiration, but too much of it, and too long continued, becomes the rock Bozez, throwing a dark shadow over a man's life. What is he to do then? Go home, you say. Good advice, that. That is just the place for a man to go when the world abuses him. Go home. Blessed be God for our quiet and sympathetic homes. But there is many a man who has the reputation of having a home when he has none. Through unthinkingness of precipitation there are many matches made that ought never to have been made. An officiating priest cannot alone unite a couple. The Lord Almighty must proclaim banns. There is many a home in which there is no sympathy, and no happiness, and no good cheer. The clamor of the battle may not have been heard outside, but God knows, notwithstanding the playing of the "Wedding March," and all the odor of the orange blossoms and the benediction of the officiating pastor, there has been no marriage.

Sometimes men have awakened to find on one side of them the rock of persecution, and on the other side the rock of domestic infelicity. What shall such a one do? Do as Jonathan did—climb. Get up the heights of God's consolation, from which we may look down in triumph upon outside persecution and home trouble. While good and great John Wesley was being silenced by the magistrates and having his name written on the board fences of London in doggerel, at the same time his wife was making him as miserable as she could—acting as though she were possessed with the devil, as I suppose she was; never doing him a kindness until the day she ran away, so that he wrote in his diary these words: "I did not forsake her; I have not dismissed her; I will not recall her." Planting one foot, John Wesley did, upon outside persecution, and the other foot on home trouble, he climbed up into the heights of Christian joy, and after preaching 40,000 sermons, and traveling 270,000 miles, reached the heights of heaven, though in this world he had it hard enough—"a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other."

Again, that woman stands in the crisis of the text who has bereavement and a struggle for livelihood at the same time. Without mentioning names, I speak from observation. Ah, it is a hard thing for a woman to make an honest living, even when her heart is not troubled, and she has a fair cheek and the magnetism of an exquisite presence. But now the husband or the father is dead. The expenses of the obsequies have absorbed all that was left in the savings bank; and wan and wasted with weeping and watching, she goes forth—a grave, a hearse, a coffin behind her—to contend for her existence and the existence of her children. When I see such a battle as that open I shut my eyes at the ghastliness of the spectacle. Men sit with embroidered slippers and write heartless essays about women's wages; but that question is made up of tears and blood, and there is more blood than tears. Oh! give women free access to all the realms where she can get a livelihood, from the telegraph office to the pulpit. Let men's wages be cut down before her's are cut down. Men have iron in their souls and can stand it. Make the way free to her of the broken heart. May God put into my hand the cold, bitter cup of privation, and give me nothing but a widowless hut for shelter for many years, rather than that after I am dead there should go out from my home into the pitiless world a woman's arm to fight the Gettysburg, the Austerlitz, the Waterloo of life, for bread.

And yet how many women there are seated between the rock of bereavement on the one side and the rock of destitution on the other, Bozez and Seneh interlocking their shadow and dropping them upon her miserable way. "There is a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side." What are such to do? Somehow, let them climb up into the heights of the glorious promise: "Leave thy fatherless children; I will preserve them alive; and let thy widows trust in Me." Or get up into the heights of that other glorious promise: "The Lord preserveth the stranger and relieveth the widow and the fatherless." O! ye sewing woman on starving wages. O! ye widows turned out from the once beautiful home. O! ye female teachers kept on niggardly stipend. O! ye despairing women, seeking in vain for work, wandering along the docks and thinking to throw yourself into the river last night. O! ye women of weak nerves and aching sides, and short breath and broken heart, you need something more than human sympathy; you need the sympathy of God. Climb up into his arms. He knows it all, and he loves you more than father, or mother, or husband ever did; and instead of sitting down, wringing your hands in despair, you had better begin to climb. There are heights of consolation for you, though now "there is a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side."

Again, that man is in the crisis of the text who has a wasted life on one side, and an illuminated eternity on the other. Though a man may all his life have cultured, deliberation and self-poise, if he gets into that position all his self-possession is gone. There are all the wrong thoughts of his existence, all the wrong deeds, all the wrong words—straits above straits, gigantic, ponderous, overshadowing. That rock I call Bozez. On the other side are all the retributions of the future, the thrones of judgment, the eternal ages, angry with his long defiance. That rock I call Seneh. Between these two rocks Lord Byron perished, and Alcibiades perished, and Herod perished, and ten thousand times ten thousand have perished. O! man immortal, man redeemed, man blood-bought, climb out of those shadows. Climb up by the way of the Cross. Have your wasted life forgiven; have your eternal life secured. This morning just take one look to the past and see what it has been, and take one look to the future and see what it threatens to be. You can afford to lose your health, you can afford to lose your property, you can afford to lose your reputation; but you cannot afford to lose your soul. That bright, gleaming, glorious, precious, eternal possession you must carry aloft in the day when the earth burns up and the heavens burst.

You see from my subject that when a man goes into the safety and peace of the gospel he does not demean himself. There is nothing in religion that leads to meanness or unmanliness. The gospel of Jesus Christ only asks you to climb as Jonathan did—climb toward God, climb toward heaven, climb into the sunshine of God's favor. To become a Christian is not to go meanly down; it is to come gloriously up—up into the communion of saints, up into the peace that passeth all understanding, up into the companionship of angels. He lives up; he dies up.

O! then, accept the wholesale invitation which I make this morning to all the people. Come up from between a wasted life and unillumined eternity. Like Jonathan, climb up with your might, and instead of sitting down to wring your hands in the shadow and in the darkness—"a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side."

The Catholics of Highland, Wis., a mining town, are considerably excited over a suit begun in the Iowa county circuit by J. F. Grace, an attorney at law, against Rev. Father Thomas Dempsey, pastor of the Catholic church in that town, to recover $15,000 damages for an alleged assault made upon plaintiff by Father Dempsey and several of his friends, who are made co-defendants, by way of revenge for the charge preferred by Grace that the said priest had been improperly intimate with his wife, a beautiful young woman of Highland, who plaintiff married in 1882. All the parties to the suit are members of Father Dempsey's church.

A son and daughter of F. D. Goodrich, living twelve miles north at Lake Byran, Dak., fell under a load of grain the other day. The girl may recover from her injuries, but it is feared the boy will not.

THE LOG CABINS of America have been birthplaces of some of the grandest men. Lincoln, Grant, Sheridan, first saw the light of day through the chinks of a Log Cabin. Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla also originated in a Log Cabin and stands pre-eminent among the blood purifiers of to-day as Warner's "Tippecanoe" does as a stomach tonic.

Reading Over Old Letters.

Boston Herald.

In these busy days how many people ever find time to rummage out a package of time-stained old letters, and then yield themselves up to the spell of quietly reading them? No; even if going away to the seashore or the mountains, they preferably stow away a novel or two in the valise, and trust to these to supply them with all needful romance. And yet there is more romance to be got out of one package of old letters from intimate associates of one's youth than out of half a circulating library of novels. With most men and women of forty or fifty the unstirred memory of the early days of life has grown utterly vague and shadowy. All forgotten with them is how they used to exult, and weep, and hope and despair—all forgotten how rapturous the wine of youth was; how bitter its dregs and lees. But now comes the package of old letters to the rescue. Under its enchanting wand the sensations become positively startling, as the diorama of the past begins to unroll, and scene after scene breaks in with its old vivid associations.

The first to be opened is, perhaps, a letter from the long dead, dear old mother. It was was written when her boy first left for the boarding school, or to seek his fortune in the world, and, with the re-reading of it across the abyss of time, how the heart beats again with the old hopes and fears, the old clinging embrace, the old boyish resolve never to bring grief or shame on such devotion. Next comes a letter from a Damon or Pythias of a far-away schoolmate. "Poor Tom!" the heart sinks before one begins to read, as one recalls how sad a fate in life the unhappy fellow had. But no trace of foreboding in the letter! Tom is the old young Tom of fourteen years. He has just been to a dancing party, where he had a cotillion and the Virginia reel with airy, fairy Mary Phelps. She looked like an angel, Tom's affidavit for it. Her eyes danced with joy, and Tom thought he knew the reason why. Then follows a college letter. It was from the reader's dear proud sister. She had heard all about her brother's class-day oration. Susan Alcott had written her that it was pronounced a combination of the charm of Cicero, the fire of Demosthenes, and the Ganges volume of Burke. Yes, the rejuvenated old fellow remembers this was just what he once believed of himself, and he was finally sure of, when his classmates flocked round and nearly shook his arms off.

And then the failures! Ah! the glamour of beauty time and distance throw over steep and ragged experiences. Why may not heaven at last turn out to be just such a "reading of old letters?"

The United States secret service officers have just made a most important arrest of counterfeiters in New York. There have been extensively circulated throughout the country a large quantity of silver certificates of the denomination of $5. The officers located the headquarters of the gang at No. 485 East Thirty-fifth street and arrested Gittano Russo and wife, the leaders of the gang. A quantity of bills already printed were seized together with a large quantity of blank paper ready for printing and a lot of counterfeiting tools.

PROF. LOISETTE WINS IN COURT.

Literary Piracy Condemned.

From New York Sun.

"Chief Justice Van Brunt, holding the Special Term of the Supreme Court yesterday on the application of Nelson Smith and Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, made the injunction in favor of Prof. Loisette, restraining George S. Fellows from publishing his Memory System perpetual.

"Dr. William A. Hammond, Daniel Greenleaf Thompson, author of a work on psychology, and several other professors testified that Prof. Loisette's system was original, being a new departure in the education of the memory. The Court ordered Fellows to deliver up to Prof. Loisette the stereotype plates and all the books in his control. Over nine thousand copies of the pirated edition were delivered up yesterday.

It is stated that full details will be furnished in the prospectus sent post free by Prof. A. Loisette, 237 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Hon. C. F. Templeton has been appointed Associate justice of Dakota.

During the war, Dr. Lloyd, of Ohio, from exposure contracted consumption. He says: "I have no hesitation in saying that it was by the use of Allen's Lung Balsam that I am now alive and enjoying perfect health." Don't experiment with new and untried medicines. If you have a cough or cold, take at once Allen's Lung Balsam.

Near Monticello at a Baptist meeting a desperate fight occurred between the Tyler and Malone families and their friends. Thirty shots were fired in less than one minute. James Malone and Sam Tyler were instantly killed, Ed Tyler was mortally wounded, and Walker Malone and several others severely.

Life of Ben Harrison.

BY THE AUTHOR OF BEN HUR.

Gen. Lew Wallace we hear has removed to Indianapolis, and is busily engaged writing a Biography of his old friend, Gen. Ben. Harrison.

Rarely has so happy a combination been known as that resulting in the issue of this work. Gen. Lew Wallace, known the world over as the author of, "Ben Hur," is one of Gen. Harrison's life-long and trusted friends, and is also a distinguished soldier, a trained statesman, and a diplomat of high national reputation.

His name as author gives at once the assurance of a biography of extraordinary merit.

His long and intimate acquaintance with his distinguished subject will enable him to prepare rapidly an authentic and deeply interesting biography.

His large experience in national and international affairs fits him to treat understandingly and ably of General Harrison's superb record as a statesman, and clearly to unfold the principles held by him respecting the science of good government, and the weighty issues at stake in the present great contest.

Gen. Wallace at first declined this task but upon the urgent solicitation of many eminent men of the party, and Gen. Harrison's assurance that everything needful should be placed at his disposal, so as to make it the strictly authentic, and only authorized Biography, he yielded to the call, and has agreed to complete the work for publication early in August.

R. H. Stoddard, the poet, has a lock of hair believed to have been cut from the head of Milton.

Directory of Minneapolis Wholesale Houses.

COMMISSION—Hillman Bros., 14 Bridge Square. Bush & Curtis, 22 Bridge Square.
CONFECT'ERS—Paris-Murton & Co. 118 Wash Av N.
DRUGS—Lyman-Eliel Drug Co. 100 Wash. Av. N.
GROCERS—Geo. R. Newell & Co. 3d St & 1st Av N.
GUNS & Sporting G'ds—Kennedy Bros. 36 Wash Av S
" Harrison, Farrington & Co. 200 1st Av S.
HARDWARE—Miller Bros & Fletcher, 119 2d st S.
MANTELS &c—Farnham Marble & Mantel Co 38 S 3d St
STOVES, &c.—N. W. Stove Works, 113 1st Av. S.
SADDLERY H'd'w., Dodson, Fisher & Brockmann, 15 3d St. N.

Judge Thurman meets with an enthusiastic reception at Port Huron.

Mme. Romero, the wife of the Mexican minister at Washington, is said to have no superior among the ladies at the capital as an entertainer.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria,

Dr. Talmadge received $1,200 for two talks at the Piedmont Chautauqua.

"Purgatory Bullets."

An excited Irishman lately rushed into a Boston drug store, having a "broken up" appearance generally. "Be jabbers"! he yelled, "I'm all wrong entoirely. I want some shtuff to straighten me out. Some o' thim 'Purgatory Bullets' will fix me, I'm thinkin'. What d'ye tax for thim"? "What do you mean"? asked the clerk. "'Purgatory Bullets,' sor, or somethin' loike that, they call thim," replied the man. "Shure, I'm in purgatory already, with headache, and liver complaint, and bad stomach, and the divil knows what all." The clerk passed out a vial of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, and Pat went off contented. These little Pellets cure all derangements of liver, stomach and bowels. Sugar-coated, little larger than mustard seeds, and pleasant to take. Druggists.

Millionaire Flood of San Francisco and his wife and daughter are still at Hamburg.

Shall Women be Allowed to Vote?

The question of female suffrage has agitated the tongues and pens of reformers for many years, and good arguments have been adduced for and against it. Many of the softer sex could vote intelligently, and many would vote as their husbands did, and give no thought to the merits of a political issue. They would all vote for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, for they know it is a boon to their sex. It is unequaled for the cure of leucorrhea, abnormal discharges, morning sickness, and the countless ills to which women are subject. It is the only remedy for woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. See guarantee on wrapper around bottle.

An order for a receiver has been made against Herapathe, Delmar & Co., brokers, East London.

PIMPLES, BLACKHEADS, RED, ROUGH, and OILY SKIN prevented or cured by that greatest of all Skin Beautifiers, the CUTICURA SOAP.

Produces the loveliest, whitest clearest skin, and softest hands. Absolutely pure, delicately medicated, exquisitely perfumed, astonishingly effective. It is simply incomparable as a Skin Soap and for the Toilet, Bath, and Nursery. Sale greater than that of all other medicated toilet soaps in the world. Sold throughout the world.

POTTER DRUG & CHEMICAL CO., BOSTON, U. S. A. Send for "How to Purify and Beautify the Skin."

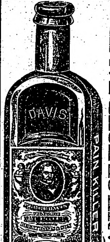
SICK HEADACHE

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills. They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side. TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable. Price 25 Cents.

CARTER MEDICINE CO., NEW YORK.

Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price.



IF ANY OF YOUR FAMILY are troubled with Cholera, Cramps or Bowel Complaint, give them PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER.

DO NOT FORGET
Perry Davis' Pain Killer

At this season of the year it is always well to keep it on hand.

Do not trifle with yourselves by testing untried remedies. Be sure you call for, and get the genuine PAIN-KILLER, as many worthless nostrums are attempted to be sold on the great reputation of this valuable medicine. Directions accompany each bottle. Price 25 cts., 50 cts. and $1 per bottle.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

MARVELOUS MEMORY DISCOVERY.

Any book learned in one reading. Mind wandering cured. Speaking without notes. Wholly unlike artificial systems. Piracy condemned by Supreme Court. Great inducements to correspondence classes. Prospectus, with opinions of Dr. Wm. A. Hammond, the world-famed Specialist in Mind diseases, Daniel Greenleaf Thompson, the great Psychologist, and others, sent post free by Prof. A. LOISETTE, 237 Fifth Ave., New York.

HALF FARE TO THE EXPOSITION!

ARTIFICIAL LIMBS.

Some of you will need something in this line. Those who do can not afford to miss seeing A. A. Winkler's Patent Slip-Socket Limb. Guaranteed not to vitiate the stump. Also, Patent Self-Adjusting Shoulder Straps. 242 Nicollet, rear Molloy's Minneapolis.

Does the Earth Really Move?

Science says that it does, but we cannot help wondering sometimes if there isn't some mistake about it, when we see how stubbornly certain old fogies cling to their musty and antiquated ideas. It was believed once that consumption was incurable, and although it has been clearly demonstrated that it is not, thousands of old-time physicians close their eyes and put their hands to their ears and refuse to abandon the theory. But for all that the world moves on, and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery continues to rescue sufferers from consumptives' graves. It is a sure cure for this dreaded disease, if taken in time. All scrofulous diseases—and consumption is included in the list—yield to it.

Sir Edward Vincent, the financial adviser of the khedive of Egypt, is making a brief tour in the United States.

Moxie.

Old men use Moxie the year round to keep their nervous system strong enough to support the functions of their body, and mend up the break down of a long business life. The young city bloods to remove the effects from liquors and a night of dissipation. A tumbler full will break a recent intoxication in an hour, with no ill effects of stimulation.

The only surviving member of Carlyle's family now left in England is a brother of his, James Carlyle.

The North Star Lung and Throat Balsam is a sure cure for Coughs and Colds.

Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in many cases removes the tumors. It is equally efficacious in curing all Skin Diseases. DR. SWAYNE & SON, Proprietors, Philadelphia. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT can be obtained of druggists. Sent by mail for 50 Cents.

BARBED WIRE.

If you have barbed wire fences, keep Veterinary Carbolisalve in your stables. It cures without a scar and renews the hair its original color. 50 cents and $1.00 at Druggists or by mail. Cole & Co., Black River Falls, Wis.

Blood Poison

Whether originating in disease, or from handling chemical or vegetable poisons, is cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which thoroughly cleanses, purifies and enriches the blood.

"I was poisoned by poison ivy, and the poison got into my blood, when I was obliged to give up work, and was confined to my house for two months. I had sores and scales on me from head to feet, my finger nails came off, and my hair and whiskers came out. Hood's Sarsaparilla helped me so much that I continued taking it till I had used three bottles, when I was cured. GEORGE W VUNK, Brockport, N. Y.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

To introduce it into A MILLION FAMILIES we offer the LADIES' HOME JOURNAL AND PRACTICAL HOUSEKEEPER From NOW to JAN'Y, 1889 Four months—balance of this year, ON RECEIPT OF ONLY 10 CENTS Silver or Stamps.

Breakfast and Dinner Parties—Home Cooking, Dainties and Desserts. Teas, Suppers, Luncheons and Receptions. Gives explicitly all the little details women want to know. Tells how to entertain guests, how to serve refreshments, what to have and how to make it. Everything new and original, practical and well tested by experts. Accompanying the recipes will be remarks upon pretty table adjuncts, methods of serving and waiting, garnishing, table manners and etiquette.

Children's Page—Illustrated Stories.

Flowers and House Plants—finely illustrated articles, edited by EBEN E. REXFORD, with "Answers to Correspondents."

Mother's Corner—A page devoted to the care of infants and young children. Interesting letters from subscribers giving views and methods of management. Original articles from the best writers. Illustrated articles on Games and Home-made Toys. Amusements for Sick Children. Illustrated. Kindergarten. Illustrated articles by ANNA W. BARNARD.

CURTIS PUBLISHING CO., Philadelphia.

HUDSON CLOTHIER.

The finest, largest and only thoroughly complete stock of Clothing for Men, Boys and Youths' wear in the Northwest. No trash. Good, honest goods, and at figures beyond competition. Send to us for anything you need in Clothing, Furnishings, or Hats or Caps, and you will be astounded. We came to do the Clothing business of the Northwest, are doing it, and always will.

SO DEAL WITH US.

Rules for self-measurement furnished on application. Satisfaction guaranteed.

HEAD AND SHOULDERS OVER ALL!

J. L. HUDSON
CLOTHIER,
Corner Seventh and Robert Sts.,
Hotel Ryan Block, St. Paul, Minn.

REDDING'S RUSSIA SALVE

Northwestern Tinware M'f'g Co.

Manufacturers of
Bick, Wood and Iron Jacketed Shipping Cans, Iron Clad Milk Cans, Creamery Cans, etc.
LOWEST PRICES,
Address,
N. W. TINWARE M'F'G CO.,
63 South Robert Street.
ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA.

BEAUTY of Skin & Scalp RESTORED by the CUTICURA Remedies.

NOTHING IS KNOWN TO SCIENCE AT ALL comparable to the CUTICURA REMEDIES in their marvelous properties of cleansing, purifying and beautifying the skin, and in curing torturing, disfiguring, itching, scaly and pimply diseases of the skin, scalp and blood, with loss of hair.

CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, and CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Beautifier, prepared from it, externally, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood Purifier, internally, cure every form of skin and blood disease, from pimples to scrofula.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; RESOLVENT, $1; SOAP, 25c. Prepared by the POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CO., Boston, Mass. Send for "How to Cure Skin Diseases."

Pimples, blackheads, chapped and oily skin prevented by CUTICURA SOAP.

Dull Aches, Pains and Weaknesses instantly relieved by the CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER, the only pain-killing plaster. 25c.

Tutt's Pills

To purge the bowels does not make them regular but leaves them in worse condition than before. The liver is the the seat of trouble, and must act on it. Tutt's Liver Pills act directly on that organ, causing a free flow of bile, without which, the bowels are always constipated. Price, 25c.

THE REMEDY

Sold Everywhere.
Office, 44 Murray St., New York.

GOLD is worth $500 per lb. Pettit's Eye Salve is worth $1000, but is sold at 25 cents a box by dealers.

$5 TO $8 A DAY. Samples worth $1.50 FREE. Lines not under the horse' feet. Write BREWSTER SAFETY REIN HOLDER CO., Holly, Mich.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION

GLEK—HARMLESS. Positive Cure for falling Manhood. Gives solid health. $1 bottle. by drug's. Glek Co., 33 N. State st, Chicago

LACTATED FOOD
ENDORSED BY 10,000 PHYSICIANS

As a perfect food for invalids, in dyspepsia, fevers, sick headache, diarrhoea, feeble digestion, and all wasting diseases, and for infants deprived of mother's milk, or when weaning.

The Favorite Food in Hospitals

Hahnemann Hospital.
NEW YORK CITY.
"We have been using Lactated Food for several months past in cases of dyspepsia, after operations, and with children, and in all cases it has answered admirably. We would gladly recommend it as a food easily digested, nutritious, and not disagreeable to the patient."
F. S. FULTON, M. D., House Surgeon.

New York Infant Asylum.
MT. VERNON, N. Y.
"We are using your Lactated Food in our infant asylum whenever we require the use of artificial food, and find it superior to any which we have ever used. Being pleasant to the taste, it is specially adapted to children. We have in our branch institution over 250 children."
Mrs. L. M. BATES,
Chairman of Mt. Vernon Branch.

The Most Palatable, Nutritious, and Digestible Food

THE BEST AND MOST ECONOMICAL FOOD.
150 Meals for an Infant for $1.00.
Easily prepared. At Druggists—25 cts., 50 cts., $1.

A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," free on application.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., BURLINGTON, VT.

TO MAKE
A DELICIOUS BISCUIT
ASK YOUR GROCER FOR
COW-BRAND SODA OR SALERATUS
AND TAKE NO OTHER.

DWIGHT'S SALERATUS

WHEN VISITING MINNEAPOLIS EXPOSITION, & STATE FAIR
DO NOT FAIL TO VISIT
GOODFELLOW'S!
The Largest Dry Goods Store in the Northwest
247 and 249 NICOLLET AVENUE, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Send your name and address for 20th SEMI-ANNUAL CATALOGUE AND SHOPPERS' GUIDE. WHOLESALE PRICES on all goods for Personal or Family Use.

RELIABLE CLOTHING

Men's, Boys' and Children's reliable, well made and durable clothing is what we have been selling for the past Eighteen years that we have been in St. Paul. Who has not heard of the Boston One Price Clothing House, St. Paul? We send rules for self-measurement and price-list post paid to any address. Send us your orders. We guarantee to give you better value for your money than you can obtain elsewhere.

BOSTON One-Price Clothing House
Third St., Cor. of Robert,
ST. PAUL.
ESTABLISHED 1870.
JOSEPH McKEY & Co., St. Paul's Reliable Outfitters.

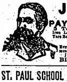
GOLD SEAL OVERSHOES
Are the Best Made.
Beware of Imitations! Every pair has a Gold Seal label attached. If your dealer does not keep them, send for prices to the manufacturers:
GOODYEAR RUBBER CO., St. Paul.

S. E. OLSON & CO.'S
MAMMOTH WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DRY GOODS HOUSE,
213 AND 215 NICOLLET AVENUE, MINNEAPOLIS.
THE CHIEF BARGAIN HOUSE OF THE NORTHWEST.
Mail Orders receive our best attention. Shopping done through this department as advantageously as in person. Send for samples.

10,000 AGENTS WANTED to supply FIFTY MILLIONS people with THE LIFE OF BEN HARRISON By the author of BEN HUR.

Gen. Lew Wallace, the eminent Author, Statesman, Diplomat, and Life-long friend of Gen. Harrison, is writing the only authorized Biography. "No man living more competent."—Ex-Gov. Porter, of Ind. Millions have read Ben Hur and want Ben Harrison by same author. Selling immensely. By mail $2.00. Greatest Money Making book yet. Outfits 50 cts. HUBBARD BROS., 24 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

NORTHWESTERN CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC.
608 1-2 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.
Fall term opens Sept. 3-4-5, 1888. The only first-class music school in the Northwest. The best teachers for all in every branch of musical study. Free classes of the greatest value. Pupils from 16 states and territories. Send for calendar. CHAS. H. MORSE, Director.



JONES HE PAYS the FREIGHT
5 Ton Wagon Scales, Iron Levers, Steel Bearings, Brass Tare Beam and Beam Box for $60.
Every size Scale. For free price list mention this paper and address JONES OF BINGHAMTON, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

ST. PAUL SCHOOL FURNITURE CO., ST. PAUL, MINN.

School Furniture and School Supplies. Correspondence solicited from district officers, and those desiring an agency. Ask for Catalogue D.

The BUYERS' GUIDE is issued March and Sept., each year. It is an encyclopedia of useful information for all who purchase the luxuries or the necessities of life. We can clothe you and furnish you with all the necessary and unnecessary appliances to ride, walk, dance, sleep, eat, fish, hunt, work, go to church, or stay at home, and in various sizes, styles and quantities. Just figure out what is required to do all these things COMFORTABLY, and you can make a fair estimate of the value of the BUYERS' GUIDE, which will be sent upon receipt of 10 cents to pay postage.
MONTGOMERY WARD & CO.
111-114 Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

ALLEN'S IRON TONIC BITTERS
The most Elegant Blood Purifier, Liver Invigorator, Tonic and Appetizer known. The first Bitters containing Iron ever advertised in America. J. P. ALLEN, Druggist & Chemist, St. Paul, Minn.

SCHLIEK & CO.
ST. PAUL MINN.

We carry the largest stock of FINE SHOES in the Northwest. Goods sent C. O. D. on approval. Write for new Illustrated Catalogue and Price list. SCHLIEK & CO., St. Paul, Minn.

MARLIN REPEATING RIFLE
New Model 1888
Just Out.
Uses 32 & 41 cal. Winchester cartridge. Works easier, is simpler, stronger, lighter, than any other.
DON'T BUY TILL YOU SEE IT.
BALLARD
GALLERY, HUNTING AND TARGET RIFLES.
Send for Illustrated Catalogue.
MARLIN FIRE ARMS CO., Box 20 D, NEW HAVEN, CT.

GUNS Fishing Tackle, Pocket Cutlery and General Sporting Goods. Send for Catalogue. CHAS. H. PROUTY & CO., 63-65 Washington St., Chicago.

WANTED AGENTS for our new book "The Life of GEN. SHERIDAN," also a large number of other fast selling books and bibles. Liberal terms. EMPYREAL Pub. House, St. Paul, Minn

PENSIONS $50,000,000 for Soldiers, Sailors, their widows or parents. PENSIONS INCREASED. Discharges procured. No pension, NO FEE. Latest law, pamphlet Free! PATRICK O'FARRELL, Att'y, Washington, D.C.

SHORTHAND!
and Typewriting, Standard system; lessons, day, evening and by mail; send for circulars. MISS J. D. HESS, Union Block, St. Paul, Minn.

Established 1874.
Wholesale—Big Boston Clothing Store—Retail—Minneapolis.
Six floors filled with Clothing, Hats and Furnishing Goods. Largest store and stock in the Northwest. Fifty Salesmen. Stock one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Annual sales half a million dollars. Stores in Boston, Providence, Hartford, New Haven, Bridgeport, Worcester and Minneapolis. Strictly One Price. Goods sent C.O.D. If not satisfactory can be returned at our expense. Send for rules for self-measurement. We manufacture our own Clothing.

TALMAGE AT HOME.

"Trouble on Both Sides," the Subject of his Sermon at Brooklyn.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 19.—The Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage's subject today was: "Trouble on Both Sides," and his text: "There was a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side."—I Samuel, xiv, 4.

The cruel army of the Philistines must be taken and scattered. There is just one man, accompanied by his bodyguard, to do that thing. Jonathan is the hero of the scene. I know that David cracked the skull of the giant with a few pebbles well slung, and that 300 Gideonites scattered 10,000 Amalekites by the crash of broken crockery; but here is a more wonderful conflict. Yonder are the Philistines on the rocks. Here is Jonathan with his bodyguard in the valley. On the one side is a rock called Bozez; on the other side is a rock called Seneh. These two were as famous in olden times as are Plymouth Rock and Gibraltar in modern times. They were precipitous, unscalable and sharp. Between these two rocks Jonathan must make his ascent. The day comes for the scaling of the height. Jonathan, on his hands and feet, begins the ascent. With strain, and slip and bruise, I suppose, but still on and up, first goes Jonathan, and then goes his bodyguard. Bozez on one side, Seneh on the other. After a sharp tug, and push, and climbing, I see the head of Jonathan above the hole in the mountain; and there is a challenge, and a fight, and a supernatural consternation. These two men, Jonathan and his bodyguard, drive back and drive down the Philistines over the rocks, and open a campaign which demolishes the enemies of Israel. I suppose that the overhanging and overshadowing rocks on either side did not balk or dishearten Jonathan or his bodyguard but only roused and filled them with enthusiasm as they went up. "There was a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side."

My friends, you have been, some of you, in this crisis of the text. If a man meets one trouble, he can go through with it. He gathers all his energies, concentrates them upon one point, and in the strength of God, or by his own natural determination, goes through it. But the man who has trouble to the right of him and trouble to the left of him is to be pitied. Did either trouble come alone, he might endure it; but two troubles, two disasters, two overshadowing misfortunes, are Bozez and Seneh. God pity him! "There is a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side."

In this crisis of the text is that man whose fortune and health fail him at the same time. Nine-tenths of all our merchants capsize in business before they come to 45 years of age. There is some collision in commercial circles and they stop payment. It seems as if every man must put his name on the back of a note before he learns what a fool a man is who risks all his own property on the prospect that some man will tell the truth. It seems as if a man must have a large amount of unsalable goods on his own shelf before he learns how much easier it is to buy than to sell. It seems as if every man must be completely burned out before he learns the importance of always keeping fully insured. It seems as if every man must be wrecked in a financial tempest before he learns to keep things snug in case of a sudden cataclysm. When the calamity does come, it is awful. The man goes home in despair and he tells his family: "We'll have to go to the poor house." He takes a dolorous view of everything. It seems as if he never could rise. But a little time passes, and he says: "Why, I am not so badly off after all; I have my family left."

Before the Lord turned Adam out of Paradise he gave him Eve, so that when he lost paradise he could stand it. Permit one who has never read but a few novels in all his life, and who has not a great deal of romance in his composition, to say, that if, when a man's fortune fail, he has a good wife—a good Christian wife—he ought not to be despondent. "Oh," you say, "that only increases the embarrassment, since you have her also to take care of." You are an ingrate, for the woman as often supports the man as the man supports the woman. The man may bring all the dollars, but the woman generally brings the courage and faith in God.

Well, this man of whom I am speaking, looks around, and finds his family is left, and he rallies, and the light comes to his eyes, and the smile to his face, and his courage to his heart. In two years he is quite over it. He makes his financial calamity the first chapter in a new era of prosperity. He met that one trouble—conquered it. He sat down for a little while under the grim shadow of the Rock Bozez; yet he soon rose and began, like Jonathan, to climb. But how often is it that physical ailment comes with financial embarrassment? When the fortune failed it broke the man's spirit. His nerves were shattered. His brain was stunned. I can show you hundreds of men in New York whose fortune and health failed at the same time. They came prematurely to the staff. Their hand trembled with incipient paralysis. They never saw a well day since the hour when they called their creditors together for a compromise. If such men are impatient, and peculiar, and irritable, excuse them.

They had two troubles, either one of which they could have met successfully. If, when the health went, the fortune had been retained, it would not have been so bad. The man could have bought the very best medical advice, and he could have had the very best attendance, and long lines of carriages would have stopped at the front door to inquire as to his welfare. But poverty on the one side, and sickness on the other, are Bozez and Seneh, and they interlock their shadows and drop them upon the poor man's way. God help him! "There is a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side."

Now, what is such a man to do? In the name of Almighty God I will tell him what to do. Do as Jonathan did—climb; climb up into the sunlight of God's favor and consolation. I can go through the churches and show you men who lost fortunes and health at the same time, and yet who sing all day and dream of heaven all night. If you have any idea that sound digestion, and steady nerves, and clear eyesight, and good hearing, and plenty of friends are necessary to make a man happy, you have miscalculated. I suppose that these overhanging rocks only made Jonathan scramble the harder and the faster to get up and out into the sunlight; and this combined shadow of invalidism and financial embarrassment has often sent a man up the quicker into the sunlight of God's favor and the noonday of His glorious promises. It is a difficult thing for a man to feel his dependence upon God when he has $10,000 in the bank, and $50,000 in government securities, and a block of stores and three ships.

"Well," the man says to himself, "it is silly for me to pray 'Give me this day my daily bread,' when my pantry full, and the canals from the West are crowded with breadstuffs destined for my storehouses." Oh, my friends, if the combined misfortunes and disasters of life have made you climb up into the arms of a sympathetic and compassionate God, through all eternity you will bless Him that in this world "there was a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side."

Again, that man is in the crisis of the text who has home troubles and outside persecution at the same time. The world treats a man well just as long as ever it pays to treat him well. As long as it can manufacture success out of his bone, and brain, and muscle, it favors him. The world fattens the horse it wants to drive. But let a man see it his duty to cross the track of the world, then every bush is full of thorns and tusks and thrust at him. They will belittle him. They will caricature him. They will call his generosity self-aggrandizement, and his piety sanctimoniousness. The very worst persecution will some time come upon him from those who profess to be christians.

John Milton—great and good John Milton—so forgot himself as to pray, in so many words, that his enemies might be thrown down into the darkest and deepest gulf of hell, and be the undermost and most dejected and the lowest down vassals of perdition! And Martin Luther so far forgot himself as to say, in regard to his theological opponents: "Put them in whatever sauce you please, roasted, or fried, or baked, or stewed, or boiled, or hashed, they are nothing but asses!" Ah, my friends, if John Milton or Martin Luther could come down to such scurrility, what you may not expect from less elevated opponents? Now, the world sometimes takes after them; the newspapers take after them; public opinion takes after them; and the unfortunate man is lied about until all the dictionary of Billingsgate is exhausted on him. You often see a man whom you know to be good, and pure, and honest, set upon by the world and mauled by whole communities, while vicious men put on a supercilious air of condemnation of him; as though Lord Jeffreys should write an essay on gentleness, or Henry VIII, talk about purity, or Herod take to blessing little children.

Now, a certain amount of persecution rouses a man's defiance, stirs his blood for magnificent battle, and makes him fifty times more a man than he would have been without the persecution. So it was with the great reformer when he said: "I will not be put down; I will be heard." And so it was with Millard, the preacher, in the time of Louis XI. When Louis XI sent word to him that unless he stopped preaching in that style he would throw him into the river, he replied: "Tell the king that I will reach heaven sooner by water than he will reach it by fast horses." A certain amount of persecution is a tonic and inspiration, but too much of it, and too long continued, becomes the rock Bozez, throwing a dark shadow over a man's life. What is he to do then? Go home, you say. Good advice, that. That is just the place for a man to go when the world abuses him. Go home. Blessed be God for our quiet and sympathetic homes. But there is many a man who has the reputation of having a home when he has none. Through unthinkingness of precipitation there are many matches made that ought never to have been made. An officiating priest cannot alone unite a couple. The Lord Almighty must proclaim banns. There is many a home in which there is no sympathy, and no happiness, and no good cheer. The clamor of the battle may not have been heard outside, but God knows, notwithstanding the playing of the "Wedding March," and all the odor of the orange blossoms and the benediction of the officiating pastor, there has been no marriage.

Sometimes men have awakened to find on one side of them the rock of persecution, and on the other side the rock of domestic infelicity. What shall such a one do? Do as Jonathan did—climb. Get up the heights of God's consolation, from which we may look down in triumph upon outside persecution and home trouble. While good and great John Wesley was being silenced by the magistrates and having his name written on the board fences of London in doggerel, at the same time his wife was making him as miserable as she could—acting as though she were possessed with the devil, as I suppose she was; never doing him a kindness until the day she ran away, so that he wrote in his diary these words: "I did not forsake her; I have not dismissed her; I will not recall her." Planting one foot, John Wesley did, upon outside persecution, and the other foot on home trouble, he climbed up into the heights of Christian joy, and after preaching 40,000 sermons, and traveling 270,000 miles, reached the heights of heaven, though in this world he had it hard enough—"a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other."

Again, that woman stands in the crisis of the text who has bereavement and a struggle for livelihood at the same time. Without mentioning names, I speak from observation. Ah, it is a hard thing for a woman to make an honest living, even when her heart is not troubled, and she has a fair cheek and the magnetism of an exquisite presence. But now the husband or the father is dead. The expenses of the obsequies have absorbed all that was left in the savings bank; and wan and wasted with weeping and watching, she goes forth—a grave, a hearse, a coffin behind her—to contend for her existence and the existence of her children. When I see such a battle as that open I shut my eyes at the ghastliness of the spectacle. Men sit with embroidered slippers and write heartless essays about women's wages; but that question is made up of tears and blood, and there is more blood than tears. Oh! give women free access to all the realms where she can get a livelihood, from the telegraph office to the pulpit. Let men's wages be cut down before her's are cut down. Men have iron in their souls and can stand it. Make the way free to her of the broken heart. May God put into my hand the cold, bitter cup of privation, and give me nothing but a widowless hut for shelter for many years, rather than that after I am dead there should go out from my home into the pitiless world a woman's arm to fight the Gettysburg, the Austerlitz, the Waterloo of life, for bread.

And yet how many women there are seated between the rock of bereavement on the one side and the rock of destitution on the other, Bozez and Seneh interlocking their shadow and dropping them upon her miserable way. "There is a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side." What are such to do? Somehow, let them climb up into the heights of the glorious promise: "Leave thy fatherless children; I will preserve them alive; and let thy widows trust in Me." Or get up into the heights of that other glorious promise: "The Lord preserveth the stranger and relieveth the widow and the fatherless." Ol ye sewing women on starving wages. Ol ye widows turned out from the once beautiful home. Ol ye female teachers kept on niggardly stipend. Ol ye despairing women, seeking in vain for work, wandering along the docks and thinking to throw yourself into the river last night. Ol you women of weak nerves and aching sides, and short breath and broken heart, you need something more than human sympathy; you need the sympathy of God. Climb up into his arms. He knows it all, and he loves you more than father, or mother, or husband ever did; and instead of sitting down, wringing your hands in despair, you had better begin to climb. There are heights of consolation for you, though now "there is a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side."

Again, that man is in the crisis of the text who has a wasted life on one side, and an illuminated eternity on the other. Though a man may all his life have cultured, deliberation and self-poise, if he gets into that position all his self-possession is gone. There are all the wrong thoughts of his existence, all the wrong deeds, all the wrong words—straits above straits, gigantic, ponderous, overshadowing. That rock I call Bozez. On the other side are all the retributions of the future, the thrones of judgment, the eternal ages, angry with his long defiance. That rock I call Seneh. Between these two rocks Lord Byron perished, and Alcibiades perished, and Herod perished, and ten thousand times ten thousand have perished. Ol man immortal, man redeemed, man blood-bought, climb out of those shadows. Climb up by the way of the Cross. Have your wasted life forgiven; have your eternal life secured. This morning just take one look to the past and see what it has been, and take one look to the future and see what it threatens to be. You can afford to lose your health, you can afford to lose your property, you can afford to lose your reputation; but you cannot afford to lose your soul. That bright, gleaming, glorious, precious, eternal possession you must carry aloft in the day when the earth burns up and the heavens burst.

You see from my subject that when a man goes into the safety and peace of the gospel he does not demean himself. There is nothing in religion that leads to meanness or unmanliness. The gospel of Jesus Christ only asks you to climb as Jonathan did—climb toward God, climb toward heaven, climb into the sunshine of God's favor. To become a Christian is not to go meanly down; it is to come gloriously up—up into the communion of saints, up into the peace that passeth all understanding, up into the companionship of angels. He lives up; he dies up.

Ol then, accept the wholesale invitation which I make this morning to all the people. Come up from between a wasted life and unillumined eternity. Like Jonathan, climb up with your might, and instead of sitting down to wring your hands in the shadow and in the darkness—"a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side."

The Catholics of Highland, Wis., a mining town, are considerably excited over a suit begun in the Iowa county circuit by J. F. Grace, an attorney at law, against Rev. Father Thomas Dempsey, pastor of the Catholic church in that town, to recover $15,000 damages for an alleged assault made upon plaintiff by Father Dempsey and several of his friends, who are made co-defendants, by way of revenge for the charge preferred by Grace that the said priest had been improperly intimate with his wife, a beautiful young woman of Highland, who plaintiff married in 1882. All the parties to the suit are members of Father Dempsey's church.

A son and daughter of F. D. Goodrich, living twelve miles north at Lake Byran, Dak., fell under a load of grain the other day. The girl may recover from her injuries, but it is feared the boy will not.

The Log Cabins of America have been birthplaces of some of the grandest men. Lincoln, Grant, Sheridan, first saw the light of day through the chinks of a Log Cabin. Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla also originated in a Log Cabin and stands pre-eminent among the blood purifiers of to-day as Warner's "Tippecanoe" does as a stomach tonic.

Reading Over Old Letters.

Boston Herald.

In these busy days how many people ever find time to rummage out a package of time-stained old letters, and then yield themselves up to the spell of quietly reading them? No; even if going away to the seashore or the mountains, they preferably stow away a novel or two in the valise, and trust to these to supply them with all needful romance. And yet there is more romance to be got out of one package of old letters from intimate associates of one's youth than out of half a circulating library of novels. With most men and women of forty or fifty the unstirred memory of the early days of life has grown utterly vague and shadowy. All forgotten with them is how they used to exult, and weep, and hope and despair—all forgotten how rapturous the wine of youth was; how bitter its dregs and lees. But now comes the package of old letters to the rescue. Under its enchanting wand the sensations become positively startling, as the diorama of the past begins to unroll, and scene after scene breaks in with its old vivid associations.

The first to be opened is, perhaps, a letter from the long dead, dear old mother. It was was written when her boy first left for the boarding school, or to seek his fortune in the world, and, with the re-reading of it across the abyss of time, how the heart beats again with the old hopes and fears, the old clinging embrace, the old boyish resolve never to bring grief or shame on such devotion. Next comes a letter from a Damon or Pythias of a far-away schoolmate. "Poor Tom!" the heart sinks before one begins to read, as one recalls how sad a fate in life the unhappy fellow had. But no trace of foreboding in the letter! Tom is the old young Tom of fourteen years. He has just been to a dancing party, where he had a cotillion and the Virginia reel with airy, fairy Mary Phelps. She looked like an angel, Tom's affidavit for it. Her eyes danced with joy, and Tom thought he knew the reason why. Then follows a college letter. It was from the reader's dear proud sister. She had heard all about her brother's class-day oration. Susan Alcott had written her that it was pronounced a combination of the charm of Cicero, the fire of Demosthenes, and the Ganges volume of Burke. Yes, the rejuvenated old fellow remembers this was just what he once believed of himself, and he was finally sure of, when his classmates flocked round and nearly shook his arms off.

And then the failures! Ah! the glamour of beauty time and distance throw over steep and ragged experiences. Why may not heaven at last turn out to be just such a "reading of old letters?"

The United States secret service officers have just made a most important arrest of counterfeiters in New York. There have been extensively circulated throughout the country a large quantity of silver certificates of the denomination of $5. The officers located the headquarters of the gang at No. 435 East Thirty-fifth street and arrested Gittano Russo and wife, the leaders of the gang. A quantity of bills already printed, were seized together with a large quantity of blank paper ready for printing and a lot of counterfeiting tools.

PROF. LOISETTE WINS IN COURT.

Literary Piracy Condemned.

From New York Sun.

"Chief Justice Van Brunt, holding the Special Term of the Supreme Court yesterday on the application of Nelson Smith and Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, made the injunction in favor of Prof. Loisette, restraining George S. Fellows from publishing his Memory System perpetual.

"Dr. William A. Hammond, Daniel Greenleaf Thompson, author of a work on psychology, and several other professors testified that Prof. Loisette's system was original, being a new departure in the education of the memory. The Court ordered Fellows to deliver up to Prof. Loisette the stereotype plates and all the books in his control. Over nine thousand copies of the pirated edition were delivered up yesterday.

It is stated that full details will be furnished in the prospectus sent post free by Prof. A. Loisette, 237 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Hon. C. F. Templeton has been appointed Associate Justice of Dakota.

During the war, Dr. Lloyd, of Ohio, from exposure contracted consumption. He says: "I have no hesitation in saying that it was by the use of Allen's Lung Balsam that I am now alive and enjoying perfect health." Don't experiment with new and untried medicines. If you have a cough or cold, take at once Allen's Lung Balsam.

Near Monticello at a Baptist meeting a desperate fight occurred between the Tyler and Malone families and their friends. Thirty shots were fired in less than one minute. James Malone and Sam Tyler were instantly killed, Ed Tyler was mortally wounded, and Walker Malone and several others severely.

Life of Ben Harrison.

BY THE AUTHOR OF BEN HUR.

Gen. Lew Wallace we hear has removed to Indianapolis, and is busily engaged writing a Biography of his old friend, Gen. Ben. Harrison.

Rarely has so happy a combination been known as that resulting in the issue of this work. Gen. Lew Wallace, known the world over as the author of "Ben Hur," is one of Gen. Harrison's life-long and trusted friends, and is also a distinguished soldier, a trained statesman, and a diplomat of high national reputation.

His name as author gives at once the assurance of a biography of extraordinary merit.

His long and intimate acquaintance with his distinguished subject will enable him to prepare rapidly an authentic and deeply interesting biography.

His large experience in national and international affairs fits him to treat understandingly and ably of General Harrison's superb record as a statesman, and clearly to unfold the principles held by him respecting the science of good government, and the weighty issues at stake in the present great contest.

Gen. Wallace at first declined this task but upon the urgent solicitation of many eminent men of the party, and Gen. Harrison's assurance that everything needful should be placed at his disposal, so as to make it the strictly authentic, and only authorized Biography, he yielded to the call, and has agreed to complete the work for publication early in August.

R. H. Stoddard, the poet, has a lock of hair believed to have been cut from the head of Milton.

Directory of Minneapolis Wholesale Houses.

COMMISSION—Hillman Bros., 14 Bridge Square.
" Bush & Curtis, 22 Bridge Square.
CONFECT'ERS—Paris-Murton & Co, 118 Wash Av N.
DRUGS—Lyman-Eliel Drug Co. 100 Wash. Av. N.
GROCERS—Geo. R. Newell & Co. 3d St & 1st Av N.
GUNS & Sporting G'ds—Kennedy Bros, 36 Wash Av S.
" Harrison, Farrington & Co. 200 1st Av S.
HARDWARE—Miller Bros & Fletcher, 119 2d st S.
MANTELS &c—Farnham Marble & Mantel Co 38 S 3st
STOVES, &c.—N. W. Stove Works, 113 1st Av. S.
SADDLERY H'd'w., Dodson, Fisher & Brockmann, 15 3d St. N.

Judge Thurman meets with an enthusiastic reception at Port Huron.

Mme. Romero, the wife of the Mexican minister at Washington, is said to have no superior among the ladies at the capital as an entertainer.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria,

Dr. Talmadge received $1,200 for two talks at the Piedmont Chautauqua.

"Purgatory Bullets."

An excited Irishman lately rushed into a Boston drug store, having a "broken up" appearance generally. "Be jabbers"! he yelled, "I'm all wrong entoirely. I want some shtuff to straighten me out. Some o' thim 'Purgatory Bullets' will fix me, I'm thinkin'. What d'ye tax for thim"? "What do you mean"? asked the clerk. "Purgatory Bullets,' sor, or somethin' loike that, they call thim," replied the man. "Shure, I'm in purgatory already, with headache, and liver complaint, and bad stomach, and the divil knows what all." The clerk passed out a vial of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, and Pat went off contented. These little Pellets cure all derangements of liver, stomach and bowels. Sugar-coated, little larger than mustard seeds, and pleasant to take. Druggists.

Millionaire Flood of San Francisco and his wife and daughter are still at Hamburg.

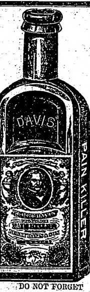
Shall Women be Allowed to Vote!

The question of female suffrage has agitated the tongues and pens of reformers for many years, and good arguments have been adduced for and against it. Many of the softer sex could vote intelligently, and many would vote as their husbands did, and give no thought to the merits of a political issue. They would all vote for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, for they know it is a boon to their sex. It is unequaled for the cure of leucorrhea, abnormal discharges, morning sickness, and the countless ills to which women are subject. It is the only remedy for woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. See guarantee on wrapper around bottle.

An order for a receiver has been made against Herapathe, Delmar & Co., brokers, East London.

PIMPLES
BLACKHEADS, RED, ROUGH, and OILY SKIN prevented or cured by that greatest of all Skin Beautifiers, the
CUTICURA SOAP.
Produces the loveliest, whitest clearest skin, and softest hands. Absolutely pure, delicately medicated, exquisitely perfumed, astonishingly effective. It is simply incomparable as a Skin Soap and for the Toilet, Bath, and Nursery. Sale greater than that of all other medicated toilet soaps in the world. Sold throughout the world.
POTTER DRUG & CHEMICAL CO., BOSTON, U. S. A. Send for "How to Purify and Beautify the Skin."

SICK HEADACHE
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.
Positively cured by these Little Pills.
They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.
Price 25 Cents.
CARTER MEDICINE CO., NEW YORK.
Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price.



IF ANY OF YOUR FAMILY are troubled with Cholera, Cramps or Bowel Complaint, give them PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER.
DO NOT FORGET
Perry Davis' Pain Killer
At this season of the year it is always well to keep it on hand.
Do not trifle with yourselves by testing untried remedies. Be sure you call for, and get the genuine PAIN-KILLER, as many worthless nostrums are attempted to be sold on the great reputation of this valuable medicine.
Directions accompany each bottle.
Price 25 cts., 50 cts. and $1 per bottle.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

MARVELOUS MEMORY DISCOVERY.
Any book learned in one reading.
Mind wandering cured.
Speaking without notes.
Wholly unlike artificial systems.
Piracy condemned by Supreme Court.
Great inducements to correspondence classes.
Prospectus, with opinions of Dr. Wm. A. Hammond, the world-famed Specialist in Mind diseases, Daniel Greenleaf Thompson, the great Psychologist, and others, sent post free by Prof. A. LOISETTE, 237 Fifth Ave., New York.

HALF FARE TO THE EXPOSITION!
ARTIFICIAL LIMBS.
Some of you will need something in this line. Those who do can not afford to miss seeing A. A. Winkler's Patent Slip-Socket Limb. Guaranteed not to vitiate the stump. Also, Patent Self-Adjusting Shoulder Straps. 242 Nicollet, rear Molloy's Minneapolis.

Does the Earth Really Move?

Science says that it does, but we cannot help wondering sometimes if there isn't some mistake about it, when we see how stubbornly certain old fogies cling to their musty and antiquated ideas. It was believed once that consumption was incurable, and although it has been clearly demonstrated that it is not, thousands of old-time physicians close their eyes and put their hands to their ears and refuse to abandon the theory. But for all that the world moves on, and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery continues to rescue sufferers from consumptives' graves. It is a sure cure for this dreaded disease, if taken in time. All scrofulous diseases—and consumption is included in the list—yield to it.

Sir Edward Vincent, the financial adviser of the khedive of Egypt, is making a brief tour in the United States.

Moxie.

Old men use Moxie the year round to keep their nervous system strong enough to support the functions of their body, and mend up the break down of a long business life. The young city bloods to remove the effects from liquors and a night of dissipation. A tumbler full will break a recent intoxication in an hour, with no ill effects of stimulation.

The only surviving member of Carlyle's family now left in England is a brother of his. James Carlyle.

The North Star Lung and Throat Balsam is a sure cure for Coughs and Colds.

Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in many cases removes the tumors. It is equally efficacious in curing all Skin Diseases. DR. SWAYNE & SON, Proprietors, Philadelphia. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT can be obtained of druggists. Sent by mail for 50 Cents.

BARBED WIRE.

If you have barbed wire fences, keep Veterinary Carbolisalve in your stables. It cures without a scar and renews the hair its original color. 50 cents and $1.00 at Druggists or by mail. Cole & Co., Black River Falls, Wis.

Blood Poison
Whether originating in disease, or from handling chemical or vegetable poisons, is cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which thoroughly cleanses, purifies and enriches the blood.
"I was poisoned by poison ivy, and the poison got into my blood, when I was obliged to give up work, and was confined to my house for two months. I had sores and scales on me from head to feet, my finger nails came off, and my hair and whiskers came out. Hood's Sarsaparilla helped me so much that I continued taking it till I had used three bottles, when I was cured. GEORGE W VUNK, Brockport, N. Y.
Hood's Sarsaparilla
Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.
100 Doses One Dollar.

To introduce it into A MILLION FAMILIES we offer the LADIES' HOME JOURNAL AND PRACTICAL HOUSEKEEPER
From NOW to JAN'Y, 1889
Four months—balance of this year, ON RECEIPT OF
ONLY 10 CENTS Silver or Stamps.
Breakfast and Dinner Parties—Home Cooking, Dainties and Desserts. Teas, Suppers, Luncheons and Receptions. Gives explicitly all the little details women want to know. Tells how to entertain guests, how to serve refreshments, what to have and how to make it. Everything new and original, practical and well tested by experts. Accompanying the recipes will be remarks upon pretty table adjuncts, methods of serving and waiting, garnishing, table manners and etiquette.
Children's Page—Illustrated Stories.
Flowers and House Plants—finely illustrated articles, edited by EBEN E. REXFORD, with "Answers to Correspondents."
Mother's Corner—A page devoted to the care of infants and young children. Interesting letters from subscribers giving views and methods of management. Original articles from the best writers. Illustrated articles on Games and Home-made Toys. Amusements for Sick Children. Illustrated. Kindergarten. Illustrated articles by ANNA W. BARNARD.
CURTIS PUBLISHING CO., Philadelphia.

HUDSON CLOTHIER.
The finest, largest and only thoroughly complete stock of Clothing for Men, Boys and Youths' wear in the Northwest. No trash. Good, honest goods, and at figures beyond competition. Send to us for anything you need in Clothing, Furnishings, or Hats or Caps, and you will be astounded. We came to do the Clothing business of the Northwest, are doing it, and always will.
SO DEAL WITH US.
Rules for self-measurement furnished on application. Satisfaction guaranteed.
HEAD AND SHOULDERS OVER ALL!
J. L. HUDSON CLOTHIER,
Corner Seventh and Robert Sts.,
Hotel Ryan Block, St. Paul, Minn.

REDDING'S RUSSIA SALVE

Northwestern Tinware M'f'g Co.
Manufacturers of
Bick, Wood and Iron Jacketed Shipping Cans, Iron Clad Milk Cans, Creamery Cans, etc.
LOWEST PRICES,
Address,
N. W. TINWARE M'F'G CO.,
63 South Robert Street.
ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA.

BEAUTY of Skin & Scalp RESTORED by the CUTICURA Remedies.
NOTHING IS KNOWN TO SCIENCE AT ALL comparable to the CUTICURA REMEDIES in their marvelous properties of cleansing, purifying and beautifying the skin, and in curing torturing, disfiguring, itching, scaly and pimply diseases of the skin, scalp and blood, with loss of hair.
CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, and CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Beautifier, prepared from it, externally, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood Purifier, internally, cure every form of skin and blood disease, from pimples to scrofula. Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; RESOLVENT, $1; SOAP, 25c. Prepared by the POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CO., Boston, Mass.
Send for "How to Cure Skin Diseases."
Pimples, blackheads, chapped and oily skin prevented by CUTICURA SOAP.
Dull Aches, Pains and Weaknesses instantly relieved by the CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER, the only pain-killing plaster. 25c.

Tutt's Pills
To purge the bowels does not make them regular but leaves them in worse condition than before. The liver is the the seat of trouble, and must act on it. Tutt's Liver Pills act directly on that organ, causing a free flow of bile, without which, the bowels are always constipated. Price, 25c.
THE REMEDY
Sold Everywhere.
Office, 44 Murray St., New York.

GOLD is worth $500 per lb. Pettit's Eye Salve is worth $1000, but is sold at 25 cents a box by dealers.

$5 TO $8 A DAY. Samples worth $1.50 FREE. Lines not under the horse' feet. Write BREWSTER SAFETY REINHOLDER CO., Holly, Mich.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION

GLEK—HARMLESS. Positive Cure for failing Manhood. Gives solid health. $1 bottle, by drug's. Glek Co., 33 N. State st, Chicago.

LACTATED FOOD
ENDORSED BY 10,000 PHYSICIANS
As a perfect food for invalids, in dyspepsia, fevers, sick headache, diarrhœa, feeble digestion, and all wasting diseases, and for infants deprived of mother's milk, or when weaning.
The Favorite Food in Hospitals
Hahnemann Hospital.
NEW YORK CITY.
"We have been using Lactated Food for several months past in cases of dyspepsia, after operations, and with children, and in all cases it has answered admirably. We would gladly recommend it as a food easily digested, nutritious, and not disagreeable to the patient."
F. S. FULTON, M. D., House Surgeon.
New York Infant Asylum.
MT. VERNON, N. Y.
"We are using your Lactated Food in our infant asylum whenever we require the use of artificial food, and find it superior to any which we have ever used. Being pleasant to the taste, it is specially adapted to children. We have in our branch institution over 250 children."
MRS. L. M. BATES,
Chairman of Mt. Vernon Branch.
The Most Palatable, Nutritious, and Digestible Food
THE BEST AND MOST ECONOMICAL FOOD.
150 Meals for an Infant for $1.00.
Easily prepared. At Druggists—25 cts., 50 cts., $1.
A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," free on application.
WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., BURLINGTON, VT.

DWIGHT'S SALERATUS
TO MAKE
A DELICIOUS BISCUIT
ASK YOUR GROCER FOR
COW-BRAND SODA OR SALERATUS
AND TAKE NO OTHER.

WHEN VISITING MINNEAPOLIS EXPOSITION, & STATE FAIR
DO NOT FAIL TO VISIT
GOODFELLOW'S!
The Largest Dry Goods Store in the Northwest
247 and 249 NICOLLET AVENUE, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
Send your name and address for 20th SEMI-ANNUAL CATALOGUE AND SHOPPERS' GUIDE. WHOLESALE PRICES on all goods for Personal or Family Use.

RELIABLE CLOTHING
Men's, Boys' and Children's reliable, well made and durable clothing is what we have been selling for the past Eighteen years that we have been in St. Paul. Who has not heard of the Boston One Price Clothing House, St. Paul? We send rules for self-measurement and price-list post paid to any address. Send us your orders. We guarantee to give you better value for your money than you can obtain elsewhere.
BOSTON One-Price Clothing House
Third St., Cor. of Robert,
JOSEPH McKEY & Co., ST. PAUL. St. Paul's Reliable Outfitters.
ESTABLISHED 1870.

GOODYEAR RUBBER CO. GOLD SEAL 1872
GOLD SEAL OVERSHOES
Are the Best Made.
Beware of Imitations! Every pair has a Gold Seal label attached. If your dealer does not keep them, send for prices to the manufacturers:
GOODYEAR RUBBER CO., St. Paul.

S. E. OLSON & CO.'S
MAMMOTH WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DRY GOODS HOUSE,
213 AND 215 NICOLLET AVENUE, MINNEAPOLIS.
THE CHIEF BARGAIN HOUSE OF THE NORTHWEST.
Mail Orders receive our best attention. Shopping done through this department as advantageously as in person. Send for samples.

10,000 AGENTS WANTED to supply FIFTY MILLIONS people with
THE LIFE OF BEN HARRISON | By the author of BEN HUR.
Gen. Lew Wallace, the eminent Author, Statesman, Diplomat, and Life-long friend of Gen. Harrison, is writing the only authorized Biography. "No man living more competent."—Ex-Gov. Porter, of Ind. Millions have read Ben Hur and want Ben Harrison by same author. Selling immensely. By mail $2.00. Greatest Money Making book yet. Outfits 50 cts. HUBBARD BROS., 24 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

NORTHWESTERN CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC,
608 1-2 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.
Fall term opens Sept. 3-4-5, 1888. The only first-class music school in the Northwest. The best teachers for all in every branch of musical study. Free classes of the greatest value. Pupils from 16 states and territories. Send for calendar. CHAS. H. MORSE, Director.

JONES HE PAYS the FREIGHT
5 Ton Wagon Scales, Iron Levers, Steel Bearings, Brass Tare Beam and Beam Box for $60.
Every size Scale. For free price list mention this paper and address
JONES OF BINGHAMTON, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

SCHLIEK & CO. ST. PAUL MINN.
We carry the largest stock of FINE SHOES in the Northwest. Goods sent C. O. D. on approval. Write for new Illustrated Catalogue and Price list. SCHLIEK & CO., St. Paul, Minn.

ST. PAUL SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.,
ST. PAUL, MINN.
School Furniture and School Supplies. Correspondence solicited from district officers, and those desiring an agency. Ask for Catalogue D.

MARLIN REPEATING RIFLE
New Model 1888
Just Out.
Uses 38 & 44 cal. Winchester cartridge. Works easier, is simpler, stronger, lighter, than any other.
DON'T BUY TILL YOU SEE IT.
BALLARD
GALLERY, HUNTING AND TARGET RIFLES.
Send for Illustrated Catalogue.
MARLIN FIRE ARMS CO., Box 38 D, NEW HAVEN, CT.

GUNS Fishing Tackle, Pocket Cutlery and General Sporting Goods. Send for Catalogue. CHAS. B. PROUTY & CO., 63-65 Washington St., Chicago.

WANTED AGENTS for our new book "The Life of GEN. SHERIDAN," also a large number of other fast selling books and bibles. Liberal terms. EMPYREAL Pub. House, St. Paul, Minn

PENSIONS $80,000,000 for Soldiers, Sailors, their widows or parents. PENSIONS INCREASED. Discharges procured. No pension, NO FEE. Latest law, pamphlet Free! PATRICK O'FARRELL, Att'y, Washington, D. C.

The BUYERS' GUIDE is issued March and Sept., each year. It is an encyclopedia of useful information for all who purchase the luxuries or the necessities of life. We can clothe you and furnish you with all the necessary and unnecessary appliances to ride, walk, dance, sleep, eat, fish, hunt, work, go to church, or stay at home, and in various sizes, styles and quantities. Just figure out what is required to do all these things COMFORTABLY, and you can make a fair estimate of the value of the BUYERS' GUIDE, which will be sent upon receipt of 10 cents to pay postage.
MONTGOMERY WARD & CO.
111-114 Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

SHORTHAND!
and Typewriting. Standard system; lessons, day, evening and by mail; send for circulars. MISS J. D. HESS, Union Block, St. Paul, Minn.

Established 1874.
Wholesale—Big Boston Clothing Store—Retail—Minneapolis.
Six floors filled with Clothing, Hats and Furnishing Goods. Largest store and stock in the Northwest. Fifty Salesmen. Stock one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Annual sales half a million dollars. Stores in Boston, Providence, Hartford, New Haven, Bridgeport, Worcester and Minneapolis. Strictly One Price. Goods sent C. O. D. If not satisfactory can be returned at our expense. Send for rules for self-measurement. We manufacture our own Clothing.

ALLEN'S IRON TONIC BITTERS
The most Elegant Blood Purifier, Liver Invigorator, Tonic and Appetizer known. The first Bitters containing Iron ever advertised in America. J. P. ALLEN, Druggist & Chemist, St. Paul, Minn.

INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

JUST BEYOND.

Past the fragrant clover fields,
Past the forest with their yields
Of dark verdure, resting eyes
That are worn with readings wise;

Past the blue hills, barriers dear
Twixt the hopes beyond and here,
Is a place (it must be so)
Whither is it good to go.

For I long for it betimes
Of a morning, in my rhymes;
And the eve-light finds me still Looking, longing, 'gainst my will.

It is always just beyond
What I see, and should a wand
Touch mine eyes, grown strangely dim,
They might pierce the mountain rim.

And discover yonder spot,
That is sweet, but travels I not.
Yet, dim-visioned, I am sure,
Whatsoever I endure.

Sad and sad, that far away
Past the duties of the day,
As I see them, stretched and dumb,
Is the land of Sweet-To-Come.

That is gladder far and fair:
Just beyond the mountains there,
Just beyond the dimpled lea,
Just beyond the silver sea,
Just beyond, for me and thee!

—Richard E. Burton, D. H. D., in S. S. Times.

Taken at His Word.

Nellie Palmer was lying on the lounge in her pretty bedroom, crying and looking very unhappy. And yet she had been married only six months, and to such a "nice handsome man," as all the young ladies declared that surely she ought to have been happy with him. And so she had been until, until, to tell truth, Bob Palmer, forgetting, or seeming to forget that he was a married man, had recently taken to flirting with those very young ladies at all the parties in Middleton, leaving his wife to take care of herself. Surely it was enough to make any six-months wife cry, especially one so sensative as Nellie.

Not that Robert Palmer loved his little wife a bit less than on the day of his marriage, neither that Nellie suspected him of it, or for a moment doubted his morals, any more than she did his constancy. But Mr. Palmer was a gay young man, and loved to be amused. He liked the society of pretty and lively women, both married and single; and in a word he liked to flirt and saw no harm in it. So, while he hung over the young ladies chairs, laughing and paying gay compliments, or promenading with the young married ladies, his wife would be looking over a photograph album, or conversing solemnly with some old gentleman, or noticing some shy awkward child while pretending to be unconscious of her husband's proceedings. Not that she was compelled to enjoy herself in this solemn way, she usually so bright and pretty and agreeable, but she had no heart for anything else now. Of late all her liveliness and chattiness had left her, and she answered absently and smiled listlessly, and, if compelled to dance or sing, did so out of time and out of tune, to her husband's great vexation. It is thus that many a young wife settles down into a dull and faded old woman, and her husband grows handsomer and heartier, and wonders what on earth could have so changed her.

"Hello! been crying again, I declare!" exclaimed Bob Palmer, suddenly ceasing his little whistle, as he entered the room, on returning from his office. "What's the matter now, Nellie? Canary refused to sing, or Madame Viglini not put flowers enough in your bonnet?"

"Oh, Bob! how can you?" sobbed Nellie, beginning afresh.

"Look here, Ellen," said her husband, sitting down on the lounge, and speaking more seriously; "I don't like this at all. I never come home that your eyes are not red and swollen with crying. What have you to cry about I should like to know? It's an insult to me to have you go sniveling about the house in this fashion, and moping away in corners, looking sullen and miserable, as you did last night, at Mackin's. Why people will think me a perfect domestic tyrant."

"Ah, Bob, don't speak so! I can't help it, indeed. I do feel so miserable. You make me so Bob."

"I! Well that is rich! Perhaps you will be good enough to let me know of what enormity I've been guilty, that has turned you into a modern Niobe?"

"Nothing really wrong, dear; oh! if you knew how much a wife thinks of her husband's love, and—"

Here poor Nellie broke down again. Mr. Palmer's eyes opened very wide.

"Whew!" whistled he; "If this isn't really absurd. So, she's jealous!"

"Indeed, no, dear Bob! But—but—" —she could hardly speak for the choking in her throat—"you can't understand the pride a woman takes in having her husband treat her with affection and respect before every one, or how it humbles and mortifies her to be neglected by him, and have other women consider themselves her rivals—like Isabel Baden.

Bob Palmer laughed outright, and then he grew angry.

"You're an absurd little fool Nellie," he said. "As if Isabel Baden was anything to me beyond a woman to amuse one's self with at a party. Nonsense."

"She don't think so," said Nellie; "and—and others don't think so. They all think you are getting tired of your wife, and Isabel flatters herself that she has cut me out, and is trying to let people see it."

"Fiddlesticks!" said Bob, rising impatiently from the lounge. "I'm astonished at you, Nellie, and had already given you credit of more sense as well as temper," he added, severely. "I wish you'd amused yourself in society, as I do, instead of moping about in this fashion. You can't expect to have me tied to your apron strings; and I'd much rather see you flirting a little yourself than sulking away in holes and corners, like a spider, watching your butterfly of a husband to see if you can detect him doing wrong. You make me quite ashamed of you I declare."

Mr. Plamer took his hat and walked out of the room, with an air of mingled dignity and injured innocence. His wife sat up, wiped away her tears and mused awhile, with eyes flashing and cheeks flushed with a wounded and indignant feeling.

"Yes," she said to herself, "since he has requested it, I will amuse myself 'as he does,' and see how he likes it! Ashamed of me, is he? And he did not use to be when I was gay and happy. Oh, Bob, if you only knew how I loved you!"

And once more despite her resolutely closing her eyes and pressing her fingers upon them, the tears would come.

There was to be, that very evening a party at Col. Johnston's, and Nellie took particular pains in dressing herself for it. She had been of late rather careless on that point, and was now rewarded for her husband's glance of approval and his remark that the pink silk was becoming to her. In consequence her eyes and cheeks were brighter, and her spirits more buoyant, as she entered Mrs. Johnston's crowded drawing-room. Scarcely had they paid their respects to the hostess, when Mr. Palmer accosted, or rather was accosted by Miss Baden, a brilliant, confident girl, who tried to ensnare him before his marriage; and at the same moment, a gentlemen addressed Mrs. Palmer. She answered mechanically, unable to withdraw her attention from her husband and his companion, until seeing something in Miss Baden's glance at herself which she did not like, her pride again awoke, and she turned, as with a sudden determination to the gentleman at her side. He was a recent comer to the town, very pleasant and handsome, and Nellie Palmer forthwith began to try and make herself agreeable to him. He looked so pleased and was himself so agreeable, that it soon cost her no effort to converse; and then her old lovely spirits returned; and to her surprises she found that she was enjoying herself. Her husband didn't much notice this, but Miss Baden did; and her flirtation with Mr. Palmer lost much of it, charm, now that his wife did not appear mortified and jealous, and that people couldn't see that she was so. Wherefore Miss Baden grew indifferent, and Mr. Palmer bethought himself to look after his wife. Not finding her looking over the photograph album, nor talking to deaf old Mr. Brown, neither in any of the 'holes and corners,' which she was wont of late to frequent, he became rather puzzled.

"She's got in the dumps again, I suppose," was his thought, "and is trying to disguise it under the pretense of being ill. Dare say I shall find her crying or fainting away in the conservatory, with fans and smelling bottles round her, or perhaps she's gone home."

At that instant a little laugh at his elbow startled him, and turning he saw Nellie, bright and flushed, talking to a very handsome man, who appeared quite absorbed in her. Mr. Palmer stared a moment at the unconscious couple.

"Why, the deuce! what on earth can they have been talking about all this while?" Then, suddenly meeting his wife's eye, he smiled and whispered, "Enjoying yourself Nell?"

"Oh, yes, dear, delightfully! Don't trouble yourself about me pray."

He passed on, but didn't go far, and as he stood whispering soft nothings to sentimental Kate Marshall, his eyes occasionally wandered to his wife. How pretty she was looking and how gay she was, and how coquetishly she was exchanging light repartee with that flirting fellow, Tom Harrison. And all the time the handsome stranger never left her side. It was perfectly evident that he admired her.

"If she were not a married woman he would certainly fall in love with her, she, my wife;" and he felt a little resentful of the admiration.

Nellie Palmer had never sang more sweetly or danced more gracefully than upon this evening.

"Don't you think, Nell, you've danced enough for one night?" said her husband, toward the close of the evening; "for a married woman," he added.

"Perhaps so," she answered, cheerfully; "but I've enjoyed myself so much! Really, I almost forgot I was a married woman, and felt like a girl again."

"And behaved like one," he said, rather coolly. "Who is that fellow that has been in attendance upon you all the evening?" he inquired, as they walked downstairs.

"That remarkably handsome man, with the expressive dark eyes, do you mean?"

"I never noticed his eyes or that he was at all handsome," he answered stiffly.

"Oh, I thought you meant Capt. Lovell of the artillery. Ah here he is —one moment, dear, I quite forgot—"

And Nellie spoke a few words to the captain in passing, of which her husband could distinguish only something about "that book."

"Upon my word," he said, sarcastically, "you appear very intimate already."

"Because, love, we've discovered that we're congenial spirits. We like the same things, books, music, scenery; indeed, everything, and have the same opinion on most subjects. You know how pleasant it is to meet with one who can comprehend you, not your outer self merely, but with a sort of soul sympathy."

"Soul fiddlesticks."

"You never did have much sentiment, Bob," sighed Nellie, in an injured tone.

"Sentiment be hanged! Come, Nellie, be quick with your wrappings. It has been a stupid evening, and I shall be glad to get home and to bed."

When Robert Palmer came home next day, he found his wife, not crying, as before, in her bedroom, but in the parlor, practicing a new song.

"Capt. Lovell called this morning," she said, "and I have promised to sing this for him at Mrs. Campbell's."

"Ah?" he answered, with an expression of indifference; and as his wife again struck up with the first few notes, he muttered to himself, "Confound Capt. Lovell!"

At Mrs. Campbell's Capt. Lovell was again in attendance upon pretty Mrs. Palmer; and then other gentlemen discovered her attraction, her piquancy, and coquettishness, and flirtableness; and so in a very few weeks, Mrs. Palmer was a belle. She did not seem in the least to care who her husband was waiting upon, and, indeed he could rarely get a word with her at all, when at the gay assemblies which they constantly frequented. He sometimes gave her a hint that she was "no longer a girl," and that he was her husband; but she only laughed, and said there was no harm done, and that she was enjoying herself so delightfully, and felt herself more a belle than even when a girl—which was true, because she had not flirted then, being absorb, heart and soul, in Bob Palmer. But now it was Capt. Lovell who appeared chiefly to occupy her thoughts, as well as a good part of time. She sang and danced with him; she read the books he sent; and so frequent were his visits, so constant his attentions, that at last Robert Palmer's wrath burst forth.

"Ellen," he said, as he one day closed the door on the departing captain, "I really cannot permit this to go on any longer. Your conduct to me is most unexpected — most astounding. You are by far too intimate with this fellow, Lovell. He is constantly in my house; and last evening he scarcely left your side, while you stood, for two hours, the center of a group of chattering, grinning popinjays, like yourself."

"Why, Bob, you blamed me for playing wall-flower and 'spider,' and said you were ashamed of me."

"I am much more ashamed of you now," he retorted severely.

"Now, dear, that is quite unreasonable of you. Didn't you tell me that I would please you by enjoying myself and flirting a little? You know you did," added Nellie, reproachfully; "and now that I am obeying you, you got jealous."

"Jealous? not I! But I am offended and insulted—yes, and disgusted as well. If only you could hear the remarks about yourself and that Lovell—"

"Similar to those that I heard in regard to you and Miss Baden, I presume," said his wife.

"What is Miss Baden to me?" he demanded angrily.

"And what is Capt. Lovell to me?"

"You encourage him, madam. You flirt with him."

"As you do with Isabel Baden."

"A man may do what is not permissible in a woman."

"Ah that is it!" said Nellie, with her old smile. You men may neglect a wife—may wear out her heart and life with anguish—may expose her to the pity or ridicule of all her acquaintances by showing devotion to another; and she, poor slave, must not presume to turn, as may even the trampled worm, but must bear all in meek silence, never even imploring mercy, lest she should offend her lord. But I have had enough of this Bob; and now as you do to me will I do to you. If you go on flirting, so will I. I know you don't care a bit more for Isabel Baden than I do for Capt. Lovell; but I will not be neglected and humbled in the sight of the whole world. I am not a slave, but a wife and demand the honor due to me!"

Her mood was a new one to her husband. She sat erect and proud, looking him steadily in the face, with bright clear eyes, in whose depths he could read great tenderness; and he at once comprehended the whole matter.

To Time a Train's Speed.

"We must be going forty miles an hour."

"Oh, no; not more than thirty."

"Thirty?" nonsense! more like fifty."

Something like this is heard every day on railroad trains, especially among parties of young people, says a writer in Golden Days.

Not one person in one hundred who travel has an idea of the speed of the train. Even a large percentage of the regular trainmen cannot tell with any degree of accuracy.

Engineers use their driving wheel as a gauge. They know its circumference, and by counting its revolutions within a certain time can tell very accurately the speed at which they are running.

The favorite method of timing a train among passengers is to count telegraph poles. As a rule these are planted thirty to the mile, but in prairie counties and places where only a single wire is used the number diminishes to twenty-five to the mile, so that rule will not always work.

The most accurate method and the one most in use by experienced railroad men, is to count the number of joints the train passes over in twenty seconds. The rails on nearly all of the roads are thirty feet in length, and the number passed over in twenty seconds is the speed per hour the train is running.

For instance, if a passenger can count thirty clicks on a rail joint in twenty seconds, the train is running at the speed of thirty miles an hour.

Actually the method falls a little short, as the example given above would be nearer thirty-one than thirty miles, but it is near enough for all practical purposes.—Atlanta Constitution.

A Woman's Success With Cotton.

The only young unmaried woman of the South who is exclusive proprietor and practical business manager of a large cotton farm is said to be Miss Allice B. Farley, of Port Hudson, La. A fragile little woman, one would scarcely think, to judge from her physque, that she possesed the strength necessary to meet the combat a thousand and one vexing cares connected with raising the staple. Nevertheless, Miss Farley not only oversees Greenwood plantation, but by her prudense, skill and sound judgement has won an extended local reputation as a successful farmer. Her history is as melancholy as it is remarkable. Born in New York City, she lost in quick succession all the members of her family, and at majority found herself the proprietor of a handsome Southern property, with not a near relative in the world. Duty, to her logical mind, implied action, and no sooner did responsibilities arise than she found strength to meet them. Observation, and economical turn of mind, extensive reading on agricultural subjects consultation with those experienced in the craft soon taught all there was to know. She threw into planting all the enthusiasm and perseverance many women bestow in acquiring feminine accomplishments and today no cotton place, far or near, ranks higher than the will-tilled, fruitful and wisely cultivated lands of Greenwood.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Said to be the Proper Caper.

It is the proper thing for the young man who can afford it to keep the photograph of his best girl, framed in solid silver, standing on his writing desk. The frames are about an inch broad, and are plain or fancy to suit the taste, but the majority of those imported from England are fancy. The figures include cherubs and cherubs' faces, heads of beasts, heads of goblins, forms of elfs, masks of fierce aspect, and a running vine of some sort, that twines in and out among the figures. The inner edge of one very pretty frame is made of a rope, with a square knot where the ends of the rope come together at the bottom. The frames cost on the average $30.—New York Sun.

Rifling Gun Barrels.

By means of recent improvements made in the manufacture of rifles, as many as 120 barrels can now be rolled in an hour by one machine. They are straightened cold and bored with corresponding speed, and even the rifling is done automatically, so that one man tending six machines can turn out sixty or seventy barrels per day.

With the old rifling machine twenty barrels was about the limit of a day's work; but the improved machines attend to everything after being once started, and, when the rifling is completed, ring a bell to call the attention of the workmen.

WANTS RETALIATION.

The President Sends a Message to Congress Relative to the Fisheries Treaty

The President sent to congress on the 23d a message in reference to the rejection of the fisheries treaty by the Senate. He recommends immediate legislation, conferring upon the executive the power to suspend, by proclamation, the operation of all laws and regulations permitting the transit of goods, wares and merchandise in bond, across or over the territory of the United States to or from Canada.

Legislation is also recommended that will give Canadian vessels navigating our canals, precisely the same advantages granted American vessels in Canadian canals, and that both be measured by the same rule of discrimination. The message in its full text is as follows:

To the Congress: The rejection by the senate of the treaty lately negotiated for the settlement and adjustment of the differences existing between the United States and Great Britain concerning the rights and privileges of American fishermen in the ports and waters of British North America seems to justify a survey of the condition to which the pending question is thus remitted. The treaty upon this subject concluded in 1818, through disagreements as to the meaning of its terms, has been a fruitful source of irritation and trouble. Our citizens engaged in fishing enterprises in waters adjacent to Canada have been subjected to numerous vexatious interferences and annoyances, their vessels have been seized upon pretexts which appeared to be entirely inadmissible, and they have been otherwise treated by the Canadian authorities and officials in a manner inexcusably harsh and oppressive. This conduct has been justified by Great Britain and Canada by the claim that the treaty of 1818 permitted it, and upon the ground that it was necessary to the proper protection of Canadian interests. We deny that treaty agreements justify these acts, and we further maintain that, aside from any treaty restraints of disputed interpretation, the relative positions of the United States and Canada as near neighbors, the growth of our joint commerce, the development and prosperity of both countries, which amicable relations surely guarantee, and, above all, the liberality always extended by the United States to the people of Canada, furnished motives for kindness and consideration higher and better than treaty covenants. While keenly sensitive to all that was exasperating in the condition, and by no means indisposed to support the just complaints of our injured citizens, I still deemed it my duty, for the preservation of important American interests which were directly involved, and in view of all the details of the situation, to attempt by negotiation to remedy existing wrongs and to finally terminate by a fair and just treaty these ever recurring causes of difficulty. I fully believe that the treaty just rejected by the senate was well suited to the exigency, and that its provisions were adequate for our security in the future from vexatious incidents and for the promotion of friendly neighborhood and intimacy, without sacrificing in the least our national pride or dignity. I am quite conscious that neither my opinion of the value of the rejected treaty, nor the motives which prompted its negotiations, are of importance in the light of the judgment of the senate thereupon. But it is of importance to note that this treaty has been rejected without any apparent disposition on the part of the senate to alter or amend its provisions, and with the evident intention, not wanting expression, that no negotiations should at present be concluded touching the matter at issue. The

CO-OPERATION NECESSARY

for the adjustment of the long standing national differences with which we have to deal, by methods of conference and agreement, having thus been declined, I am by no means disposed to abandon the interests and the rights of our people in the premises, or to neglect their grievances; and I, therefore, turn to the contemplation of a plan of retaliation as a mode, which still remains of treating the situation. I am not unmindful of the gravity of the responsibility assumed in adopting this line of conduct, nor do I fail in the least to appreciate its serious consequences. It will be impossible to injure our Canadian neighbors by retaliating measures without inflicting some damage upon our own citizens. This results from our proximity, our community of interests and the inevitable commingling of the business enterprises which have been developed by mutual activity. Plainly stated, the policy of national retaliation manifestly embraces the infliction of the greatest harm upon those who have injured us, with the least possible damage to ourselves. There is also an evident propriety as well as an invitation to moral support, found in visiting upon the offending party the same measure or kind of treatment of which we complain, and, as far as possible, within the same limits. And, above all things, the plan of retaliation, if entered upon, should be thorough and vigorous. These considerations lead me at this time to invoke the aid and counsel of the congress and its support in such a further grant of power as seems to me necessary and desirable to render effective the policy I have indicated. The congress has already passed a law which received executive assent March 3, 1887, providing that in case American fishing vessels being or visiting in the waters or at any of the ports of the British dominion of North America should be or lately had been deprived of the rights to which they were entitled by treaty or law, or if they were denied certain other privileges therein specified; or vexed or harrassed in the enjoyment of the same, the president might deny to vessels and their masters and crews of the British dominions of North America any entrance to waters, ports or harbors of the United States, and also deny entry into any port or place of the United States of any product of said dominions or other goods coming from said dominion to the United States. While I shall not hesitate upon proper occasions to enforce this act, it would seem to be unnecessary to suggest that, if such enforcement is limited in such a manner as shall result in the least possible injury to our own people, the effect would probably be to the accomplishment of the purpose desired. I deem it my duty, therefore, to call attention of the congress to certain particulars in the action of the authorities of the Dominion of Canada, in addition to the general allegations already made, which appear to be in such marked contrast to the liberal and friendly disposition of our country as, in my opinion, to call for such legislation as will, upon the principles already stated, properly supplement the power to inaugurate retaliation already vested in the executive. Actuated by the generous and neighborly spirit which has characterized our legislation, our tariff laws have since 1866 been so far waived in favor of Canada as to allow free of duty the transit across the territory of the United States property arriving at our ports and destined to Canada or exported from Canada to other countries. When the treaty of Washington was negotiated in 1871 between the United States and Great Britain, having for its object very largely the modification of the treaty of 1818, the privileges above referred to were made reciprocal, and given in return by Canada to the United States. In the year 1886 notice was received by the representatives of our government that our fishermen would no longer be allowed to ship their fish in bond and free of duty through Canadian territory to this country, and ever since that time such shipment has been denied. The privilege of such shipment which had been extended to our fishermen was a most important one, allowing them to spend the time upon the fishing grounds, which would otherwise be devoted to a voyage home with their catch, and doubling their opportunities for profitably prosecuting their vocation. In forbidding the transit of the catch of our fishermen over their territory in bond and free of duty the Canadian authorities deprived us of the only facility dependent upon the concession and for which we could supply no substitute. The value to the Dominion of Canada of the privilege of transit for their exports and imports across our territory and to and from our ports, though great in every aspect, will be better appreciated when it is remembered that for a considerable portion of each year the St. Lawrence river, which constitutes the direct avenue for commerce leading to Canada, is

ENTIRELY INADEQUATE

CLOSED BY ICE.

During the last six years the imports and exports of British Canadian provinces carried across our territory, under the privileges granted by our laws, amounted in value to about $270,000,000, nearly all of which were goods dutiable under our tariff laws. By far the largest part of this traffic consisted of exchanges of goods between Great Britain and her American provinces brought to and carried from our ports in their own vessels. The treaty stipulation entered into by our government was in harmony with the laws which were then on our statute book, and are still in force. I recommend immediate legislative action conferring upon the executive the power to suspend by proclamation the operation of all laws and regulations permitting the transit of goods, wares and merchandise in bond across or over the territory of the United States to or from Canada. There need be no hesitation in suspending these laws arising from the supposition that their continuation is secured by treaty obligations, for it seems quite plain that article 29, of the treaty of 1871, which was the only article incorporating such laws, terminated the 1st of July, 1885. The article itself declares that provisions shall be in force "for the term of years mentioned in article 33 of this treaty." Turning to article 33, we find no mention of the 29th article, but only a provision that articles 18 to 25, inclusive, and article 30 shall take effect as soon as the laws to carry them into operation shall be passed by the legislative bodies of the different countries concerned, and "that they shall remain in force for ten years from the date at which they may come into operation, and further, until the expiration of two years after either of the high contracting parties shall have given notice to the other of its wish to terminate the same." I am of the opinion that the "term of years mentioned in article 33," referred to in article 29 as the limit of its duration, means the period during which articles 18 to 25 inclusive, and article 30, commonly called the "fishery articles," should continue in force under the language of said article 33. That the joint high commissioners who negotiated the treaty so understood and intended the phrase is certain. In a statement containing an account of their negotiations, prepared under their supervision and approved by them, we find the following entry on the subject: "The transit question was discussed, and it was agreed that any settlement that might be made should include a reciprocal arrangement in that respect for the period for which the fishery articles should be in force." In addition to this very supporting this construction of the language of article 29, it will be found that the law passed by congress to carry the treaty into effect furnishes conclusive proof of the correctness of such construction. This law was passed March 4, 1873, and is entitled "an act to carry into effect the provisions of the treaty between the United States and Great Britain, signed in Washington, May 8, 1871, relating to the fisheries." After providing in its first and second sections for putting in operation articles 18 to 25, inclusive, and article 30 of the treaty, the third section is devoted to article 29, as follows: "Section 3. That from the date of the president's proclamation, authorized by the first section of this act, and so long as the articles 18 to 25, inclusive, and article 30 of the said treaty shall remain in force according to the terms and conditions of article 33 of said treaty, all goods, wares and merchandise arriving etc., etc.," following in the remainder of the section the precise words of the stipulation on the part of the United States as contained in article 29, which I have already fully quoted. Here, then, is a distinct enactment of the congress limiting the duration of this article of the treaty to the time that articles 18 to 25, inclusive, and article 30 should continue in force. That in fixing such, imitation it but gave the meaning of treaty itself, is indicated by the fact that its purpose is declared to be to carry into effect the provisions of the treaty and by the further fact that this law appears to have been submitted before the promulgation of the treaty to certain members of the joint high commission representing both countries and met with no objection or dissent. There appearing to be no conflict or inconsistency between the treaty and the act of the congress last cited, it is not necessary to invoke the well settled principle that in case of such conflict the statute governs the question. In any event, and whether the law of 1873 construes the treaty or governs it, section 29 of such treaty, I have no doubt, terminated with the proceedings taken by our government to terminate articles 18 to 25, inclusive, and article 30 of the treaty. These proceedings had their inception in a joint resolution of congress passed May 3, 1883, declaring that in the judgment of congress these articles ought to be terminated, and directing the president to give the notice to the government of Great Britain provided for in article 33 of the treaty. Such notice having been given two years prior to the 1st day of July, 1885, the articles mentioned were on the last-named day and with them article 29 was also terminated. If by any language used in the joint resolution it was intended to relieve section 3 of the act of 1873 embodying article 29 of the treaty from its own limitations or to save the article itself, I am entirely satisfied that the intention miscarried. But, statutes granting to the people of Canada the valuable privileges of transit for their goods from our ports and over our soil which had been passed prior to the making of the treaty of 1871 and independently of it remained in force, and ever since the abrogation of the treaty and notwithstanding the refusal of Canada to permit our fishermen to send their fish to their home market through her territory in bond, the people of that dominion have enjoyed without diminution the advantages of our liberal and generous laws. Without basing our complaint upon a violation of treaty obligations, it is nevertheless true that such refusal of transit and the other injurious acts which have been recited constitute a provoking insistance upon rights neither mitigated by the amenities of national intercourse nor modified by the recognition of our liberality and generous considerations. The history of events connected with this subject makes it manifest that the Canadian government can, if so disposed, administer its laws and protect the interests of its people without manifestation of unfriendliness, and without the unneighborly treatment of our fishing vessels of which we have justly complained, and whatever is done on our part should be done in the hope that the disposition of the Canadian government may remove the occasion of the resort to the additional executive power now sought through legislative action. I am satisfied that upon the principles which should govern retaliation, our intercourse and relations with the Dominion of Canada furnish no better opportunity for its application than is suggested by the conditions herein presented; and that it could not be more effectively inaugurated than under the power of suspension recommended. While I have expressed my clear conviction upon the question of the continuance of section 29 of the treaty of 1871, I of course fully concede the power and the duty of the congress in contemplating legislative action to construe the terms of any which might, upon any possible consideration of good faith, limit such action, and likewise the peculiar propriety in the case here presented of its interpretation of its own language as contained in the laws of 1873 putting in operation said treaty, and of 1883 directing the termination thereof; and if, in the deliberate judgment of congress, any restraint to the proposed legislation exists, it is to be hoped that the expediency of its early removal will be recognized. I desire also to call the attention of the congress to another subject involving such wrongs and unfair treatment to our citizens as in my opinion require prompt action. The navigation of the great lakes and the immense business and carrying trade of the same have been treated broadly and liberally by the United States government and made free to all mankind, while Canadian railroads and navigation companies share in the country's transportation upon the terms as favorable as accorded to our own citizens. The canals and other public works built and maintained by the government along the line of the lakes are made free to all. In contrast to this condition and advancing a narrow and ungenerous commercial spirit, every lock and canal which is a public work of the Dominion of Canada is subject to tolls and charges. By article 27 of the treaty of 1871, provision was made to secure to the citizens of the United States the use of the Welland, St. Lawrence and other canals in the Dominion of Canada on terms of equality with the inhabitants of the dominion, and to also secure to the subjects of Great Britain the use of the St. Clair Flats canal on terms of equality with the inhabitants of the United States. The equality with the inhabitants of the dominion, which we were promised in the use of the canals of Canada, did not secure to us freedom from tolls in their navigation, but we had a right to expect that we, being Americans and interested in American commerce, would be no more burdened in regard to the same than Canadians engaged in their own trade; and the whole spirit of the concession was, or should have been, that merchandise and property transported to an American market through these canals should not be enhanced in its cost by tolls many times higher than such as were carried to an adjoining Canadian market. All our citizens, producers and consumers, as well as vessel owners, were to enjoy the EQUALITY PROMISED.

SATISFACTORY EVIDENCE

ABSOLUTELY TERMINATED

TREATY STIPULATION

And yet evidence has for some time been before the congress, furnished by the secretary of the treasury, showing that, while the tolls charged in the first instance are the same to all, such vessels and cargoes as are destined to certain Canadian ports are allowed a refund of nearly the entire tolls, while those bound for American ports are not allowed any such advantage. To promise equality and then in practice make it conditional upon our vessels doing Canadian business instead of their own is to fulfill a promise with the shadow of performance. I recommend that such legislation be had as will give Canadian vessels navigating our canals and their cargoes precisely the advantages granted to our vessels and cargoes upon Canadian canals, and that the same be measured by exactly the same rule of discrimination. The course which I have outlined and the recommendations made relate to the honor and dignity of our country and the protection and preservation of the rights and interests of all our people. A government does but half of its duty when it protects its citizens at home and permits them to be imposed upon and humiliated by the unfair and overreaching disposition of other nations. If we invite our people to rely upon arrangements made for their benefit abroad, we should see to it that they are not deceived, and, if we are generous and liberal to a neighboring country, our people should reap the advantage of it by a return of liberality and generosity. These are subjects which partisanship should not disturb or confuse. Let us survey the ground calmly and moderately and, having put aside other means of settlement, if we enter upon the policy of retaliation, let us pursue it firmly, with a determination only to subserve the interests of our people and maintain the high standard and the becoming pride of American citizenship.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

Executive Mansion, Aug. 23, 1888.

Plenty Without the Fish.

Peters, the colored pugilist, took a little trip into the country last month for a vacation, says the Free Press, and, as has often happened to white men under the same circumstances, he got dead broke fifty miles from home and started back by the king's highway. One day, when he had reached the thirteenth mile-post west of Detroit, he met a wagon-load of people going to a picnic. There was a smart Aleck on the wagon, and he ordered a halt and said:

"I've got to lick this nigger or we won't catch any fish today."

Several of the people protested and argued, but the young man was bound to show off, and he jumped down, pulled off his coat, and said: "Nigger, can you fight?"

"No, sah," replied Peters, as he backed away.

"I'm sorry for you, but I've got to do it. I'll be as easy as I can, though."

He put up his dukes and made a rush. Then the heavens and the earth seemed to come together, and all the powder mills in the country exploded at once.

"You've killed him!" shouted the occupants of the wagon in chorus.

"No I haven't. I jist reached fur de pint of his jaw, and he'll cum to in about a minit."

He was a true prophet. Aleck opened his eyes after a bit, sat up, rubbed his jaw, and then suddenly dashed for the wagon and climbed in.

"How about de fish, sah? asked Peters, as the wagon was about to go on.

"Fish! fish!" shouted Aleck, as he got a fresh brace on his jaw. "Durn your black hide, but do you suppose I want the whole earth?"

Pleasures of Public Life.

"Talk about the pleasures of public life," exclaimed Spoute; "why, man, you don't know anything about it. It is no bed of roses, I can tell you. Now just let me give you a case in point. Old Joe Brown wanted to build a bridge across Puddle Pond, and I made a big speech in favor of the improvement, which I told the Legislature was in the interest of the laboring classes; that it would inure to the welfare of the agricultural population, and that, in short, it was demanded by every right-minded man who had the welfare and prosperity of the country at heart. Well, what then? Why, Bill Jones—Bill is one of my constituents, you know—came and said that a bridge over that pond would scare his ducks, and he wanted me to stop it. Then I had to go to work and prepare another speech, in which I said that from additional information just received, I found that the proposed bridge was a move on the part of a capitalist to rob the laboring classes of their rights; that it would be the death knell of the farmer, and that no one who loved his country could vote for it. It's awful wearing on us public men, to walk on both sides of the fence, but we have to do it; our constituents demand it, you see; but as I said before, it's terribly wearing."—Boston Transcript.

Thousands of Years Saved.

One may get some idea of what railways mean in the saving of time and money to passengers by taking the case of London. It is estimated that about 500,000 persons, for about one-tenth of the population of the entire area of the metropolis, require to travel to and from their business every day all the year round. If we remember the distances, it is not too much to assume that the railway will economize for each at least two hours in the week—or, say, five days per annum each. This for 500,000 of people means 2,500,000 days— or an economy of 8,300 years of 300 working days each! Suppose average earnings of these 500,000 people to be £100 per annum each— not too high an average when we remember the number of millionaires included in the total—we shall see a total money saving— in the sense of time being money—of equal to $830,000 per annum. And this is London alone.—Chambers Journal.

Young Mr. Hocking (at a Cincinnati soiree musicale)—Prof. Bierstadt seems to be at his best to-night, Miss Overtherine. Miss Overtherine—He is divine, adorable! Mr. Hocking—You are fond of music? Miss Overtherine—Passionately, Mr. Hocking! I have sat here in a perfect trance of dreamy enjoyment until my sausage is quite cold.—New York Sun.

Pointers for the Farmer.

Farm Notes.

Regularity in feeding, in milking and perfect gentleness and kindness in dealing with the cows are essential to success. Any breach of these desiderata is inevitably marked by a falling off in the yield and a consequent diminution of profits.

Naked fallows are more exhausting on the nitrogen of the soil than a summer crop. A crop of ragweed on a stubble field is a blessing in protecting the soil from the scorching sunshine of August, which is the season that the process of nitrification shows the greatest activity.

The great improvement in the breeds of horses and of all farm animals has come through the selection of males of the best quality, a means of improvement within the reach of all. The relative influence of sire and dam upon the progeny, is a point of great importance.

The success of European farmers with all the forces of nature against them should be an inspiring lesson to our tillers of the soil. The American small farmer has only to unite brain work with hand work to make himself independent and comfortable if not rich. But without this union of the brain and hand there can be no great permanent success.

A noted English breeder in enumerating what he considered the good points of Shorthorned cattle, stated that among other things the eye of the animal always influenced his choice to a great extent. A quiet, good-natured eye was that of the animal likely to suit his purpose; but the keen eye, in constant motion, he avoided, because it indicated an irritable, uneasy temperament, and an animal of such a temperament would not readily fatten.

The Sheep Breeder remarks: "The large sheep are only adapted to rich land. They are great feeders, and the old rule of eight sheep requiring as much pastures as one cow does not apply to them. They will not stand excessive pasturing like fine wooled sheep; they will grow poor on it. The larger breeds of sheep must generally be kept in small flocks; so each can get enough to eat.

The Farm, Field and Stockman says that if the farm horse is shod only when working on hard roads continuously, the hoofs seldom wear too thin for the ordinary work on the farm. When shod, except for icy roads, the shoes are better without calkins, and for pretty much all work on the road, summer and inwter, toe pieces, or rather what are known as three-quarter pieces, are better for the horse than full shoes.

A Dakota farmer is practicing on mixed feed. In a letter to the Northwestern Farmer he says he mixed 4 bushels of barley, 2 bushels of wheat and 17 bushels of oats, and sowed the mixture on 9 acres of land 2½ bushels per acre) in May 1887. He cut the crop "When green, as soon as the barley was ripe," tied in small sheaves, shocked and stored away in the barn. He says he never had better feed, and he and his neighbors will adopt that plan this year, for, he says, "hay is scarce in these parts."

One of the most troublesome garden enemies at this season is the cutworm, whose designs upon the vegetables can only be thwarted by prompt and vigilant hand-picking. Evidences of their presence should be looked for every morning, and whenever a plant has been cut, hunt for the enemy till you find him. He will probably be discovered just beneath the soil, near the plants he has been cutting.

In some localities in Switzerland the traveler on the plains or in the valleys looks up to a towering precipice 2,000 feet above his head. When he laboriously climbs to the summit, expecting to find nothing but a bare rock, he sees before him the smiling expanse of productive fields, with pretty cottages dotting the landscape. The peasant proprietors started with only the naked rock under them. They carried the rich soil of the valleys in baskets on their backs up the steep mountain side, and went to work with a will until they transformed their sterile patches into blooming gardens.

A Spider And a Frog.

A gentleman tells the Mecklenburg (Va,) Democrat that, in company with another, he was walking along the banks of a stream when their attention was drawn to a noise near them in the water. It was ascertained that the noise was caused by a fight between a monster spider and a frog. Whenever the two came together the spider would seize the frog with his poisonous fangs; the frog would then by a supreme effort shake off his enemy and hop away to a peculiar looking plant which grew near, and after biting off a portion of the leaves and eating them would return to the combat with renewed energy. The two gentlemen watched the interesting combat for a long time, when one of them concluded that he would keep the frog away from the plant, which it seemed to be using as an antidote for the poison of the spider. So when the frog as usual started for the plant after being bitten he kept him away; the poor fellow made frantic efforts to get at it, but was prevented, and in a few minutes the poison of the spider, not being counteracted, took effect, and the frog expired immediately.

They Don't Want to Faint.

From the New York Sun.

"You would be surprised to see the things we find in the ladies' room," said an employe of Macy's the other day. "Handkercheifs, empty pocketbooks, even bustles and change quite common; but the most astonishing thing of all is the whisky flask. A large number of empty flasks are found, and every one of them is still redolent of its former contents. I supposed the women who carry them are liable to fainting spells."

Republican County Ticket.

For County Auditor,
P. J. McGUIRE.
For County Treasurer,
O. H. LUCKEN.
For Register of Deeds,
ANDREW EIKEN.
For Judge of Probate,
C. O. CHRISTIANSON.
For Supt. of Schools,
EZRA F. ELLIOT.
For County Attorney,
D. D. WILLIAMS.
For Sheriff,
N. O. PAULSRUD.
For Court Commissioner,
D. E. HATLESTAD.
For County Surveyor,
W. F. ARNOLD.
For Coroner,
HENRY SHEPARD.
For County Commissioner 1st Dist.
JOHN P. JOHNSON.
For County Commissioner 3d Dist.
SIDNEY F. MARKHAM.
For County Commissioner 5th Dist.
ROBERT ANDERSON.

Good Stock.

THE JOURNAL has ever been a firm believer in, and an advocate of the raising of good stock in this country and, wherever the business has been properly managed we have never seen one case of failure recorded. In view of this fact it is a pleasure to record such examples as are afforded by the success that has attained the efforts of the Rev. S. Currie, of Euclid, who has one of the best if not the very best dairy herds in Polk County to-day, which for years he has been bringing up to their present excellent condition. He called in to chat a moment with us on Monday and we improved the opportunity to apply the repertoial pump, a little. He informed us that he has never had to sell a pound of butter for less than 25 cents, and often could not supply the demand. He has paid more attention to building up a good herd than a big one and the result shows up on the right side of the ledger. He tells us that his only care, consists in seeing that his herd has plenty of good, pure water and hay and a warm, comfortable place in winter. He has 200 tons of hay in the stack and will continue to put up until harvest obliges him to stop. He did not tell us this but we have it upon good authority that his sales of young and surplus stock this year exceeds $1,000. Add to this the sale of his butter at 25 cts. per pound and we think that the result will show a perfectly satisfactory market for his hay and the grain that he feeds his herd. While he raises wheat some, and really makes what he does raise a margin of profit, he is of the firm opinion that he owes his success wholly to his cows, and we are well convinced that he owes his success there wholly to his intelligent care for them. He has not a cow in his herd to-day that is not worth any two ordinary cows of the county and it is his care and attention to their interests that his secured this result. That Polk County has no more good cows than she has is not due to a lack of opportunity as much good stock has been brought to the county and there is not one of our farmers to-day who is not just as well able to build up a good dairy herd as was Mr. Currie. It has not cost him an independent fortune to build up his herd—only patient, careful, painstaking, backed up by judicious management, just what every man may do if he will but use the means at hand. The establishment of a creamery here renders the chances very much better than they otherwise would be by ensuring to every man a good market without the expense and trouble of making and marketing his butter.

PROHIBITION.

Correspondence Glyndon News.

When we speak against the prohibition party it doesn't mean that we are opposed to temperance, but only to the policy of forming another political party whereby politicians may seek notoriety.

A moral reform should have no more than its principle, as a barrier, to keep away any man, woman or child in the whole world; but does anyone suppose that the prohibition paty will ever gain all the votes even in the United States?

The signs of the times indicate that before many more generations pass away the vast majority of mankind of the civilized world will favor temperance, but does that mean they will all belong to the prohibition party?

If the third party is the way to handle the temperance question in America, then in Germany, France, Italy or any of the other countries, a man opposed to the liquor traffic, instead of being a temperance man, must be a party prohibitionist.

Without using any elaborate argument, is human nature so inclined as to accept a party as readily as a principle? Will they accept the prohibition party as readily as a principle of temperance? If you say "yes," then the next question, "has every man that accepted temperance done the same with the party?" Are they apt to? can you tell why?

The principle of temperance and the prohibition party are altogether two different things. When we assail the party we don't mean the temperance. We oppose the party because it divides the people into sects, and ignorant people are easily prejudiced against sects. We oppose the party because human nature will not allow it to reach all mankind. We uphold temperance because it opens its arms to all nations of the world, to every denomination of religion and to every phase of infidelity. We favor temperance because it converts a man only to temperance and not to a second idea of party.

Men will accept temperance before a party, hence temperance will progress faster without the party, therefore the party is a damage to the reform, and for this reason we oppose it.

Have we any right to say the "prohibitionists" are only a party organization? Let us see. In counties where the saloons have been voted out under local option, the "prohibitionists" are no more forward than any other temperance person to enforce the law. What is their excuse? Only this, and nothing more: We havn't got the offices; yes, its the "offices" we're talking about. The laws are on the statute books; if you are as earnest as you pretend to be, why don't you try to enforce them? No, "we havn't got the offices."

If you had the "offices" would the laws be any different? Yes, they would have to be before you would enforce them. You have shown already that you care nothing for laws passed by other parties. You want to pass the laws yourselves; and by this you come out plainly as a party and not a principle. It is this party we oppose. The idea that you will leave all laws alone unless you can pass them yourselves is the idea that we so strongly oppose.

Suppose it possible for the prohibition party to carry Minnesota, does that insure Moorhead a temperance mayor to enforce the laws? Does it insure Clay County a temperance sheriff and attorney? If you pass stringent laws for the State, and Moorhead still elects a saloon mayor, you are no better off than towns in Iowa, with the same kind of a mayor. Then if you don't enforce the laws passed by the republican party how much better would you enforce the laws passed here by the prohibition party?

Suppose, again, the prohibition ticket to be successful in a license county, the the officers are sworn by oath to enforce the laws to the best of their ability. Their oath compels them to license the saloon while their platform and principle denounce it as infamous. What kind of a mixed up mess is this? How do we manage such affairs? We don't believe in the saloon, but favor high license until we can prohibit, and the prohibitionist talked the same until they found out that it wouldn't agree with their party to countenance a saloon.

There is one more reason why we oppose the prohibition party as a party. Suppose here in Clay County, there were to be principally two parties, one containing nearly all the saloon element and the other most of the temperance people. Instead of trying to combine the temperance vote of both parties on temperance alone, they will try and break up the best party. What is the object?—political gain. They had rather see their most pronounced enemies in office than the latter party. Why is this! They expect to build up their party out of the best; while living on this expectation, the worst element may rule the country for several terms.

If they could build up their party what better would it be? They have the same men. The men were all temperance before they left the old parties. They have made no new converts and the rowdy element has held the offices.

If, to begin with, temperance had been voted on separate from politics, every temperance man in the country would have cast his vote at once, no saloon man would have run or been been elected to office, and the country would have been saved from the bad government. We believe in temperance pure and simple, but not in the party that tries to make it a political gain.

R.

Better Wheat Prices.

Pioneer Press.

There are plenty of people ready with positive opinions as to a relation this season between the world's demand and its supply of the cereals. It is scarcely necessary to say that none of these is absolutely reliable, because no authority is in possession of all the data necessary to the forming of correct conclusions. And as between those who affirm that crops everywhere are short and the foreign deficit in grain stores large enough to enhance prices and those who advise the farmer to market his crop instantly and take advantage of ruling prices before they suffer a decline, he must be permitted to take his choice. But it is satisfactory to know that whatever the future course of the market, the ruling price of wheat throughout the Northwest at the beginning of marketing the new crop is very considerably higher than it was a year ago. Nor, though anticipations of old-fashioned prices may be doomed to disappointment, is it probable that prices now prevailing will be materially lowered. The cash value of wheat at the elevator is still far below what we should like to see it. But it is enough above that of the same time last year to fill the farmer with encouragement. An addition of from one-fourth to one-fifth in his receipts per bushel means a great deal to him. It means the difference between profit and loss; the difference between pinching economy in order to make both ends meet, and a surplus for the year that will be a welcome relief. A rise of fifteen, or ten, or even five cents per bushel in the value of wheat at the elevator, when applied to the vast crop of the Northwest, makes a total difference in the value of the crop and in the farmer's earnings which will mark the difference between prosperity and depression. It is not at all probable that there will be any crop shortage so considerable as to equalize this change in prices, and deprive the farmer, in the end, of all benefit from a rising market. He is already assured of a price for his grain that will leave him something over the cost of production. And better wheat prices mean increase of population, of wealth and of general prosperity over every square rood of territory, country and city, throughout the whole empire of the Northwest.

The paid fire departments of to-day, with their complete and effective system for extinguishing fire, are fit representatives of the progress made in the arts and sciences during the last half century. When we look back to the days of the hand "masheen," we wonder that so much was accomplished with the imperfect appliances then in vogue, but a little reflection gives the reason. Voluntary companies had from forty to one hundred members, while paid companies rarely exceed ten men. Then, too, there was always a multitude of "brevet" firemen ready and anxious to carry hose, run up ladders, use the axe, and make themselves generally useful, so that if confusion was avoided, and attention paid to the chief in command, excellent results were obtained by the labor of a large force ready to attack and quench every new blaze that might appear. There was always, however a great waste of energy, and too often effective work was retarded by the too ready opinion of the "prominent" citizens who possessed more wisdom than experience ever teaches. We still have many voluntary companies throughout Minnesota, but they have profited immensely by the example set them by the paid departments, and the result is better discipline and more effective work than of yore. There is to be a Fireman's Day at the Minneapolis Industrial Exposition, and in connection therewith, a Fireman's Tournament, with prizes offered by business men and manufacturers of firemen's supplies. The fire laddies throughout Minnesota, Dakota and Iowa are invited to take part, and this will be a rare opportunity for our people to contrast the old and the new methods.

Little Falls Transcript: The prohibitionists reason in a queer way when they conclude that they can help their cause more by running a third ticket than they can by their efforts to increasing the sentiment in favor of prohibition. In Minnesota they claim that the state would go prohibition if the people were allowed to vote on it. They also say that four-fifths of the prohibition votes would come from the republican party. If such is the case, the majority of the voters of the republican party must be in favor of prohibition. Then the prohibition leaders should devote their attention to controlling the republican party, in which they must have a majority if their other claims are true. The assertion that the leaders of the republicans are opposed to prohibition would show that the majority of the party wanted new leaders, and that they could soon select them. The prohibitionists assume that they know how to run a political party, and they should show faith in their claim of a majority in the state by joining with and controlling the political party that most of their sympathizers are in. If they haven't faith in their capacity to manage a political party they should not organize one, but if they have faith they should go to work to control the party that their claimed strength is in. Some of the republicans fear that the prohibitionists are doing the republican party great damage, but it is probable that they would injure republicans more if they were solid in the party and insisted on endorsing prohibition wherever possible. We believe, that the latter course would come nearer defeating the republican party in Minnesota than the party movement ever can.

Yesterday's Todd County Argus aptly says: "The only blame we attach to the third party men who have left the republican party is in their failure to make a vigorous fight for their principles in the republican conventions. It seems to us that if they had displayed as much zeal and energy in forcing this question in the conventions of the republican party as they have in the organization and maintenance of the third party they would have been in better shape to-day than they are. It seems that every little question that comes up these days is taken as a basis for the formation of a new party and the forces which might be used to good advantage are thus diverted into too many channels and lost. The prohibition party can claim no more strength to-day than the Greenback party did a few years ago, and now there is not a vestige of it left.

We believe that in the election of christian men like Harrison, whose lives have been an example of honesty and purity, the cause of good government and morality will have achieved a victory which cannot be gained by votes diverted to a third party. until we are convinced to the contrary we cannot sympathize or work with the third party."

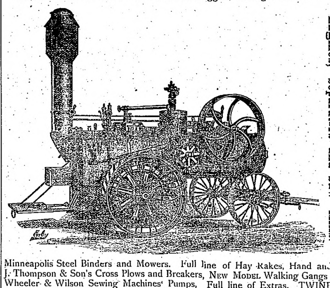
REMOVED.

HUGGARD, LARSEN & CO.

have removed their stock to their new building, opposite the New York store on, cor. Broadway and Robert. You can't miss it,

SIGN OF THE JACKSON WAGON.

JUSTRECEIVED—A fresh car of Buggies, Carriages and Road Carts.



General Agents for
RUSSELL & CO'S WORLD KNOWN
Engines, Separators and Saw Mills.

Minneapolis Steel Binders and Mowers. Full line of Hay Rakes, Hand and Self Dumps. J. Thompson & Son's Cross Plows and Breakers, NEW MODEL Walking Gangs and Breakers, Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machines' Pumps, Full line of Extras. TWINE. Come and ee us!

CROOKSTON
CREAMERY,
WALSH & BJOIN, Prop's.

The Croookston Creamery is now ready for business, and solicits the patronage of every progressive farmer. At the prices that we now pay, you can make more money out of your cream than you can to make it into butter yourself. It only needs a trial to convince you.

We invite the patronage of all who are interested in their own welfare, as well as that of the county to call and see us.

THE OLD RELIABLE
CROOKSTON
LOAN AGENCY
STILL ON DECK.

MONEY
On Real Estae.
MONEY
On Approved Chattels.

Always on hand at the Lowest Rates.
Consult your best interests by giving me a call when you Want Money.
A. D. STEPHENS,
Second Street, Crookston, Minn.

First National Bank
OF CROOKSTON

PAID IN CAPITAL, - $100,000
SURPLUS, - - - $11,000

Money to loan on long or short time on approved security
Interest on time deposits. Faithful attention to Collections and prompt remittance.

GEO. Q. ERSKINE, President.
WM. ANGLIM, Vice President.
CHAS. E. SAWYER, Cashier

DIRECTORS:
Wm. Anglim, K. D. Chase, F. D. Childs
Geo. Q. Erskine, S. F. Markham, A. A. Miller
E. M. Walsh. John Moore. W. H. Crosby
Chas. E. Sawyer.

DENTISTRY!
J. H. THOMAS, D. D. S.,
ROBERT STREET. - CROOKSTON, MINN

Artificial Teeth from one to an entire set inserted. Gold, Silver or Artificial Filling used a desired. Regulating Children's Teeth a specialty. ALL WORK WARRANTED

Crookston Nurseries
Established in 1879

Tree Claim Stock
A SPECIALTY.

I will furnish my customers and others, trees and seeds for Tree Claims at reduced figures in the spring of 1887. Also all the hardier varieties of small fruits, such as Currants, Gooseberries, and Raspberries. Also good thrifty Transcendent and Hislop Crab-Apple trees, Cottonwood and Box Elder trees. Box Elder and Ash seed, and Willow cuttings. Also garden seeds. The firm of Haseltine Bros. was dissolved in June, 1883. E. W Haseltine has no interest or share in the old Crookston Nurseries, nor is he successor to the old firm of Haleltine Bros. as ha, been advertised. I continue business on the old grounds in Crookston. Don't fail to send for catalogue of prices
FRANK T. HASELTINE, Prop.
Crookston, Minn

HARMLESS SPUR WIRE
FENCING.

Cannot injure or tear stock. Comparatively cheapest fencing made. Is endorsed by every one who uses it, Strongest, most visible and only safe fence.

SEND FOR CIRCULARS AND PRICES.

IN USE IN MANY OF THE STATES AND TERRITORIES.
Manufactured by the
LARM MANUFACTURING CO.,
Cor. Clinton and Van Buren Sts., Chicago, Ill.
For Sale by G. M. Barber, Second Street.

JUST RECEIVED, ONE CARLOAD
—OF—
Wagons and Buggies
FROM RACINE WAGON AND BUGGY COMPANY.

We venture to say without fear of contradiction that this is the finest car of goods, in the Buggy line, ever brought into Crookston.

NO SNIDE OR BANKRUPT STOCK,
The real Simon Pure Racine Manufacture.

WE can please the most fastidious in style and finish, and we guarantee every Buggy sold. We ask our customers, and the public generally, to give us a call, if they want a first-class Buggy or Wagon at bottom prices. Our Platform, Spring and Delivery Wagons are Real Beauties.

A FULL STOCK OF
Farm Machinery and Implements
CONSTANTLY ON HAND
McKINNON BRO'S,
McKinnon' Block, - - - - - - - - - - Main Street.

DR. M. WATTS.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Office over Merchants' Bank,
Professional calls by day or night promptly attended to.

A. F. LAPLANT,
PLAIN AND ORNAMENTAL
PLASTERING
Done to Order. All Work Warranted.
CROOKSTON, MINN.

SCANDI AMERICAN
BANK.

Authorized Capital.......................$200,000
Paid in Capital.......................50,000

COLLECTIONS A SPECIALTY.

OFFICERS:
C. Hendrickson, President.
G. M. Barber, Vice President.
C. O. Christianson, 2d Vice President.
A. G. Gallash, Cashier.
D. Ellington, Asst. Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
O. H. Lucken.......................Crookston
L. K. Aaker.......................".
J. H. Locken.......................".
T. J. Thorsen.......................".
P. R. Sandager.......................Grafton, D. T.
A. E. Johnson,.......................St. Paul, Minn.

Special Excursion Rates.

Minneapolis Exposition and Minnesota State Fair Via Northern Pacific R. R.

Excursion tickets will be sold to Minneapolis and return for the exposition on the following dates at one fare for the round trip. Tickets good to return to destination until Monday following date of sale, viz:

Aug. 21st, 23d, 25th, 28th and 30th, Sept. 1st, 4th, 6th, 18th, 20th, 22d, 25th, 27th and 29th, every day from Sept. 8th to the 15th, inclusive, tickets will be sold to either St. Paul or Minneapolis, at one fare for the round trip, good to return to return to destination one day after being stamped at St. Paul or Minneapolis, but not later than Sept. 17th.

On account of the Minnesota State Fair, tickets will be sold to either St. Paul or Minneapolis and return every day on Sept. 8th to 15th, inclusive, good to return one day after being stamped at St. Paul or Minneapolis, but not later than Sept. 17th.

All Exposition and State Fair tickets will include admission coupons at twenty-five cents each for the Exposition and fifty cents for the State Fair which will be added to the railroad rates.

For rates inquire of ticket agents, N. P. R. R.

For Sale.

Ten fresh milch cows with calves at their sides. These cows are all grade Jerseys and excellent for the dairy Will sell cheap for cash or good paper till fall or will give one year's time on good security. For particulars see [16-3t] CHRIS. HOUSTON.

For Sale.

One Threshing rig complete; Minnesota Chief separator, and J. I. Case engine, strawburner, all in complete running order. For particulars call on
JAS. GREENHALGH, Jr., Crookston.
[16-tf.]

Minnesota State Fair.

Excursion tickets will be sold to St. Paul or Minneapolis and return, via., the St. P., M. & M. R'y every day from September 8th to 15th inclusive, at one fare for the round trip, good to return one day after being stamped at St. Paul or Minneapolis but not later than Sept. 17th. For full information apply to local agent or J. I. Whitney, G. P. & F. A. St. Paul, Minn.

TO RENT.

My hotel and furniture, or will sell the furniture. Apply on premises at Carman. Z. DAOUST.

California Wines and Brandies.

Max Ericsson is constantly receiving California Wines and Brandies, the choicest of liquors of all kinds at wholesale and retail, which he can supply at the shortest notice. No use to send below for such things, as Max can supply them as cheaply and of as good quality as you can get anywhere. Go and see what Max can do for you.

For Sale.

A pure blood Polled Aberdeen Angus bull. Will sell cheap for cash or trade for colt. For terms see
THEODORE GREENHALGH.

Money to Loan.

We have the cash always on hand to loan on good farm security. No second mortgage. No delay. No commission.
STEENERSON & McMANUS.

A Snap.

M. R. Brown offers 100 lots, near the business portion of the city at figures that will give the purchaser a chance make a good thing. Look into this and be convinced.

CHRISTIANSON BROTHERS,
(Correspondents Fargo Loan Agency.)
REAL ESTATE,
Farm Mortgage Loans and Insurance.

Special Bargains in Choice Farm Lands, improved and unimproved. Low prices and easy terms.
—OFFICE ON ROBERT STREET.—
CROOKSTON, - - - - MINN.

W. A. ROBERTSON,
D. D. S.
Gradu [illegible] ental Department of the Univer. ate of Daily of Maryland.
OPERATIVE AND MECHANICAL
DENTIST.
OFFICE, IN McKINNON BLOCK.

MORTGAGE SALE.

[First publication Aug. 30th, 1888.]

DEFAULT HAS BEEN MADE IN THE conditions of a certain mortgage executed, and delivered by Marie Fillatrault and Martial Fillatrault, her husband, Mortgagors, to Caleb W. Palmer, mortgagee, dated the 12th day of September A. D. 1887, and recorded as a mortgage in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Polk, State of Minnesota on the 28th day of September A. D. 1887, at 4:40 o'clock p. m., in book "33" of mortgages, on pages 265, 266 and 267, on which there is claimed to be due, at the date of this notice, the sum of seventeen hundred and fifty-eight 40-100 dollars ($1758.40-100,) and no action or proceeding has been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof. By reason of such default and the non-institution of action, the power to sell the property described in said mortgage has become, and is operative, and under the power of sale in said mortgage contained, the said mortgagee elects to declare and claims that the whole sum secured by said mortgage and now unpaid is due and payable.

Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, which sale will be made at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Crookston, in the County of Polk, and State of Minnesota, at public auction, by the sheriff of said county or his deputy duly appointed, on Monday the 15th day of October A. D. 1888, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to satisfy the amount which shall then be due on said mortgage, with the interest thereon, and costs and expenses of sale, the sum of $37.50-100 dollars paid for insurance policy, and interest thereon, and seventy-five dollars attorney's fees, stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

The premises described in said mortgage and so to be sold, are the lot, piece or parcel of land situated in the County of Polk, and State of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to-wit: All of lot number thirteen (13,) of block number seven (7,) of Fletcher & Houston's addition to the townsite of Crookston, according to the recorded plat thereof on file in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, Minnesota, being fifty feet on Broadway street, and one hundred and forty feet on Fletcher Street, together with all the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging or in any way appertaining. Subject to redemption as provided by law.

Dated August 30th A. D. 1888.

CALEB W. PALMER,
Mortgagee.

Calvin B. Palmer,
Att'y for Mortgagee.
[19-25]

Polk County Journal.

W. G. COOKE, Publisher.

CROOKSTON, MINN., AUGUST 30.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

An Open Letter.

Oliver Dalrymple, the Bonanza Farmer, Writes an Open Letter to His Brother Farmers—The Opinion of a Practical Man on an All-Important Subject.

Pioneer Press.

DALRYMPLE FARM, Aug. 20, 1888—To the Editor: As other interests have made themselves heard through your columns, please allow me to say to my brother farmers of Dakota and Minnesota that this is a year that farmers will find it profitable to hold their wheat for better prices. Our spring wheat country has raised a full crop of straw, and from one-half to two-thirds of a crop of inferior wheat, which makes a shortage of nearly fifty million bushels. Our winter wheat shortage is officially placed at 50,000,000. France is officially announced as short of an average by 80,000,000 bushels. The London Times places Great Britain [illegible]0,000,000 short of an average crop of merchantable wheat. Italy and the central countries of Europe are but little better off. Russia, always last to hear from, comes in with complaints. In addition to minor causes there has been the world over, a deficiency of sunshine and too much cold, wet weather during the growth of wheat—and like causes have produced like effects, hence no considerable country can boast of a large crop of No. 1 wheat. It may be justly estimated that the world's wheat crop is near three hundred millions below her average crop of two billion bushels. After seven years of low prices natural causes have intervened and the husbandman may congratulate himself that the turn has been called and the old-time values must be re-established when wheat was $1.25 in Chicago and $1.50 for a quarter of a century in New York. It will take a little time yet for the trade to realize and adopt these facts, and prices, but the farmer who can store his wheat on his farm and hold it for a few months and sell it by sample will yet do well on his small crop.

An open confession is good for the soul. Let the truth be known.

OLIVER DALRYMPLE.

HIS VIEWS OF THE CROP HERE.

Mr. Dalrymple was seen by a repoter at the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce, to whom he said:

The damage to the crops during the past week is not realized by any one but farmers. Fields that a week ago would cut eighteen bushels of No. 1 hard wheat to the acre, will not now cut over nine or ten bushels of No. 2 wheat. I know this statement does not tally with the general expression of damage, and a great many will be slow to believe it, but I know whereof I speak, and within the next two weeks my statement will receive abundant corroboration or I am sadly mistaken. I simply lead in this estimate of damage, but you will find plenty of well-posted men ready to fall into line and endorse my views even now.

To Prohibitionists.

Dr. Fellows Addresses an Open Letter to the Prohibitionists of Iowa, Urging them to Act Wisely in the Coming Election.

Fergus Falls Journal.

As thoughtful, conscientious, and most of you, christian men, I address you these open letters. We all desire the utter extermination of the liquor traffic in both state and nation. This is the end for which we work and pray, and on this, we believe, there is no division of sentiment. We also all desire to pursue the wisest course and to use the best possible means to hasten the overthrow of the rum traffic. We also desire to be and act consistent with ourselves and with our convictions of our right and duty, "and vote as we preach," "vote as we pray," etc. I assume that we are all equally honest, equally sincere, equally conscientious; and it does not become any one to claim superiority over others in these respects. The question before us is a practical one—a question of means, not of ends—a question of judgment, rather than of conscience—a question of method as to what is the wisest course, and what are the best means to bring about the extermination of the liquor traffic.

Let address ourselves calmly to the question.

The end for which we strive, viz: The final and permanent extermination of the liquor traffic, includes three elements:

First, an enlightened public opinion, which will neither patronize, support nor tolerate such traffic in the state or nation.

Secondly, prohibitory laws in both state and nation, answering to such public opinion.

Thirdly, the enforcement of such prohibitory laws. It is evident that if the first be secured, the second and third will necessarily follow. It is also evident that without the first, the second if possible would be useless and might be harmful, and the third would be impossible. To seek the second and third at the expense or even to the neglect of the first would be unwise. An enlightened and correct public opinion [illegible]rd to prohibition is then of supreme importance and in all our work and methods is ever to be sought and never to be forgotten.

There are two principal methods recognized by good men and equally conscientious prohibitionists, each of which presses its claims for out support, and between which we must choose at the coming election:

First, the partisan method, and
Secondly, the non partisan method.

As to the general question of supporting a probibitory political party, we may learn some lessons from the abolitionists and the abolition party, before the overthrow of slavery. History shows that the great leaders in this reform, those who controlled the American anti-slavery society, among whom were William Lloyd Garrison, Wendell Phillips, Oliver Johnson and others, persistently opposed the organization of the abolition party and never united with it. Their reasons were "that it was wholly unnecessary for the abolititionists to organize a political party, since one or both of the existing parties would be compelled to espouse the cause as soon as public opinion should call for anti-slavery action." Secondly, "that a political party was the most expensive and wasteful of all the instrumentalities for enlightenment of the people and securing a correct public opinion." Thirdly, it would retard the growth of abolition sentiment. They declared that "in assuming as a body a partisan attitude, and nominating each other for office, abolitionists would close the ears of multitudes to their appeals and expose themselves to strong temptation to lower their standard for the sake of political success. As a political organization it would be distrusted not only by its avowed opponents, but by those friendly to its objects. The first thing to be done was to form a public sentiment among which slavery itself could not live. The mere act of changing the laws, after that, would be the easiest of all possible tasks; it would follow as a matter of course." On this subject Mr. Garrison never changed his opinion. He maintained to the last "that the cause would have triumphed sooner in a particular sense, if the abolitionists had continued to act as one body, never yielding to the temptation of forming a political party." It should also be remembered that such men as Charles Sumner, John Quincy Adams, William H. Seward, Thad Stevens, and a host of others among the earliest and ablest anti-slavery men, thought it wisest and best to remain in the old parties and work out a reform until a public sentiment opposed to slavery could be secured.

Thoughtful prohibitionists may also learn a lesson from the short life and early death of the abolition party. In 1840 the abolition party was organized, and nominated James G. Birney and cast for him in the whole United States. 6,745 votes. In 1844 it nominated Mr. Birney again and gave him 58,879 votes, In 1848, the abolition party made no nomination, but its members united with the free soil party which did not adopt an abolition platform, but simply opposed the extension of slavery beyond the slave states. In 1852 the abolitionist again voted with the free soil party on the same platform. In 1856 the abolition vote was given to John C. Fremont, the republican candidate, and in 1860 to Abraham Lincoln. At the early age of five years, after it had lived through two presidential campaigns—it died because its members saw that such an organization was a hindrance rather than a help to the anti-slavery reform. And for sixteen years before the rebellion, abolitionists intelligently and conscientiously gave their influence and votes to "the party that promised most for their principles, althorgh at that time none of the parties were willing to adopt an abolition platform." Will any one say in the light of subsequent history that those grand and noble men who wrought out the anti-slavery reform—men whose names will shine while the stars endure, were unwise and untrue in their principles, in refusing to support, and abandoning a political organization, when, as they believed, said organization tended to divide their forces, alienate their friends, strengthen their enemies, and retard the growth of anti-slavery reform? Let prohibitionists consider well the above lessons before casting their votes at the coming election.

Respectfully,
S. N. FELLOWS.
President Iowa State Temperance Alliance.
Waterloo, Ia., Aug. 4, 1888.

Fairmount Sentinel: Of the forty or fifty delegates already eledted to the republican state convention not one is credited to the McGill column. The people have evidently come to the conclusion that a stronger man, than our present governor, is needed to head the ticket this year.

Verndale Journal: We do not believe that a great number of republicans are going to desert Mr. Comstock and vote for Charles Canning, the probable democratic nominee for congress. They have no valid reason for so doing, and republicans as a rule, are averse to voting against the party without good reasons.

Mankato Free Press: Among other disgraceful things contained in the democratic so-called platform is the harangue against the republican supreme judges for their decision on the tax title cases. It is well understood that the poisonous arrows are pointed at Judge Gilfillan, whose term of office expires this fall, and who, they fear, will be renominated and elected by the republicans.

"Plowman" vs Scheffer.

TO EDITOR DISPATCH: Your reference to a criticism of Albert Scheffer's plan of campaign, which appeared recently in the Pioneer Press, has come to my notice today. You say. "We suppose the correspondent would prefer that Hodgson, Barrett or Aberly did the work." The fact is, neither Barret nor Hodgson could do the work, in this Fifth district where they are known, for they are looked upon by the intelligent farmers and business men as political shysters, cranks and disturbers of the public political peace, and it seems from Scheffer's eager efforts to be on the ground himself that he is of the same opinion as to their ability to shape conventions in his interests.

This Sixteenth judicial district seems at present to be politically cursed by a few men of one or two ideas, who, claiming to be republicans, go into the conventions and by virtue of the claim, attempt to control them in the interest of a ticket which they will hereafter nominate as specialists. This they have tried for several years, but have failed, since their plan of trotting out their blooded steed to get the farmers to bet on him, from his sleek and beautiful proportions. Aberly is not known hereabouts but Barrett, Hodson and Hixon are. These men and each of them, have for many years been a damage to the republican party, bearing the same relation to it as a few others of like mental calibre, who happened to get their vision focused upon prohibition. Where would they be if the two old parties were fighting with guns as they were twenty-five years ago? They should take the same stand now, and Scheffer also, that we may know where to find them.

PLOWMAN.

Hancock, Minn., Aug. 20.

A Word to the Fifth.

Minneapolis Evening Journal.

Duluth isn't very well satisfied with her political position in the Fifth district. She aspires to become the dominant power in it, just as the twin cities are in the Fourth, but the district is so large and her vote so small comparatively, that the realization of this hope seems impossible for the present. The best that can be done is to wait for the reapportionment to follow the census of 1890, in which Duluth hopes to be given a district all by herself. Meanwhile Duluth Republicans are doing some very shrewd figuring to advance their own interests. Believing that if Canning is named at Fergus Falls to run for Congress on the Democrat ticket, he will cut into Comstock's majority in the western part of the district very largely, Duluth and all the territory are preparing to vote solidly for Comstock. In this way at future congressional conventions, Duluth's representation will be enlarged, while the western part of the district will be weakened.

There is only one way for the west to maintain its importance and standing in the Fifth district and that is stand solidly by Mr. Comstock. Otherwise, the loyalty of St. Louis, Lake and Carleton counties will be rewarded by a large access of political power.

Lake City Republic: The democrats are very much exercised for fear Gov. McGill will be renominated. It need not concern them, for whether it be McGill or any other good republican he will be elected by a large majority. For full particulars as to the outcome, see our election returns on Saturday, November 10 next.

Sheriff's Sale of Real Estate under Judgment of Foreclosure.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk.—ss. District Court, Fourteenth Judicial District. Jennett S. McCullough, Plaintiff. vs. Joseph Marchildon, Henriette Marchildon, Emily Gervais and the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, Defendants.

Notice is hereby given that under and by virtue of a judgment and decree entered in the above entitled action on the 16th day of August 1888, a certified transcript of which has been delivered to me, I, the undersigned sheriff of said Polk County will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, on Saturday the 6th day of October 1888, at two-thirty (2:30) o'clock in the afternoon, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Crookston, in said county, in one parcel the premises and real estate described in said judgment and decree, to-wit: The northwest quarter of Section number fifteen (15,) in Township number one hundred and fifty (150) north, of Range forty-four (44) west, situated in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, and containing 160 acres less the 100 feet strip occupied by the Duluth R. R. Co. for right of way.

Dated August 18th 1888.

NELS O. PAULSRUD,
Sheriff of Polk County.
W. B. Douglas, Pl'ffs Att'y,
Moorhead, Minn.
[18-24]

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston, Minn., Aug 14th, 1888.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston, on Sept. 27th 1888, viz: HOWARD A. MARSTON, H'd No. 11073, for the n½ ne¼ se¼ ne¼ se¼, S. 17, T. 149, R. 44. He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz: T. J. Farden, J. W. McAnulty, Fowler Middleton, Tilden, Polk Co., Minn., H. Attix, Grove Park, Polk Co., Minn.

[18-23] H. H. DICKMANN, Register.

THE PERKINS WIND MILL.

BUY THE BEST AND SAVE MONEY

It has been in constant use for 19 years, with a record equaled by none. We give each purchaser a

WARRANTY

as follows: We warrant the Perkins Wind Mill, sold this day, to out-last and do better work than any other make, and not blow down, unless the Tower goes with it, and against any wind that does not disable buildings in the vicinity.

We manufacture both Pumping and Geared Mills and carry a full line of Wind Mill Supplies.

☞ AGENTS WANTED. ☜

Send for Catalogue, Circulars and Prices.
Address PERKINS WIND MILL & AX CO.
Mishawaka, Ind.

THE OFFICE OF
COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS
WILL BE OPEN
EVERY SATURDAY.
RESIDENCE—With D. N. Taylor, Esq., Broadway.

JOHN CROMB,
Attorney-at-aw,
SECOND STREET, CROOKSTON,

MORTGAGE SALE

[First publication August 9th, 1888.]

WHEREAS WILLIAM M. ROSS AND Ella Ross his wife as mortgagors did on the 16th day of April A. D. 1887, duly execute and deliver to John Cromb of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, as mortgagee their mortgage bearing date of April 16th, 1887 whereby they mortgaged to said mortgagee, his heirs, executors and assigns, the following described land situated in the County of Polk, State of Minnesota, to-wit: The northeast quarter (ne¼) and the west half (w½) of the southeast quarter (se¼) of Section twenty-four (24,) Township one hundred and fifty (150) north, Range forty-seven (47) west, containing two hundred and forty acres, to secure the payment of the sum of five thousand eight hundred twenty and 67-100 dollars according to the conditions of one certain promissory note bearing even date with said mortgage and made and delivered by said mortgagor William M. Ross, to said mortgagee, and payable to said mortgagee or order. Which said mortgage was on the 16th day of April A. D. 1887, at 3:40 p. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk in book "22" of mortgages on page 184, and whereas the said John Cromb mortgagee, for value received, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1887, duly assigned the aforesaid note and mortgage and the debt secured thereby to the Merchants National Bank of Crookston, Minnesota, which said assignment was in writing under seal, duly witnessed and acknowledged and thereafter on the 16th day of September 1887 at 2 p. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said Polk County, in book "32" of mortgages on page 420, and whereas the said Merchants' National Bank of Crookston did for value received on the 16th day of September A. D. 1887, duly assign the aforesaid note and mortgage and the debt secured thereby to Joseph Kelso, of Belvue, Iowa, which said assignment was in writing under seal duly witnessed and acknowledged, and thereafter on the 17th day of September 1887 at 10 a. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, in book "32" of mortgages on page 423, and whereas for value received the said Joseph Kelso did on the 23d day of May A. D. 1888, duly assign the aforesaid note and mortgage and the debt secured thereby to the Merchants' National Bank of Crookston, Minnesota which said assignment was in writing under seal duly witnessed and acknowledged, and thereafter on the 1st day of June A. D. 1888, at 10 a. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, in book "36" of mortgages on page 191, and

Whereas default has been made in the payment of the sum of five hundred eighty-nine and 91-100 dollars which is claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the date of this notice and the further sum of four thousand five hundred sixty-six and 67-100 dollars with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent per annum from April 16th, 1888, yet to become due, and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the lands therein described which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Polk County, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Crookston, in said county, on the 8th day of October A. D. 1888, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt and interest and the taxes, if any, and fifty dollars attorney's fees therein stipulated to be paid in case of foreclosure and the disbursements allowed by law subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

Dated Aug. 1st A. D. 1888.

THE MERCHANTS' NATIONAL BANK of Crookston.
Assignee of Mortgagee.
Pierce & Cromb, Att'ys for
Assignee of Mortgagee.
[16-22]

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston, Minn., July 24th, 1888.

Complaint having been entered at this office by Hans Christopherson against Louis St. John for abandoning his Homestead Entry No. 11,712, dated April 1st, 1885, upon the e½ sw¼ and lots 3 and 4, S. 18, T. 153 n. R. 46 w. in Polk County, Minn., with a view to the cancellation of said entry, the said parties are hereby summoned to appear at this office on the 14th day of Sept. 1888, at 10 o'clock a. m., to respond and furnish testimony concerning said alleged abandonment.

[14-19] L. K. AAKER, Receiver.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston, Minn., July 11th, 1888.

Complaint having been entered at this office by Peter O. Berggrow against John Scarborough for failure to comply with law as to timber culture entry No. 1259, dated June 17th, 1879, upon the southwest quarter S. 20, T. 154 n. R. 49 w., in Polk County, Minn., with a view to the cancellation of said entry, contestant alleging that the said John Scarborough did not break or plow nor caused to be broken or plowed any part of said land the first year after the date of said entry, that there has been no improvements of any kind made on said land since the date of said entry, the said parties are hereby summoned to appear at this office on the 11th day of Sept. 1888, at 9 o'clock a. m., to respond and furnish testimony concerning said alleged failure.

[14-19] H. H. DICKMANN, Register.

MORTGAGE SALE.

[First publication Aug. 23th, 1888.]

WHEREAS ARTHUR T. MOORE AND Catharine J. Moore, his wife, as mortgagors, did on the 25th day of March A. D. 1885, duly execute and deliver to The American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London (Limited) as mortgagee, the following described lands situated in the County of Polk, and State of Minnesota, to-wit: The west half of Section twenty-three (23) and the northeast quarter of Section twenty-three (23) Township one hundred and fifty (150) Range forty-six (46) west, containing 480 acres, to secure the payment of the sum of three thousand dollars with interest thereon, according to the conditions of one certain promissory note with interest coupons attached bearing date of March 17th A. D. 1885 and made by said mortgagors to said mortgagee or order which said mortgage was on the 27th day of March A. D. 1885 at 9 o'clock a. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the said County of Polk, in book "V" of mortgages on pages 358 to 361 inclusive, and

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the sum of two hundred and forty dollars, due as interest upon said mortgage on the first day of January A. D. 1888 and the said interest is still unpaid and due, and whereas, it was stipulated and agreed by and between the parties to said mortgage that if default should be made in any of the conditions or covenants therein contained on the part of the mortgagors to be kept and performed, that then and from thenceforth it shall be lawful for said mortgagee or its assigns to consider the whole sum thereby secured as immediately due and payable without notice to said mortgagors or any other party, and whereas The American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London (Limited) mortgagee, has exercised its option to consider and declare and does hereby declare the whole sum of money secured by said mortgage to be due and payable, and whereas, there is now due and claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the date of this notice the sum of three thousand four hundred eight and 40-100 dollars, and no proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the same or any part thereof,

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the lands therein described which sale will be made by the Sheriff of Polk County, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Crookston, in said county and state on the 13th day of October A. D. 1888, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the sum due on said mortgage together with taxes, if any, on said premises and seventy-five dollars attorneys fees therein stipulated to be paid in case of foreclosure and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated August 18th A. D. 1888.

THE AMERICAN FREEHOLD LAND MORTGAGE COMPANY of London (Limited.)
Mortgagee.
Pierce & Cromb,
Att'ys for Mortgagee.
[18-24]

Sheriff's Sale of Real Estate under Judgment of Foreclosure.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk.—ss. District Court, Fourteenth Judicial District. Jennett S. McCullough, Plaintiff, vs.

Virgil D. Carruth and Julia E. Carruth, Def'ts.

Notice is hereby given that under and by virtue of a judgment and decree entered in the above entitled action on the 16th day of August 1888, a certified transcript of which has been delivered to me, I, the undersigned sheriff of said Polk County will sell at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, on Saturday the 6th day of October 1888, at two (2) o'clock in the afternoon at the front door of the court house, in the city of Crookston in said county, in one parcel the premises and real estate described in said judgment and decree, to-wit: The south half (s½) of the northeast quarter (ne¼) and lots numbered one (1) and two (2) in Section numbered six (6,) in Township numbered one hundred and forty-eight (148) north, of Range numbered forty-seven (47) west, containing 163 37-100 acres of land, more or less, according to the government survey thereof and situated in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota.

Dated August 18th 1888.

NELS O. PAULSRUD,
Sheriff of Polk County.
W. B. Douglas, Plaintiff's Att'y,
Moorhead, Minn.
[18-24]

S. L. COLLINS
—PROPRIETOR OF—
MAIN STREET
Livery, Feed and Sale Stables
CORNER MAIN AND FOURTH STS, WEST SIDE,
Crookston, - - - - Minnesota.
Horses bought and sold on commission.
Everything neat and nobby.
Feeding a specialty.
FINE HEARSE
in connection which I will attend to in person.

1878. 1888.
Fontaine & Anglim,
Have the largest and most complete stock of goods in the city, consisting, in part, of
CARPETS AND HOUSE FURNISHING GOODS, DRY GOODS, NOTIONS BOOTS AND SHOES, GENTS', YOUTH'S AND CHILDREN'S CLOTHING STAPLE AND FANCY GROCERIES.
Pries very Low. Farmers' Produce Taken in Exchange.

THE CROOKSTON
AUCTION AND COMMISSION
STORE.
SECOND HAND GOODS of all kinds Bought and Sold. Also Sold on Commission. We are prepared to sell Stock and Machinery at our Yards in Crookston, or to attend Sales anywhere in Polk County at Reasonable Rates. Orders solicited. It will be to your interest to see our stock of
SECOND-HAND AND NEW GOODS
And get prices before purchasing elsewhere.
BERTHIAUM AND MICHAUD, Proprietors,
BROADWY, - - CROOKSTON, MINN.,
Between Robert and Fletcher Streets.

THE BEE HIVE!
Established in 1879.
HACK & GALLASCH
Invite Your Attention to Their New
SPRING AND SUMMER STOCK
—OF EVERYTHING IN THE LINE OF—
DRY GOODS, NOTIONS, BOOTS AND SHOES.
HATS AND CAPS.
IN OUR GROCERY AND PROVISION DEPARTMENT
Will be found a Full and Complete Stock of Fresh and Reliable Goods which we can sell at the very Lowest Living rates. We point with pride to our CHINA DEPARTMENT and challenge any competitor to beat it. Goods delivered free to any part of the city. When in need of anything in our line. call and see
HACK & GALLASCH. COR. MAIN & SECOND STS.

D. H. BATES,
—DEALER IN—
Lumber, Building Paper,
PAINTS, OILS,
DOORS, WINDOWS, AND MOULDINGS
ALSO
FARM MACHINERY
AGENT FOR THE CELEBRATED
MILWAUKEE HARVESTER,
(FORMERLY THE DENNETT,)
AND THE CELEBRATED
WINONA PLOWS
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.
☞ You will find it to your advantage to call when need of anything in my line.
D. H. BATES,
CARMAN, - - - MINN

MONTANA SHORT LINE.

